OIL MAGNATE HELD FOR EXTRADITION TO TEXAS ON CHARGE OF PERJURY

H. Clay Pierce Loses Federal Court Habeas Corpus Plea.

Stay Granted to Permit Appeal to a Higher Tribunal.

Charged With Falsely Swearing Company Was Not in Trust.

St. Louis, May 15.—Judge Adams, in the United States circuit court today, denied the application of H. Clay Pierce, chairman of the board of directors of the Waters-Pierce Oil company, for a writ of habeas corpus and ordered that the petitioner be remanded to Sheriff George S. Mathews of Travis county, Tex., for extradition.

Pierce is wanted in Texas to answer an indictment charging perjury in an affidavit made by him in May, 1900, to the effect that the Waters-Pierce Oil company was not a party to any pool, trust, confederation or combination in restraint of trade.

After Judge Adams had read his decision Attorney Priest asked that a delay of execution of the court's order be granted until 2 o'clock this afternoon to enable him to decide whether to make an appeal to the United States court of appeals or directly to the state supreme court. Judge Adams granted the request.

Attorney Barclay representing the state of Texas asked that the court increase the bond of $10,000 under which Pierce was released from custody when he surrendered May 8, but Judge Adams stated that the bond would remain at that amount until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Pierce had little to say as he left the courtroom with his attorney. He spoke to several friends who crowded forward to shake his hand, but made no comment.

COUNTY ROADS' LAW CONSTRUED

Boards Must Elect Superintendents Despite the Word "May."

St. Paul, May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—In an opinion given to the state highway commission, Assistant Attorney General Simpson says that the word "may," inserted in the highway superintendent law by the last legislature does not impair its requirements in any way. The law, when up for consideration, carried the word "shall," but it was modified and the word "may" inserted instead.

Mr. Simpson says it is the duty of county boards to elect a county superintendent of roads, as they have no option in the matter, despite the presence of the word "may." He also says that those now serving must vacate their offices. He suggests that county boards proceed to elect the required road inspectors at the earliest date possible.

FREIGHT IN HUGE PILES

New York's Dock Strike Causes Ever Worse Conditions.

Both Sides Claim to Have Made Recent Decided Gains.

New York, May 15.—More and more tons of freight are being piled up on the ocean steamship docks, while the longshoremen's strike seems no nearer a settlement than it did a week ago. The steamship men declare they are moving ships and such freight as must be speedily handled with the aid of the non-union men they have secured, and that the longshoremen will soon tire of the strike and return to work. The strikers say there is no wavering in their ranks, that the men are more determined than ever and that they will not return to work until they secure the increase in wages they have demanded.

All attempts at arbitration have so far proved unavailing. Marcus M. Marks, who has been trying to persuade the steamship companies to agree to the appointment of a conciliation committee, says that noth-

SNOW FALLS IN ST. PAUL

Half Inch Covers the Ground In the Residence Section.

Frosts and Snow in States All Along Missouri River.

St. Paul, May 15.—United States Weather Observer Williams reports that one-tenth of an inch of snow fell here during the night, establishing a new late snowfall record. In the downtown sections it melted as fast as it fell, but in the residence parts of the city about half an inch covered the ground. The trees were white with snow. Generally fair weather is reported in the Northwest with hard frosts at different points and rain in the Upper Lake regions.

New Richmond, Wis., May 15.—Snow fell here today. It melted however as soon as it reached the ground.

Topeka, Kan., May 15.—A light frost, ice and temperature of 23 degs., followed the chilly weather of Tuesday over this portion of Kansas. Farmers fear the young corn is badly injured.

Omaha, Neb., May 15.—The United States weather bureau reports killing frosts over Central and Western Nebraska last night, and light frosts over the eastern portion of the state. Snow is falling this morning at many points along the Missouri river. Deadwood, S. D., reports two feet of snow. In Central and Western Nebraska it is clear today. Indications are for slowly rising temperatures. The heavy winds of the last three days are reported to have blown the famous green bugs practically all over the wheat-growing section. Invasions being made in large portions not heretofore infected.

SLOW WORK WITH JURY

Attorneys for Haywood Closely Question Men in the Box.

Ten Men So Far Examined and Passed by Both Sides.

Boise, Idaho, May 15.—When the Haywood trial was resumed this morning, Judge Wood, with the consent of counsel, excused the two talesmen who are members of the federal grand jury. The members of the Haywood family were not in court.

Attorney E. F. Richardson, for the defense, assumed the work of questioning the prospective jurors, relieving Clarence S. Darrow, who had charge yesterday. He began with Samuel Wingate, who had been in seat No. 11 since last Thursday. The first ten men of the panel had been passed yesterday by both sides without challenge for cause. Wingate was taken back to the labor troubles in the Coer d'Alene district in 1899 and 1902 and asked him if any prejudice had grown in his mind against the Western Federation of Miners as a result of the troubles in Northern Idaho. He declared that there was not.

Allan Pride, the fifth talesman, passed by both sides, testified that Deputy Sheriff Roberts, who served him with a summons, had talked with him about the case and particularly about Harry Orchard, whom he had known when a penitentiary guard. An

New Yorker Pays Expenses of Trip to Try to Secure Jewels.

New York, May 15.—Sidney Smith, well known in New York society, and member of many clubs, left for Europe yesterday on the Kaiser Wilhelm II with George Collins, alias Bevington, a deserter from the British army and a self confessed thief, Smith paying all expenses.

Collins or Bevington, the valet for Morrison Warren, in March last, took from Mr. Smith's apartments in Hotel Ritz, Paris, money and jewelry worth $15,000. After his arrest here, he confessed and declared that $10,000 worth of the property was in a metal box hidden under a bed in a room of a house in Paris. Smith is taking him over to give him a chance to prove the truth of his assertions.

Bevington himself offered to go to France without extradition, in the custody of the man he robbed.

Marriage of Grand Duke to Divorced Princess Accepted.

Russian Reactionists Demand Overthrow of Recent Reforms.

St. Petersburg, May 15.—An imperial order was issued today creating the Princess Anastasia of Montenegro, who was married May 12 at Yalta to the Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch, a grand duchess, and announcing the emperor's sanction of the union.

No formal cognizance has been hitherto taken of the marriage, owing to the attitude of the orthodox church toward the remarriage of divorced persons, the grand duchess having been divorced from her first husband, Prince George Romanowski, duke of Leuchtenberg.

The newly married couple are still at Yalta. Yesterday they received a deputation of Mohammedans, villagers, who presented them with the traditional bread and salt, and assured the grand duke that in the future as in the past they will always be true to the emperor and his family.

The congress of Reactionists at Moscow closed today, after adopting the final report of a resolution, setting forth the measures it considered necessary for public safety, which include the dissolution of parliament, the proclamation of full martial law wherever there is any revolutionary

DEMOCRATS TO CONFER

New York Chairman Calls Presidential Meeting for Fall.

Murphy Denies That He Will Quit Tammany Leadership.

Schenectady, N. Y., May 15.—William J. Connors of Buffalo, chairman of the Democratic state committee, who was the principal speaker at a dinner of the Democrats of Schenectady county here last night, announced after the dinner that he had called a conference to be held in New York about the middle of November at which the question of a Democratic candidate for president of the United States would be discussed. He has invited to attend the conference the Democratic United States senators, ex-United States senators and state senators, nineteen Democratic governors, all the Democratic national committeemen and the chairman of all the Democratic state committees. He asserts that he already has received a sufficient number of acceptances to insure the success of the conference.

New York, May 15.—Charles F. Murphy said last night that he had no intention of retiring from the Tammany leadership, adding: "There has been no understanding at any time to that effect. The chosing of a leader of the Tammany organization is a matter wholly in the hands of the members of the executive committee. I expect to remain leader of the organization as long as the district leaders are satisfied."

RAILROADS PLAN LABOR BUREAU

Joint Agency to Insure Better Grade of Employes Proposed.

Chicago, May 15.—Several of the railroads centering in Chicago are considering the advisability of establishing a union employment bureau, with a view to insuring a better grade of operating employes, but secrecy is maintained regarding the project, because the bitter opposition of labor organizations is feared. In the operating conferences recently, of California, has been offered the subject has received unanimous approval. If such a bureau is established it will have a complete list of all operating employes in the United States, with the complete record of the service of each. It is stated that the demand for operating employes is so great now that any applicant, no matter what his record, finds almost instant employment with any road.

JOHNSON BOOM FOR THE PRESIDENCY CONTINUES TO MAKE GOOD PROGRESS

Eastern and Southern Democrats Looking to Minnesota Governor.

Believe He Would Gain Approval of All the Elements.

Significant Article by Henry Watterson in Courier-Journal.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Echoes of the boom of Governor Johnson of Minnesota for the Democratic presidental nomination next year are spreading widely. Just now his name is the subject of more discussion than that of any other man, and radicals and conservatives alike are considering him as a compromise candidate who would be likely to gain the approval of all elements of the party.

His phenomenal run for governor last year, his manifest popularity in his home state and in adjoining commonwealths, his clear and admirable record in office, his freedom from entangling alliances likely to create dissension in the party ranks, his magnetic personality, all appeal to those who are honestly seeking, as the Democratic candidate next year a man who will appeal to the people of the country in the widest degree.

Politicians here have read with much interest a long editorial by Henry Watterson in the Louisville Courier-Journal, at the close of which he hints at a "dark horse" candidate that will meet with the approval of Democrats generally. It is generally believed here that, while no name is mentioned, the man referred to is Governor Johnson of Minnesota, and those who read Col. Watterson's utterances on the subject will hardly fail to come to the same conclusion. Says he:

"It is frequently given out that Mr. Bryan does not want the nomination next year. Certainly, unless he can unite the party, it would do him more harm than good. If he does not crave

HOODLUMS RAID CARS

San Francisco Police Helpless in Rough Part of City.

Passengers Chased and Beaten and Coaches Battered Up.

San Francisco, May 15.—The United Railroads operated 102 cars yesterday, conveying 50,000 passengers and everything passed off quietly outside of the district south of Market street. There the hoodlum element which predominates, kept up a riotous demonstration all through the day, and beat and abused passengers and carmen and stoned the cars. The 100 policemen on duty, from all accounts lost control of the situation and few arrests were made, though many acts of brutal violence were reported, persons alighting from cars being chased and in some instances knocked down and beaten.

Mayor Schmitz and the committee of fifty have spent the day in persistent efforts to formulate some definite plan that will make for industrial peace and the restoration of normal commercial activity but without success.

Governor Gillette has decided to make his headquarters in this city indefinitely for the purpose of giving the situation his personal observation.

The general labor situation remains unchanged. The telephone operators are still out, although it is reported that quite a number of the girls are returning to their work. The electrical workers held a meeting last night to

HARRIMAN IS HIT HARD

Attorneys Kellogg and Severance Make Most Caustic Report.

Competition Suppressed and Sherman-Anti-Trust Law Defied.

New York, May 15.—A portion of the recommendations of Attorneys Frank B. Kellogg and Charles Severance to the interstate commerce commission concerning the Harriman railroad investigation has been made public. It reviews the testimony, and holds that railroad competition has been suppressed in an area equal to one-third of the United States; that the contracts between the Union Pacific and Rock Island for the control of the Alton railway as well as the contracts between the Union and Southern Pacifics and the control of the Illinois Central and the San Pedro road, are all in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act. It advises that the attorney general institute proceedings to annul these agreements. It also recommends that there should be effective laws to prevent inflation of securities, and declares that the profits of the great railroads of the Far West are being used to buy stocks and control systems in the East instead of building more roads for the development of the West as they should be.

New York Hospital Nurse Tells Strange Story to Police.

New York, May 15.—Antonio Kresnic, a hospital nurse, told the police this morning that he boarded a car late last night, believing it would carry him toward Jersey City. Instead it went east. When it stopped at the East river terminal, he declared the conductor in uniform entered the car, turned out the lights, and then attacked him with a blackjack. While he was dazed by the blows, he declared the conductor robbed him of his gold watch, diamond ring and $980. While he was only half conscious, he said, he was thrown off the car, which quickly started on its return trip. The police are investigating.

London, May 15.—At the bye-election at Wimbledon, yesterday, Henry Chaplin, Unionist and ex-president of the local government board, whose candidacy was opposed by the women suffragists, was elected by the great majority of 6,964, out of a total vote of 13,562. He was Joseph Chamberlain's first lieutenant throughout the latter's protectionist campaign, and based his fight largely on that issue.

Bertrand Russell, candidate of the women suffragists, was heavily handicapped by the fact that the Liberals declined to officially nominate a candidate for the vacancy, caused by the resignation of Charles E. BROTHER OF FIRST HUSBAND

Did Not Prove Desirable Spouse for Mrs. O'Neil.

The married bliss of Thomas J. O'Neil and his bride lasted but three weeks, and this afternoon he was arraigned in the municipal court on the charge of third degree assault.

O'Neil's brother was Mrs. O'Neil's first husband. She told the judge this afternoon that her first husband had always treated her kindly, and that she thaught she would get similar treatment from his brother.

O'Neil entered a plea of guilty to an assault charge, and the court deferred sentence to consider the case more fully.

At Riverton none are being permitted either to enter or to leave the town, armed guards being in charge of every road leading to the place. A number of traveling men are cooped up at the hotel there. Sidney is patrolled by guards, and no one from the infected town is permitted to enter.

ADVICE TO RHEUMATICS

Noted Physician Tells How to Prevent and Cure Rheumatism, Kidney and Bladder Troubles.

(By George Edmund Flood, M. D.)

If you would avoid Rheumatism and Kidney and Bladder Troubles be moderate in the consumption of heavy, rich foods, substitute as far as possible soups, broths, fresh milk, and drink water—lots of water. Take plenty of time to eat, and don't eat after you have had enough, even if it does taste good. If your work is confining take a moderate amount of exercise each day in the open air.

Of course, neither diet, water, rest, nor exercise will cure these afflictions. I advise them as preventives only. For the benefit of the readers of this article who are now afflicted with Rheumatism, Kidney, Bladder or Urinary trouble, and desire to be cured quickly, I give below, complete in every detail, the famous prescription which has made me so successful in the treatment of these diseases. It is the most certain cure for these diseases that I have ever used. It is pleasant to take, it is not expensive, it can be filled by any druggist, and I believe it is the greatest prescription for Rheumatism, Kidney and Bladder Trouble ever written. It is also a valuable spring tonic and blood purifier. If you are a sufferer, save this, take it to your druggist and have it filled, or get the ingredients and mix them at home. Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, ½ ounce; Concentrated Barkola Compound, 1 ounce; Fluid Extract Prickly Ash Bark, ½ drachm; Aromatic Elixir, 4 ounces.

Adult dose, take one teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime; children, one-fourth to one-half teaspoonful after meals.

After you are cured follow the advice I have given you in regard to diet, exercise and water, and you will not need the services of a physician again for these ailments.

Claims Conversion of Property.

The trial of the case of Adam Peyton against Herman Tetzloff of Chisholm, to recover $275 for the alleged conversion of eleven hogs, was begun yesterday before a jury in Judge Ensign's room. Mr. Peyton claims that he owned eleven hogs of choice breeding and that Mr. Tetzloff appropriated them to his own use. The latter is a prominent meat dealer on the range. A writ of attachment was issued yesterday for a witness who had been subpoenaed, but who failed to appear.

Hill Gets Jail Sentence.

Henry Hill, who pleaded guilty to an indictment accusing him of grand larceny in the second degree, was sentenced by Judge Cant this morning to a term of sixty days in the county jail. Hill, who is a Finlander, and cannot understand English, appeared from the statements about his case to have been somewhat ignorant of the laws governing personal ownership.

William Kirkpatrick Dies.

William Kirkpatrick, 40 years of age, died last evening at St. Mary's hospital of blood poisoning. He was taken to the hospital only a few hours before his death. He leaves a wife and one son residing at 308 St. Croix avenue. He was a member of the teamsters union and had been employed as a driver by the Fred Miller Brewing company for some years.

Sees His First Snowstorm.

Deputy Sheriff C. C. Case of San Joaquin county, Cal., who is here with extradition papers to take J. H. Grande back to California, where a warrant has been issued for his arrest on the charge of forgery, has had the unique experience of witnessing the first snowstorm ever seen in his life. Mr. Case comes from a land of sunshine, flowers, and oranges where snow storms are as scarce as mosquitoes in Duluth on Christmas. He was born and brought up in that country and never before happened to be in any of the other states where the climate is as varied as in the Northwest.

Not a Samaritan.

The statement of the morning paper that William Wright, the settler, who disappeared from his home near Payne, and who is believed to have killed himself, was a member of the Modern Samaritans, is incorrect. An effort is being made to establish the fact that the skeleton found last Friday near Payne was that of Wright, and it was stated that Wright had an insurance policy with the Samaritans. Local officers of the order were unable to find his name on the list today, however.

TEXAS INDICTMENT OF OIL MAGNATE HELD GOOD.

St. Louis, May 15.—In his decision holding H. Clay Pierce, the oil magnate, for extradition to Texas, for perjury in 1900, United States Circuit Judge Adams reviewed the Texas indictment and the ground upon which it was based and cited a number of supreme court expressions concerning the framing of indictments. He held that the Texas indictment was ample and clear and stated "the substance of an offense within the meaning of the extradition laws of the United States." He declared that the plea that because the indictment was not found within three years after the commission of the offense, prosecution was barred by the statute of limitations was without merit.

TESTS IN CONCRETE

At Wisconsin University Laboratory Reveal Important Facts.

Investigation Shows Concrete Cracks Before It Can be Seen.

Madison, Wis., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The results of important tests on reinforced concrete beams which have been carried on in the testing laboratories of the University of Wisconsin for the past four years have been published in a bulletin prepared by E. A. Moritz, of the college of engineering entitled, "Tests on Reinforced Concrete Beams." The bulletin calls attention to the fact that to Rudolph Hartman, formerly instructor in the testing laboratory, belongs the credit of discovering several years ago the fact, now commonly recognized, that the concrete in a beam really cracks much earlier than is shown on the surface. The tests have included investigation of the efficiency of different methods of reinforceing and preventing inclined tension failures, and other interesting matters connected with these beams.

The investigation showed that the concrete cracks before evidences of the break can be detected with the eye, and that after it has cracked, though only minutely its strength in tension is zero. Comparative tests of reinforced and plain concrete beams show that the first indications of cracking appear on the reinforced beams at about the same load at which the plain beams fail. It is evident, therefore, that concrete, reinforced with steel will not stretch more before cracking than plain concrete, and that consequently the tensile resistance of concrete should not be taken into consideration in reinforced concrete design.

When reinforced concrete first came into general use, it was thought that horiontal bars of steel were sufficient, and the peculiar failures which often occurred were usually ascribed to the rods pulling out. The latter idea led to the inventions of various forms of deformed bars now on the market. It has been found that even beams reinforced with deformed bars often fail along inclined cracks, and something beside horizontal rods is necessary to prevent such failures. Stirrups have been used extensively to overcome the difficulty, but although they assist in carrying internal stresses to some extent, their use will not always prevent inclined tension failures.

Various tests were made in the laboratory as to the best form of steel reinforcement for concrete. The anchoring of the rods at the ends of the beams, which has been advocated heretofore, did not seem to strengthen them materially. The experiments apparently demonstrated that the cracking in the plane of reinforcement is not due to the pulling out of the rods, but rather to the pulling of the concrete upward away from the rods, and that it therefore can not be prevented by anchoring the rods at the ends. In most reinforcement with bent rods, the angle of these rods with the rods horizontal has been too large, and consequently the adhesive area of the rods has been too small. Numerous tests on both large and small beams made in connection with this work have shown that these methods are not effective in preventing inclined tension failures.

If you would avoid Rheumatism and Kidney and Bladder Troubles be moderate in the consumption of heavy, rich foods, substitute as far as possible soups, broths, fresh milk, and drink water—lots of water. Take plenty of time to eat, and don't eat after you have had enough, even if it does taste good. If your work is confining take a moderate amount of exercise each day in the open air.

Of course, neither diet, water, rest, nor exercise will cure these afflictions. I advise them as preventives only. For the benefit of the readers of this article who are now afflicted with Rheumatism, Kidney, Bladder or Urinary trouble, and desire to be cured quickly, I give below, complete in every detail, the famous prescription which has made me so successful in the treatment of these diseases. It is the most certain cure for these diseases that I have ever used. It is pleasant to take, it is not expensive, it can be filled by any druggist, and I believe it is the greatest prescription for Rheumatism, Kidney and Bladder Trouble ever written. It is also a valuable spring tonic and blood purifier. If you are a sufferer, save this, take it to your druggist and have it filled, or get the ingredients and mix them at home. Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, ½ ounce; Concentrated Barkola Compound, 1 ounce; Fluid Extract Prickly Ash Bark, ½ drachm; Aromatic Elixir, 4 ounces. Adult dose, take one teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime; children, one-fourth to one-half teaspoonful after meals.

After you are cured follow the advice I have given you in regard to diet, exercise and water, and you will not need the services of a physician again for these ailments.

TEXAS INDICTMENT OF OIL MAGNATE HELD GOOD.

St. Louis, May 15.—In his decision holding H. Clay Pierce, the oil magnate, for extradition to Texas, for perjury in 1900, United States Circuit Judge Adams reviewed the Texas indictment and the ground upon which it was based and cited a number of supreme court expressions concerning the framing of indictments. He held that the Texas indictment was ample and clear and stated "the substance of an offense within the meaning of the extradition laws of the United States." He declared that the plea that because the indictment was not found within three years after the commission of the offense, prosecution was barred by the statute of limitations was without merit.

At Wisconsin University Laboratory Reveal Important Facts.

Investigation Shows Concrete Cracks Before It Can be Seen.

Madison, Wis., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The results of important tests on reinforced concrete beams which have been carried on in the testing laboratories of the University of Wisconsin for the past four years have been published in a bulletin prepared by E. A. Moritz, of the college of engineering entitled, "Tests on Reinforced Concrete Beams." The bulletin calls attention to the fact that to Rudolph Hartman, formerly instructor in the testing laboratory, belongs the credit of discovering several years ago the fact, now commonly recognized, that the concrete in a beam really cracks much earlier than is shown on the surface. The tests have included investigation of the efficiency of different methods of reinforceing and preventing inclined tension failures, and other interesting matters connected with these beams.

The investigation showed that the concrete cracks before evidences of the break can be detected with the eye, and that after it has cracked, though only minutely its strength in tension is zero. Comparative tests of reinforced and plain concrete beams show that the first indications of cracking appear on the reinforced beams at about the same load at which the plain beams fail. It is evident, therefore, that concrete, reinforced with steel will not stretch more before cracking than plain concrete, and that consequently the tensile resistance of concrete should not be taken into consideration in reinforced concrete design.

When reinforced concrete first came into general use, it was thought that horizontal bars of steel were sufficient, and the peculiar failures which often occurred were usually ascribed to the rods pulling out. The latter idea led to the inventions of various forms of deformed bars now on the market. It has been found that even beams reinforced with deformed bars often fail along inclined cracks, and something beside horizontal rods is necessary to prevent such failures. Stirrups have been used extensively to overcome the difficulty, but although they assist in carrying internal stresses to some extent, their use will not always prevent inclined tension failures.

Various tests were made in the laboratory as to the best form of steel reinforcement for concrete. The anchoring of the rods at the ends of the beams, which has been advocated heretofore, did not seem to strengthen them materially. The experiments apparently demonstrated that the cracking in the plane of reinforcement is not due to the pulling out of the rods, but rather to the pulling of the concrete upward away from the rods, and that it therefore can not be prevented by anchoring the rods at the ends. In most reinforcement with bent rods, the angle of these rods with the rods horizontal has been too large, and consequently the adhesive area of the rods has been too small. Numerous tests on both large and small beams made in connection with this work have shown that these methods are not effective in preventing inclined tension failures.

Nothing I Ate Agreed With Me.

MRS. LENORA BODENHAMER.

Mrs. Lenora Bodenhamer, R. F. D. 1, Box 99, Kernersville, N. C., writes:

"I suffered with stomach trouble and indigestion for some time, and nothing that I ate agreed with me. I was very nervous and experienced a continual feeling of uneasiness and fear. I took medicine from the doctor, but it did me no good.

"I found in one of your Peruna books a description of my symptoms. I then wrote to Dr. Hartman for advice. He said I had catarrh of the stomach. I took Peruna and Manalin and followed his directions and can now say that I feel as well as I ever did.

"I hope that all who are afflicted with the same symptoms will take Peruna, as it certainly cured me."

The above is only one of hundreds who have written letters to Dr. Hartman. Just one such case as this entitles Peruna to the candid consideration of every one similarly afflicted. If this be true of the testimony of one person what ought to be the testimony of hundreds, yes thousands, of honest, sincere people. We have in our files a great many other testimonials.

There is no want ad. printed in The Herald to-day which does not strongly interest at least ten people—and here are some that will strongly interest thousands.

ROCK FALLS TO STREET

Boulder Weighing Several Tons Falls From Point of Rocks.

City Engineer Urges Immediate Removal of Loose Material.

The expected has at last happened, and a rock has fallen from the point of rocks. A big boulder, two of them, in fact, weighing between two and four tons, fell from a point about thirty feet up on the bluff on to Superior street, some time between the cessation of street car traffic last night and its commencement this morning. The big rock fortunately did not fall so as to block the tracks, but lit in the 12-foot space between the track and the foot of the bluff, and was just far enough back to permit cars to pass without trouble. The other rock which fell is a comparatively insignificant affair, weighing less than 1,000 pounds.

Some time ago City Engineer McGilvray sent a communication to the council stating that the work of the winter's frost might be completed by the spring thaws and rains, with the result that portions of the rock might fall, and he now regards himself as justified in his prediction.

"I consider the point of rocks to be in a very unsafe condition, after this incident," said the city engineer this morning. "That stone may have been the key stone for vast masses of rock above and behind it, and every rock that falls leaves those in a less stable condition. The greater part of our spring rains are yet to come, and their effect may be disastrous. The water runs into cracks caused by the frost, dissolves the binding material and undermines the soluble foundation, until the rocks fall. I consider this a very valuable warning.

"I advised the council in my annual report that it would be necessary to remove a certain amount of rock from this point every year, in order to make it safe. About 1,000 cubic yards are loosened by the frost usually. In this way we could soon have the point reduced to a safe condition without feeling the expense so heavily. In my opinion it is imperative that something be done about it."

While the rock which fell this morning did not fall on the car track, one becoming loosened higher up the cliff would probably have done so, and even one from lower down which might happen to strike the bluff and glance, would fall across the tracks. The result, should one of these big boulders strike a car, or even roll suddenly in front of a rapidly moving car, would be very serious, and action seems to be imperative.

The council took up the question Monday last on a motion by Alderman Shartel, who is anxious to get some of the rock placed on lower St. Croix avenue, and Alderman Kennedy, from the Sixth ward, in which the troublesome and much discussed crag is located, warmly supported any move which might be made to "cut a slice off the Point of Rocks," as he said. The question was laid over until next Monday night, in order that a report might be secured from the finance committee as to the condition of the permanent improvement fund. Last night's warning will probably prove sufficient to make the council realize that the removal of the loosened boulders is one of the operations which must be done, even if other improvements are neglected through lack of funds.

New York Court of Appeals Refuses to Stay the Sentence.

New York, May 15.—Under the decision of Chief Justice Cullen of the New York state court of appeals, rendered today, Abraham H. RAILROAD NEWS

LADIES TO BE INVITED

Will Come With Husbands to G. A. M. B. A. Y. C. Meeting.

Prospects for Most Successful Gathering in Club's History.

Railroad men who belong to the G. A. M. B. A. Y. C. club, which recognizes Duluth as its home, but which has a membership as wide as the country itself, have a better program mapped out for their entertainment at the annual meeting here this summer than was the case with either of the previous meetings. The organization has as its object the promotion of good fellowship, including a good time for everybody concerned, with no business to bother the head of any one, and it looks as if this laudable purpose would come more nearly being realized this year than ever before.

Local members of the club held a pleasant meeting at the Commercial club last evening, and discussed plans of entertainment for the gathering here later on, which will be held either the last two or three days in June, or else on July 6. The exact date will be fixed within the next few days. A feature of the convention this summer will be the fact that a cordial invitation will be extended the ladies to attend, and promises have already been secured from about thirty or forty outside members that they will bring their wives with them. A committee of local women whose husbands are in the ranks of the railroaders will be appointed to look after the entertainment of the visiting ladies, and every effort will be made to see that they have a good time. They will take part in everything that the men do, in the way of boat rides, drives, etc., with the exception of a banquet to be held at the Spalding the evening of the first day of the meeting, which will be attended by the men alone.

Following the banquet, everybody who is so inclined will board one of the Booth boats for a trip to Isle Royale. This will include the ladies, and it is expected that the entire party will number considerably more than 200. Of course, there will be a good many who attend the meeting who will be unable to take the lake trip, but the rate for the round trip has been made so very reasonable, and the attractions offered are so numerous, that the capacity of the vessel is sure to be taxed. W. H. Northmore, president of the club, is division freight and passenger agent of the Booth line, which should be sufficient guarantee to the railroad men.

To allow everybody an opportunity to go along, the trip has been so arranged that the boat will leave Duluth between 8 and 9 o'clock on a Saturday evening, returning to the city Monday morning.

On the day preceding the departure for the island there will be a boulevard drive in the morning and a ride around the horn in the afternoon, with other interesting features yet to be arranged. The banquet will be held at 6 o'clock, and this will allow just about enough time for the members to wind up things in good shape and board the boat for Isle Royale. Those of the men who are so unfortunate as to be unmarried will be allowed the privilege of inviting some one of the opposite sex who is in the same sad predicament, for there will be plenty of chaperones along. With few exceptions, members of the club are married men.

President Northmore and Secretary Chadwick last night had only the most glowing reports to make concerning the coming meeting and the future of the club. Interest in the organization is greater now than ever before, and new members are coming in right along. Originally, for traveling passenger agents alone, it has been extended to take in freight men and steamship agents. Practically every railroad line of importance in the country is represented on its membership rolls, and it is expected that about 250, exclusive of the ladies, will attend the next meeting. The business meeting last night, which was well attended, developed into a smoker and general social session.

No Change With Limited.

It is now understood that the Great Northern Oriental limited, which it has been rumored would be switched to the new Aneta branch of the road, thus shortening the haul to Seattle for forty miles, will not be transferred, but will continue to make Grand Forks a stopping point. Trains 3 and 4, which now serve at Larimore, will probably be sent over the Aneta branch.

TO REDUCE THE RATES

General Reductions to Northwestern Points Effective July 1.

Action Result of New Minnesota and Dakota Rates.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—General reductions in passenger rates to all points in the Northwest and to the Pacific coast points will soon be announced effective July 1. They will be due to the recent legislation passed by the legislatures of Minnesota and North Dakota, where by the Minnesota mileage is reduced to 2 cents a mile and North Dakota to 2½ cents. The Minnesota rate becomes effective May 1, but the North Dakota rate does not go into effect until July 1. A. L. Craig, passenger traffic manager of the Great Northern is authority for the announcement that by July 1 the Great Northern will have its tariffs completely revised allowing all points on its system to receive the benefit of the lower rates in Minnesota and North Dakota on runs into those states.

At present this is not the case. Grand Forks, N. D., has a 3 cent rate from all points in Minnesota because it is outside of Minnesota and the business is, therefore, under the interstate regulations. East Grand Forks just across the Red River of the North in Minnesota enjoys the Minnesota 2 cent rate, the difference amounting to $3 or more on a trip to the Twin Cities or Duluth.

After July 1 this will be changed. Grand Forks will have the benefit of the Minnesota 2 cent rate from all Minnesota points to East Grand Forks on the Minnesota side of the river. The same will apply to other North Dakota points now compelled to pay a 3 cent rate on all through business from Minnesota. They will pay 2 cents to the state line and then because of the lower North Dakota rate to be effective July 1 will pay 2½ cents from Grand Forks on.

Points farther west in Montana and Washington will receive the benefit of the lower rates in Minnesota and North Dakota. On a straight mileage basis this saving will amount to $5 or more from the Twin Cities or Duluth to Montana and Washington points.

North Dacota commercial organizations, particularly the Commercial club of Grand Forks, have been active in demanding that North Dakota points be given the benefit of the lower Minnesota rate on business from that state to the state line. Their claims have been pressed before the railroads, and the state railroad commissions, and the interstate commerce commission. It is announced by Mr. Craig that it is physically impossible for the roads to prepare the necessary new tariffs before July 1. "We had all we could do to begin to get ready to do business under the new Minnesota rate by May 1" is Mr. Craig's statement. "Interstate rates must be filed with the Interstate commission and must be prepared in a certain manner. By working on both Minnesota and North Dakota at the present time we hope to be able to be ready with the proper tariffs, etc., by July1."

Mr. Craig's announcement was made Tuesday in Grand Forks, where he was in conference with President E. J. Lander and Secretary M. C. Batcheller of the Commercial club. While it offers no immediate relief for the North Dakota cities, the line cities like Grand Forks being particularly interested, it is yet an announcement that both low rates will be accepted on both state and interstate business. Though it is announced that no immedite relief is possible and that for the present 2 cents a mile will be charged on all through business to points outside the state of Minnesota, the Grand Forks organization still hopes that some arrangement may be perfected whereby advantage of the Minnesota rate will be possible without crossing the river to East Grand Forks.

SPECIAL FOR KUROKI.

F. M. Rugg Recalled to Twin Cities to Arrange for It.

Frank M. Rugg, Northwestern passenger agent of the Burlington road, arrived in the city on the Northern Pacific's evening train yesterday, but his stay here was very brief, for he was recalled to the Twin Cities by a long distance telephone message notifying him that a special train was desired to transport Gen. Kuroki and party from Chicago to the Pacific coast. The message was from Gen. Wood, who, with his staff, is in charge of the guests from Japan.

When the party was on its way East Mr. Rugg accompanied it. The Japs have visited Washington, Jamestown and other Eastern points, and have been treated in a royal manner. They are guests of the government, and nothing is being left undone that would add to their pleasure or comfort. The party will sail on the Minnesota from Seattle, but before reaching there will visit Leavenworth, Denver, the United States arsenal at Rock Island, and Forts Ripley, Douglas and Logan.

Special for Free Lance.

The Omaho road ran a special train out of Duluth last night for the accommodation of "The Free Lance" company, which goes from here to Detroit, Mich., where it will close the season.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Duluth & Northern Minnesota Railway company, for the election of directors and the transaction of such other business as may be presented at the meeting, will be held on the afternoon of June 5, at the company's offices in the Lonsdale building.

New Locomotives.

Nine locomotives, six freight and three passenger cars, have been ordered by the South Shore road from the Baldwin Locomotive works. All the engines will be modern in all details. The freighters will have eight drive wheels, and the passengers ten. President Fitch is quoted as saying that his road now has plenty of freight cars to handle the business.

CONCERNING WOMEN

"Just four weeks more," some 12,000 impatient small boys and meekly resigned girls and some 300 teachers of the Duluth schools are lustily sighing. When the last weeks of the term approach there is much rejoicing among the young Duluthians in the approach of that most wonderful or next to the most wonderful day of the year—the last day of school. The other thrilling day of anticipation is the first day of school each year.

This story is to chronicle the longings and impatience of some of the teachers, however. Impatient children are not the only school attendants who are longing wishfully for that long distant last day. The sympathy of this column is entirely with the teachers and especially with a particular few of them who have surreptitiously been wearing a symbolic ring on the finger made especially for that purpose. It does seem, according to an especially frank one of this ilk, that June would never come. April dragged itself away, but May seemed to think that although according to some much quoted person, it is not always June, that the preceding month has a perfect right to be always May. So sighed this maid who just loves to teach, but who has found a man in far greater need of being taught some things than any child she has yet encountered. There are many like her.

This is a mere preliminary to saying that there will be more Duluth teachers June brides than ever in the history of the local schools. There is hardly a school building in the city but where the corps of teachers is not trying to plan. In addition to its other duties, a kitchen shower for Miss Somebody-or-other, or a linen shower for the kindergartner. The epidemic is causing talk.

There is a whisper round about, one of those whispers which so many people know about and are perfectly positive that it is true—"and, of course, don't say that I said so, but I am absolutely sure—well, in fact, I just know it's so"—you know how it goes—that one teacher who has not been teaching long enough to catch the vision of the glory and honor of the profession, just went off the other day and married a man. It was an affair that everyone had planned, with that prodigal lavishness to make plans for you that people have, but they had planned it for June and here this young person, without so much as consulting her dearest friend, went off one Saturday with a man who had chosen her and promised to teach him that one salary divided by two gives comfort and joy, also that a few well chosen synonyms for "dear" do more to make the English language attractive than the purist style of Henry James, also that a flat on East Fifth street or South Thirteenth avenue, can encompass the world, silly books to the contrary notwithstanding, and that as passes are no longer issued on the railroads one can be perfectly content to stay at home. Of course, she did not vow in just that way, but that's the job she has undertaken in preference to teaching adorable little girls with stiffly starched skirts and perky bows, and dear little boys of more or less cleanliness, things that they will find quite valuable in later life. That is what one teacher has done.

The others have decided to put off the evil day until June, but during that month a series of educational weddings is looked for that will be quite astounding in its length.

RENA VIVIENNE

To Be Soon Heard in Concert in This City.

One of the musical events of the spring which will be of much interest in Duluth will be the concert which will be sung here by Rena Vivienne, the young Duluth woman who has sung the title role of "Mme. Butterfly" in the Savage production this year. Miss Vivienne was unable to appear with the company while in this city, and everybody will be especially glad to hear her in concert. The affair will arranged by the Ladies' Guild of St. Paul's church.

Returns to Twin Cities.

Miss Daisy M. Griggs, state secretary of the Young Women's Christian association returned last evening to Minneapolis. Miss Griggs has been the guest of the local association for several days and she was much pleased and interested in the work carried on by the local association. The work of the state secretary is in large part among the college associations, there being but two city associations in the state, those located at Minneapolis and Duluth.

Important Meeting.

An important meeting of the Ladies' Guild of St. Paul's Episcopal church will be held tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock in the guild room of the church. It is desired that every member be present.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. E. W. Smith of 623 North Central avenue West Duluth. The place of meeting has been changed and the members are requested to note the change. "Uses of Music" will be the subject of study and in response to roll call the names of celebrated composers will be spoken. The leader for the afternoon will be Mrs. H. H. Phelps.

Personal Mention.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Congdon and children returned yesterday from California where they have visited for several weeks.

Miss Josephine Carey returned yesterday from a few days' visit at Minneapolis, where she was the guest of Mrs. Thomas Whyler Greene.

Mrs. Joseph Sattler has returned from a several months' visit in the West.

Church Wedding.

The wedding of Miss Pauline Ella Stitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stitt of the West end to John Benedict Graham will take place this evening at St. James' Catholic church at West Duluth. The service will be read at 7:30 o'clock. The bride will be attended by her sister, Miss Jane Stitt and the best man will be C. D. Dea. A wedding reception will be held after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents at the Esmond hotel. After a short wedding trip Mr. Graham and his bride will be at home at Superior.

Pot roast, 12½ cents a lb.

"What is there new or different in this market this morning," inquired the marketer.

"Oh! Lord!" prayed the market man. It depends on the inflection of the reader's voice whether that is profanity or prayer. In the market man's fervent tone it was prayer. "There ain't nothing new," he said.

"There must be" said the marketer, querulously. "I have never seen anything new in this market yet. All you ever have is just the stuff that's in season, with lettuce and asparagus and grapefruit, and strawberries and celery, and radishes, and prunes, and flour, and tomatoes, and bananas, and spinach, and parsnips, and rhubarb, and green peppers, and lamb chops, and artichokes, and cucumbers, and sweet potatoes, and lemons, and limes, and pineapples, and egg plant, and cabbages, and oranges, and preserved ginger, and cheese, and eggs, and boiling onions, and new potatoes, and green—"

"Yes, I know," said the market man soothingly.

FIRST MAY FESTIVAL AN UNQUALIFIED SUCCESS

To the accompaniment of a thick soft padding of wet May snow, the first May Musical Festival of the Duluth Oratorio club was presented last evening at the First Methodist church and was a brilliant effort for which every member of the society may congratulate himself. The brilliantly lighted and decorated church presented a soothing contrast to the out-of-season weather which prevailed, and a large and fashionable audience gathered for the first concert of the series. Palms and spring flowers were used with good effect on the stage and from the balconies were suspended tiny canoes filled with early spring flowers, the decoration suggestive of the theme of the cantatas to be sung by the society.

The initial appearance of the oratorio society was awaited with interest and no little curiosity, for the first venture of the kind is always rather uphill work and the many months of effort that have preceded the first performance were not gone through, without doubts and some qualiings. The chorus of 150 voices under the leadership of Horace W. Reyner sang the Coleridge-Taylor cantata, "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast," leaving no doubt from the opening phrases, of the ability of the society. The cantata was splendidly sung under Mr. Reyner's direction, the balance of voices being carefully worked out, and the interpretation of the characteristic music relating the story of the young Indian brave and his bride from the Dakotas, being given with finish and an ensemble that was most gratifying to those interested in the work of the society. The endeavor was a sincerely artistic one and one of which Mr. Reyner and each individual may be proud.

The assisting soloist for the cantata was Holmes Cowper of Chicago, who sang the tenor solo "Onaway! Awake Beloved." Mr. Cowper's voice is a tenor of sweetness and power and he was received with much favor. In the first part of the program Mr. Cowper was heard in the recitative and aria from Haydn's "Creation," "And God Created Man," and "In Native Worth."

Orchestra Is Magnificent.

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Emil Oberhoer, is the assisting orchestra, and in the numbers presented last evening, the first time the organization has been heard in this city, proved itself to be a musical organization of fine musicianship. The orchestra is a finely balanced one and from the most delicate nuances of shading to the stirring or dramatic climaxes plays in perfect ensemble under the masterly leadership of the director, Emil Oberhoffer. The numbers played last evening were the overture from "Oberon" by Weber, the "Peer Gynt" suite of Grieg, and the Liszt "Rhapsodie Hongroise" No. 2. The delicate phrasing of the third movement of the Grieg Suite "Anitras Dance" and the dramatic climax of the last movement "In the Hall of the Mountain King" were wonderfully beautiful and powerful tone pictures.

Mrs. Brearley Scores.

Last evening's audience was especially interested in the appearance of Mrs. Grace Senior Brearley, solo pianist, who was heard with the orchestra in the Beethoven Concerto in G. Although the solo instrument was placed at the end of the stage, because of the impossibility of another arrangement, the tones of the piano, clear and beautiful, were dominant. The demands upon the soloist were of necessity greater because of this arrangement, and Mrs. Brearley in the three movements was a revelation to even those who have watched her work most closely in her former appearances. The beautiful concerto was given a masterly interpretation, in full splendid tone, the thrills and runs being of exquisite brilliance, and the entire performance that of a most thorough artist. Mrs. Brearey was enthusiastically recalled.

WEST DULUTH

GATHERING MANY EGGS

Fish Department Meeting With Good Success This Spring.

Trout Fry Being Planted and Pike to Come Later.

J. C. Green, deputy state game warden, was in West Duluth yesterday en route to Fond du Lac, where he has been for several weeks past superintending the shipping fish eggs to the state hatchery at St. Paul. Mr. Green says the department has been unusually successful in gathering eggs from the streams of Northern Minnesota this year, as between 700 and 800 kegs have already been secured, where in former years 200 kegs was considered a good catch. The weather conditions in the woods this year have facilitated the work, and it is expected the number of fry for distribution this year will be greater than at any time in recent years. An unusually large catch of eggs was made on the Pike river at Tower yesterday and shipped to St. Paul last night.

Mr. Green says the planting of fish fry will consume the attention of the department considerably in Northern Minnesota this coming summer. The planting of trout is now going on rapidly and will be continued all summer well into the fall. In about two weeks, the stocking of the streams with pike will begin. It is expected every stream in the Northern part of the state will be given some attention this year, and in a few years they will be thoroughly replenished. Some of the streams have been cleared out pretty well on account of the large number of fishermen in recent years, but the department is endeavoring to keep stride with the fishermen, so that none of the streams will become barren.

The trout fishermen are despairing of having any good sport for some weeks to come. The cold weather and the high streams are by no means favorable to good fishing and the prospective anglers will be compelled to bide their time. They are living in anticipation, however.

We believe that any man who really desires to be cured of the liquor habit can cure himself by using Orrine. This remarkable discovery has made so many cures among our customers that we are glad to sell it under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure.

SEEKS STATE TO MARRY WARD

Eccentric Ohio Millionaire Plans to Give Away Fortune.

Columbus, Ohio, May 15.—John Bryan, the eccentric 60-year-old millionaire farmer, author and manufacturer of Yellow Springs, is here today examining the books in the state law library for a state marriage law that suits him. When he finds it, he says he will journey to that state and wed Miss Fredericka Murphy, a Cincinnati girl, 20 years old, whom he educated.

"It's the state that has the best statutes on this subject that will get us, and I assure you that it will be neither Kentucky, Ohio nor Dakota," he said. "The marriage contract provides that my wife shall not go on the stage nor write any novels until after twenty years of married life. We only want a million, and will give away the remainder of my estate, $3,000,000."

KILLED BY WHOLESALE

Deer Being Slaughtered by Wolves in Northern Minnesota.

R. W. Nichols Saw Eight Deer Carcasses Partially Devoured.

R. W. Nichols, ex-county surveyor, who has just returned from the northern part of the state, where he has been surveying on township 53, range 16, for the last few weeks, says that the slaughter of the deer by the wolves in the north country is appalling, and that unless something is done to rid the country of the wolves the big game hunting will soon be a thing of the past in Minnesota.

While working in the one district in and about town 53, Mr. Nichols says that he came across the carcasses of eight deer which had been killed by the wolves. This sort of slaughter is said to be general over the whole of Northern Minnesota, and it is claimed is doing more to exterminate the deer than the few weeks of open season every fall.

In the country in which Mr. Nichols was working there are only a few settlers, and the wolves have a clear field in which to hunt the big game. The wolves chase the deer until they are exhausted, pounce upon them and pull them to the ground and devour what they please.

Big game sportsmen in Northern Minnesota are advocating a law which will authorize the counties to pay a bigger bounty for wolves, thereby making the inducement to hunt and kill the animals somewhat greater. In some of the districts in the northern part of the state organized hunting parties are being formed to kill off the wolves, but in the district in which Mr. Nichols was working the settlers are too few for such an undertaking.

ESTIMATES ON LAKE AVENUE

Board of Public Works Receives Figures on Improvement.

The engineer today submitted estimates on the work of paving Lake avenue from the north end of the viaduct to Second street as proposed and petitioned for.

Two estimates have been made, both for sandstone block, which is thought to be the only material which could be used on the grade afforded for the avenue. One provides for a three-inch concrete base under the sandstone blocks. This is the more expensive of the two. The second is estimated on a sandstone pavement with a sand cushion for the blocks and costs almost $2,000 less, its aggregate cost being $5,728.

While a concrete base is undoubtedly very desirable and under some conditions provides a much better paving, there is said to be some quesiton as to whether it is imperative under conditions such as prevail on Lake avenue. The base is unusually hard there, and the engineers have pointed out that Michigan street has endured very well and the blocks were laid upon a sand cushion there. It is not thought that the slope on Lake avenue will make any difference as to this.

The above estimates provide for sandstone curbing with what is known as grouted gutters. This means that the gutters are formed by setting the blocks within four feet of the edges of the road, in concrete, instead of in sand which is the material used on other portions of the roadbed.

NATIONAL HOLIDAY OF THE NORWEGIAN PEOPLE

Duluth Norwegians will on Friday, May 17, celebrate the ninety-third anniversary of the independence of their native country, Norway. This, in one sense, is correct, as it is ninety-three years since the Norwegians promulgated their present constitution, which is known as one of the most democratic in the world, as all power lies in the hands of the people. But Norway, as an independent nation, is 135 years old, therefore one of the oldest of the European nations. The first man to gather all of the different clans of the country under one banner was Harold Haarfarge, called Harold the Fair-Haired. In the year 872, under his and his descendants' regime, which lasted for more than 500 years, the country flourished, but after the last male descendant of this hardy race of kings died, which was in 1387, Norway and Denmark united under Queen Margerete, the mother of the last Norwegian king.

This union, which united the three Scandinavian countries, is known as the union of Kalmar. Sweden did not long remain in this union, but Norway and Denmark continued under one ruler for 433 years. The union with Denmark proved to be a poor one for Norway, and in 1814 the union was dissolved.

Immediately after the dissolution delegates from all classes of the Norwegian people gathered to form a new constitution, and on May 17, 1814, the work of these delegates was promulgated throughout the country, declaring Norway a free and independent nation. COREY'S UNCLE FEELS ASHAMED

Declares the Marriage Has Disgraced the Family Name.

Braddock, Pa., May 15.—"Mark my words, my prediction is that you will rue the act long before you have been married to Mabel Gilman half as long as you were married to Laura Cook Corey. This is the first time in my life I have been ashamed of the name of Corey, and I feel like asking the courts to change it to something else. This would make your grandmother weep from the skies or turn over in her grave if such a thing were possible."

This is an extract of a letter sent to W. Ellis Corey by James B. Corey, the millionaire tool operator of this city. Mr. Corey, who Sunday occupied the pulpit of the United Evangelist church, which he built twenty years ago, quivered with righteous indignation as he spoke of Ellis' marriage to Mabel Gilman. Mr. Corey is 75 years of age, and retired from business only recently. He has seen a strenuous life, particularly in his early days as a river pilot.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 15.—W. E. Corey is said to be still making every effort to effect a reconciliation with his 19-year-old son, Allan Corey. The latter confided to a schoolmate several days ago that his father had offered him $500,000 and promised to take him into the steel company and make him a millionaire if he will only go and live with his father and the latter's new wife. The young man refused the offer at once, declaring that he will remain loyal to his mother.

BRITISH RIFLEMEN TO SHOOT FOR PALMA PRIZE.

London, May 15.—The National Rifle association has accepted the invitation of the Canadian Rifle association to contest for the Palma trophy with American and Canadian rifle teams, at Ottawa, Sept. 6. Arrangements have been completed by which the British team will stop over in Canada while on its way to Australia, where the riflemen will participate in the match for the Empire trophy.

ON THE IRON RANGES

TO REJECT ORDINANCE

One Passed at Virginia Not Acceptable to Traction Company.

The Council Will Prepare Another to Remove Objections.

Virginia, Minn., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—C. G. Goodrich of Minneapolis, vice president of the Twin City Rapid Transit company, who is financially backing the Mesaba Traction company; Attorney Robertson, Minneapolis, and F. B. Myers of Biwabik, president of the Mesaba Traction company, were in the city yesterday. Messrs. Myers and Robertson appeared before the council last evening and the latter stated that the Mesaba Traction company had decided not to accept the street railway franchise passed three months ago by the Virginia council for three reasons: First, that there was a doubt as to its legality because it had not first advertised for sale to the highest bidder as provided by the city charter; second, because it contains a provision that the company must maintain an hourly schedule of cars at all times of day, and, third, because it contains a provision that the company must put up a cash forfeit of $10,000 to complete the road within the time specified in the ordinance. He said that if the latter two requirements were eliminated from the franchise and then put up for sale the Mesaba Traction company would offer a bid, otherwise not.

The company has until May 22 to accept or reject the franchise formerly passed and President Myers stated that a written rejection would be filed with the city clerk within a day or two. A new franchise will probably be prepared to be submitted to the council at the next meeting. It is the plan to prepare a franchise as the council desires, then advertise it for sale to the highest bidder and then proceed to grant it to the concern making the best bid.

The city clerk was instructed to advertise for bids for construction of the proposed new fire hall.

A petition signed by eighty-seven property owners and residents asked the council to order the removal of the storage warehouse and tanks of the Standard Oil company from their present location on the Missabe road right of way on the ground that they were a danger and menace to surrounding property. The agency for the company here was formerly held by Mayor Eaton and was recently transferred to another party.

A resolution instructing the city clerk to advertise for bids for constructing a sewer in district No. 3 was laid over because a previous resolution accepting the plans and specifications of the city engineer had not been signed by the mayor. The council has been endeavoring for over a year to have this sewer built, but has been blocked at every turn by the mayor's vetoes.

The matter of purchasing a rock crusher was favorably considered and was referred to the street and alley committee with instructions to make a report at the next meeting.

The city engineer reported that there were two places where defects had occurred in the Chestnut street pavement and he was instructed to notify Contractor P. McDonnell and his bondsmen to have repairs made forthwith.

TIME LIMIT SET.

Eveleth Council Changes Traction Ordinance to Suit the People.

Eveleth, Minn., May 15.—At the council meeting held last night, the traction ordinance was given its second reading, and the changes desired by the citizens made. The ordinance as originally drafted set no time when the roads between Eveleth and Biwabik and Eveleth and Hibbing must be completed. This, it was thought, would be a detriment to this city because in the event of the line between Eveleth and Hibbing being completed first. Hibbing would in all probability receive the trade of the people between Hibbing and Biwabik that rightly belongs to Eveleth.

The amendment to the ordinance provides that the company to which the franchise is awarded must complete the line between this city and Biwabik in three years and the line between Eveleth and Hibbing in five years. The ordinance will receive its third reading at the next meeting of the council.

SIX COUPLES WED.

Clergy Kept Hustling at Chisholm for a Second Time.

Chisholm, Minn., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Another gala day was seen in Chisholm Saturday, when six couples were, amid happy festivities, launched upon the mysterious and uncertain sea of matrimony. Three weeks ago Chisholm saw the first of these matrimonial days, when eight young couples "jumped the broom stick." Whether these special and extraordinary demands upon the local clergy come by accident or are previously arranged is not known, but it is thought that the town council ought to set apart one day in the month as a gala day for wedding functions.

The names of four of the couples who were married are: J. Kivisto and Miss Helma Santh, John Bateson and Miss Mary Jacobson, Otto Lundquist and Miss Lena Strong, John Hendrickson and Miss Mary Frentilla.

FIRE AT GRAND RAPIDS.

Home of John McVey is Partially Destroyed by Flame.

Grand Rapids, May 15.—The home of John McVey was partially destroyed by fire here last night, a loss of nearly $1,000 being entailed. Mr. McVey, who is about 69 years old, was the only member of the family at home when the flames broke out, and did not know that the structure was on fire until he heard the cracking of the woodwork about him. He managed to escape without injury. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it probably started from an overheated stove.

At the council meeting held last night, it was decided to construct a boulevard system throughout the residence district of the city. The streets will be treated with sand and gravel, and cement sidewalks in front of the houses will be constructed. The cost will probably be several thousand dollars.

It is probable that the electric light rate in this city will be lowered in the near future, and the water rate raised. Both plants are owned by the city.

NEW SUPERINTENDENT FOR CHISHOLM SCHOOLS.

Chisholm, Minn., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Prof. C. Vaughan of Madison, Wis., has been selected by the school board as principal of the Chisholm schools. Mr. Vaughan is a graduate of Wisconsin's normal school and state university, and comes highly recommended. He has also had several years' experience as superintendent of schools. Mr. Vaughan takes the position vacated by Mr. Mennich, and entered on his work Monday.

Another important legislative matter being considered is the contemplated change in representation at the annual meetings. Heretofore it has been on the basis of one delegate for each 25 members and a change to one delegate for every fifty members is proposed.

Under the auspices of the Knights of Khorassan of Mahrah Temple, No. 77, last night, an initiation ceremonial was conducted at Mozart hall. The ritual was exemplified by the officers and staff of Bluff City temple, No. 36, of Stillwater, followed by public installation services and drill exemplification by North Star Temple No. 12, of Minneapolis.

St. Paul lodge No. 2, Knights of Pythias, will entertain members of the grand lodge tonight at a stag social. Justice E. A. Jaggard will act as master of ceremonies.

extended and searching examination by Mr. Darrow failed to show that there had been any attempt to improperly influence prospective jurors and while the defense reserved its rights it is improbable that the incident will be pursued any further.

The women of Boise seem determined to avoid the trial, for there were scarcely a dozen in the courtroom yesterday. Mrs. Adams came again yesterday, and this time took a seat beside Mrs. Haywood, inside the railed enclosure. She remained with the invalid woman all afternoon and assisted in taking her from the room after adjournment. She and her husband are down as witnesses for the state, but her action is taken as a clear indication of her attitude.

Haywood participated yesterday to a greater extent than before in the work of his counsel. He consulted constantly with Messrs. Darrow, Richardson and Nugent, and it was clear that he was offering suggestions as to the line of examination, and expressing himself as to the men in the box who may be chosen to sit in judgment on his life.

In seeking the removal of Talesman Orrie Cole, who is not in good health, Edgar Wilson, for the defense, made the statement that the trial would occupy several weeks, and possibly months.

The ten men who have been examined and passed for cause by both sides are: A. L. Ewing, carpenter; William Vansordsale, drover; Samuel D. Gilman, farmer; Walter Shaw, farmer; Allan Pride, farmer; D. W. Henry, carpenter; George M. McIntyre, farmer; W. N. Rudge, farmer; Orrie Cole, mining man, and W. W. Bisby, real estate and insurance agent.

ing can be done at present. Other mediators, who have conferred with both sides, talk in the same vein.

The strikers claim they have secured an important victory in Jersey City. The Italian line, which docks there, they declare, has taken back 250 men at the advanced wages demanded, in order to discharge two large ships loaded with perishable fruit. The leaders claim that this is an indication that the companies are weakening, and that they are jubilant over the development.

Montreal, May 15.—The first day of the longshoremen's strike saw the business of the port only partially tied up. All of the companies obtained crews for their vessels. The feature of the day was the application by the shipping federation to the minister of labor at Ottawa for the appointment of a board of conciliation, under the Lemieux act. Last night it was proposed to arrest the leaders of the strike under the clause of this act, but later it was decided that such a move might do more harm than good. One of the steamship companies offered its men an increase of 2½ cents per hour all around to return to work, and the offer was rejected without consideration.

STRIKERS FORM ORGANIZATION

Northern Pacific Freighthandlers at Brainerd Want More Pay.

The freighthandlers and helpers who are employed in the Northern Pacific storehouse and scrap iron yard at Brainerd, and who are out on a strike for higher wages, have sent a communication to the secretary of the state federation of labor, whose office is in Duluth, asking that a permanent union be organized.

The strikers are asking for a wage increase of 25 cents a day from $1.75 a day. A temporary organization has already been formed and so far there are about fifty-four names on the membership list. E. E. Jones has been chosen as chairman of the strike committee.

The state secretary was asked to either go to Brainerd to perfect the organization himself, or send some one from this city for that purpose, or to deputize a Brainerd union labor official to do the work. The strike is being conducted on business principles and the unions hope to win in the end.

If the railroads should refuse the demands of the strikers and should attempt to put strikebreakers to work in their places it is expected the unions of machinists and boilermakers working for the company at Brainerd will go out on a sympathetic strike.

'BLACKS' AND 'REDS' EVEN IN AUSTRIAN ELECTIONS.

Vienna, May 15.—Herr von Marchet, the minister of public instruction, has resigned in consequence of his defeat in the elections yesterday. Out of 367 results reported up to noon today, 154 will require second ballots. The "blacks" and "reds," as the Clericals and Socialists are termed, have secured about an equal number of candidates. They include 56 Christian Socialists (otherwise Clericals and anti-Seminites); 56 Social Democrats and 26 members of the Catholic Center party. The rest are distributed among a score of minor factions.

Six Hundred Boys Will Witness Performance of the Flints.

This is newsboy night at the Lyceum theater. The Herald newsboys will be out in force to witness the work of the Flints, hypnotists, and as guests of the Flints and Mr. Marshall, manager of the Lyceum they will try not to make any more noise than they possibly have to. It is certain that they will show their appreciation of what is going on on the stage, however, and in no uncertain manner but not in such a way as to disturb the regular patrons of the house.

About 600 newsies will attend the entertainment. Their tickets read for gallery seats. The boys will not attend in a body but each will be given a ticket when he calls for his papers tonight, whether he lives in Duluth proper, the West end or West Duluth. There will be no line of march, or anything of the kind. The newsies will go to the theater as early or late as they please, independent of every one else.

"The labor situation is the most important problem before the cotton manufacturers today," said President Lowe. "The shortage in the South is so great that cotton mill building is almost at a standstill, compared with what it is in England."

The timber loss is estimated at $75,000.

MR. FRANK M'NALLY, 110 YEARS OLD.

Mr. Frank McNally, of Clinton, Michigan, who is 110 years old, says that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has helped him right along and is the best tonic he has used in 80 years. Mr. McNally owes his long life and Vigor to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, the Elixir of Life.

The records of the Roman Catholic Parish of Summerhill, Ireland, contains this entry: "Frank, son of Thomas and Jane McNally, baptized April 10th, 1797."

On March 7th, last, Mr. McNally wrote:

"There is no mistake about it, your Medicinal Malt Whiskey helped me right along, and has preserved my strength and vitality, and as long as I have the money to buy it I never will be without it. It is a Godsend to humanity, necessary to my well being, and the best Malt Whiskey I have tasted in the last 80 years."

is distilled wholly from malted grain by a most expensive method which has never been made public. This private process insures quality and flavor. Its age, softness, palatability and freedom from those injurious substances found in other whiskies make it acceptable to the most sensitive stomach.

If you wish to keep young, strong and vigorous and have on your cheeks the glow of perfect health, take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey regularly, according to directions, and take no other medicine. It is dangerous to fill yourself with drugs; they poison the blood, while Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey tones and strengthens the heart action and purifies the entire system. It is recognized as a family medicine everywhere. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has stood many severe tests by skilled chemists during the past fifty years, and has always been found absolutely pure and to contain great medicinal properties.

CAUTION—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. It's the only absolutely pure medicinal malt whiskey and is sold in sealed bottles only; never in bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Price $1.00. Illustrated medical booklet and doctor's advice free. NATIONAL HOLIDAY OF THE NORWEGIAN PEOPLE

Duluth Norwegians will on Friday, May 17, celebrate the ninety-third anniversary of the independence of their native country, Norway. This, in one sense, is correct, as it is ninety-three years since the Norwegians promulgated their present constitution, which is known as one of the most democratic in the world, as all power lies in the hands of the people. But Norway, as an independent nation, is 135 years old, therefore one of the oldest of the European nations. The first man to gather all of the different clans of the country under one banner was Harold Haurfarge, called Harold the Fair-Haired. In the year 872, under his and his descendants' regime, which lasted for more than 500 years, the country flourished, but after the last male descendant of this hardy race of kings died, which was in 1387, Norway and Denmark united under Queen Margerete, the mother of the last Norwegian king.

This union, which united the three Scandinavian countries, is known as the union of Kalmar. Sweden did not long remain in this union, but Norway and Denmark continued under one ruler for 433 years. The union with Denmark proved to be a poor one for Norway, and in 1814 the union was dissolved.

Another important legislative matter being considered is the contemplated change in representation at the annual meetings. Heretofore it has been on the basis of one delegate for each 25 members and a change to one delegate for every fifty members is proposed.

Under the auspices of the Knights of Khorassan of Mahrah Temple, No. 77, last night, an initiation ceremonial was conducted at Mozart hall. The ritual was exemplified by the officers and staff of Bluff City temple, No. 36, of Stillwater, followed by public installation services and drill exemplification by North Star Temple No. 12, of Minneapolis.

St. Paul lodge No. 2, Knights of Pythias, will entertain members of the grand lodge tonight at a stag social. Justice E. A. Jaggard will act as master of ceremonies.

extended and searching examination by Mr. Darrow failed to show that there had been any attempt to improperly influence prospective jurors and while the defense reserved its rights it is improbable that the incident will be pursued any further.

The women of Boise seem determined to avoid the trial, for there were scarcely a dozen in the courtroom yesterday. Mrs. Adams came again yesterday, and this time took a seat beside Mrs. Haywood, inside the railed enclosure. She remained with the invalid woman all afternoon and assisted in taking her from the room after adjournment. She and her husband are down as witnesses for the state, but her action is taken as a clear indication of her attitude.

Haywood participated yesterday to a greater extent than before in the work of his counsel. He consulted constantly with Messrs. Darrow, Richardson and Nugent, and it was clear that he was offering suggestions as to the line of examination, and expressing himself as to the men in the box who may be chosen to sit in judgment on his life.

In seeking the removal of Talesman Orrie Cole, who is not in good health, Edgar Wilson, for the defense, made the statement that the trial would occupy several weeks, and possibly months.

The ten men who have been examined and passed for cause by both sides are: A. L. Ewing, carpenter; William Vansordale, drover; Samuel D. Gilman, farmer; Walter Shaw, farmer; Allan Pride, farmer; D. W. Henry, carpenter; George M. McIntyre, farmer; W. N. Rudge, farmer; Orrie Cole, mining man, and W. W. Bisby, real estate and insurance agent.

ing can be done at present. Other mediators, who have conferred with both sides, talk in the same vein.

The strikers claim they have secured an important victory in Jersey City. The Italian line, which docks there, they declare, has taken back 250 men at the advanced wages demanded, in order to discharge two large ships loaded with perishable fruit. The leaders claim that this is an indication that the companies are weakening, and that they are jubilant over the development.

Montreal, May 15.—The first day of the longshoremen's strike saw the business of the port only partially tied up. All of the companies obtained crews for their vessels. The feature of the day was the application by the shipping federation to the minister of labor at Ottawa for the appointment of a board of conciliation, under the Lemieux act. Last night it was proposed to arrest the leaders of the strike under the clause of this act, but later it was decided that such a move might do more harm than good. One of the steamship companies offered its men an increase of 2½ cents per hour all around to return to work, and the offer was rejected without consideration.

Northern Pacific Freighthandlers at Brainerd Want More Pay.

The freighthandlers and helpers who are employed in the Northern Pacific storehouse and scrap iron yard at Brainerd, and who are out on a strike for higher wages, have sent a communication to the secretary of the state federation of labor, whose office is in Duluth, asking that a permanent union be organized.

The strikers are asking for a wage increase of 25 cents a day from $1.75 a day. A temporary organization has already been formed and so far there are about fifty-four names on the membership list. E. E. Jones has been chosen as chairman of the strike committee.

The state secretary was asked to either go to Brainerd to perfect the organization himself, or send some one from this city for that purpose, or to deputize a Brainerd union labor official to do the work. The strike is being conducted on business principles and the unions hope to win in the end.

If the railroads should refuse the demands of the strikers and should attempt to put strikebreakers to work in their places it is expected the unions of machinists and boilermakers working for the company at Brainerd will go out on a sympathetic strike.

'BLACKS' AND 'REDS' EVEN IN AUSTRIAN ELECTIONS.

Vienna, May 15.—Herr von Marchet, the minister of public instruction, has resigned in consequence of his defeat in the elections yesterday. Out of 367 results reported up to noon today, 154 will require second ballots. The "blacks" and "reds," as the Clericals and Socialists are termed, have secured about an equal number of candidates. They include 56 Christian Socialists (otherwise Clericals and anti-Semitites); 56 Social Democrats and 26 members of the Catholic Center party. The rest are distributed among a score of minor factions.

NEWSIES' NIGHT AT THE LYCEUM

Six Hundred Boys Will Witness Performance of the Flints.

This is newsboy night at the Lyceum theater. The Herald newsboys will be out in force to witness the work of the Flints, hypnotists, and as guests of the Flints and Mr. Marshall, manager of the Lyceum they will try not to make any more noise than they possibly have to. It is certain that they will show their appreciation of what is going on on the stage, however, and in no uncertain manner but not in such a way as to disturb the regular patrons of the house.

About 600 newsies will attend the entertainment. Their tickets read for gallery seats. The boys will not attend in a body but each will be given a ticket when he calls for his papers tonight, whether he lives in Duluth proper, the West end or West Duluth. There will be no line of march, or anything of the kind. The newsies will go to the theater as early or late as they please, independent of every one else.

BIG SHORTAGE OF LABOR WORRIES COTTON MILLS.

Philadelphia, May 15.—With an attendance of nearly 2,000 members, the eleventh annual convention of the National Cotton Manufacturing association opened here today. "The labor situation is the most important problem before the cotton manufacturers today," said President Lowe. "The shortage in the South is so great that cotton mill building is almost at a standstill, compared with what it is in England."

Men worked all night, starting counter fires, and their efforts have checked the flames. Gas and oil pumping stations in the path of the flames were saved by enveloping them in wet blankets. The timber loss is estimated at $75,000.

MR. FRANK M'NALLY, 110 YEARS OLD.

Mr. Frank McNally, of Clinton, Michigan, who is 110 years old, says that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has helped him right along and is the best tonic he has used in 80 years. Mr. McNally owes his long life and Vigor to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, the Elixir of Life.

The records of the Roman Catholic Parish of Summerhill, Ireland, contains this entry: "Frank, son of Thomas and Jane McNally, baptized April 10th, 1797."

On March 7th, last, Mr. McNally wrote:

"There is no mistake about it, your Medicinal Malt Whiskey helped me right along, and has preserved my strength and vitality, and as long as I have the money to buy it I never will be without it. It is a Godsend to humanity, necessary to my well being, and the best Malt Whiskey I have tasted in the last 80 years."

is distilled wholly from malted grain by a most expensive method which has never been made public. This private process insures quality and flavor. Its age, softness, palatability and freedom from those injurious substances found in other whiskies make it acceptable to the most sensitive stomach.

If you wish to keep young, strong and vigorous and have on your cheeks the glow of perfect health, take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey regularly, according to directions, and take no other medicine. It is dangerous to fill yourself with drugs; they poison the blood, while Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey tones and strengthens the heart action and purifies the entire system. It is recognized as a family medicine everywhere. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has stood many severe tests by skilled chemists during the past fifty years, and has always been found absolutely pure and to contain great medicinal properties.

CAUTION—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. It's the only absolutely pure medicinal malt whiskey and is sold in sealed bottles only; never in bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Price $1.00. Illustrated medical booklet and doctor's advice free. MARINE NEWS

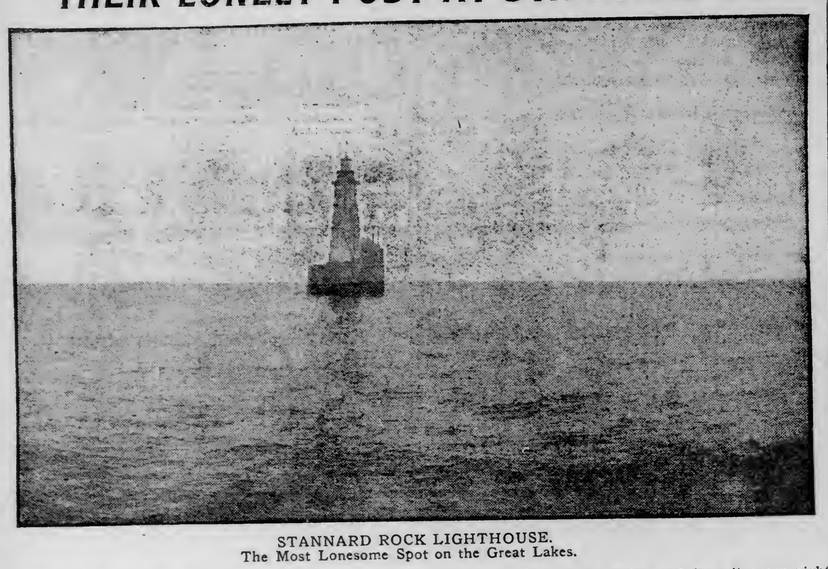
LIGHTHOUSE CREW UNABLE TO REACH THEIR LONELY POST AT STANNARD ROCK



STANNARD ROCK LIGHTHOUSE.
The Most Lonesome Spot on the Great Lakes.

Unable to get to their post because of the ice which surrounds the little island, the crew of the Stannard Rock lighthouse are still held at the port of Marquette, and the light on the dangerous point still remains dark, although navigation through the Sault canal has been open for several weeks.

The ice has thawed away somewhat at the base of the pier, but great masses still project over the top, and they cannot be surmounted. Even if this were possible, should any of these miniature glaciers break away while the crew were trying to effect a landing, in all probability they would lose their lives. Attempts are constantly being made, however, by the lighthouse crew to reach the spot in a fish tug, and the light will undoubtedly be lighted within a few days.

This Stannard Rock is undoubtedly the most lonesome spot on the big inland sea. Out of sight of land, perched on a pinnacle of rock far out in Lake Superior, and visible only to craft which make Marquette and other ports along the south shore, east of Keweenaw Point, or to those which ply from one end of the lake to the other, the conical gray stone tower rises 102 feet above the level of the water, and from it every night during the time it is in commission there flashes a white light every thirty seconds, warning navigators of the danger zone.

According to old time mariners the island was named after Capt. Stannard, a pioneer navigator, who, it is surmised, first located the rock and gave out the warning of its presence. Marquette is the nearest port, and is fifty miles distant, while the nearest land of any description is Manitou island, east of Keweenaw Point. In clear weather the light on Stannard Rock is visible for a distance of over eighteen miles, and in thick weather there is a ten-inch steam whistle to give warning to passing vessels.

SEVERAL ROUND TRIPS.

Western Transit Boats Are Already Doing Good Business.

The boats of the Western Transit company have already made several round trips on the lakes this spring and it is reported that the package freight business is opening up in a good manner. The company has eleven boats under its control this year.

The names of the boats and the captains and engineers who sail them are as follows:

Boston, H. L. Dennis and Philip J. Rahl; Buffalo, John Fisher and James Sangers; Chicago, Thomas Slattery and John Rainey; Commodore, James R. Gibson and John Metke; Duluth, S. R. Jones and Frank Miller; Milwaukee, F. D. Osborne and Daniel Donohue; Mohawk, H. Murphy and Charles L. Murray; Superior, Donald Gillies and John W. Mark; Syracuse, John Kennedy and Albert Scott; Troy, Robert Murray and Fred Hale; Utica, John Davis and Patrick Welch.

ICE BLOCKS PASSAGE.

Canadian Head of the Lakes Is Again Cut Off.

Fort William, May 15.—Ice in the harbor here is as solid as it was last January and the channel is closed to navigation. The steamer Manitoba has been lying outside since yesterday unable to make port and a number of grain laden steamers including the Rosedale, Frank Gilchrist, Alberta, Pabst, Uranus and Scottish Hero are unable to get out. Ice in the bay has been blown out beyond the Welcome islands. The steamer Bulgaria was caught in the moving ice fields and forced aground, but was released without injury by the tugs.

BIDS FOR MONSTER BOAT.

Big Steamer Will be Built for Cleveland & Buffalo Line.

Chicago, May 15.—Manager Newman of the Cleveland & Buffalo line has received bids from shipbuilders for the construction of a sidewheel passenger steamer to be the largest on the Great Lakes. The matter will be considered at the meeting of the board of directors of the steamship company next Saturday and it is probable that a contract for the building of the boat will be closed at that time. It is planned to have the new boat ready for service in June, 1908.

Wild Tonnage Scarce.

Cleveland, May 15.—Ore and coal cargoes are offered freely, but wild tonnage is scarce and chartering is light on account o fdelays. Some of the regular ore carriers have not yet made a trip in that trade.

Sheltered Among Apostle Islands.

Ashland, May 15.—A northeast storm accompanied by snow, fog, sleet and heavy rain has prevailed on Lake Superior since Sunday night. Many vessels are sheltered among the Apostle islands.

Booth Boats Leave.

The steamers America and Easton of the Booth line got away this morning after having remained in port yesterday waiting for better weather. The America is taking a trip up the north shore to Isle Royale and the Easton departed for south shore points.

All Were Damaged.

Although it is not known the amount of damages the boats sustained, it is stated today that not one of the vessels lying at anchor in the Duluth harbor during the northeaster Monday night escaped without at least some scratches. The wind, waves, and current shifted the boats badly and many of them rubbed against one another.

Install Big Dipper.

The big derrick and dipper of the monster dredge Old Hickory were installed today while the great flathoat was lying in the Northern Pacific slip at the foot of Sixth avenue, and she will soon be ready for work. The dredge is owned by the Duluth-Superior Dredge company, and was launched in the early spring from the Grignon shipyard. She is one of two of the largest dipper dredges in the world.

General Traffic Manager Here.

H. H. Brighan of Chicago, general traffic manager of the Booth Transportation company, is at the Head of the Lakes for a few days on a business trip. Yesterday he made an inspection of the two Booth line boats America and Easton.

JOHNSON BOOM FOR THE PRESIDENCY.

the kingship, however, he may not be averse to playing the role of Warwick, and in that event we can tell him of a Democrat who, without entangling alliances with any of the money powers, yet without any antecedents which could drive away conservative Democrats, fills the specification made in Mr. Stealey's Washington letter exactly: 'a good organization Democrat who supported the ticket of 1896,' who, in our judgment, could still the discords and restore the harmonies, yea, fill the loose sails of the old Ship of Zion with hopeful gales, and perhaps prove an Abraham Lincoln to the lost sheep of the house of Jefferson and Jackson and Tilden.

"He does not live east of the Alleghenies, either, nor south of the Potoinac and the Ohio."

Congressman John Wesley Gaines of Tennessee, in a talk with Martin H. Albin, a Democratic lawyer from St. Paul, made this statement yesterday:

"From all accounts that I hear of your Governor Johnson, it would seem that he is a man entitled to very careful consideration from the national Democracy. I have heard a great deal of talk about him in New York and here in Washington, and I am of the opinion at this time that Governor Johnson is coming to the front as a probable candidate for the first or second place on our ticket next year."

Mr. Gaines added that is is reasonably certain that things will not be harmonious in the Republican party next year. He looks to see a split in the labor vote, and the colored Republicans of the country are disaffected right now. Governor Johnson will therefore be put forward as a candidate who can draw thousands of Republicans to his support. His remarkable run last November was cited, and his record, which although not brilliant, nevertheless will stand the strongest limelight. It is further stated that if the Democratic leaders of the East and South become convinced that Johnson can carry several Northern and Western states they will come to his support.

THE AMERICAN HABIT.

One in Every Three Affected.

Of the 75,000,000 people in the United States, it is estimated that 25,000,000, or one in every three, is partially disabled from broken down nervous system. America is the greatest consumer of coffee in the world. Can you draw the correct inference from these two facts?

Many a person will exclaim, "Nonsense!" It is easy for any thoughtless person to jump at a coaclusion that a philosopher would study carefully over before reaching. Think of the members of your own family. How many of them are perfectly and completely well in every respect? How many of your friends are perfectly healthy? Inquire of them and you will be surprised to learn that the average of one in every three, who are sick, in the main, stands true. Health depends, primarily, upon a perfectly poised nervous organization, and the greatest known enemy to the nervous system is coffee. Its active principle is caffeine, which is pronounced nerve destroyer. The action is, first, to attack the stomach, then the pneumogastric nerve which lies behind the stomach and which is directly connected with the brain.

The disordered condition passes thence from the brain to all parts of the body, and in some it will show in trepidation (well-known nervous condition); in others that is hidden, but the work goes on from day to day, until the accumulation of forces climaxes in some organic disease. It may be the kidneys become affected and Bright's disease sets up, it may be weak eyes, may be catarrh, stomach trouble, palpitation and heart failure, (which is becoming more and more noticeable among Americans.)

Somewhere, you may depend upon it, this work will show forth in the form of disease. It may become so fixed and chronic that it can not be thrown off. It is hard to induce a man or a woman to give up coffee when they have become addicted to its use, but if such people can be given Postum Food Coffee they will quickly change for the better, for the food drink, when properly made, has the color and the delicious, toothsome flavour of old government Java of the milder and higher priced grades.

The work of reorganization begins at once, for the tearing down element of coffee has been eliminated, and in its place the strong rebuilding effects of the elements contained in Postum, go directly to work to rebuild the broken-down and delicate gray matter in the nerve centres and brain. This is just plain, old-fashioned common-sense that any thoughtful person can make use of; in fact, hundreds of thousands of brain workers in America have already discovered the fact and are using Postum Food Coffee, to their very great benefit and relief. agitation, disarmament of the Jewish organizations, legalization of the bands of Reactionists, confiscation of property of revolutionists, and the exclusion of the Jews from military and civil service. A telegram was sent to the emperor by the congress, complaining of the attitude of the lower house of parliament at the time M. Zuratsoff, Social Democrat, made his heated attack on the army and government in the house, April 29, for which he was rebuked and suspended by President Golovin, but was upheld by the Social Democrats, and calling attention to the participation of some of the clergy in the revolution, and the revolutionary propaganda conducted by a certain section of the ecclesiastical press.

A revolutionist named Charoshnikoff, leader of several bands which, under cover of the revolutionary movement, have carried out robberies of banks and other public institutions, was located by the police, and was killed while attempting to escape disguised as a woman.

consider their course of action in regard to the strike of the carmen, but their decision is not reported. The labor council also met.

The carmen are now directing their energies toward formulating a plan for the municipal ownership of the street railroads, and W. D. Mahon, president of the association of street railway employes of America, expresses the belief that this will follow the present car strike.

The temporary sufferance under which the Geary street, Park and Ocean railroad has operated its line since its franchise expired in 1903 came to an end at 6 o'clock this morning by the resolution adopted at the supervisor's meeting Monday, the company having refused to run its cars. President Horace Platt of the road held a conference with his directors yesterday. The resumption of car service, while it would be possible upon agreeing to pay the old employes the $3 and eight hour wage scale demanded, was decided to be impossible under any other circumstances, and the directors refused to make this concession to the carmen, even in the face of losing their license to operate the line.

STUDIO SHUT, ARTIST GONE

Romance That Started With Making of a Death Mask.

Chicago, May 15.—It may have been the spirit of Sacajawea, the "bird Indian," who guided Lewis and Clark across the mountains to the ocean; it may have been the spell of a death mask; it may have been the artistic temperament. Whatever it was, it brought Nathaniel M. Hubbard from his home in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and made him haunt "Bohemia" in Chicago. It closed the studio of Alice Cooper, sculptress, in the Fine Arts building; it left an unfinished figure in the deserted studio, swathed in damp, clay colored rags; it separated a husband from his wife; it gave an Iowa town and the studios in Chicago a topic for gossip. Yet it may all have been only the jealousy of a yearning wife.

This is the situation:

N. M. Hubbard, Jr., of Cedar Rapids, son of the late N. M. Hubbard, attorney for the Chicago & Northwestern in Iowa, has agreed to separate from his wife and has retired from the law firm of which he was a member. He has come often to Chicago and day after day has visited the studio of Miss Cooper in the Fine Arts building.

Miss Cooper, the creator of the sculptured figure of Sacajawea, the "bird woman," who stood under the great gate to the Lewis and Clark exposition looking out from Portland toward the sea, has left her studio and gone to "Bohemia."

The romance—if it is a romance—began four years ago, following the death of the elder Mr. Hubbard. The son wanted to honor the father. He decided to have a death mask made, and later he would have the face cast in bronze and made a part of a life size figure.

At this time Miss Alice Cooper's name was being printed in all the magazines. A rival to Pocahontas had been discovered—Sacajawea, who led the explorers over the mountains to the Pacific. Miss Cooper had been selected to make the colossal bronze of this Indian woman of romance.

Mr. Hubbard sent for the sculptress to make the death mask of his father. The mask was made and Miss Cooper came back to her studio in Chicago to begin the work of modeling the figure.

Soon afterward Mr. Hubbard came to Chicago to see how the work was progressing. It was not long before he returned to Chicago to transact some business with a banker. Then work on the clay likeness of the elder Hubbard went on slowly. Hubbard's visits to Chicago were frequent.

He became known among the studios. Off and on all winter he made his appearance on "studio floor." He displayed remarkable interest in the clay figure. Last week, the artists say, the work was completed. All that remained to be done was the casting into bronze.

"Miss Cooper has gone," said an artist. "I don't know where. The statue? I think it is still in her studio."

THEFT NOT JUSTIFIED.

Rock Island Man Stole Money to Attend Mother's Funeral.

Rock Island, Ill., May 15.—Because he stole $16.50 from his landlady with which to go to the funeral of his mother at Iron Mountain, Mich., James Cundy was bound over to the grand jury in the police court Monday afternoon for grand larceny. He was unable to give bond and now is in jail. His hearing was held at the same hour that his mother's funeral took place at Iron Mountain.

The prisoner broke down and wept at the hearing. He exhibited a telegram stating that his mother was seriously ill, another saying she was dead and a third giving the time of the funeral, but Magistrate Elliott could see no justification for theft in them, though their authenticity was not questioned.

Plans for the entertainment to celebrate the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Dr. Carolus Linnaeus, the Swedish botanist, to be held at the Armory, May 23, were discussed at a meeting of the Svea Glee club, held last evening in Kalamazoo hall.

A social session followed the business meeting and short talks were given by Dr. O. A. Oredson, Louis Levin, Uno Lindstrom, E. Swenson, Victor Juten and Charles Forsell. Frank Carlson sang a solo and A. Stromberg gave a humorous song. A number of Swedish folk songs were sung by the club, and refreshments were served.

IS BURNED TO GROUND

Madison School on Garfield Avenue Destroyed by Flames.

Students Will be Cared for at the Adams School.

A fire originating in the basement about 8:20 o'clock last night entirely consumed the Madison school building at 809 Garfield avenue and developed into a most spectacular blaze, being witnessed by a crowd of between 2,000 and 3,000 persons.

The flames were noticed flashing through the front of the building by two little girls, who immediately ran to the home of L. C. Anderson, the school janitor, who lives next door, and informed him of the fact. As the fire is thought to have originated at the other side of the basement, the whole lower portion of the building was probably in flames when they were first discovered and by the time Mr. Anderson had turned in the alarm and the department had arrived, the fire had a good start on the inflammable frame structure.

The difficulties of the fire department were added to by the fact that the water main on Lower Garfield avenue is only a six-inch affair and the pressure was not sufficient to keep the engines operating. At times the water stopped dead in the hose, and Chief Black stated that there would have been a much better chance to save the building, or at least a portion of it, had there been an adequate water supply.

The storm of rain and snow assisted materially, however, not only in saving the school, but in effectively fireproofing the surrounding buildings and property, which would otherwise doubtless have been consumed. The high wind which was blowing might have wrought far more serious havoc in the district and in fact all the lower portion of Garfield avenue might have been wiped out and hundreds of poor people left homeless, if it had not been for the snow and rain.

The residence of J. C. Anderson, the janitor, was several times seriously threatened and he and the families of Louis Ducharme and Dave Bower moved all their property from their homes in order to save it. Several other families in the immediate vicinity moved their valuables outside, but returned as the fire was seen to be under control.

After several hours of furious blazing the roof and walls of the big frame structure began to fall. Several explosions, thought to have been boiler explosions, shook the structure and clouds of smoke poured from the building seriously hampering the efforts of the firemen. The clouds were tinted a brilliant red for hours, attracting attention all over the city.

The hard northeaster that was blowing for a time threatened the lumber yard of C. B. Woodruff which is located across the street, and a chemical and a force of men was stationed there in order to promptly put out any small blazes which commenced. The firemen say that had the wind been in the north a row of frame houses south of the school could not have escaped and that the conflagration might have assumed terrible proportions.

The total loss on building and equipment is estimated at about $16,000 and the insurance amounted to a little less than $10,000, $7,500 being carried on the building, $1,500 on boilers and engines, and $800 on furniture.

The 257 students at the school will not be deprived of the benefits of schooling during the remaining two and one-half weeks of the term, as all but the lower grades will be accommodated at the Adams school, where half day sessions will be held, and the lower grades will be taken care of in a chapel located on lower Garfield avenue.

RICH GIRL WEDS A POOR LABORER

And Now She is Prisoner in Her Parents' Mansion.

Whitehall, N. Y., May 15.—Miss Bernadine Buckley, 16 years old, pretty and accomplished, angered her wealthy parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Buckley, and shocked the whole community when she eloped to Fort Anne, a nearby village, Sunday, and was married by Rev. Mr. Nash, a Methodist minister, to "Chick" Gordon, an uneducated dollar-a-day laborer on the Whitehall streets.

The Buckleys are a wealthy family who live on a beautiful estate. "Chick" Gordon is in extremely poor financial circumstances and is practically illiterate. The two had kept company secretly for several months, although Mrs. Buckley was aware of her daughter's love affair and warned her against it.

Sunday morning, however, Bernadine, while on her way to early mass, met "Chick" and the two resolved to be married. They sought the Fort Anne Methodist minister and the clergyman made them man and wife.

When the married lovelorns returned to town Mrs. Buckley made her daughter a prisoner in their mansion, while "Chick" is outside in the cold May air, longing to have his child bride beside him in the small tenement which he had rented to begin housekeeping in.

GERMAN WHEAT MEN UNCERTAIN

Late Reports Give Hopes of Better Crops in Old World.

Berlin, May 15.—Interviews with a number of the leading grain merchants and members of produce section of bourse here disclose a feeling of great uncertainty in connection with the grain situation. The dealers generally are disposed to regard the present wave of speculation as being an exaggerated one. All admit, however, that the United States holds the key to the international situation, but the tendency is to believe that the situation and the reports of crop shortage are exaggerated; so far as the European situation is concerned.

The German winter wheat crop is admitted to be much delayed and a considerable acreage frozen out, but hopes are entertained that the spring planting will overcome the shortage. Reports, however, emphasize the fact that last year's Germany crop was below the estimate, and that Germany must enter a new grain year without home supplies. The crop outlook has been somewhat improved through the warmer weather since the beginning of the month, but rain is still greatly needed.

Reports also indicate an improvement in the Hungarian crop prospects as the result of rains. The outlook in the lower Danube and south of Russia, however, is considered bad for winter grain, but in the Volga valley and north of Russia the prospects are uniformly good, which is expected to counterbalance the Black sea shortage. All things considered, dealers here expect that the high prices will be maintained in view of the growing population.

PRESIDENT WHEELER CALLED TO BOSTON 'SECT.'

Boston, May 15.—Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president of the University held by one or two roads here, the presidency of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, to succeed President Henry S. Pritchett, who announced his resignation last December, to devote his attention to the Carnegie Foundation. The election is subject to confirmation by the vote of the entire corporation, which will meet on the last Wednesday of this month, but it is thought that they will approve of the executive committee's choice of President Wheeler. He is a native of this state, having been born in Randolph in 1854.

MINE BURNS TWENTY YEARS.

State of Ohio Asked to Help Extinguish Blaze Like Volcano.

Columbus, Ohio, May 15.—State Mine Inspector George Harrison asked the attorney general's office yesterday what, if any, aid the state could give in putting out a mine fire that has been burning in Perry county for over twenty years.

The fire originated during the miners' strike of 1885. It has reached the holdings of the Columbus & Hocking Coal & Iron company, and of the New York Coal company. President Kachelmeyer of the first named company has agreed to stand one-third of the cost of putting the fire out.

At the outcropping of the vein the flames now light up the sky at night, and vast columns of smoke ascend continually from the burning pits like a smouldering volcano.

CASH FOR POOR BRIDES.

Wealthy New Yorker Offers $25 to the Most Needy.

Worcester, Mass., May 15.—That a needy girl may be encouraged to marry, checks for $25 each were received by Town Treasurer C. A. Cook of Milford, H. C. Austin of Medway and Wilson T. Gage of Hollister, from Abraham Gordon of New York, a wealthy manufacturer of dress goods.

Mr. Gordon writes that the money will be given only to the poorer class of girls who have little or no money in their possession when they start out in the world as brides. This sum is to be given to the first poor girl who wants to marry. More contributions will follow from Gordon, who hopes other rich men will follow his initiative and make similar donations. Gordon says he was extremely poor when he married and at that time $25 would have looked mighty big to him.

Town Treasurer Austin said last night that he already had a candidate for his cash prize, but would not make her name known, as she was anxious to meet the donor of the check to see if he approves of her. Austin will arrange a meeting.

TO SUBSCRIBERS:

It is important when desiring the address of your paper changed to give both old and new addresses.

THE PUBLIC UTILITY BILL.

The victory gained by Governor Hughes of New York in forcing the acceptance of the public utilities bill by the ringsters of his party is an important one, and shows the force of an intelligent movement backed by public sentiment and engineered by an enlightened chief executive. Though they fought it bitterly for a time, and seemed about to be sucessful in their opposition, the Republican leaders finally saw the handwriting on the wall and agreed in caucus to support the measure, after which its sailing was easy.

If one had judged from the outcries made against the bill by the representatives of the public utilities of New York, in and out of the legislature, he would have fancied that it proposed the immediate destruction of all private interests in public utilities. It does not mean anything of the kind, but it does mean public control of these interests, designed to insure that the public might have some consideration as well as the holders of stocks and bonds in the public utility corporations.

The bill provides for the regulation and control of common carriers, gas and electric corporations, and the power is given to two public service corporations of five members each. Common carriers are to be required to furnish proper service and facilities, provide safeguards, etc., and to accommodate shippers. Preferences are prohibited, and railroads are required to publish their schedules. There are to be no passes except to employes. Punishment for rebates is provided for carrier and shipper alike.

There is no indiscriminate attack upon any property interests, nor, indeed, is there any attack upon any property interests that deserve consideration. The bill seeks fair rates and good service. The commission can consider complaints of service or rates, or it can act upon its own initiative, without waiting for complaints. It can determine what are fair rates for carrying freight, passengers or express. Its consent must be had before a railroad can assign or lease its property. Its approval must be had before stocks or bonds are issued, and this is a provision that the Minnesota legislature refused to enact.

In short, it is an up-to-date measure, far in advance of similar laws in most states, and one calculated to insure the people of New York a square deal in their relations with the public service corporations of all classes. It is similar to the railroad and warehouse commission law of Minnesota, but goes further. It is very much better than the Minnesota laws, because as shown above it enacts some provisions that railroad influence in the last Minnesota legislature prevented from becoming laws.

THE MORMONS REFORMED.

Jealous of their public standing, and desirous of placing themselves properly before the world, the leaders of the "church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints," otherwise known as the Mormon church, have issued an address to the world, a copy of which is at hand.

The pamphlet in which the "address" is contained starts out with a bitter complaint that "our doctrines are distorted, the sacred ordinances of our religion ridiculed, our Christianity questioned, our history falsified, our character traduced, and our course of conduct as a people reprobated and condemned." Then it proceeds to tell us just what the creed of the Mormons is.

Of course the creed is highly moral. There are few creeds published to the world that are not highly moral. But people nowadays have a fashion of judging folks otherwise than by the creeds they profess. Men often profess creeds that should make them saints, and do the deeds of devils at the same time. It is what a man does, not what he says he believes, that forms the public judgment of his character, and the same thing is true of a religious sect.

The point on which public attention will linger longest is that relating to polygamy, which the "address" says is "the only conduct seemingly inconsistent with our professions as loyal citizens." After going into a brief history of plural marriages as a Mormon doctrine, from the time that Prophet Joseph Smith had his happy and convenient afterthought at Nauvoo, Ill., and made it such, the address admits that the church persisted in following it after congress had forbidden it, and even after the supreme court had upheld the law. Now, however, it is claimed that the church has bowed to the will of the nation, and has discarded plural marriage as a church doctrine. While it is admitted that the law has been violated, it is claimed that theese violations have only been sporadic, and that the wonder is not that there have been so many, but that there have been so few when the people had been trained to believe polygamy right.

Yet it cannot be forgotten that though the law forbidding polygamy was passed in 1862, and that the supreme court upheld the law in 1878, it was not until 1890 that the church formally issued a manifesto abandoning the doctrine of plural marriages.

It is pleasant to hear that the Mormons have reformed, and really have abandoned polygamy, but it will take them a long time to wear off the blot left upon them and their creed by this infamous doctrine, so utterly abhorrent to every instinct of decency and right.

GOVERNING WASHINGTON.

Washington is vitally interested, and the rest of the country is mildly interested, in the proposal for the government of that community made by James B. Reynolds, who has lately completed an investigation of the government of the District of Columbia, and who has submitted a plan which he believes to be a vast improvement upon that now in use.

He suggests the creation of the office of governor, to be appointed by the president, and also the creation of seven departments to be headed by commissioners appointed by the president on the nomination of the governor. These commissioners are to be constituted a council with power to enact ordinances subject to the approval of the governor. It is further proposed that there shall be an advisory council of 100 to be appointed by the president, and to be composed of representatives of all local elements and to express the varied interests of the district. It is recommended that eligibility to the office of governor should not be confined to residents of the district, but that the president shall be free to consider the availability of men who have shown executive ability by good service as mayor in any city of the country.

Judging from the comments of the Washington papers, Washington does not like the plan. The main objection is that it proposes even more of a carpet-bag government than that which now prevails. Under the present system the district is governed by congress and by three commissioners appointed by the president, two of whom are residents of the district, and the third an army engineer officer. All laws covering the district are enacted by congress.

The Washington Star says that if the president appointed as governor the mayor of an outside city, that individual would doubtless feel better equipped if he chose as the seven commissioners men in his own city, with whose work he was familiar, and that in such event Washington would not even have the faint semblance of local self-government that it has now through the two resident commissioners.

The fact that Washington can contribute no political support, its residents not having the right to vote, would undoubtedly tempt some presidents to make appointments from outside places where there is political support to be gained, so there is some justification for the fear of Washingtonians.

However, Washington belongs to the nation, not to the nation's servants who make up or support the bulk of its population, and unjust though it may seem to leave the district in its present anomalous political situation, the federal government should always control it, directly and thoroughly, though there is no harm in giving the local citizens some advisory rights such as are proposed in the Reynolds plan.

TO PREVENT FIRE LOSS.

The International Society of State and Municipal Building Commissioners and Inspectors, of which an old Duluthian, F. W. Fitzpatrick of Washington, is executive officer, is conducting a most energetic campaign for better protection from fire, or rather for better and stronger measures looking toward the prevention of fire.

The latest move is to send a strong letter to every building inspector in the country, urging such officials to work for stronger ordinances and more effective precautions. The Duluth building inspector is included in the list, and the matters brought to his attention are eminently worthy of his consideration.

This agitation, carried on so systematically and persistently, cannot fail to bring good results. The work of reforming the building ordinances of the country will be a slow one, but it will never be done without some such work as that being done by the society with which Mr. Fitzpatrick is connected.

There can be no doubt that the cities of this country have been woefully negligent in this respect, and that they have tacitly encouraged the construction of fire-traps that are burning every day, involving not only loss to their owners, but to the owners of adjoining buildings of better construction. Incidentally, thousands of lives are lost through the same negligence, and the item of additional fire insurance premiums caused by inflammable structures is by no means to be overlooked.

A circular from the society points out that this country has reached the point where its normal fire loss is $1,000,000 a day. With all our phenomenal building activity we can scarcely replace the destroyed property. The circular well says that "it is a condition that is intolerable, a waste that is positively indecent, a national crime."

It is suggested that attention should first be given to the new buildings, in order that no more fuel may be added to our already over-combustible cities. To this end a uniform and model building ordinance, suggested by the insurance underwriters of the country, is recommended. Duluth adopted a new building ordinance a year or so ago which is considered to be pretty well advanced, and it is probably a better one than most cities have at the present time. While it does not go so far toward fireproofing requirements as the society would wish, it is a distinct advance over older regulations.

Builders may complain that such requirements as the society is working for are too strict, and they generally do complain. But since fireproof construction, though the initial cost is greater, is the most economical mode of construction, efforts along this line are in the interests of the builders quite as much as in the interests of the public.

In addition to strict requirements as to new construction, strict regulation of old firetraps is urged, and the time may come when cities will compel the destruction of every building that is a standing fire menace.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Baltimore has a mosquito brigade, or rather an anti-mosquito brigade," said G. C. Morris of Baltimore, Md., at the Spalding. "There are nine men in it, and their work is clearing the city of the winged pests. These men are paid by the city, and will only hold their jobs until the end of the mosquito season. Their only duty is to fight the insects. The city council appropriated $10,000 for the work, and that sum of money ought to do away with quite a number of the unwelcome visitors.

"To begin with, the brigade makes an inspection of the city and locates all the stagnant pools, ponds, etc. Property owners are then forced to drain off such stagnant water, for it is there that mosquitoes breed. Then private premises are inspected and householders are required to clean them up and do away with all stagnant water, and keep such pools as are necessary well oiled with ordinary coal oil. The whole town is interested in the movement, and the people are willing to do what they can to help the thing along. Past experience in the East has shown that the nuisance can de done away with almost entirely if the proper precautions are taken. Oil spread on the pools kills all signs of insect life, and is a guarantee that no mosquitoes will be hatched there."

"LaFollette is one of the shrewdest politicians in the entire country, and also one of the most ambitious," said E. L. Kason of Milwaukee, Wis., at the St. Louis. "He has his eye on the presidency now, and will not rest satisfied until he has landed the nomination. He is shrewd enough not to press things too hard, when such a proceeding would be likely to damage his chances, and is willing to play a waiting game where necessary, but would much rather push things through to a finish in short order when there is a chance to do so.

"Opinions are divided in his own state as to the honesty of his intentions. Of course, his political enemies would naturally question them, and it stands to reason that there should be a good many fighting him. Some say he is not true to his friends and political backers, except where being true will advance his own cause, and that when he has gotten all he can out of a man he throws him aside, and will have nothing further to do with him. I have heard it said that he has treated some of his old friends, who treated him white in the past, in this manner, but one can never tell how much truth there is to such reports.

"There is no getting around the fact that he has a tremendous hold on the people, but I have often thought he tries to make his rule of the state so absolute that the faith of the general public will be shaken, and that he will be thrown over when he least expects it. At the same time, he has succeeded in building up such a machine that he is pretty well fortified. Of course, neither himself nor his friends will admit that he has built a machine, but it is true nevertheless. He destroyed one machine and built another, and it must be admitted that his own outfit seems much more honest, with higher ambition, than the old machine.

"LaFollette, not satisfied with having been governor and senator, wants very much to dictate who shall be governor now, and who shall be his brother senator at Washington. His influence is felt strongly even now in the fight in Wisconsin, which has been going on for three or four weeks, in an effort to pick up a man to step into Spooner's shoes.

"The charge is made that LaFollette is holding up several good political appointments as a club to hold over the heads of certain districts, in an attempt to swing the politicians into line for his candidate, although just who this candidate is seems to be a secret so far as the general public is concerned. Personally, I voted for LaFollette every time I had a chance to, and believe that thus far he has been sincere in his work. Just how long he will continue sincere it is hard to say. I hope it will be for all time. It would not surprise me at all to see the Republicans nominate him for president some day."

THE WEATHER.

The less said about weather conditions last night and this morning the better, perhaps. We of Duluth have been having more or less sport with people in other sections because they were getting May snow storms, but we forgot to knock on wood when we talked about it, so last night a couple of inches of snow fell, and this morning the ground was covered with a white blanket that gave it a very merry Christmaslike appearance. The snow, however, was wet and slushy, and the ground was so warm that it began to melt underneath early this morning. Today it was still cloudy, but the wind had changed out of the Northeast and into the North, and it was warmer. Last night's lowest temperature was 28 degs., and yesterday's highest was 32 degs. The weather man looks for warmer weather, and expects tonight's lowest to be about 32 degs.

A year ago today it was cloudy and cool, but nevertheless there was a thunderstorm.

The sun rose at 4:31 this morning and sets at 7:35 tonight, making fifteen hours and five minutes of sunlight.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "The storm is central over Lake Michigan. During Tuesday or last night it caused rain or snow in the lake region. Mississippi, lower Missouri and Ohio valleys and strong easterly to westerly winds in the lake region. Rising pressures in the Mississippi valley are attended by decidedly lower temperatures over most of that section. An area of low pressure developing over Western Canada is causing warmer weather there and in Rocky Mountain districts. The easterly movement of this disturbance and the Rocky mountain high pressure favors westerly winds, rising temperature and clearing weather in this section tonight and Thursday."

Following were last night's lowest temperatures as recorded by the weather bureau:

THE LATE LEGISLATURE.

Hibbing Tribune: The legislator found a little authority lots of fun but it is different now that he is back home explaining.

Walker Pilot: Now that the legislature has adjourned we can all figure out just where we get off at. Cass county has figured itself out all right, all right. We got off at just where we got on, that's what.

Sleepy Eye Dispatch: The legislature was a combination of honest men and dishonest men, and the result of the session was a strange mixture of good and evil, and the people of the state may profitably spend a part of the coming two years in a study of both features.

Ulen Union: The state legislature of Minnesota has passed the Hicks bill to abolish passes after the terms of office of the present members expire. There's statesmanship and patriotism for you. Shades of Washington and Jefferson! That's the same brand that the patriot had who was willing to sacrifice every one of his wife's relations in the war though he couldn't go to war himself because it was so unwholesome.

St. Hilaire Spectator: It will take us some time yet to find out just what the late legislature did to us.

International Falls Border Budget: After summing up the work of the legislature one is struck with the idea that its most pronounced feature was to give Governor Johnson's administration a strong recommendation.

Albert Lea Tribune: The late session of the legislature cost almost $200,000, over $20,000 more than the previous one and that was called profligate in its expenditures by many. This one was the limit when "blowing in" money is considered. Well, it is two years before another one and let all unite in giving thanks.

Austin Transcript: The recent session of the legislature cost $191,563, over $22,000 more than the last legislature and making this the most costly in the history of the state. The large increase in the number of useless employes accounts for part of this extravagant expense. There seems to have been a perfect recklessness in throwing away the state's money.

Middle River Pioneer: Now that the session of the legislature is ended, the legislators will have their hardest task in explaining things to their constituents.

Albert Lea Standard: An anti-pass bill was finally squeezed through the legislature—but it had a narrow escape. As it is, the crooks managed by forgery to change the date when it will take effect to Dec. 31, 1908, and thus its benefits will be deferred until after the political campaign next year.

The Lumber Tariff.

Indianapolis News: We are destroying and consuming our forests because naturally timber men are eager to make the most of the situation which grants them a practical monopoly of the lumber market and enables them to command a high price. With the end of our own forests already in sight, and with lumber so high that many would-be builders cannot use it, it would seem to be reasonably well established that the time for the removal of the lumber tariff has arrived.

His First.

I saw a friend at 3 a. m.,
A-rushing to and fro;
I thought it was a little strange,
And so I told him so.

"And is your house on fire?" I said,
"Or is your temper riled?
If not, it is a little strange
That you should act so wild."

"A little strange?" he said—and I Perceived his wits in danger—
"A little strange? By Jupiter,
It is a little stranger!"

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Princeton Union: Representatives George W. Knox of Aitkin and Walter L. Case of Cloquet may not have accomplished in the legislature all that some of their constituents desired, but the fact remains that both of them were true to the best interests of the state. Practical business men like Knox and Case are very necessary in the legislature.

Cannon Falls Beacon (Rep.): It is to be hoped that the leaders of the Republican party in Minnesota will realize that party success is not the only necessary thing in the next campaign. It is just as necessary for a party to be right, rather than successful, as it was preferable for a man to be right rather than be president. The party will not be successful until it rids itself of the control of "the interests;" whether they be the railroads, Standard Oil, the steel trust or the Brewers & Distillers association. The people who do the voting are coming out of the trance which has benumbed their senses, while the interests have been alive and busy, and are viewing with alarm their defenseless position against organizd aggression. If the party is to be restored to the confidence of the people it must show works meet for repentance"—and it needs to.

Anoka Herald: Ask your representatives and senator how it happens that the primary election law was not extended to state officials and senators.

Fairmont Sentinel: The robber tariff Republicans who have always insisted that American-made goods are not sold cheaper abroad than at home, are given an awful jolt by the government investigation of the Elgin-Waltham watch trust. It found that independent dealers were in the hunt so long American watches in Europe, shipping them back to this country and selling them for less than the same trust made goods are sold for at home. The Dingley tariff, which some regard as sacred, is responsible for this robbery of consumers.

Mankato Free Press: The oil trust promises us a general raise in the price of oil. Well, what are you going to do about it? It is a mighty good thing that no one can raise the price of daylight.

Long Prairie Argus: The stockholders of the Northern Pacific, it is said, have instituted a friendly suit to enjoin the officers of the road from selling transportation at 2 cents per mile. This is intended to test the right of the state to fix a rate. It would be better for the roads to accept this rate than to fight it, as this disposition to fight every concession asked for by the people will tend to increase the demand for drastic legislation.

Madison Independent Press: The Republican party of Minnesota lost nothing when the members of the legislature got into the "ineligible for governor" class by increasing the salary of that officer. There wasn't a Moses in the gang, anyhow, so what's the difference?

Park Rapids Enterprise: The Cass Lake Times suggests state division, with the dividing line at the forty-sixth parallel. In size Minnesota is large enough for two states, and more, but her interests are common, and when the citizens of the southern counties have been educated up to a greater and more correct idea of the conditions and importance of the north half of the state there will be more reasonable consideration for the needs that are so apparent here.

Sauk Center Herald: The man who preaches the gospel of sunshine does a fine thing for the race. Smiles and sunshine count for a good deal more than frowns and clouds. The weather man does not always steer his actions by this rule but even he is bound to see the error of his ways if you give him time. "Laugh and the world laughs with you; weep and you weep alone."

Freaks of Justice.

Washington Post: Justice certainly makes queer breaks at times. Here is the son of the author of the national anthem, "America," and the hymn, "The Morning Light is Breaking," serving a term in the Anamosa penitentiary for bank-wrecking, while the writer of "Bedella" is permitted to go unlynched.

LAUGHING GAS.

"But, my dear," protested her husband, "you're not so careful—"

"I'm not? I'm certainly more careful of my clothes than you—"

"That's just it. You should be more careful of me."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Get into that balloon or I'll tan you good and plenty," remarked the irascible aeronaut to his son.

"Dad," said the fearless youngster, "you make me soar."

Catholic Standard and Times: "Is anyone waiting on you?" asked the haughty saleslady, finally condescending to notice the shopping person.

"I'm afraid not," replied the latter. "My husband was—I left him outside—but I'm afraid he's become disgusted and gone home."

Chicago Tribune: Reporter—Senator, in your candid judgment, what will be the ultimate result of the Panama canal?

Eminent Statesman—My boy, I think one of its most remarkable results will be that every man prominently connected with it will get a better job somewhere else.

Washington Star: "Have you ever tried to convince your constituents that you were another Daniel Webster?"

"No," answered Senator Sorghum; "what my constituents want is appropriations, not literature."

Baltimore American: "I have made up my mind to get married."

"You'd better make up your face also, dear."

Chicago Tribune: Mrs. Kawler—My husband occasionally takes a preparation for his headache, but it's a queer sort of stuff, and I don't remember how he pronounces it.

Mrs. Crossway—If it's like what my husband takes, he pronounces it brandy and soda.

SHE DID NOT TARRY LONG

Colored Witness Vanished When Husband and Wife Clinched.

Carrie Buchanan on Trial for Assaulting Eva Patterson.

Mrs. Carrie Buchanan, a small but muscular bit of colored femininity, who was indicted for assault in the first degree, was placed on trial in the district court this morning. She is alleged to have used a razor with telling effect on the person of Mrs. Eva Patterson, in the latter's rooms at No. 23 Fifth avenue west, on the evening of May 2, the trouble seeming to have arisen over jealousy on the part of Mrs. Buchanan.

Two colored witnesses had been examined up to noon today, and there were several others to be called this afternoon.

According to the statement made to the jury by County Attorney Norton, the building at No. 23 Fifth avenue west, owned by the head waiter at the Spalding, a colored man by the name of Dawson, who rents the rooms and leaves the care of the building to Mrs. Eva Patterson, the housekeeper, Buchanan, the husband of the accused woman, who is also a waiter at the Spalding, was employed by Dawson to attend to some of the work at the building, such as carrying coal and ashes.

Mr. Norton said that on the night in question Buchanan had stepped into Mrs. Patterson's room, where he was talking to Mrs. Anna Brown, another caller, when Mrs. Buchanan descended on the party "like a cyclone," and proceeded to bat her husband over the head with a club that she carried. It was claimed that Buchanan carried his wife out in the hall and got the stick away from her, but that she knocked him down the stairs, and that was the last ever seen of him. It is further claimed that Mrs. Buchanan went back to the room, flourishing a razor, and proceeded to assault Mrs. Patterson, cutting her on the hand, arm and neck before W. D. Anderson, another roomer, succeeded in getting her, Mrs. Buchanan, out of the place.

Mrs. Buchanana was charged with making threats that she intended to kill Mrs. Patterson, and only regretted that she did not kill her husband before he got away.

Mrs. Anna Brown, who rooms in the Dawson building, and who says she is employed as a cook at a resort on St. Croix avenue, was the first witness called.

Interrupted Quiet Chat.

Mrs. Brown, according to her statement, merely dropped into Mrs. Patterson's room a few minutes to make a social call and to see how the occupant was feeling, as she had been sick for a time.

The witness said that while she was in Mrs. Patterson's room, Buchanan came in, and they started a had attended a few evenings previous conversation about a ball that they Relating the succeeding events, as she remembered them, Mrs. Brown said:

"Mrs. Buchanan come in aftah Ah had been talking to Mr. Buchanan a few minutes. All Ah see in her hand was a stick. She batted him ovah the head with it. Ah see there was going to be a fuss and Ah run. She skeered me. Ah don't think Buchanan said much. Ah locked the door to mah room and staid there until everything was ovah."

Cross-examined by W. E. Greene, attorney for Mrs. Buchanan, Mrs. Brown declared in answer to a question whether she was sure Mrs. Buchanan hit her husband.

She Didn't Tarry Long.

"Ah think she must have hit him with the stick the way she was batting him. Ah didn't tarry long. Ah heard a little scrummage out in the hall."

The witness said she did not hear Mrs. Buchanan make any threats to kill anybody.

W. D. Anderson, the second witness, was quite an interesting character. He was born at St. Thomas, West Indies in 1848, and for thirty-nine years had been a chef, traveling on a number of the prominent railroads of the country as a cook in the dining cars. He recently quit the service to go into business for himself.

Mr. Anderson was an excellent witness, methodical in his statements and refusing to be ruffled by the cross-examination to which he was subjected.

He testified to seeing Mrs. Buchanan enter the hall in a crouching attitude with a heavy black veil over her head. He said he did not pay much attention to the circumstances until he heard a commotion as of falling dishes in the adjoining room, followed by a louder noise as of a table being overturned. The witness said he went out in the hall and found Buchanan clasping Mrs. Buchanan in his arms and endeavoring to get a club away from her, that Mrs. Buchanan was fighting and screaming and declaring that she wanted to go back and kill Mrs. Patterson.

Anderson said that when their struggles carried them near the head of the stairs Mrs. Buchanan gave her husband a push and he disappeared head first down the stairs, while she ran back to Mrs. Patterson's room and started an assault on the owner. The witness said Mrs. Patterson was thrown across a trunk and Mrs. Buchanan fell on her. He said he did not know Mrs. Buchanan had a razor until he heard Mrs. Patterson's screams for help for somebody to prevent her being killed. Anderson said he saw Mrs. Buchanan cut Mrs. Patterson across the neck and claimed that when he attempted to pull the Buchanan woman away the razor flew back and, as he thought, cut him on the hand. Mrs. Anderson then appeared on the scene and pulled Mrs. Buchanan into the hall and she went away. The witness said blood was streaming from three wounds on Mrs. Patterson when he went back to survey the damage done.

According to the testimony, Buchanan has not been seen since the night of the fracas. He is said to have drawn all the money that was coming to him at the hotel and left the city the same night the trouble occurred.

FIRE DESTROYED CABLES.

Madison School Blaze Shuts Off Communication With Superior.

The Madison school fire last evening put the Superior connections on both telephone lines out of order and they were not repaired until a late hour this afternoon. The cables ran within a few feet of the school and they were burned out.

The long distance service on the lines was repaired and in working order by 2 o'clock today, but the trunk line to Superior was not put in shape until late in the afternoon.

A good deal of inconvenience was experienced by Duluthians wishing to communicate with people on the other side of the bay in spite of the prompt action of the telephone companies.

MURDER PLOTS ARE DETAILED

Chief Witness for State in Hargis Trial Describes Conferences.

Lexington, Ky., May 15.—In the trial of Judge James Hargis, charged with the murder of James Cockrill at Jackson, Moses Feltner, the leading witness for the state, told of conferences in Judge Hargis' office at which plans were discussed for the murder of Dr. B. D. Cox, James Cockrill and James Marcum. He said that Jim Alexander and Elbert Hargis, Ed Callahan, Tom White and Curtis Jett were present at these conferences. Alexander Hargis suggested Cockrill should be killed, and that would scare Marcum away. Jim Hargis replied: "—— such business as that. I want Jim Marcum out of my way."

Feltner said he was employed by the Hargises and Callahan, with Jett, Abner and White, to engage Jim Cockrill in a game of cards, insult Cockrill, fire his pistol, create a stir and all would then shoot and kill Cockrill. Feltner swore that he warned Cockrill and saved his life as Cockrill refused to play cards.

SWEARS NEGRO SOLDIERS SHOT

Washington, May 15.—The examination of witnesses on behalf of the government began today in the Brownsville negro soldiers' investigation before the senate committee on military affairs. George W. Randall of Brownsville, Tex., the first witness, testified that on the night of the affray in Brownsville, he saw men whom he decetered to be negro soldiers, climb over the brick wall from Fort Brown and enter the town. He also saw a group of from three to five men inside the garrison gate and saw the flash of two or three shots fired by men in this group. These men, he said, moved up the wall on the inside and joined another group of ten or twelve men and all of them climbed over the wall at the alley between Elizabeth and Washington streets. This is the alley where a number of shells were picked up the following morning. He could not tell in what direction the men went after reaching the garrison road.

THE CHANGE OF LIFE

Sensible Advice to Women from Mrs. Henry Lee, Mrs. Fred Certia and Mrs. Pinkham.

MRS HENRY LEE MRS. FRED CERTIA

Owing to modern methods of living not one woman in a thousand approaches this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying and sometimes painful symptoms.

This is the most critical period of her whole existence and every woman who neglects the care of her health at this time invites disease and pain.

When her system is in a deranged condition or she is predisposed to apoplexy or congestion of any organ, the tendency is at this period likely to become active and with a host of nervous irritations make life a burden. At this time also cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, melancholia, dread of impending evil, palpitation of the heart, irregularities, constipation and dizziness are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period of life when this great change may be expected.

Mrs. Fred Certia, 1014 So. Lafayette Street, So. Bend, Ind., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the ideal medicine for women who are passing through Change of Life. For several months I suffered from hot flashes, extreme nervousness, headache and sleeplessness. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I had made up my mind there was no help for me until I began to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, my bad symptoms ceased, and it brought me safely through the danger period, built up my system and I am in excellent health. I consider Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound unsurpassed for women during this trying period of life."

Mrs. Henry Lee, 60 Winter Street, New Haven, Conn., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"After suffering untold misery for three years during Change of Life I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I wrote you of my condition, and began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and followed your advice, and to-day I am well and happy. I can now walk anywhere and work as well as anyone, and for years previous I had tried but could not get around without help. I consider your medicine a sovereign balm for suffering women."

Women passing through this critical period should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If there is anything about your case you don't understand write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice. It is free and has guided thousands to health.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health, actually thousands of women, you cannot well say without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." It is your duty to yourself and family to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

TAFT OR FORAKER TO BE RETIRED

Ohio's Republican War to be Kept Up to Political Death.

Columbus, Ohio, May 15.—For the present, at least, the probability of a spectacular pitched battle between the Taft and Foraker-Dick factions in this state has passed, but the fight is still in progress, and the indications now are that it will terminate only with the retirement from public life of either Senator Foraker or Secretary Taft.

The Republican organization of this county adopted Taft resolutions yesterday. The county committee was called together for the purpose of formulating instructions to the Columbus delegates to Senator Dick's conference. When that conference was called off, it was decided to endorse Taft anyhow.

BRITISH CONFERENCE REGARDED AS FAILURE.

London, May 15.—The imperial conference wound up yesterday and if the attending colonial premiers spoke out their feelings to the public as they did to their acquaintances, they would call it a failure. A more dejected group of statesmen seldom has been seen. Coming with high hopes of a preferential trade scheme and elaborate programs for imperialistic legislation, they have succeeded in pressing upon the government only a few minor projects. The popular interest in the gathering, which at first was widespread, dwindled steadily, until at the end the doings of the conference have been given but a secondary place in the press. Socially the conference was a great success.

WILL TEACH BLIND MEN

State School for Blind Will Hold Summer Session.

Opportunity is Offered St. Louis County Residents so Afflicted.

The Minnesota School for the Blind, at Faribault, offers an opportunity for a limited number of blind men to be maintained at that institution for a period of ten weeks this coming summer.

Notice of the summer school for blind men, with the invitation to St. Louis county residents who may be afflicted with blindness to take advantage of the physical and mental training that will be given at the state institution, has been received by Chairman E. M. Paterson, from James J. Dow, superintendent of the school.

Mr. Patterson says that he does not know, personally, of any blind residents that might desire to attend the summer school and desires that the matter be given publicity in order that such persons, if there are any, will be told of the opportunity which the state offers, free of charge.

Under the requiremens the applicants must be in such condition of strength and health as to be able to utilize the time profitably, and those will be given the preference who have lost their sight at a comparatively recent date. All applicants must be persons of sobriety and of steady habits.

All the industrial facilities of the school, according to Supt. Dow, will be available for the summer school pupils and they will be expected to put in as full hours as their physical condition will warrant. Instruction and training will be given in broom-making, rug and carpet weaving, hammock and fly-net weaving, rattan basket making, cabinet work and the use of carpenter tools and minor industrial work.

There will be instruction in reading and writing by touch, in the methods of retention of the power to write previously possessed, and in the use of the typewriter. Attention will also be given to the best ways of acquiring independence of action and of performing the ordinary personal and social functions of life.

The management permits the use of tobacco within the limits of cleanliness and safety, but prohibits, absolutely, during attendance at the school, the use of intoxicating drink, or the visiting of places where liquor is sold.

Each person must be supplied with clothing suitable for the school period and must deposit, upon arrival at the school, a sum of money equal to the railroad fare from Faribault to the place of his residence.

The summer school will begin about the 20th and will end in August.

Should there be any blind persons in the county who desire to learn more about the school or secure application blanks, they may do so by writing Supt. James J. Dow at Faribault. Applications should be made early as the summer school can accommodate only a limited number of pupils.

TO ENLARGE DISTRICT

Project to Increase Cement Sidewalks District Launched.

Boosters Would Have Cement Walks on All Finished Streets.

With the appearance of the sidewalk resolutions which are an annual spring feature of the city council meetings, considerable interest is being aroused among the city officials and citizens who have kept watch of the proceedings of the council in regard to proposed extension of the cement sidewalk district, which has been much talked of this week.

The proposition was sprung very informally in council meeting, Monday, when several minor extensions of the district were brought up and one of the aldermen suggested that the district be extended at one fell swoop to include all of the streets and avenues of the city which have been brought to grade and paved. "Paved" as used here, in the stricter sense of the word as used by the engineers, does not include streets of telford macadam and is in fact limited to pavements of sandstone, asphalt, brick, and creosote and cedar blocks in Duluth. Some of the promoters of the scheme are anxious to have the telford macadam streets included in the measure also, as there are said to be a number of avenues in West Duluth which are in good condition covered with this kind of paving and on which the renewal of sidewalks will be necessary in a little while.

"If such a move can be managed without imposing a hardship on the poor property owner I think it a very good thing," said President David Sang of the board of public works, this morning. "The final cost of the cement walk is, I think, no greater than that of the plank structure as it lasts so much longer, but the original cost is, of course, much greater.

"I have noticed a tendency to narrow the walks in the residence district when they are made of cement, however, so as to greatly reduce their cost and I consider under these conditions that the move would be most advisable. The extension of the fire limits which the council has been making also extends the cement walk district, as no plank walk can be built inside the fire limits, but there is no doubt that there is a need for a radical extension of the limits outside of this mark."

E. K. Coe of the engineering department expressed himself as in favor of the move.

"If put in that way it would have a good effect in more than one way," said Mr. Coe this morning. "Cement walks ought not to be put on streets until the permanent paving is in place. On Jefferson street we are going to be very much limited by the cement sidewalks which are already laid and they must be reckoned with in connection with laying out the boulevards and grass plots along the improvement. There may be some doubt as to the practicability of cement walks on grades of over 10 per cent, but they certainly ought to be provided for in our business districts and districts which may become such."

Whether the movement will go far enough to be introduced as an ordinance in the council this spring or not is still doubtful but its promoters are boosting for it.

According to the estimates of the board of public works based on the contractor's bids for this year a cement sidewalk six feet in width, for a fifty foot lot will cost $50 as compared with $25.50 for plank. If the cement walk can be narrowed to five feet as has already been planned in the residence sections, the difference of course is considerably reduced. The cost of maintenance to the city is much less, and the final cost to the owner is estimated at about the same when the long life of the cement walk is considered.

The cement sidewalk district now includes the greater portion of the East end and Lakeside residence districts and the portion of the central part of the city included in the fire limits, but in the western portion of the city the streets where cement is required are few and far apart and the boosters of the big extension project say that there are a large number of sidewalks to be rebuilt there within the next few years and that plank will doubtless be used on the new walks unless the district is radically enlarged.

My Best Friend.

Alexander Benton, who lives on Rural Route 1, Fort Edward, N. Y., says: "Dr. King's New Discovery is my best earthly friend. It cured me of asthma six years ago. It has also performed a wonderful cure of incipient consumption for my son's wife. The first bottle ended the terrible cough, and this accomplished, the other symptoms left one by one, until she was perfectly well. Dr. King's New Discovery's power over coughs and colds is simply marvelous." No other remedy has ever equaled it. Fully guaranteed by all druggists. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

CATHOLICS EXHORTED TO BE GOOD CITIZENS.

Cincinnati, May 15.—"The better the Catholic you are the better the citizen," said Archbishop Moeller yesterday in a sermon at St. Peter's cathedral to the Catholic Knights of America. "The Catholic who abuses in any way his citizenship or his public trust, who appropriates the public money, or who is disloyal to the stars and stripes, causes the mother church to weep."

The archbishop called attention to the activity and zeal of other denominations in printing and circulating religious literature concerning their faiths and urged loyal Catholics to show equal zeal in the same direction. He called attention to the evils of religious indifference and of intemperance and urged the Knights to be on guard against them. He urged liberality in the support of Catholic schools, saying "education must be founded upon and directed by the church."

Insurance Election Ballots Altered by Policyholders Clerks.

Woman Tells of Actions Under Orders of Scrugham.

New York, May 15.—The testimony given last week by Charles E. Carrington, a former employe of the International Policyholders' committee, that certain ballots in the recent election of directors of the New York Life Insurance company were altered by direction of George E. Scrugham, manager of the policyholders' committee, was partially corroborated by other witnesses when the hearing was resumed yesterday.

Carrington was subjected to a long cross-examination, and was followed by several other witnessses, former employes of the policyholders' committee, who told of happenings in the committee's offices immediately prior to the closing of the polls for the election. One of these witnesses, Catherine E. Montgomery, said she was one of four women who, acting under orders given directly to her by Scrugham, allowed the defective ballots as described by Carrington. She declared that Scrugham told her a few days before the close of the polls, when there was not sufficient time left to send the ballots back to policyholders for necessary corrections, to make corrections herself. She said she asked specifically if she should insert the name of a witness where it had been omitted, and was told to do so. She said she always used a fictitious name, and identified several ballots as having been supplied with the name of a witness by her. She said the other women treated ballots in the same way. The altered ballots were put in a box with correctly prepared ones, and all were sealed up together.

Robert J. Smack, who had been employed as a man of all work in the policyholders' committee offices, also told of alterations of ballots. He had written in several names himself, he said. He said some of the alterations were made after letters of authority had been received from the policyholder whose name appeared on the ballot. Many of the alterations, he said, were made without any authority.

BURGLARY AT CLOQUET

Two Safes in Kolset & Anderson's Store Blown Open.

No Money Secured, But Valuable Papers Burned by Explosion.

Cloquet, Minn., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—A daring robbery occurred here last night, the efforts of the burglars proving unsuccessful only for the reason that there was no money in the safes which they opened.

Some time early this morning the store of Kolset & Anderson, corner of Fourteenth street and Cloquet avenue, was entered and two safes therein were blown open. As it happened there was no money in the strong boxes and the robbers secured nothing for their efforts. Some valuable papers which were kept in the safe were burned by the explosion.

The men who did the work previously broke into the Great Northern section house and stole the tools which they used in the burglary.

This morning two men were arrested by the police at Dunlop island and are held pending an investigation.

KIND TO ANIMALS BUT CRUEL TO HIM

So Winona Manufacturer Says of Wife in Suit for Divorce.

St. Paul, Minn., May 15.—Edward W. Williams, a wealthy shoe manufacturer of Winona, got a divorce from his wife on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment, although Mrs. Williams is an active worker in the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The cruelty she is alleged to have practiced on her husband, however, was partly the imitation of her dumb protegees, "sick, shivering and hungry cats and dogs," which she took home and cared for about the premises, and "old, half-starved, worn-out, sick horses," which she also kept about the place.

The judgment granting a divorce has been appealed from by the wife, and the appeal was argued before the supreme court yesterday. The main issue in the case is the alleged infidelity of the husband.

The court has allowed Mrs. Williams $1,000 a year alimony. Motion was made yesterday to compel payment of her costs and attorneys' fees by the plaintiff, but this was stubbornly resisted.

The litigants are 51 and 50 years of age, respectively, and have two daughters, one siding with the mother in the dissension and the other with the father.

Randall, Forest City; supreme representative, George Tawney, Winona; grand trustee, William N. Plymat of Mankato. The grand lodge meeting was attended by 125 representatives, representing 180 lodges throughout the state.

WAIVES EXAMINATION.

Parsons Will Probably Plead Guilty and Take Prison Sentence.

Crookston, Minn., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—A. L. Parsons, who secured money from the Merchants National bank by declaring that he was W. W. Brown of Ellendale, N. D., was given his preliminary hearing in justice court. He waived examination and was bound over to await the action of the grand jury. He will probably plead guilty and be taken at once to state's prison to begin serving his sentence. Parsons, it will be remembered, has had two continuances of his case, hoping to get money from friends in North Dakota with which to straighten out his troubles. The money failed to show up, however, and he finally decided to take his medicine. His bonds were fixed at $200 but he could not secure them and was remanded back to jail.

They tried to get in and upset the load. Mr. Wood, the driver, had his head cut.

MINNESOTA

JUMPED TO HIS DEATH

Spectacular Suicide of Man From Minneapolis High Bridge.

Hundreds of People See Joseph Montour End Life.

St. Paul, May 15.—Joseph Montour of 705 Sixth avenue north committed suicide late Monday afternoon by jumping off the steel arch bridge in Minneapolis, in full view of a hundred or more horrified pedestrians, who were unable to prevent him.

Montour was seen to walk rapidly out on the bridge near the union depot, and when about in the center of one of the arches he halted. The nearest pedestrian, who happened to be William Davis of 2119 Milwaukee avenue, saw him remove his hat and place it on the floor of the bridge. He was about fifty feet from Montour at the time, and, suspecting his purpose, started for him.

Montour was too quick for him, however, and, climbing on the railing, jumped into the river. His body turned over several times before it struck the water and was seen to come up twice before it sank beneath the water finally.

Montour had been despondent of late because of the illness of his wife and his own inability to secure work. Although he had never intimated that he would take his life because of his melancholia, it was not unexpected to his sons and daughters. Mrs. Montour is lying ill of pneumonia and is not expected to live. Her husband's tragic death has not been told her for fear the shock might prove fatal.

It is understood that the wholesale house will stand back of the retailers.

WISCONSIN

AMUSED BY DIETZ TRIAL

Sawyer County People Ridicule Idea of Calling a Posse.

Defender of the Dam Will Probably Remain Unmolested.

Hayward, Wis., May 15.—Instead of being highly excited over the declaration of Sheriff Clark that he will get Dietz, the defender of the Cameron dam, Sawyer county is highly amused.

If Sheriff Clark does secure his posse it is probable that it will be a case of "marching up the hill and down again" when they reach the little farm in the woods which has been the scene of several bloody encounters.

It is reported that the sheriff has been goaded into doing something and that this move to call for a posse is an attempt on his part to "make good." Many doubt here that Clark has the power to call a posse together until he himself has found that he cannot take Dietz.

No great seriousness is attached here to the call and it is doubtful that if few will heed.

Mr. Clark could not be found to talk for publication, but he has expressed himself privately that there is nothing to this posse, that District Attorney McNamara has been after him so constantly that he had to do something, and has been telling the ones he has called that it's all McNamara's fault. District Attorney McNamara has been summoned as a member of the posse.

At a meeting called for Monday of the Dietz posse about twenty-five were present. No definite plans of action were even discussed. In the absence from town of District Attorney McNamara, Sheriff Clark said he would wait until Thursday for his return to get further advice.

He is said to have been passing forgeries all over Southern Wisconsin. Before being apprehended Hicks went to Ladysmith, from there to Oshkosh, Kaukauna, Ricetown, Green Bay, and from Green Bay he went to Niagara, where he has been working on the night shift of the Kimberly & Clark pulp mill.

UPPER MICHIGAN

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

Lungia Home Near Laurium Wrecked by Bolt From Sky.

House Catches Fire and Inmates Have a Narrow Escape.

Calumet, Mich., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—During the fierce electrical storm, early Monday morning, the Lungia residence, in the Florida location, was struck by lightning and was burned with all the household effects. The loss is considerable, and is only partially covered by insurance.

The inmates of the house, numbering about ten persons, had a narrow escape. All got out unhurt, however, with the exception of one old lady, mother of Mr. Lungia, who had some difficulty in reaching a place of safety. She received some slight burns and suffered somewhat from the shock, but no serious results are expected.

The Laurium fire department responded to the alarm and fought the flames strenuously, but the fire had too firm a hold on the building before they got there.

It was during the time when the thunderstorm was at its height that the Lungia residence was struck by lightning. The electric current tore out one whole side of the building, setting fire to it at the same time. The inmates rushed screaming and frightened from the house, and despite the torrents of rain that was falling during the progress of the fire the flames quickly enveloped the structure. The firemen succeeded in saving the surrounding property.

BRANCH IS COMPLETED

Devils Lake People Celebrate Finishing of the Aneta Extension.

Building of Line Will Mean Much to the City.

Devils Lake, N. D., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The people of this city celebrated the completion of the Aneta-Devils Lake branch of the Great Northern railroad in a fitting manner yesterday. Late Monday night the branch was finished by the laying of the last rail here, thus lessening the distance between St. Paul and the Pacific coast between forty and fifty miles, necessarily placing this city that much nearer St. Paul and Minneapolis. This line means more to Devils Lake than any event which has happened since the Great Northern first arrived here some twenty-four years ago. It means that several wholesale houses will shortly build branch houses here.

That the Great Northern contemplates using this cut-off for its main line is certain from the fact that it built the same so substantially, not sparing a cent to make the roadbed, bridges and improvements the best known to its engineering experts. One bridge over a mile long was built over Devils lake, a large body of salt water seven miles south.

NO REDUCTION

Will be Made by State in Interest on Loans to Towns.

St. Paul, Minn., May 15.—The state board of investment met yesterday afternoon and decided not to decrease the rate of interest from four to three per cent on school and ditching bond loans from state funds, although the legislature by recent enactment authorized such a reduction. The action of the board was taken in view of the great demand for state money at the existing rate and the board saw no reason to reduce the rate with the demands for money in excess of the amount available. The board passed on a large number of applicants for loans, and granted a number, which aggregate $300,000. Of this amount about $149,000 are ditch loans for drainage, as follows: To Lac Qui Parle county, $66,000; to Swift county, $52,000; to Norman county $19,000; to Clay county, $12,000. Jackson county secured a loan of $65,000 for its new courthouse. Among the largest applications for school loans approved, were the following: Otter Tail, $15,000; Hubbard, $8,000; Marshall, $7,500; Mower, $830,000; Dakota, $12,000; Nicollet, $8,000; Aitkin village, $30,000; Grant, $10,000.

BEMIDJI AFTER 1908 CONVENTION OF ELKS.

Bemidji, Minn., May 15.—The local membership of the Elks lodge have good prospects of securing the state convention for 1908. A large delegation from here will attend the Stillwater convention, Aug. 5, and do all they can towards securing the convention for this city. Bemidji is an ideal summer resort, and her numerous Elks are good, jovial entertainers, and no better selection could be made than to have it at this place.

NORTHOME TEAMSTER IS ALMOST KILLED.

Northome, Minn., May 15.—Theodore Koch, a teamster employed at a sawmill near Mizpah, met with a serious accident while hauling a load of lumber. One of the front wheels of his wagon hit a stump in the road, throwing him off and crushing his body between the stump and hub of the wheel. Two of his ribs were broken and he sustained other injuries.

PLENTY OF COLD WATER

A Valuable Prescription Which Anyone Can Prepare at Home.

Relieves Stomach Troubles Kidney and Bladder and Rheumatism.

"The people here do not drink enough water to keep healthy," exclaimed a well-known authority. "The numerous cases of stomach trouble, kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism are mainly due to the fact that the drinking of water, nature's greatest medicine, has been neglected.

Stop loading your system with patent medicines and cure-alls; but get on the water wagon. If you are really sick, why, of course, take the proper medicines—plain, common vegetable treatment, which will not shatter the nerves or ruin the stomach."

When requested for such a prescription for the cure of rheumatism and kidney trouble the answer was: "You must make the kidneys do their work; they are the filters of the blood. They must be made to strain out of the blood the waste matter and acids that cause rheumatism; the urine must be neutralized so it will no longer be a source of irritation to the bladder, and, most of all, you must keep these acids from forming in the stomach. This is the cause of stomach troubles and poor digestion. For these conditions I would suggest the following prescription, which is composed of only vegetable ingredients, which can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy. Any one can mix them by shaking well in a bottle. Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. To be taken in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime, but don't forget the water. Drink plenty and often." This valuable information and simple prescription should be posted up in each household and used at the first sign of an attack of rheumatism, backache or urinary trouble, no matter how slight.

MAY BECOME A CATHOLIC.

Report That J. P. Morgan is to Leave Episcopal Church.

New York, May 15.—Consternation reigns in the "high church" congregation of St. George's Protestant Episcopal church, where J. Pierpont Morgan regularly attends while in the city and just as regularly helps take up the collection. Mr. Morgan is to become a Roman Catholic. That is the report here and there is none who cares to give is authoritative denial.

Rev. Hugh Birckhead, rector of St. George's merely smiles. He refuses to be quoted.

When Dr. Rainsford was rector of St. George's church, Mr. Morgan's support of the rectors brought the church much fame. Mr. Morgan gave a new rectory at a cost of $200,000. He has been prominent at conventions and always has entertained visiting churchmen from abroad.

Mr. Morgan's gifts to the cathedral of St. John the Divine on Morningside Heights, are said to have amounted to $500,000.

The story of the conversion first came from Rome in a letter to a parishioner who now makes its substance public.

When in London, it is said, Mr. Morgan frequently attends services at the Roman Catholic cathedral at Westminster. The explanation which he gives to his friends is that there is something in the service which appeals to him.

How to Fool a Lazy Liver with Artificial Exercise

EVERY serious Sickness has a small beginning.

And, in nine cases out of ten, that beginning is made in the Bowels.

Constipation is the beginning of most diseases. It paves the way for all others.

Lack of exercise, hasty eating, improper food, are its first causes.

Laziness, and postponement, permit it to grow into Chronic Constipation, which means life-long Discomfort.

It isn't necessary to be sick-a-bed, you know, in order to be mighty uncomfortable.

Even a slight indigestion affects the nerves, dulls the mind, and obscures the merry sunshine of Life.

The time to adjust the Bowels is the very minute you suspect they need adjustment.

—If your tongue is slightly coated,

—If your breath is under suspicion,

—If your head feels a trifle heavy or dull,

—If digestion seems even a little slow,

—If Heartburn, Belching, Colic or Restlessness begin to show themselves,

—That's the time to eat a Cascaret.

It acts as pleasantly as it tastes. It is as congenial to your Bowels as it is to your Palate.

It stimulates the muscular lining of the Bowels and Intestines, so that they mechanically extract nourishment from the food and drive out the waste.

The only way to have Cascarets ready to use precisely when you need them is to carry them constantly in your pocket, as you do a Watch or a Lead pencil.

The ten cent box of Cascarets is made thin, flat, round-edged, and small, for this precise purpose.

Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC." All druggists. 7M

BURGLARY AT CLOQUET

Two Safes in Kolset & Anderson's Store Blown Open.

No Money Secured, But Valuable Papers Burned by Explosion.

Cloquet, Minn. May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—A daring robbery occurred here last night, the efforts of the burglars proving unsuccessful only for the reason that there was no money in the safes which they opened.

Some time early this morning the store of Kolset & Anderson, corner of Fourteenth street and Cloquet avenue, was entered and two safes therein were blown open. As it happened there was no money in the strong boxes and the burglars secured nothing for their efforts. Some valuable papers which were kept in the safe were burned by the explosion.

The men who did the work previously broke into the Great Northern section house and stole the tools which they used in the burglary.

Two burning two men were arrested by the police in Dunlap island and are held pending an investigation.

KIND TO ANIMALS BUT CRUEL TO HIM

So Winona Manufacturer Says of Wife in Suit for Divorce.

St. Paul, Minn., May 15.—Edward W. Williams, a wealthy shoe manufacturer of Winona, got a divorce from his wife on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment, although Mrs. Williams is an active worker in the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The cruelty she is alleged to have practiced on her husband, however, was purely the imitation of her dumb protégés—sick, shivering and hungry cats and dogs which she took home and cared for about the premises, and which, when well, were sold, sick and all, which she also kept about the place.

The judgment granting a divorce has been appealed from by the wife, and the appeal was argued before the supreme court yesterday. The main issue in the case is the alleged infidelity of the husband.

The court has allowed Mrs. Williams $1,500 a year alimony. Motion was made yesterday to compel payment of her costs and attorneys' fees by the plaintiff, but this was stubbornly resisted.

The litigants are 51 and 50 years of age, respectively, and have two daughters, one siding with the mother in the dissension and the other with the father.

Parsons Will Probably Plead Guilty and Take Prison Sentence.

Crookston, Minn., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—A. L. Parsons, who secured money from the Merchants National bank by declaring that he was W. W. Brown of Ellendale, N. D., was given his preliminary hearing in justice court. He waived examination and was bound over to await the action of the grand jury. He will probably plead guilty and be taken at once to state's prison to begin serving his sentence. Parsons, it will be remembered, has had two continuances of his case, hoping to get money from friends in North Dakota with which to straighten out his troubles. The money failed to show up, however, and he finally decided to take his medicine. His bonds were fixed at $200 but he could not secure them and was remanded back to jail.

JUMPED TO HIS DEATH

Spectacular Suicide of Man From Minneapolis High Bridge.

Hundreds of People See Joseph Montour End Life.

St. Paul, May 15.—Joseph Montour of 705 Sixth avenue north committed suicide late Monday afternoon by jumping off the steel arch bridge in Minneapolis, in full view of a hundred or more horrified pedestrians, who were unable to prevent him.

Montour was seen to walk rapidly out on the bridge near the union depot, and when about in the center of one of the arches he halted. The nearest pedestrian, who happened to be William Davis of 2119 Milwaukee avenue, saw him remove his hat and place it on the floor of the bridge. He was about fifty feet from Montour at this time, and, suspecting his purpose, started for him.

Montour was too quick for him, however, and, climbing on the railing, jumped into the river. His body turned over several times before it struck the water and was seen to come up twice before it sank beneath the water finally.

Montour had been despondent of late because of the illness of his wife and his own inability to secure work. Although he had never intimated that he would take his life because of his melancholia, it was not unexpected to his sons and daughters. Mrs. Montour is lying ill of pneumonia and is not expected to live. Her husband's tragic death has not been told her for fear the shock might prove fatal.

WISCONSIN

AMUSED BY DIETZ TRIAL

Sawyer County People Ridicule Idea of Calling a Posse.

Defender of the Dam Will Probably Remain Unmolested.

Hayward, Wis., May 15.—Instead of being highly excited over the declaration of Sheriff Clark that he will get Dietz, the defender of the Cameron dam, Sawyer county is highly amused.

If Sheriff Clark does secure his posse it is probable that it will be a case of "marching up the hill and down again" when they reach the little farm in the woods which has been the scene of several bloody encounters.

It is reported that the sheriff has been goaded into doing something and that this move to call for a posse is an attempt on his part to "make good." Many doubt here that Clark has the power to call a posse together until he himself has found that he cannot take Dietz.

No great seriousness is attached here to the call and it is doubtful that if few will heed.

Mr. Clark could not be found to talk for publication, but he has expressed himself privately that there is nothing to this posse, that District Attorney McNamara has been after him so constantly that he had to do something, and has been telling the ones he has called that it's all McNamara's fault. District Attorney McNamara has been summoned as a member of the posse.

At a meeting called for Monday of the Dietz posse about twenty-five were present. No definite plans of action were even discussed. In the absence from town of District Attorney McNamara, Sheriff Clark said he would wait until Thursday for his return to get further advice.

UPPER MICHIGAN

Lungia Home Near Laurium Wrecked by Bolt From Sky.

House Catches Fire and Inmates Have a Narrow Escape.

Calumet, Mich., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—During the fierce electrical storm, early Monday morning, the Lungia residence, in the Florida location, was struck by lightning and was burned with all the household effects. The loss is considerable, and is only partially covered by insurance.

The inmates of the house, numbering about ten persons, had a narrow escape. All got out unhurt, however, with the exception of one old lady, mother of Mr. Lungia, who had some difficulty in reaching a place of safety. She received some slight burns and suffered somewhat from the shock, but no serious results are expected.

The Laurium fire department responded to the alarm and fought the flames strenuously, but the fire had too firm a hold on the building before they got there.

It was during the time when the thunderstorm was at its height that the Lungia residence was struck by lightning. The electric current tore out one whole side of the building, setting fire to it at the same time. The inmates rushed out screaming and frightened from the house, and despite the torrents of rain that was falling during the progress of the fire the flames quickly enveloped the structure. The firemen succeeded in saving the surrounding property.

BRANCH IS COMPLETED

Devils Lake People Celebrate Finishing of the Aneta Extension.

Building of Line Will Mean Much to the City.

Devils Lake, N. D., May 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The people of this city celebrated the completion of the Aneta-Devils Lake branch of the Great Northern railroad in a fitting manner yesterday. Late Monday night the branch was finished by the laying of the last rail here, thus lessening the distance between St. Paul and the Pacific coast between forty and fifty miles, necessarily placing this city that much nearer St. Paul and Minneapolis. This line means more to Devils Lake than any event which has happened since the Great Northern first arrived here some twenty-four years ago. It means that several wholesale houses will shortly build branch houses here.

That the Great Northern contemplates using this cut-off for its main line is certain from the fact that it built the same so substantially, not sparing a cent to make the roadbed, bridges and improvements the best known to its engineering experts. One bridge over a mile long was built over Devils lake, a large body of salt water seven miles south.

Will be Made by State in Interest on Loans to Towns.

St. Paul, Minn., May 15.—The state board of investment met yesterday afternoon and decided not to decrease the rate of interest from four to three per cent on school and ditching bond loans from state funds, although the legislature by recent enactment authorized such a reduction. The action of the board was taken in view of the great demand for state money at the existing rate and the board saw no reason to reduce the rate with the demands for money in excess of the amount available. The board passed on a large number of applicants for loans, and granted a number, which aggregate $300,000. Of this amount about $149,000 are ditch loans for drainage, as follows: To Lac Qui Parle county, $66,000; to Swift county, $52,000; to Norman county $19,000; to Clay county, $12,000. Jackson county secured a loan of $65,000 for its new courthouse. Among the largest applications for school loans approved, were the following: Otter Tail, $15,000; Hubbard, $8,000; Marshall, $7,500; Mower, $8,000; Dakota, $12,000; Nicollet, $8,000; Altkin village, $30,000; Grant, $10,000.

PLENTY OF COLD WATER

A Valuable Prescription Which Anyone Can Prepare at Home.

Relieves Stomach Troubles Kidney and Bladder and Rheumatism.

"The people here do not drink enough water to keep healthy," exclaimed a well-known authority. "The numerous cases of stomach trouble, kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism are mainly due to the fact that the drinking of water, nature's greatest medicine, has been neglected.

Stop loading your system with patent medicines and cure-alls; but get on the water wagon. If you are really sick, why, of course, take the proper medicines—plain, common vegetable treatment, which will not shatter the nerves or ruin the stomach."

When requested for such a prescription for the cure of rheumatism and kidney trouble the answer was: "You must make the kidneys do their work; they are the filters of the blood. They must be made to strain out of the blood the waste matter and acids that cause rheumatism; the urine must be neutralized so it will no longer be a source of irritation to the bladder, and, most of all, you must keep these acids from forming in the stomach. This is the cause of stomach troubles and poor digestion. For these conditions I would suggest the following prescription, which is composed of only vegetable ingredients, which can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy. Any one can mix them by shaking well in a bottle. Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. To be taken in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime, but don't forget the water. Drink plenty and often." This valuable information and simple prescription should be posted up in each household and used at the first sign of an attack of rheumatism, backache or urinary trouble, no matter how slight.

MAY BECOME A CATHOLIC.

Report That J. P. Morgan is to Leave Episcopal Church.

New York, May 15.—Consternation reigns in the "high church" congregation of St. George's Protestant Episcopal church, where J. Pierpont Morgan regularly attends while in the city and just as regularly helps take up the collection. Mr. Morgan is to become a Roman Catholic. That is the report here and there is none who cares to give is authoritative denial.

Rev. Hugh Birckhead, rector of St. George's merely smiles. He refuses to be quoted.

When Dr. Rainsford was rector of St. George's church, Mr. Morgan's support of the rectors brought the church much fame. Mr. Morgan gave a new rectory at a cost of $200,000. He has been prominent at conventions and always has entertained visiting churchmen from abroad.

Mr. Morgan's gifts to the cathedral of St. John the Divine on Morningside Heights, are said to have amounted to $500,000.

The story of the conversion first came from Rome in a letter to a parishioner who now makes its substance public.

When in London, it is said, Mr. Morgan frequently attends services at the Roman Catholic cathedral at Westminster. The explanation which he gives to his friends is that there is something in the service which appeals to him.

EVERY serious Sickness has a small beginning.

And, in nine cases out of ten, that beginning is made in the Bowels.

Constipation is the beginning of most diseases. It paves the way for all others.

Lack of exercise, hasty eating, improper food, are its first causes.

Laziness, and postponement, permit it to grow into Chronic Constipation, which means life-long Discomfort.

It isn't necessary to be sick-a-bed, you know, in order to be mighty uncomfortable.

Even a slight indigestion affects the nerves, dulls the mind, and obscures the merry sunshine of Life.

The time to adjust the Bowels is the very minute you suspect they need adjustment.

—If your tongue is slightly coated,

—If your breath is under suspicion,

—If your head feels a trifle heavy or dull,

—If digestion seems even a little slow,

—If Heartburn, Belching, Colic or Restlessness begin to show themselves,

—That's the time to eat a Cascaret.

It acts as pleasantly as it tastes. It is as congenial to your Bowels as it is to your Palate.

It stimulates the muscular lining of the Bowels and Intestines, so that they mechanically extract nourishment from the food and drive out the waste.

The only way to have Cascarets ready to use precisely when you need them is to carry them constantly in your pocket, as you do a Watch or a Lead pencil.

The ten cent box of Cascarets is made thin, flat, round-edged, and small, for this precise purpose.

Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC." All druggists. 707

SPORTING NEWS OF THE DAY

OPENING OF BASEBALL SEASON IS POSTPONED

Snow and Cold Weather Make the Delay Necessary.

Ceremonies Will be Held Saturday Instead of Tomorrow.

If you see a lank individual walking down Superior street, with a hump to his shoulders, his hands shoved deep into the pockets of his winter overcoat, a far-away look in his eyes, muttering furiously to himself and kicking up the snow with every step, you can put him down as a desperate, disappointed, disgruntled baseball fan. The inch of snow which fell last night upset all arrangements for the opening of the Northern-Copper Country baseball league season tomorrow in Duluth at least, and it is presumed that something of the same conditions prevail in Winnipeg.

Manager Kuehnow said this morning that unless the extremely improbable should occur, and the weather warm sufficiently by tomorrow afternoon to dry the diamond at Athletic park, the opening of the season will go over to Saturday afternoon. The snow has put the diamond in such shape that baseball will be impossible tomorrow, and it was thought better to call things off and make an attempt to play on a soggy field even if the weather should be favorable. It will have to be pretty warm between now and tomorrow afternoon to dry the field and that is very improbable.

Saturday afternoon, the arrangements made for tomorrow will be carried out. There will be a parade of a band, city officials and fans in carriages, and the two teams. The parade will start from the city hall at 2 o'clock and proceed west on Superior street. At Eighth avenue west, the teams will take either a street car or tally-hos for the drive to the park. At the park there will be speeches, Mayor Cullum will throw the first ball, the White Sox will take the field, Jack Nolan will cry "play ball" and the belated season will be on.

The schedule this year calls for 110 games, the season closing Sept. 7. Of the 110 games, Duluth will play sixty-two at home. The first series with Houghton will consist of six games each, keeping the team home until June 2, when it will jump to the Copper country for a two weeks series, alternating between Houghton and Calumet.

The Northern-Copper Country league was organized in 1906, with eight clubs, drawn from the old Northern league and the Copper Country-Soo league. The western portion of the circuit consisted of Duluth, Winnipeg, Fargo and Grand Forks and in the Copper country Houghton, Hancock, Calumet and Lake Linden played within a few miles of each other. The season of 1906 started out well, but difficulties came. Grand Forks fans refused to support a losing team and it was realized that four teams were too many in a territory the size of the Copper country. About the middle of the season, Hancock and Grand Forks were dropped and the schedule was completed with six clubs, though Lake Linden and Fargo were losing propositions.

When the league was reorganized for the season of 1907, it was conceded that but two teams could live in the Copper country. The question to be decided then was whether or not Fargo and another team should be taken in, or whether the four strong members of last year's league should go it alone. It was decided to adopt the latter course and the present makeup of the league is the result. At a meeting held here Dr. Percy Glass of Lake Linden, secretary of the league last year, was elected president and secretary, John Mann of Houghton vice president; and A. W. Kuehnow of Duluth treasurer. The election of Dr. Glass to the dual office was a signal tribute to his efficiency as an executive. Last year he handled the affairs of the league admirably and he give every promise of being an entirely satisfactory executive.

There are those who will vallantly hammer the four-club circuit, the extremities of which are nearly 800 miles apart. It has been dubbed the "grasshopper," "shoestring" and like epithets, but despite this fact it gives every promise of having a successful season. Every town in the league has proved its ability to support a professional ball team, and for this very reason it was given a place in the league. The series in each town will be rather lengthy, but if the teams furnish good ball, the fans will support them and turn out in such numbers as to insure financial success.

Teams Well Matched.

On pre-season exhibitions the teams appear to be about evenly matched. The White Sox got away badly in the exhibition games by taking a string of beatings from Wisconsin leaguers, but the things they did to the Lethbridge team in two games here last week stamp them as likely to be well up with the others in the running. Every club has a new playing manager this year. In Duluth, Frank "Smiley" Smith succeeds Arthur M. O'Dea; Eddie Herr succeeds A. R. "Spike" Anderson at Winnipeg; M. O. "Kid" Taylor takes Howard Cassiboine's place at Houghton, and Frank Mullane will lead the champion Calumet Aristocrats in place of John Morrison.

The salary limit of $1,100 does not allow the managers very much latitude in selecting their men, but at that on paper, the squads look good and what is more they appear to be evenly matched. It is this latter quality in a league which makes for good ball, and the assurance that no team is going to outdistance the others in the race is a better indication for a successful season than anything else.

As the different teams appear at Athletic park in the opening games, Duluth fans will see a good many new faces. On the Duluth team, "Smiley" Smith is new as a member of the White Sox, but his frequent appearance here with the Houghton Giants last year has made him known to Duluth fans. Of the pitchers, Cummings, Krick and Treadway are veterans, and Haney is a new man. Veterans compose the infield with Tracey on first, Summers on second, Fagin on third, and Leighty at short. In the outfield, Bill McCormack is a veteran and Fred Goldsmith is a new man. Louey Roy, the substitute catcher, is a recruit.

The Houghton Team.

On the Houghton team, there are but four men, who were seen in Duluth last year. They are Taylor and Sundheim of last year's Giants, Rogers of Hancock and Calumet and Sobran of Lake Linden. The Calumet team has Newcombe and Kurke, the Lake Linden battery last year. "Biddy" Dolan, the elongated first baseman, and Jack Corrigan, an outfielder, both of last year's team. Herr has a number of the old men back, although some of the high priced men of last year have been disposed of because of inability to carry them under the salary limit, which is to be rigidly enforced this year. The veterans with the team are Vos, Terry, Glencke, Luderus, Somerlott, Zeider and Piper and "Chesty" Cox of the Aristocrats last year.

Tom McGraw is the only one of last year's umpires to return, Jack Nolan of Chicago being the new man. McGraw is one of the most severe men on the players, who has ever handled the indicator in this league, but he keeps the game on the move all the time and will brook no rowdy tactics from the players. Nolan is an old player and knows the game from start to finish. He comes to the league highly recommended and is expected to give satisfaction.

All in all, the outlook is bright and, despite the wails of the pessimists, it is freely predicted the season of 1907 will be a prosperous one for the league.

PENNANT POLE BROKE.

Mishaps Marred Festivities at Commiskey's Park Yesterday.

Chicago, May 15.—A series of mishaps, commencing with the breaking of the flagpole and ending with a furious wind and rain storm, marred the demonstration at the raising of the World's championship baseball pennant at the American league park here yesterday. Forty ball players and officials laid hold of the halyards to haul the great 35-foot pennant to the top of the staff. Their combined effort was too much for the slender staff, which snapped at the crosstrees. Mayor Busse, August Herman, chairman of the national baseball commission, and President Johnson of the American league delivered their speeches, however, and the pennant was declared "officially" raised.

Preceding the exercises at the park, the Chicago and Washington teams were escorted from the city hall to the park in automobiles by all the uniformed teams of Chicago and vicinity. Some 400 ball players were in the parade, which consisted of four score automobiles, horsemen from the stock yards, three brass bands, mounted police and 100 Indians from a Wild West show.

Lowering clouds caused Umpire O'Loughlin to start the game ten minutes ahead of schedule time, but despite this precaution, only half an inning was played before the storm broke. Washington failed to score in its first time at bat.

CULLED FROM THE SCORE BOOK.

The weather man may have had some excuse for throwing things at the big leagues with their opening on April 11, but to attack the Grasshopper circuit on May 15 is altogether too much.

Query: If the Northern-Copper Country league can't open it season on May 16, on account of snow, how in the name of Father Chadwick can they play ball in Alaska?

There is a lingering suspicion among the fans that the Medicine Hat team is somewhere in the vicinity and some of the Medicine Hat weather has come to welcome them.

Perhaps, if the Northern-Copper Country league schedule were arranged so that the teams would play from the Fourth of July to July 4, the snow wouldn't interfere.

Great joy in Brooklyn. Patsy Donovan's pre-season wonders have won another game. They have a nice lot of victims in the Cardinals and should be able to take a few more.

After Charles Comiskey had won the world's championship pennant and spent a fortune taking his boys to Mexico as a reward, the weather man gleefully stepped in and spoiled Charley's joy in the raising of the flag.

The Fitwell Clothing company has put a semi-professional team in the field and is looking for games. The lineup will be about as follows: Catchers, Girard and Weggman; pitchers, Thornton and Cole; first base, Wendtland; second base, Winters; third base, McGraw; short stop, Rocklin; outfield, Oppel, Bennett and Cole.

The Calumet team is playing exhibitions at Fargo. It's a shame for a Northern-Copper Country league team to play in the North Dakota town and make the good fans think of their position outside the charmed circle this season.

DID WIFE BEATER KILL HIMSELF?

Skeleton Found Near Payne May Have Been William Wright.

Is the skeleton which was found on the deserted logging road near Payne last Friday that of William Wright, wife beater and suicide? This is the question which is worrying the authorities and if any positive means of identification can be found it is very likely that the fact that he committed suicide at that point will be established.

Duluthians will remember the story of the last days of Wright's brief married life. Coming home one night a little over a year ago, badly under the influence of liquor, he proceeded to abuse his wife. She was taken to St. Luke's hospital where a child was born to her a few days later. She subsequently went insane through brooding over her husband's treatment, and is now in the asylum at Fergus Falls.

Wright disappeared immediately after the scene in the little home at Rice Lake and could not be located. In spite of his condition at the time he seemed to remember all the details of the brutal assault upon his delicate wife, and a week later a letter was received from him postmarked at Payne and asking for her forgiveness. He said he had disgraced his family and friends and would never again be able to face the world.

Aside from this circumstatial evidence, the finding of the bones of a man about Wright's build, within a few miles of the place where the conscience stricken letter was written, there are but few clues which can be depended upon for identification. A friend of the man called up Flood & Horgan's undertaking rooms yesterday afternoon and said that one of Wright's shoes had a cut in it which had been sewed up and it is hoped that an investigation may enable identification by this means. A jackknife was also found near the bones, but none of Mr. Wright's friends here are able to identify that.

The bones have already been interred, but if it is desired, they will be exhumed and a thorough examination made. A more thorough search will also be made of the place where the bones were found. Just how the suicide could have been committed is a matter of doubt, as the knife was closed when found and there was no revolver or other weapon near at hand.

HYPNOTIZED HIMSELF.

Doctors Fear Eastern Man Will Never Wake Up Again.

Worcester, Mass., May 15.—For over two weeks Andrew H. Simpson of 75 South street, South Bridge, has been in a cataleptic state at his home, and eminent Boston and Worcester doctors in attendance fear he will die without regaining consciousness.

For years Simpson has been an ardent student of hypnotism. A few weeks ago he read of a case where a man hypnotized himself and remained in that state for two weeks.

Simpson was deeply impressed with this case and evidently proceeded to hypnotize himself. He succeeded so well that all efforts to bring him to consciousness have failed.

BASORICH CONVICTED

Jury Finds Him Guilty of Murder in Third Degree.

Verdict Reached After Jury Had Deliberated Eight Hours.

Dan Basorich who was indicted for killing Marco Bocklacich at the Rust mine location Jan. 8 last, was found guilty, yesterday afternoon, of murder in the third degree. The verdict was returned about midnight, the jury having been out nearly eight hours.

The indictment charged murder in the second degree, or the wrongful killing of a person, without justification and premeditation.

The penalty for murder in the third degree is imprisonment in the state penitentiary for not less than three or more than thirty years.

When the verdict was announced to Basorich, through the services of an interpreter, he exhibited no signs of emotion, remaining in the same apathetic state that he has been in for some weeks past.

The state's principal evidence against Basorich was based on the testimony of Mike Dosan who claimed to have been an eye witness to the shooting of Breklacich. Dosan claimed Basorich fired three shots at Breklacich, all of which took effect. Dosan denied that he had ever quarreled with Breklacich and claimed he had a scuffle with Basorich last December.

Mile Breklacich ,a brother of the murdered man, who was called as a witness for the state, testified that his brother and Dosan had a quarrel last Christmas and that Dosan was pushed out of the house by Marco Breklacich.

The testimony of the several witnesses for the state indicated that the whole party at the celebration in the boardinghouse were pretty well intoxicated and that, aside from Dosan, the others knew nothing about the killing of Breklacich until they went out and found him lying dead beside the door.

L. H. Corcoran, who defended Basorich, rested his case without calling a witness. He claimed from the testimony given by the witnesses for the state it was conclusively shown that Basorich could not have committed the deed. He laid particular stress on the fact that when Basorich was arrested there were only two empty shells in his revolver, while the testimony of most of the state's witnesses were that they heard three shots, and that Breklacich was hit by three bullets. Mr. Corcoran argued that on such evidence the jury must acquit Basorich.

WILL APPEAL WIITO CASE

Interstate Iron Company Files Notice in District Court.

Notice of an appeal to the state supreme court from the order of the district court denying the motion of the Interstate Iron company for a vacation of the verdict, and for a judgment in its favor, or for a new trial, in the $50,000 damage case instituted by Niko Wiito, was filed with the clerk of the district court yesterday afternoon.

Wiito lost his eyesight in an accident in the Lincoln mine, and the jury awarded him $15,000, after a trial lasting three weeks. The verdict was one of the largest ever returned by a jury in the district court of this county.

Wiito was represented by W. E. Culkin, John R. Heino and W. E. Whipple, and the iron company was represented by Davis & Hollister.

JAPAN WANTS AN ALLIANCE

Baron Ozawa Talks Freely of Feeling as to America.

New York, May 15.—"Japan has looked earnestly for an alliance with the United States, because in substance we have always regarded this country as a real ally of Japan. We are desirous of having such an alliance if it can be arranged. As long, though, as any misunderstanding like the anti-Japanese feeling in San Francisco exists it might not be possible to bring about such an alliance."

Thus spoke Baron Ozawa, member of the house of peers, a special representative of the emperor, and vice president of the Japanese Red Cross society, last night. He was instructed by the mikado to ascertain the extent of anti-Japanese feeling in this country, and to express the thanks of the emperor to those Americans who aided the Japanese during the severe famine in Northeast Japan after the war with Russia. The baron and his party will visit President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft in Washington next week.

The baron said that he would report to the emperor that he found no evidences of anti-Japanese feeling anywhere in the country outside of San Francisco.

Washington, May 15.—The application of Thomas B. Clement is under sentence of eight years' imprisonment in connection with the charge of misapplying the funds of the bank.

LOWER RATES MUST PREVAIL

Commerce Commission's Decision on Shipment Via Duluth.

Washington, May 15.—In a decision yesterday the interstate commerce commission holds that where two rates between the same point are in force, the shipper must be given the benefit of the lower. The case was that of the American Grass Twine company against the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railroad company, the Mutual Transit company, the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad company and the Boston & Maine railroad.

The evidence disclosed that the complainant made a shipment of grass twine matting and rugs from St. Paul, Minn., to Boston via Duluth, upon which it was charged a rate of 62 cents per 100 pounds—a combination of rail rate of 23 cents to Duluth plus a lake and rail rate of 39 cents from Duluth to Boston. At the date of the shipment, lake and rail joint through rates via Duluth were not effective, but a rate via Lake Michigan ports of 45 cents per 100 pounds and an all rail joint through rate of 49 cents were in force.

The commission holds that under the special and particular circumstances disclosed upon the record, the 62-cent rate on such shipment was unreasonable, and that the 45-cent rate in effect from St. Paul to Boston via Lake Michigan ports at the time of the shipment afforded a reasonable basis for fixing the rate. The complainant is awarded the difference between the 62-cent and 45-cent rates on its shipments.

REFORMED CHURCH DOES NOBLY FOR MISSIONS.

New York, May 15.—Sixty thousand dollars were collected by the woman's board of foreign missions of the Reformed Church of America, as announced at the thirty-third annual meeting here yesterday. This is the largest amount ever raised for foreign missionary work by this body, and the report of the treasurer, Mrs. F. S. Douglass, was received with great enthusiasm. More than 600 delegates were present.

FAIR PLAY.

The American People are Noted for Their Love of Fair Play. So True is This, That It May Be Said To Be a National Trait of Character.

The man who strikes another a foul blow, or maliciously tries to injure him in his business, or in his social standing is detested and abhorred. The American people are not generally slow to manifest their disapproval of such unfair treatment when an opportunity is afforded.

Illustrative of this disposition is the fact that although base, false and malicious attacks upon Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, and his widely celebrated Family Medicines have sometimes injured the sale of these meritorious remedies for a time, yet when such unjust assaults have been met and their falsehoods completely refuted, a natural reaction has followed and their sale has been fully restored again.

In the case of the Ladies' Home Journal, of Philadelphia, which, in 1894, published a most maliciously false, slanderous and libelous article, attacking Dr. Pierce and his "Favorite Prescription"—the well-known cure for women's peculiar weaknesses and distressing ailments—Dr. Pierce brought suit in the Supreme Court of the State of New York against the publishers of that paper and a verdict was given the Doctor, the judgment being for a substantial amount ($16,000.00) yet not for enough to properly recompense Dr. Pierce for the great injury and injustice done him. While he and his "Favorite Prescription" were completely vindicated and the latter remedy was proven, in open court, to contain no alcohol and none of the dangerous and injurious drugs which the above mentioned paper had alleged it contained, yet Dr. Pierce has, through his attorneys, moved for a new trial, trusting that thereby he may finally be accorded a more just and adequate compensation for the great damage which he was made to suffer by reason of the base falsehoods published concerning him and his business.

There are hundreds of thousands of people all over this blessed country of ours who have been cured of obstinate, chronic diseases through the use of Dr. Pierce's Medicines and it is only natural that such people should rise up and speak their sentiments pretty freely when Dr. Pierce and his medicines are so unjustly attacked.

These grateful patients of Dr. Pierce are to be found in almost every hamlet and country village, and in the farmhouses and mechanics' cottages in every nook and corner of this great country. Common gratitude prompts such people to stand up and defend Dr. Pierce and his medicines against unjust and malicious attacks.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines have been on sale in drug stores all over this country and in many foreign lands for more than forty years and yet their sale continues to grow in a substantial and most gratifying way. This could not be the case if they were not remedies of more than ordinary merit.

WHAT DO THEY CURE?

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not advertised as a "Cure All" but admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a superior and most positive remedy for one class of diseases only—those easily recognized weaknesses, derangements, irregularities and painful disorders peculiar to women. It is a powerful, yet gently acting, invigorating, tonic and strengthening nervine. For weak, worn-out, over-worked women—no matter what has caused the break-down,—whether it be from too frequent bearing of children or from much worry, care, or over exertion of any kind, "Favorite Prescription" will be found most efficient in building up the strength, regulating all the womanly functions, banishing pain and bringing about a regular and healthy, vigorous condition of the whole female system. Thus it corrects prolapsus, or falling of womb, retroversion, anteversion and other displacements of the female pelvic organs, due to weakness or over exertion, lifting or fatiguing overwork. In short, it makes weak women strong and sick women well.

As to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery it has a very large range of application, yet it is by no means recommended as a "Cure-All." It possesses marvelous alterative, or blood cleansing, properties and is at the same time a most invigorating tonic, or strength giver. It exerts a specific, cleansing, soothing and healing effect upon all the lining mucous membranes of the system; hence, its great curative value in all catarrhal affections, no matter where located.

In Chronic Nasal Catarrh, it is well to cleanse the passages two or three times a day with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy fluid, while persisting in the use of the "Golden Medical Discovery" for its blood cleansing and specific curative effects upon the diseased mucous membranes. It will cure a very large per cent. of all cases, even after they have reached the ulcerative, or chronic stage, and no matter of how many years' standing they may be. It is equally efficacious in affections of the mucous lining of the larynx, bronchia and respiratory organs in general, thus curing bronchitis, laryngitis and other affections giving rise to obstinate, hang-on-coughs. It is not so good in acute coughs following sudden colds, as in the lingering, chronic coughs. Nor must the "Golden Medical Discovery" be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption in its advanced stages—no medicine will do that, but for all obstinate hang-on-coughs due to laryngial or bronchial irritation and kindred affections, of the throat which, if neglected or badly treated, are likely to lead up to consumption, the "Discovery" can be relied upon to produce the best curative results.

The "Golden Medical Discovery", from its tonic and specific curative control over mucous surfaces, being a superior and most positive remedy for one class of diseases only—those easily recognized weaknesses, derangements, irregularities and painful disorders peculiar to women. It is a powerful, yet gently acting, invigorating, tonic and strengthening nervine. For weak, worn-out, over-worked women—no matter what has caused the break-down,—whether it be from too frequent bearing of children or from much worry, care, or over exertion of any kind, "Favorite Prescription" will be found most efficient in building up the strength, regulating all the womanly functions, banishing pain and bringing about a regular and healthy, vigorous condition of the whole female system. Thus it corrects prolapsus, or falling of womb, retroversion, anteversion and other displacements of the female pelvic organs, due to weakness or over exertion, lifting or fatiguing overwork. In short, it makes weak women strong and sick women well.

As to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery it has a very large range of application, yet it is by no means recommended as a "Cure-All." It possesses marvelous alterative, or blood cleansing, properties and is at the same time a most invigorating tonic, or strength giver. It exerts a specific, cleansing, soothing and healing effect upon all the lining mucous membranes of the system; hence, its great curative value in all catarrhal affections, no matter where located.

The reason why "Golden Medical Discovery" cures so wide a range of diseases is made plain in a booklet sent free on request mailed to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. If interested, send for it.

The powerful alterative or blood purifying properties possessed by the "Discovery" will naturally suggest its use for the cure of blotches, pimples, eruptions; as eczema, salt-rheum, and other skin affections in all of which it has made remarkable cures; also in scrofulous sores and old, open ulcers, or eating sores. To heal the latter, use Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve as a local application, while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" to correct the blood and cleanse the system. A box will be mailed to any address on receipt of fifty-four cents in stamps. If your druggist don't have it in stock, address Dr. Pierce, as above.

NEW LIFE-LEASE FOR MR. ALLISON

Iowa Senator Said to Have Regained Health and Strength.

Dubuque, Iowa, May 15.—Senator William B. Allison, the veteran of the United States senate, who was so ill last year that it was predicted he would never return to the senate, has regained almost all of his old ruddy health and seems to be good for years more of active usefulness. The senator sleeps like a baby, takes long walks every day, has regained the high color for which he was so noted and seemed to be almost as well as he was two years ago.

He does not even show signs of advancing age, as would be natural in a man who only lacks two years of being four score, and it is difficult to realize he has been in the senate now uninterruptedly for thirty-four years, and back of that had eight years in the house of representatives, thus making a total service in congress up to the present time of forty-two years. His term of office does not expire until March 4, 1909.

Naturally enough, now that people are beginning to talk of the succession to President Roosevelt, the views of one who three times has been an active candidate for president and once missed the nomination by a mere scratch, are of public interest.

"I do not think the sentiment in Iowa is wholly crystalized as yet," said the senator. "That is to say, Republicans of Iowa are pretty well satisfied with their party and with the work of congress. There is no evidence of any reactionary sentiment in this state. People are not worrying so much about a candidate for the presidency, because they feel the party will settle the question in a satisfactory way. Confidence in the president's policies and determination to follow them out so far as they can be understood are universal among the people here."

SWEDEN'S NEW SUFFRAGE LAW

Gives the Franchise to Many Men Hitherto Shut Out.

Stockholm, Sweden, May 15.—Premier Lindmann has succeeded in getting his suffrage reform bill through both houses of the riksdag, after being compelled to accept some radical changes in its terms. The vote in the second chamber was 122 to 105, and in the first chamber 92 to 52. The bill was supported by the Conservatives generally and by enough Liberals in the second chamber to secure its passage. It will have the effect of giving the ballot to a large number of Swedish men who have hitherto been shut out by the property qualification. At the same time it is so framed as to give proportional representation in the second or popular chamber to a minority party, and in this way the Conservatives expect to increase their numbers in that house. The first chamber, which, by reason of the manner in which its members are elected, has been the stronghold of the Conservatives and the aristocracy, will remain in Conservative hands, but the representation of the other parties there is likely to be increased. The term of service is to be cut down from nine to five years.

The law is the most important of recent years in Sweden. Its political effect remains to be seen, but there can be no doubt that it gives a larger measure of power to the masses. The bill granting female suffrage was defeated.

S.S.S. FORTY YEARS OF CURES

Long experience and thorough testing have proven S. S. S. to be the King of blood purifiers and the greatest of all tonics. For nearly half a century S. S. S. has been used in the treatment of blood and skin diseases of every character, and so satisfactory have been the results that it is now the best known and most widely used blood medicine on the market. S. S. S. attracted attention as soon as it was placed on the market by curing promptly those diseases for which it was recommended, and we have so jealously guarded its first good reputation, by keeping it up to its standard in manufacture, that it now has the unequalled and pleasing record of "Forty Years Of Cures." For Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Sores and Ulcers, Malaria, Skin Diseases, Contagious Blood Poison, and all other diseases due to an impure or poisoned condition of the blood, there is nothing that equals S. S. S. It counteracts and removes the germs and poisons, cleanses the system of all unhealthy matter, cures the trouble permanently, and restores strong, robust health. Where the blood is weak or anaemic and unable to nourish the system as it should, S. S. S. supplies it with the needed properties, and being a bracing, invigorating tonic it builds up the entire system. It goes to the very bottom of all blood disorders, and in this way reaches deep-seated and inherited cases on which the ordinary sarsaparillas and tonics have little or no effect. Not only is S. S. S. certain in its results, but it is an absolutely safe medicine. It enjoys the distinction of being the only blood medicine on the market that is guaranteed purely vegetable. If you are in need of a blood remedy begin the use of S. S. S., the medicine that has proven its worth by its record of forty years of cures. Book on the blood and any medical advice you wish. No charge for either. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

HEAVY CALL FOR WHEAT

European Crops Short and Present Demands All Urgent.

Much Drainage Done by Drought and the Severe Winter.

London, May 15.—The recent advance in the price of wheat in Europe is not due to speculation alone, but also to buying to meet present demands. Germany has been purchasing Australian and Argentine cargoes for nearly six weeks, the shortness of stocks in that country being caused, to some extent, by the selling of considerable quantities of both rye and wheat to Russia, as last year's Russian crop suffered damage. Germany must now get about 4,000,000 quarters more before the end of July than she did during the same period last year. This fact is regarded here as mainly instrumental in causing the advance, because Argentine shipments are sought by the United Kingdom, Germany and the Mediterranean, especially Italy.

It is also acknowledged that considerable damage has been done to the winter crops in Germany, Roumania, Hungary and along the Danube, extending to about 40 per cent. One Bulgarian report says that in places it is about 80 per cent. From all Europe, France excepted, the advices are unfavorable. The Russian crops are not only bad, but the political uncertainty in that country is having a depressing effect on trade. The rulers have been keeping down stock to the lowest points possible, expecting a drop in prices.

Cold weather in Great Britain also to some extent helps the advance.

In the past, generally speaking, when there has been a shortage of wheat in the West there has been plenty in the East, and vice versa, but this year both are bad, and naturally the price goes up.

Berlin, May 15.—The German grain market is disturbed over the sharp rise in prices in the United States. While it is admitted among grain merchants that the advance finds a natural explanation in the reported crop prospects, chiefly American and partly European, still the feeling here is that speculation has been overdone in America. Hence in Berlin the prices yesterday not only refused to follow the advance in the United States and Liverpool, but closed lower, July wheat losing 75 cents per ton. It was reported on the bourse that Russian agents sold heavily for nearby delivery. While the German grain crop has somewhat improved recently, it is still far behind, in consequence of the continued drought.

Hamburg, May 15.—The fear is expressed among the Hamburg grain merchants that the South Russian merchants may fail to make delivery if the upward movement in the price of wheat continues. One Hamburg firm is mentioned as already being involved in difficulties.

Paris, May 15.—The wheat situation in the United States is being followed most attentively in Paris and every part of Europe. The upward movement of prices, however, does not cause great surprise in commercial circles. Prominent grain merchants here express the opinion that the movement is partly justified by the crop reports, though it is considered to be to a certain degree speculative, and some reserve is regarded as being necessary.

German wheat suffered from the rigorous winter, and Hungary, Russia and the Danube districts also endured severe cold, while the spring wheats have been retarded by the abnormal temperatures. All parts now complain of excessive heat, and even in France it is not certain whether the crops will turn out as well as anticipated. In the event of the prospects being unfavorable, the French merchants would be obliged to import from the United States.

HOPES HE WILL BE A JUSTICE

Taft's Mother Does Not Desire to See Him President.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 15.—"I do not want my son to be president; he is not my candidate," smilingly declared Mrs. Alphonso Taft, mother of Secretary of War W. H. Taft. "The supreme bench, where my boy would administer justice, is my ambition for him. His is a judicial mind, you know, and he loves the law. Added to this are good health and an unfailing good nature."

Mrs. Taft, a tall, graceful matron of about 70 years, was attired in a handsome black embroidered gown, with a dainty cap of white, a woman of the old school, with whom traces of early beauty still remain.

She is proud of her son's mental achievements, and tells with pride of his record in school, his early boyhood, his graduation from the Cincinnati high school, his college days at Yale, and then his admission to the bar. Of his love for the law and his innate love for them as her highest ambition a supreme justiceship in preference to that of the highest position in the United States.

"To be president is a dreadful responsibility and a trying position. He has not sought to be a candidate for it. It has been thrust upon him. I know that he himself does not want it, that his views are the same as mine," continued Mrs. Taft.

"Who is your candidate?" Mrs. Taft was asked.

"Elihu Root, secretary of state," she replied. "I know him personally and I consider him a fine man, and I am in hopes that he will be the next president."

Speaking of Secretary Taft she said: "He is the oldest of a family of four. He will be 50 years old in September. I have three other children, Henry H., lawyer, of New York; Horace D., who conducts a preparatory school for boys in Cincinnati, and Mrs. W. A. Edwards of Los Angeles. I lived in Cincinnati thirty years, and all my children were born there. They are true Buckeyes. Their father came from Vermont, and I came from Worcester county, Mass., but nevertheless they are true Ohioans.

Mrs. Taft seemed prouder of the fact that her children were "Buckeyes" than of the success they have all achieved.

"Mr. Taft worries greatly about his weight," she says. "He always was a big boy, even when he went to college, and was noted as being the largest boy there. He has weighed as much as 350 pounds, but when I saw him in New York just before I left he weighed 270, and was hopeful of reducing to 250. He is under the care of a famous specialist in London, with him he corresponds regularly. With him corpulency is not a disease, as he has always been large. It annoys him, however, that he can not exercise."

ADMITS SHE MARRIED TRIO.

"Singing Girl Evangelist" Pleads Guilty to Bigamy Charge.

New York, May 15.—Ida M. Scofield, the "singing girl evangelist," pleaded guilty of having three husbands when arraigned on a charge of bigamy in Justice McCarthy's court in Jersey City. She was held in $1,000 bail as a fugitive from justice.

Detective Sergt. Clark of Brooklyn, told Judge McCarthy that the woman was married to William Broadmeadow, a conductor on the Greenville trolley line, on Feb. 28, by the Rev. J. Williams, a Baptist minister, in Brooklyn. He said her maiden name was Mary E. Osborne.

Several years ago, he said, Ida was married to a man named Scofield in Wilkensack. On June 4, 1904, she married John Landigan, a farmer in Short Hills, whom she deserted in less than a week. The marriage was performed by Rev. Thomas R. Bridges in Newark. When she deserted Landigan she is said to have taken about $400 of his money with her.

Landigan and Broadmeadow said they learned of the marriages and traced the woman to Jersey City. They consulted District Attorney McCaffrey, in Brooklyn, and he told them she should be arrested.

On Friday night the woman spoke at the Gospel Mission, on Communipaw avenue, and Policeman Lee, stationed there, arrested her when the services were concluded.

At that time she would neither deny nor admit her bigamous marriages, but in court she admitted that she had married all three of the men.

Wonderful Eczema Cure.

"Our little boy had eczema for five years' writes N. A. Adams, Henrietta, Pa. "Two of our home doctors said the case was hopeless, his lungs being affected. We then employed other doctors, but no benefit resulted. By chance we read about Eclectric Bitters; bought a bottle and soon noticed improvement. We continued this medicine until several bottles were used, when our boy was completely cured." Best of all blood medicines and body building health tonics. Guaranteed at all drug stores. 50c.

JUSTICE HARLAN

"Soaks" Out Home Run, Wins Game and Mint Julep.

Washington, May 15.—Justice Harlan of the United States supreme court, aged 74 years, made a home run and won the game in a baseball contest at the annual shad bake given by the Washington Bar association at Marshallhall, Md.

When Justice Harlan went to the bat the score was a tie, and the umpire had called two strikes and three balls. It was a critical and exciting moment. Justice Harlan smashed the sphere a wicked swat to deep center. He started around the bases and his leg work was really marvellous. His sprinting qualities surprised and delighted the fans, who were wild with enthusiasm. The ball went over the head of the center fielder and was lost in the tall grass. Before it was recovered Justice Harlan had reached the home plate, where he stood sipping a mint julep, which had been prepared hurriedly for the agile Kentuckian as a reward for lining out a four-base hit.

"Home Run" Harlan already has received contracts from a number of ball teams which are weak at the bat.

TWENTY YOUNG MEN

Arrested for Invading a House to Have a Dance.

Macon, Mo., May 15.—Some twenty young men of Valley township have been arrested on a curious charge. The complaining witnesses are Mr. and Mrs. Henry Strahlman, who live in a frame house near Dodd postoffice. They claim that the defendants, accompanied by fiddlers and a number of young women, visited their home one evening recently, moved the stove, beds and other things out of the main room and had a dance.

The prosecuting witnesses state that they told the visitors they didn't believe in dancing, that their child was sick and that they regarded the whole affair as an invasion of their rights. The dancers told Mr. and Mrs. Strahlman that they could join in the dance if they wanted to, and that they would not be taxed for the fiddlers and that they might as well take part in the good time that had been brought to their very doors.

There is no charge of any disorderly conduct or bad language. The young people insist that Mr. and Mrs. Strahlman had invited them to their home and that having taken the notion to go, they thought they would have a good time while they were there.

MOTHER DYING IN NASHVILLE

Son Hurries to Bedside After Absence of Twenty-Seven Years.

On his way to the bedside of his mother, whom he has not seen since he was 13 years of age, Edward Sterling of Grand Marais passed through Duluth this week.

His mother lies at the point of death in her home at Nashville, Tenn., and Mr. Sterling is hurrying there as fast as boats and trains will take him.

Word was received from Nashville that Mrs. Sterling, who is 83 years of age, was very low and was very anxious to see her son Edward before the end came.

Sterling made rapid preparations for leaving Grand Marais. He had to make a run for it to catch the boat, but he succeeded.

As soon as he reached Duluth, he hurried to the depot and procured passage on the first train leaving Duluth, Southbound. Mr. Sterling was afraid when he was in Duluth that he would not reach his mother's bedside in time. Word received while he was here, however, was to the effect that she was still alive.

Sterling left home when he was 13 years of age and has not seen his mother since. He is now about 40 years of age.

WHEAT HAS BIG BREAK

Prices Go Off More Than Two Cents in Northwest.

Flax Is Fairly Steady in the Duluth Market.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 15.—This was a bear market today, and Duluth and Minneapolis felt it the most of any of those cities on this side of the Atlantic. Heavy selling orders put prices off everywhere, and the snow storm in the Northwest did not have the effect of putting prices up. The snow, it is figured, will not hurt any of the seeded wheat. It is figured that at least 70 per cent of the Northwestern crop is seeded, despite the bullish news that has been prevalent of late. Bullish news was heard from the Southwest, as has been for many days, and there was some of it from abroad, but it could not stem the tide of the bears, and it was their market. The closing prices were 2c or so off in most of the American markets. Liverpool closed ⅝d higher, Paris 1c to 1¼c higher and Berlin ⅝c higher.

The May option closed 2½ lower in Duluth and Minneapolis, 2¼c lower in Chicago, 1⅝c lower in New York and 1¼c lower in Winnipeg. The July option closed 2⅜c lower in Duluth, 2¼c in Chicago and St. Louis, 2⅜c in Minneapolis, 1⅝c in New York and Kansas City and 2⅞c in Winnipeg.

July corn closed ¼c higher in Chicago and was ¼d higher in Liverpool. July oats closed ⅜-⅝c lower in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 107 against 28 last year, and at Minneapolis 218 against 80 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 325 against 108 last year. Chicago received 47 against 8 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 586,000 bus, last year 465,000 bus. Shipments 456,000 bus, last year 183,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 424,000 bus.

Primary receipts of wheat were 451,000 bus, last year 362,000 bus. Shipments 673,000 bus, last year 340,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 312,000 bus.

Wheat trading was not very lively in the Duluth market today and prices went off. May wheat was inactive during the session and closed 2¼c lower at 96¾c. July wheat opened 1¼c lower at 98¼c, declined to 98c by 9:35, rallied to 98⅜c by 9:45, declined to 98¼c by 10:00, rallied to 98⅜c by 10:29, went off to 97⅝c by 10:31, reacted to 98c by 10:33, declined to 97¾c by 11:07, rallied to 98⅛c by 11:27, declined to 97⅝c by 11:49, rallied to 98¼c by 12:29, went off to 97¼c by 1:14 and closed at that price, a loss of 2⅜c from yesterday. September wheat opened 1⅝c lower at 95c, advanced to 98¼c, declined to 98⅛c, rallied to 98⅜c, declined to 97⅝c, rallied to 98¼c, declined to 97⅝c, rallied to 98⅛c, went off to 97¾c, reacted to 98¼c and closed at 97¾c, a loss of 2¼c from yesterday.

Durum wheat closed 1c lower and cash spring wheat was selling at the July price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was quiet and the tendency was weaker at the close. May flax opened ¼c higher at $1.28½, advanced to $1.28¾, declined to $1.26, rallied to $1.26¾ and closed at that price, unchanged from yesterday. July flax opened ¼c higher at $1.28, declined to $1.27½, rallied to $1.27¾ and closed at $1.27⅝, a loss of 1½c from yesterday. September flax opened ¾c higher at $1.28¼, declined to $1.27¼ and closed at $1.27½, unchanged from yesterday.

The coarse grains were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Heavy Realizing Sales Force Wheat Downward at the Opening.

Chicago, May 15.—Heavy realizing sales were again the feature at the opening of the wheat market today. July opened ⅝@¾c to 1⅝@1¾c lower at 94@95c; September, &@1c to 1⅞@1¾c down at 95 to 96¼c and December ⅞@1c to 1⅝@2c depressed at 87⅝c to 87⅝c. The first half hour saw the enormous offerings well taken with prices partly recovered, July selling at 94⅜c, September at 96⅜c and December at 87⅝c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 372 cars, against 427 last week and 116 a year ago. No material change was reported in crop conditions.

Broomhall, Liverpool, on wheat: Steady all the opening with values ⅛c higher, being influenced by the bullish situation at Chicago. Following the opening there was some disposition to take profits owing to the pause in the demand for cargoes and offerings became larger and somewhat pressing. Toward midday, however, a firmer undertone again developed, prices showing an advance of ¼c to ½c, due to reports of lack of rain in Roumania and less favorable crop condition in Russia, but again prices reacted some, although the undertone held steady.

Corn was steady with values unchanged. The market was neglected.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago, to Paine, Webber & Co.: Wheat after showing considerable stubbornness for the greater part of the session turned weak at the close and lowest prices showed 2¼@2¾c net losses for the day. There is improved crop prospects in the far Northwest. Dispatches telling of improved conditions in Manitoba had much to do with the late selling today. There was a sharp break in the curb price at Minneapolis before the market opened. Later there was a forecast for rising temperatures of the West, and especially over the Northwest. All day long there was an effort on the part of holders who were out of their wheat to play for a further reaction before replacing lines.

The trade was not without bull news from the northwest country. Kansas messages reported buying orders coming from Kansas and Missouri points, and intimating that the wheat is frozen as the result of recent low temperatures. At some Kansas points ice formed last night, and the temperatures were very low all over that state. Those who have examined many wheat fields report the heads of the soft wheat injured. Foreign news regarding Southern Russia and Roumania very bullish. The Northwest, however, sold wheat on the improved prospect in the Northwest. Resting orders supported the July at 94 until just at the close when there was a sharp dip to 93¾c. It is a nervous market in which buyers should use caution except on a sharp break.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 15.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 6@8 points and shortly afterward sold at a net advance of 12@21 points, with July, the old crop month, and the new crop months, above the 11c mark. The advance was due to higher Liverpool cables, reports of cold rains in the South, covering by some of yesterday's heavy sellers, and fresh buying for long account. Trading was exceedingly active at the advance and while the bull leader was credited with selling at least 25,000 bales of July during the first half hour, offerings were very well absorbed after a recession of about 7 or 8 points on the new crop and of 15 to 17 points on July. The market during the middle of the morning was excited and irregular with the old crop 2 points net lower and the new crop 12 to 13 points net higher.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS

Union Pacific Broke on Interstate Commerce Commission Report.

Shorts Covered Towards Close, Which Was Fairly Steady.

New York, May 15.—Opening prices of stocks tended downward on small offerings. Delaware & Hudson fell 1⅝, Baltimore & Ohio and Colorado Fuel ⅞ each and Reading and Pennsylvania ⅝ each. Secondary prices for stocks were better, the market gradually rallying to a parity with yesterday's closing or above. Brooklyn Rapid Transit, American Smelting, Reading and Canadian Pacific rallied from ¾ to 1¼, which represented the extreme movement. Delaware & Hudson sagged persistently. Chesapeake & Ohio also lost 1⅝.

Stocks were inclined to harden further, but dealings yere intensely dull. Bonds were irregular.

Union Pacific broke badly to 3½ below yesterday's final figure, following a published report of the recommendations of counsel for the interstate commerce commission on the Harriman railroad investigation. There were also many sharp losses among the other active stocks. A rally of over a point in Union Pacific stopped the general selling, but the market was sagging again at 1 o'clock. Twin City Rapid Transit yielded 2, Great Northern preferred 1¾.

Signs of support again appeared for Union Pacific after it dropped to 142⅜, and there was a recovery of 1¼ with sympathetic effect elsewhere. Lead was exceptionally strong, getting up 2¾ to 66. Belated selling orders cost Lonisville & Nashville, Denver & Rio Grande, Interborough-Metropolitan preferred and North American 1 to 1¼ points, and Northwestern 2 points.

The market closed fairly steady and dull. Covering of shorts was general in the final hour. This rallied Union Pacific two points and there were complete recoveries at some points. National Lead rose an extreme 5¼ and American Smelting 1½. Lake Erie and Western fell 4, Illinois Central 2¼, Allis-Chalmers preferred 1¾ and Central Leather preferred 1.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Gay & Sturgis: The publication of the report by the interstate commerce commission of the Harriman roads was the signal for heavy selling of Union Pacific, followed by selling of the entire list.

It is useless to argue about a market like this. Intrinsically stocks are cheap, but there is so much labor talk, and people are in such a pessimistic mood that they pay no attention to any good news.

The Anaconda statement for instance shows profits of $8,842,000, amounting to over 29 per cent on the stock after deducting all development expenditures for the year. What better could one ask, but it had practically no effect on the stock. On the decline there were very few coppers offered. North Butte was well bought.

We do not look for any immediate change in the market, believing it will be a traders affair for the present.

FULL DISCLOSURE

COMPANY CLAIMS
- 6 to 12 Foot Sulphide Vein
- 9% Copper Ore
- Smelter Reports
- Vouchers of Smelter Cash Returns
- Development Work—3 Miles
- Directors Who Direct
- Assurance of Net Earnings of $1,200,000

Vouchers which show Actual Operations are seldom open to public inspection. The reports from the Smelting Companies which extract the copper from the ores and pay for it exhibit the cash returns from output and are the vouchers of a mining company. A prospectus is designed to tell the prospects, the anticipations of the corporation. The public should know not only what is going to be, but what is. Earnings of today indicate profits of tomorrow.

Has the Bonanza Belt Company told the public what is?

Subscriptions, inquiries and applications show that the public not only appreciate, but universally acknowledge that the Bonanza Belt Copper Company has opened itself to public inspection and verification, beginning with the physical condition of its mines and ending with vouchers showing the method of conducting—and cash returns from—its business. It is the one mining corporation responding to the modern cry for corporate publicity.

SMELTER REPORTS
Give details of ore shipments to the smelting companies, contents in Copper, Silver, Lime and Iron, value of product, and expense of reduction. They will be furnished upon application.

PROSPECTUS
And maps exhibit the details of an active mining business. They strip the mines to eye and understanding. Engineers' reports tell the good and the bad. Directors' list includes bankers, copper experts, and substantial business and professional men. They will be furnished on application.

VOUCHERS
In the form of duplicates of checks, statement of tons of ore thereby paid for, drawn to the order of the company, show cash payments. They will be furnished on application.

He who reads will comprehend the intrinsic value and future possibilities of an investment in the shares of this company.

Subscription Books close June 1st.

The offer of the company to sell 100,000 shares at $5 per share will be executed as outlined in the public offer of last week.

PLANNING CELEBRATION.

Three Days Set Aside for Memorial Services.

The committee on arrangements for the Memorial day celebration has already been chosen by the members of Alonzo Palmer Post, G. A. R., and preparations are going on satisfactorily. Three days in which the citizens will pay tribute to the old soldiers have been set aside.

The first date will be on Sunday, May 26, when the members of the post will assemble at the headquarters in Odd Fellows' temple at 10 a. m., and march in a body to the Hammond Avenue Presbyterian church where half an hour later Rev. L. K. Grimes, the pastor of the church, will deliver a Memorial sermon.

On the following Tuesday a number of the old veterans will visit the different schools of the city. On Memorial day the members of the post and of the W. R. C. will meet at the post headquarters at 8 o'clock in the morning and will later take a train on the Great Northern road to Greenwood cemetery where the graves of the soldiers will be decorated.

Other members of the post will visit other cemeteries of the city at the same hour to decorate the graves of the veterans.

PIONEER SALOON MAN DEAD

Ole Peterson Dies at Central Station After Long Debauch.

In a cell at the Ccentral police station, Ole Peterson, one of the pioneer saloonkeepers of Superior, died of acute alcholism at 7 o'clock last evening. He had been on a long spree for the past several weeks and was taken in charge by the police yesterday. He was on the verge of delirium tremens, but after being treated by a physician he seemed to become quieter.

It became necessary to call the physician at about 5 o'clock, and about an hour later Peterson passed away. Coroner Dudley ordered the remains be sent to the morgue.

Peterson was 45 years old, and has been in the saloon and hotel business for many years. For the past two years he has been running the saloon at 1822 Iowa avenue.

DRUMHEAD TRIALS STAY SAYS IMPERIAL COUNCIL.

St. Peterbsurg, May 15.—The council of the empire, or upper house of parliament, today rejected the bill which was passed April 30 by the lower house, abolishing trials by drumhead court-martial.

ULTIMATUM BY ENGLAND TO COSTA RICA NOT TRUE.

London, May 15.—The foreign office here discredits the report from New Orleans that the British minister to Central America, Mr. Carden, has presented an ultimatum to Costa Rica demanding the settlement of the Republic's indebtedness to Great Britain within two weeks. The foreign debt of Costa Rica in 1905, including $3,000,000 arrears of interest, totalled $13,000,000.

SAW NEGRO SOLDIER AND GUN ENTER BROWNSVILLE AT CLOSE OF SHOOTING

Telegraph Manager Sanborn Gives Evidence Against Men.

Awakened From Sound Sleep by Heavy Firing Near Room.

Somewhat Confused Under Close Questioning of Senator Foraker.

Washington, May 16.—F. A. Sanborn, manager of the Western Union Telegraph company, today in the Brownsville negro soldier investigation, testified that he saw a negro soldier, carrying a gun enter the post at about the time firing ceased on the night of Aug. 13. On cross examination he said the man was walking deliberately and did not appear to be hurrying to escape detection.

Sanborn was somewhat confused as to incidents of the night because of fright and although occupying a room directly accross the road from the main gate of the post, many of the occurrences over which there is no conflict of testimony escaped him. He was positive, however, that the man was a negro soldier and that he carried a gun.

Sanborn has lived in Brownsville between thirty and forty years. He served in the Civil war with the Union army as a military telegrapher. In Brownsville he occupied a room in the rear of the telegraph office and one window faced the garrison. He said he was awakened from a sound sleep by hearing heavy firing very near him and it appeared to come from between the telegraph office and the garrison, although it might have been from beyond the wall. He said he did not think it advisable to open his door, but after several minutes had elapsed he lighted a lamp in the office and then went to his bedroom window. He saw nothing prior to the passing of the soldier down the garrison road and his entrance to the post near the main gate. He gave the Twenty-fifth regiment rather a bad name for discipline, as the men were loosely controlled and vulgar and boisterous, although he disclaimed any prejudice against them.

On cross examination Senator Scott drew from Sanborn the admission that the soldier alleged to have entered the gate was walking very deliberately Advanced Irish Nationalist Society Plans Decisive Move.

Dispute With England May be Sent to Peace Congress.

Dublin, May 16.—The executive committee of the Sein Fein society, representing advanced Irish Nationalism, considers Mr. Birrell's Irish bill an insult to Ireland and wants the Nationalist members of parliament to withdraw from the house and demand a settlement of the international dispute between Ireland and England by The Hague arbitration court.

It is also suggested that the program published today by the organ of the Nationalist party be placed in the form of a resolution to be adopted by the executive committee of the Irish national council. In it the Irishmen "who have attended the British parliament for the past twenty-one years to support the British Liberals," are invited to return to Dublin and "devise measures for the material betterment of Ireland and securing international recognition and support of Ireland's political rights, as the first step toward which she should claim representation at the coming peace congress at The Hague and a settlement of the international dispute between Ireland and England, by the international court of arbitration."

Philadelphia, May 16.—Frank A. Brotherton, aged 40, a salesman employed by the Egar Packing company of Des Moines, Iowa, committed suicide in the station of the Pennsylvania railroad in this city today by shooting himself in the temple. In his pocket was found a letter to his wife, who is said to reside in Des Moines, reading:

"To my dear Gar: My last thought is of you and I want you to think as kindly of me as you can. I have treated you wretchedly and you have taken all in the Christian spirit that is in your heart alone. I am the executor of your mother's estate and see to it that you get you share, and settle on little Helen $1,000."

Paris, May 16.—A proposition suggesting the complete disarmament of the colonies belonging to all the powers, except for interior police purposes, was introduced by M. It declares that the arguments against general disarmament do not apply in any way to the colonies, which should be placed under the protection of all civilized nations. The fortification of the coaling stations and naval bases of maritime which are considered to be a portion of their home defenses, would be permitted.

NO ARBITRATION FOR DOCK MEN

Appeal to President Roosevelt Denied by Leader Connors.

New York, May 16.—Patrick Connoras, chairman of the executive committee of the Longshoremen's union, said today that the longshoremen were not going to make an appeal to President Roosevelt to aid them in dealing with the steamship companies. He added that the men did not want arbitration, and that they did not contemplate an appeal to J. ONE FRISCO CAR COMPANY GIVES WAY TO STRIKERS.

San Francisco, May 16.—The Geary street road has granted the demand of the striking car men and resumed operations this morning on the basis of $3 for an 8-hour day. The board of supervisors notified the officials of this line Monday that unless the company started its cars the city would take over the road and operate it. The line runs from the junction of Geary, Kearney and Market streets to Golden Gate park.

HOLD BACK STEAMSHIP BY ADVANCE PAY DEMAND.

New York, May 16.—The departure of the French line steamer La Torualne for Havre, was delayed two hours today by the refusal of about 175 of the Bremen and crew to sail until they were paid for doing the work of longshoremen while in port. They were promised 30c an hour, payment to be made as soon as the ship passed Sandy Hook, but they demanded payment before the ship sailed. After vainly urging them to return to work, the steamer's officials gave in and paid the wages.

W. H. HATTEN,

DEADLOCK NEARS END

Stephenson or Hatten Likely to be Chosen Wisconsin Senator.

Opposition Unites on State Senator But Vote is Short.

Madison, Wis., May 16.—The contest for the vacant seat in the United States senate remains about the same as at the end of last night's joint ballot, Hatten receiving 50 votes today and Stephenson 48. The indications point to a nomination of one of these candidates at tonight's caucus.

The anti-Stephenson Republicans at a conference yesterday afternoon decided to drop Esch and vote for Hatten and 53 votes were pledged to Hatten, in caucus—one more than enough to elect in caucus. Last night, however, one changed to Stephenson and two refused to vote, leaving Hatten with 50 on nine ballots. After the caucus the adjourned session of the legislature took one ballot as follows: Hatten 50; Stephenson 46; Bird (Dem.) 14; scattered 11.

State Senator W. H. Hatten has not been prominent in a political way in Wisconsin until within the last four years, the early part of his life having been devoted to his lumber interests, which are extensive, not only in Wisconsin, but also in the West and South. When the agitation for regulation of railway freight rates in Wisconsin became strong, he was on the senate committee which had this work in charge. He declared that Wisconsin should not be allowed to show a retaliatory spirit toward the railways, but should require nothing more than bare justice to them. On this basis he secured the passage of a measure which was not fought by the railways, and which still has resulted in the saving of $2,000,000 in freights in the time it has been in effect. His home is in New London.

PASTOR MAY LOSE PLACE

Minister Who Officiated at Corey Wedding Causes Storm.

Resignation Said to be in Hands of Church Trustees.

New York, May 16.—The trustees of the Bushwick Avenue Congregational church, the pastor of which, Rev. Dr. John L. Clark, officiated at the early morning marriage of William F. Corey, president of the United States Steel corporation, and Mabelle Gilman, Tuesday, announced, after a meeting last night, that another meeting would be held tonight, at which some action regarding the matter would be taken. Following the meeting, a public statement will be issued.

The action of the pastor in officiating at the wedding of a divorced man, contrary to the church laws, has aroused the storm.

The meeting last night was behind closed doors. One of the participants, according to a published statement today, said that Pastor Clark had placed his resignation at the disposal of the board of trustees.

SCRUGHAM GETS GOOD SUPPORT

Policyholders' Committee Votes to Stand by Its Manager.

New York, May 16.—The International Policyholders' committee, at a meeting yesterday, passed resolutions of confidence in George E. Scrugham, manager for the committee, who is on trial for alleged irregularities in the manner in which the votes at the recent elections were counted. Mr. Scrugham appeared before the committee and stated his case.

A warrant charging forgery against one of the defendenats in the case of Scrugham, Charles F. Carrington and Charles Stirrup, under arrest on a charge of conspiracy, will be asked for next Monday by the prosecution, according to an announcement made by Assistant District Attorney Smyth, in court yesterday.

Frederick A. Burnham, president of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance company, and George D. Eldridge, also an officer, who are under indictments on charges of grand larceny and forgery, must stand trial in New York county, application for a change of venue, made by their counsel several days ago, being denied yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Dowling.

AIMS TO END GAMBLING BY ENFORCING OLD LAW FOR BENEFIT OF POOR

WILLIAM T. JEROME,
New York District Attorney, Who Plans Suing All Gamblers for Benefit of Poor.

District Attorney Jerome Plans Collecting Five Times All Bets.

Gains and Losses Alike Liable and Hospital May Result.

Triumph for Legal Purity in Punishment of Abe Hummel.

New York, May 16.—District Attorney Jerome is preparing to prosecute gamblers and poolroom proprietors under a section of the penal code heretofore practically a dead letter, and is being helped by Corporation Counsel Ellison. One of Jerome's assistants will be appointed a special corporation counsel to bring suits under the section in question, which permits the charities commissioner to institute civil suits against every one who wins or loses, at play or by betting, $25 or more in one day for not over five times the amount of his gains or losses, the money to go to the poor. There is no exception in favor of racetrack betting.

Jerome has in his possession a great mass of evidence collected at the time of the raids on pool rooms about six weeks ago, and he also has the backing of the Dowling law to compel gamesters to tell him who their customers are and the amounts of such customers' stakes.

The sums involved are very large, it is believed. It is even suggested that if the law is rigorously enforced, enough money can be collected to establish a new hospital. It is said that Jerome's determination to apply the section is owing to the unfavorable attitude of the legislature toward the anti-betting bills drafted by him early in the session.

In securing the conviction of Abe Hummel and in succesfully frustrating his efforts to overthrow that result by appeals to the courts, District Attorney Jerome considers that he has won the greatest victory in the long line of cases he has prosecuted for the purpose of cleaning up the bar of New York. Hummel will probably be sent Saturday to prison for a year for conspiracy in the Dodge-Morris divorce case. From an office boy, he worked himself up until he became recognized as one of the foremost criminal lawyers of New York. The firm of Howe & Hummel was known even internationally and its income was large. Howe died several years ago, but the business continued under the old firm name until after the scandal in which Hummel became involved. Hummel was a master of advertising. His alliances with stage folk, as counsel for playwrights and divorce getter for scores of actresses kept his name in print more than that of almost any other lawyer in New York.

RUSSIA HAS POOR CROPS

Sudden Hot Spell and Drought Endangers Spring Wheat.

Prices in Empire Higher Now Than for Several Decades.

Odessa, May 16.—The European wheat situation is regarded by competent grain merchants here as being most unfavorable. The present prices are the highest quoted in Russia for decades. The provinces of Bessarabia, Poltava, Kherson and Podolia, where wheat is chiefly cultivated, are gravely affected. Seventy-five per cent of the winter crops have been damaged by the cold weather and dry spring. Owing to the sudden rise in temperature a fortnight ago from 4 degs. below freezing point to intense summer heat the entire spring crops will be lost unless rain falls within a week.

The president of the grain bourse attributes the present prices in Russia to the foreign quotations of grain, which Russia is compelled to follow owing to the exhaustion of her stocks. The prospect of a crop failure, however, has not caused any speculation in grain.

About Kishinev, Bessarabia, the farmers in many localities are reploughing their fields, the first sowing having been ruined by drought.

About Yelizabethgrade a famine is threatened by the entire failure of the winter wheat and the bad condition of the sowings in the localities which have been reploughed, owing to the absence of rain.

MILLIONS FOR PENNSYLVANIA

Legislature Closes With Appropriations of $57,000,000.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 16.—The Pennsylvania legislature of 1907 passed into history today with a record of having appropriated $15,000,000 for the public schools, $7,000,000 for good roads, $6,000,000 for pensions by Pennsylvania soldiers of the Civil war and $29,099,000 for public and private charities and various other purposes, and having fulfilled nearly all the pledges of the great political parties in last year's campaign, including a 2-cent fare on steam roads, a railroad commission, enforcement of the constitution regulating railroads, and an employers' liability act.

TWELVE HELD FOR LAND FRAUD

Denver Federal Grand Jury Returns Indictments Speedily.

Denver, May 16.—The federal grand jury impaneled Tuesday made report yesterday its first day's work to Judge R. F. Lewis in the United States district court. Indictments were returned for twelve men who are charged with land frauds, and the judge ordered warrants issued for their immediate arrest. Most of the warrants must be served out of town and, until the arrests are made, no names will be given for publication. Bail was set at $2,500 in each instance.

TELEPHONE MAN FACES CHARGES OF CORRUPTION.

San Francisco, May 16.—Theodore V. Halsey, former outside man of the Pacific State's Telephone company, will appear before Superior Judge Dunne today for arraignment which he was indicted by the grand jury. He is accused of having given supervisors $5,000 each to vote against the granting of the franchise now held by the Home Telephone company.

NEW MOVES BY KANSAS

State Supreme Court Enjoins Sale of Brewery Properties.

Receivers to be Asked for Holdings of Four Concerns.

Topeka, Kan., May 16.—The state supreme court today, in response to quo warranto proceedings filed by Attorney General Fred Jackson, issued restraining orders against the following four foreign corporations, enjoining the companies and their agents from selling, disposing or removing any property which they may own in the state, or from using such property in disposing of liquor within the state: Dick Brothers, Quincy Brewing company of Illinois, Fred Miller Brewing company of Wisconsin, William J. Lemp Brewing company of Missouri, the M. K. Goetz Brewing company of Missouri.

An application of the attorney general to have a receiver appointed to take charge of the property of the four companies was set for argument by the court, May 28. On the same date motions to quash service of summons in the cases of six other brewing companies, for which receivers have been appointed, will be heard.

Resignation Said to be in Hands of Church Trustees.

New York, May 16.—The trustees of the Bushwick Avenue Congregational church, the pastor of which, Rev. Dr. John L. Clark, officiated at the early morning marriage of William F. Corey, president of the United States Steel corporation, and Mabelle Gilman, Tuesday, announced, after a meeting last night, that another meeting would be held tonight, at which some action regarding the matter would be taken. Following the meeting, a public statement will be issued.

The action of the pastor in officiating at the wedding of a divorced man, contrary to the church laws, has aroused the storm.

The meeting last night was behind closed doors. One of the participants, according to a published statement today, said that Pastor Clark had placed his resignation at the disposal of the board of trustees.

New York, May 16.—The International Policyholders' committee, at a meeting yesterday, passed resolutions of confidence in George E. Scrugham, manager for the committee, who is on trial for alleged irregularities in the manner in which the votes at the recent elections were counted. Mr. Scrugham appeared before the committee and stated his case.

A warrant charging forgery against one of the defendenats in the case of Scrugham, Charles F. Carrington and Charles Stirrup, under arrest on a charge of conspiracy, will be asked for next Monday by the prosecution, according to an announcement made by Assistant District Attorney Smyth, in court yesterday.

Frederick A. Burnham, president of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance company, and George D. Eldridge, also an officer, who are under indictments on charges of grand larceny and forgery, must stand trial in New York county, application for a change of venue, made by their counsel several days ago, being denied yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Dowling.

AIMS TO END GAMBLING BY ENFORCING OLD LAW FOR BENEFIT OF POOR

WILLIAM T. JEROME,
New York District Attorney, Who Plans Suing All Gamblers for Benefit of Poor.

District Attorney Jerome Plans Collecting Five Times All Bets.

Gains and Losses Alike Liable and Hospital May Result.

Triumph for Legal Purity in Punishment of Abe Hummel.

New York, May 16.—District Attorney Jerome is preparing to prosecute gamblers and poolroom proprietors under a section of the penal code heretofore practically a dead letter, and is being helped by Corporation Counsel Ellison. One of Jerome's assistants will be appointed a special corporation counsel to bring suits under the section in question, which permits the charities commissioner to institute civil suits against every one who wins or loses, at play or by betting, $25 or more in one day for not over five times the amount of his gains or losses, the money to go to the poor. There is no exception in favor of racetrack betting.

Jerome has in his possession a great mass of evidence collected at the time of the raids on pool rooms about six weeks ago, and he also has the backing of the Dowling law to compel gamesters to tell him who their customers are and the amounts of such customers' stakes.

The sums involved are very large, it is believed. It is even suggested that if the law is rigorously enforced, enough money can be collected to establish a new hospital. It is said that Jerome's determination to apply the section is owing to the unfavorable attitude of the legislature toward the anti-betting bills drafted by him early in the session.

In securing the conviction of Abe Hummel and in successfully frustrating his efforts to overthrow that result by appeals to the courts, District Attorney Jerome considers that he has won the greatest victory in the long line of cases he has prosecuted for the purpose of cleaning up the bar of New York. Hummel will probably be sent Saturday to prison for a year for conspiracy in the Dodge-Morris divorce case. From an office boy, he worked himself up until he became recognized as one of the foremost criminal lawyers of New York. The firm of Howe & Hummel was known even internationally and its income was large. Howe died several years ago, but the business continued under the old firm name until after the scandal in which Hummel became involved. Hummel was a master of advertising. His alliances with stage folk, as counsel for playwrights and divorce getter for scores of actresses kept his name in print more than that of almost any other lawyer in New York.

RUSSIA HAS POOR CROPS

Sudden Hot Spell and Drought Endangers Spring Wheat.

Prices in Empire Higher Now Than for Several Decades.

Odessa, May 16.—The European wheat situation is regarded by competent grain merchants here as being most unfavorable. The present prices are the highest quoted in Russia for decades. The provinces of Bessarabia, Poltava, Kherson and Podolia, where wheat is chiefly cultivated, are gravely affected. Seventy-five per cent of the winter crops have been damaged by the cold weather and dry spring. Owing to the sudden rise in temperature a fortnight ago from 4 degs. below freezing point to intense summer heat the entire spring crops will be lost unless rain falls within a week.

The president of the grain bourse attributes the present prices in Russia to the foreign quotations of grain, which Russia is compelled to follow owing to the exhaustion of her stocks. The prospect of a crop failure, however, has not caused any speculation in grain.

About Kishinev, Bessarabia, the farmers in many localities are replowing their fields, the first sowing having been ruined by drought.

About Yelizabethgrade a famine is threatened by the entire failure of the winter wheat and the bad condition of the sowings in the localities which have been replowghed, owing to the absence of rain.

NEW MOVES BY KANSAS

State Supreme Court Enjoins Sale of Brewery Properties.

Receivers to be Asked for Holdings of Four Concerns.

Topeka, Kan., May 16.—The state supreme court today, in response to quo warranto proceedings filed by Attorney General Fred Jackson, issued restraining orders against the following four foreign corporations, enjoining the companies and their agents from selling, disposing or removing any property which they may own in the state, or from using such property in disposing of liquor within the state: Dick Brothers, Quincy Brewing company of Illinois, Fred Miller Brewing company of Wisconsin, William J. Lemp Brewing company of Missouri, the M. K. Goetz Brewing company of Missouri.

An application of the attorney general to have a receiver appointed to take charge of the property of the four companies was set for argument by the court, May 28. On the same date motions to quash service of summons in the cases of six other brewing companies, for which receivers have been appointed, will be heard.

MOTHER IS BROKEN HEARTED

Mrs. W. J. Morris, Whose Daughter Was Scalded, Frantic With Grief.

Mrs. W. J. Morris, whose daughter, Margaret, died yesterday from burns received Tuesday afternoon, is broken hearted over the terrible accident and is the recipient of a great deal of sympathy from friends and neighbors.

Mrs. Morris says that there has been a slight mistake in the accounts of the accident which have been published. Instead of setting the kettle of water down on the floor before beginning scrubbing, Mrs. Morris says she simply poured the boiling water into a pail standing on the floor. As she turned to put the kettle back on the stove the little 4-year-old girl came running out of the dining room to find her mother and fell over the pail, upsetting it and being terribly scalded. Mrs. Morris was not out of the room for a moment after the pail of hot water was left on the floor and the accident happened and the harm was done so quickly that there was no means of averting it.

In spite of the fact that she was not in any way to blame, she feels very keenly that she was the cause of the little girl's death.

WILL NOT PLAY BALL AGAIN

Artie O'Dea Says He Will Stay With His Claim.

"I am not going to play ball this summer. I am not expecting or even fearing to lose my claim, and I am going back to it in a few days to spend the summer there, improving it."

Arthur O'Dea, former captain and manager of the Duluth baseball team, made the foregoing statement this morning in a very forceful manner, and denied the report which appeared in the morning paper to the effect that he was going to play ball again this summer with Lethbridge.

"It is true," said "Artie," "that I would like to play ball for a couple of months to get a little money ahead for some improvements that are needed on my claim, but I can't afford to do it. I have a good piece of land up on the north shore, and am going to freeze to it, and make a first class farm out of it. I have played professional ball for twelve years, and I have had about enough of it."

WILL MARRY IN MISSOURI

Millionaire John Bryan Picks State for Wedding to Ward.

Columbus, Ohio, May 16.—The eccentric millionaire and author, John Bryan, of near Xenia, who came here to examine the law books in the state library to find out what state has marriage laws to suit him, is impatiently awaiting a message from his sweetheart, Miss Frederick Murphy of Cincinnati, telling when she will meet him and go with him to St. Louis to wed. Bryan says he is convinced that the Missouri marriage laws are the best in the union.

ARE CITY OFFICERS.

Superior Firemen Must Draw Salaries at End of Month.

Assistant City Attorney McIntosh of Superior, has rendered an opinion, at the request of the city comptroller, in which he holds the action of the council in voting to pay firemen's salaries twice a month to be illegal. As a result of this opinion the firemen will have to wait until the end of the month before they will get their pay.

The checks were all ready to be turned over to the firemen yesterday when the legality of the transaction was questioned and they were held up by the comptroller pending the opinion of the city attorney.

Assistant City Attorney McIntosh holds that the provisions of the city charter require that all city officers shall be paid at the end of the month. He holds that the enactment of the police and fire commission law recognizes the firemen and policemen as city officers, that they must be given a hearing before being removed from office.

FISH WAS EXPENSIVE.

Wisconsin Settler Pays $25 for Eating a Bass.

Anderson and his family are said to have been at breakfast, eating a bass when Deputy Game Warden Craig entered and arrested the man of the family.

Jack Berlisk was found guilty of assaulting Annie Haffson, a domestic in a lodging house in Superior, and was fined $13. Berlish had put up $50 bail. His conduct in the courtroom was so overbearing that the court took occasion to give him a scorching reprimand.

Get Your Hair Cut Friday and Avoid Disappointment Saturday.

Last Saturday the boycotted Barber Shop, "Sullivan's," at 215 West Superior Street, had to turn away over 100 people, being unable, with even extra barbers to care for the trade.

THE BARBERS WILL BATTLE

Bloody Baseball Contest Scheduled for Sunday Afternoon.

Duluth and Superior tonsorial artists are planning what they claim will be one of the best bets in baseball circles for the season. They will come together Sunday afternoon in Superior, in a fierce and bloody game for the tonsorial championship of the Head of the Lakes.

It is to be a sudden death affair, the stakes to be a bottle of hair tonic.

The Duluth barbers have an "unknown" whom they are going to unblanket and trot out in the pitcher's box. He is claimed to have a ball, known as "the hair singe twist," which does away with the necessity for a catcher. It simply shoots past the batsman's waist, turns around and comes back to the pitcher. The catcher will be used as an extra infielder if this twist is found to be working properly.

They have another outfielder, whom they call "the boy ball buster," who claims to be able to spatter a ball all over the end of the bat.

All victims of the barbers' art are invited to attend the game, plentifully armed with lemons and decayed fruit. It is the opportunity of a lifetime to get even.

SETTLERS MAY LOSE CLAIMS

Itasca County Farmers Hold Lands Held to be Swamp.

St. Paul, May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Itasca county is about to bring to the attention of the state authorities the plight of about thirty or more settlers who are in danger of losing their homes because of threatened eviction.

These settlers took up claims under the government homestead law and improved them, but now face ejectment as a result of a claim by the state of Minnesota that the claims are swamp lands and are therefore set aside for the benefit of the school fund. The national government, it is understood, is about ready to acknowledge its mistake and the settlers will lose their holdings.

Some of the claims were taken up years ago and those on them have made extensive improvements. One farmer is said to have erected buildings that represent an investment of nearly $5,000.

FIRST FEES OF LAWYERS.

Legal Lights Who Were Content at Start With Very Small Pay.

Indianapolis News: A young lawyer's first fee is an important event in his life and one which he is apt to remember. In many cases it comes at a time when he needs it badly and always it is the opening of the door to the temple of fame, which he has been striving to enter. It is like a young wolf's first taste of blood and makes him desire more. After he has achieved success and perhaps become famous he likes to tell about his first fee.

Oliver H. Smith, one of the foremost lawyers of Indiana for many years, representative in congress and United States senator, earned his first fee by prosecuting a man for boring into a neighbor's sugar tree. Smith was admitted to the bar at the Bearborn circuit court in 1820 by Judge Miles C. Eggleston, a distinguished jurist of that day. The Third circuit over which he presided included five counties and extended from the Ohio river to the Michigan line.

After his admission to the bar Smith opened an office at Versailles, Ripley county. Once in a reminiscent mood he wrote: "My shingle was exposed to the gaze of the passerby for some days, but no client called. My landlord, of course, looked for his $1.25 at the end of the week, his boarding price, and I began to doubt whether the profession of the law was what I supposed, the road to wealth and fame, when a loud knock at the door aroused my attention and in stepped a man of a most Herculean frame, apparently much excited and asked if the 'squire was in. I said 'yes.' Says he: 'I have a very important case, 'squire, and have come to see you.' This was, indeed, music to my ear, the first of the kind I had ever heard.

"The case was stated. A neighbor had, without asking, bored one of his sugar trees. 'If he had asked it' said my client, 'he might have bored a dozen of them and welcome.

"Here was a plain case of trespass quare clausum fregit, as my Blackstone told me. The advice was given, the action was brought and warmly contested by the only other lawyer in the place.

"I had left the office of the justice after my first speech and was taking dinner at my boardinghouse, when in rushed my client and announced in a stentorian voice: 'Squire, we've beat him; verdict 12½ cents, good; but 'squire, I want you to stick to him, as he now swars he will plunge it into ekkity. Here's your fee of $2.50.' This was my first client, my first case and my first fee.'

Mr. Smith did not remain long at Versailles. He soon removed to Connersville, where he acquired distinction at the bar and in politics. In 1839 he removed to this city, where he was a leader at the bar and in some early railroad enterprises. His first fee of $2.50 was the foundation of a large fortune. He was the father-in-law of Gen. John Love and died in this city in 1859.

Judge Charles H. Test, once one of the best known lawyers in the state, and for many years a resident of this city, once told a story about his first fee of consequence. He was a young man when the Indian murder trials at Pendleton occurred, recently married and just beginning practice. Gen. James Noble of Brookville, then (1824) United States senator from Indiana, was employed by the national government to conduct the prosecution of the murderers, and, being a friend of young Test, he invited him to assist in the prosecution, taking his chances for receiving a fee. Test was a good lawyer and an eloquent speaker and needed only a chance to make his mark. He took an active part in the trials and did himself credit.

"After the trials were over," he said, "and the time came for my pay for services rendered, I was astonished beyond all expression when I was handed a cool $300, in gold, and was asked for a voucher for it. This was more money than I had ever had in my hands at one time. I was almost dumfounded.

"I rallied in due time and put it in my old saddlebags and started for Connersville to see my wife and spring the surprise on her. When I arrived home it was in the night, and my wife had retired. I did not care to disturb her, so I just slipped the money into the bureau drawer, the only piece of furniture we had of any value.

"In the morning when my wife awoke she did not disturb me. Knowing that I was tired, she let me slumber until she had the morning meal about ready. About the time she intended to call me she had occasion to go to the drawer for something, as we used it also for a cupboard. On pulling out the drawer she almost fainted. There she beheld what she had never seen before, $300, all in gold. Her impression must have been that I had committed a robbery, for she immediately flew to my bedside and demanded an explanation of how I came in possession of so much gold coin. I told her of my good fortune, and how I had acquitted myself on the trial of the murderers; that my services were so much appreciated that this pile of yellow metal was my reward. The explanation was entirely satisfactory to her."

Judge Test was circuit judge before he was 30 years old, was a member of the legislature and secretary of state, had a long and honorable career at the bar, and died in this city. He was father-in-law of Gen. John Coburn.

Hugh McCulloch, afterward secretary of the treasury, came to Indiana in the spring of 1833, a fairly well educated lawyer but not yet admitted to the bar. After a brief stay at Madison and Indianapolis, he started on horseback for the northern part of the state, without knowing where he would settle. His route took him through the villages of Frankfort, Delphi and on to Laporte, when he decided to go to Fort Wayne and make that his permanent home. While at Indianapolis he had been examined by the judge of the supreme court and licensed to practice law in all the courts of the state. He was not yet married and was foot-loose.

At Goshen, on his way to Fort Wayne, an hour or two after he had registered his name at the tavern (there were no hotels in Indiana at that time), he was sent for by a stranger who had heard he was a lawyer. Answering the summons, he found the stranger sick abed in a log cabin, one room plainly furnished, and a young wife waiting on him.

The stranger was Joseph L. Jernigan, a local attorney. Jernigan told him he had a case coming on the next day and as he was too sick to leave the house, he wanted to know if McCulloch would stop over a day and take charge of the case. McCulloch consented, tried the case and won it.

Relating the incident many years afterward he said: "The evidence was decidedly against my client, but the sympathies of the jurors were in his favor, and to my great satisfaction their verdict was 'Not guilty.' My fee was small, $10, but it was very acceptable in the low state of my finances."

This was McCulloch's first fee, and purely accidental, as he had not yet hung out his shingle and did not until he settled in Fort Wayne. He would have made a successful lawyer, but he only practiced in Fort Wayne about three years when he was appointed cashier and manager of the Fort Wayne branch of the State bank and the remainder of his career was exclusively financial. When he became controller of the currency, in 1863, and later secretary of the treasury, no person outside of Indiana knew he had ever ben a lawyer. Joseph L. Jernigan, who gave him his first employment and fee, practiced several years in this state and then removed to New York, where he achieved some success and made money.

One of Oliver P. Morton's earliest cases was before a country justice. Henry J. Jarboe, a well-to-do farmer, was his client and told the story many years later. "When I bought my farm in 1846," he said, "there was a mortgage on it to the school fund, and the man I bought it of did not tell me about this, but he said the title was clear. When my first note for the purchase money fell due, I wanted to deduct this mortgage from the $400 which was to pay, but the man who held my note would not let me do it. The case was tried at Jacksonburg, a small village a few miles west of Centerville, before Squire Beard. Morton hired a horse to come to the trial. The horse fell with him in the road and when he came to the 'squire's he was covered with mud. We tried the case and he won it and saved my money. When I went to Centerville afterward, I asked Oliver what he was going to charge me. He said: 'You have got some good winter apples in your orchard, bring me six or eight bushels.'"

ATE WELL CHEAPLY.

Many persons have heard of the man who came to New York and hated to leave without having eaten at Delmonico's. All he thought he could afford was a piece of pie, says a New York correspondent of the Indianapolis News. He went in, got that, paid the check and was able to say at home that he had dined at Delmonico's. In the same way visitors to New York often look longingly into the windows of Sherry's and Delmonico's without realizing that they could go in and get a meal without having it cost them as much as they fear. It is perfectly true that what one may spend in both of these places is almost without limit. It is, however, also possible to get a dinner in either of them for much less than is commonly supposed.

"I'll tell you my experience," said a woman who came down with her husband from Putnam county to see New York and had to do it on a limited capital, "and you will see from it that one may still go to see the swell restaurants in New York and not have to leave his overcoat behind him. When I left home I made up my mind that, poor as I was, I was not coming back until I had eaten in either Delmonico's or Sherry's, and, if possible, both. For years I've been asking my friends who came back to town if they had seen either of these places. All of them had talked about them beforehand, and if supposed, of course, they'd go there. All of them that I asked had ridden by and seen the outside only.

"I determined it would be different when I went down to see New York, and I told my husband that the money I had to pay our board with wasn't any more important than that I wanted to eat in those restaurants. I wanted to see the way things are done there, and before we left home he gave me a separate sum of money to be used only for that purpose. He didn't approve the plan at all, because, he thought nobody should go to such places unless they had money enough to act like all the others there. I knew I wouldn't get any more money for that purpose, so I decided to make the best of what I had and try to make it do for two places.

"My husband wasn't the only man in Sherry's without a dress suit when we got there, and I wasn't the only woman with a hat on, although there weren't many there like mine. There were two waiters to take our order, but one of them—he was a sort of head waiter—faded from sight when he began to see that we would not need more than one. I thought the waiter looked at me a little bit harder than was necessary while I was reading the bill of fare, but generally speaking he was very nice. They were all polite enough, for that matter.

"Perhaps he thought I was looking at the bill of fare too long. I was trying to figure out the cheapest dinner in the place, and I think I did it. The bill change every night, but they tell me that dishes at about the same figures are always to be had.

"Naturally, I skipped caviar at $1.50 a portion, but didn't mind that, as I don't like it, anyway. I took soup—cream of lettuce, with puffed crusts—which was the cheapest. It cost only 20 cents, while the others were 40 or 50. The soup was enough for two. Then I had for choice at 30 cents either smelts or bluefish. One portion was not enough and that course was expensive. The meat that we had was loin of veal stuffed with bread crumbs and flavored with herbs, and it wasn't bad. It cost only 50 cents, and one portion was enough for two. With that we had potatoes laurette, which was sliced and cooked in cream, for 25 cents. We passed up fresh asparagus at $1.50 a bunch and had lettuce at 30 cents and pie at a quarter each. There were new strawberries at $1.50.

"That was dinner enough for anybody, and we saw the place, had all the beautiful sweet butter we wanted and the good French bread, and it cost us only a little more than if we had gone to a table d'hote. The dinner for two cost $2.45 and we gave the waiter a quarter.

"We didn't have wine, as all the others seemed to be having, but I never had it, anyhow, and didn't miss it. When we got up and left there was nobody who looked as if they had enjoyed themselves more than we had. The waiters? I didn't care how they looked. We were there to enjoy ourselves and not to please them.

"I had $5 for that dinner fund, and as I had $2 left over, I decided to see if Delmonico's could not be included for that amount. So we went there.

"There we had puree of pea soup, which for the two of us cost 40 cents. The cheapest fish was 50 cents. For that we had a choice of haddock or frost fish. I didn't know what frost fish were, and had heard of haddock, so we took that. We were already 90 cents in after two courses, so I had to go prudently for the rest of the meal. I passed up the broiled young turkey for $2.50, therefore, and took roast mutton for 60 cents, which was the cheapest thing on the bill. There were potatoes for 30 cents, as usual, the cheapest of all the vegetables.

"I had a craving for something else beside potatoes, however, and decided to plunge on fried eggplant, which cost 10 cents more. The cheapest salad was 90 cents, so we cut that out and took plombiere chestnuts at 60 cents for ice cream. We dined in the big room on the corner, which was filled with people. This dinner amounted to $2.50 only.

"I've known plenty of people who came to New York with more money than we had who never got any nearer these two places than to pass by and look in the door. They lacked nerve. That was the trouble with them. I'll bet, moreover, that there are lots of people in this city who wouldn't dare go in either of those places just because they think they will have to spend too much or give the waiter too much. Each night we gave him a quarter. Say? He said nothing. As we came out of dinner the first night, I heard one of the waiters in a dress suit by the door say something about 'pikers.' I don't think he could have been talking about us, though. I didn't understand, anyhow, what he meant. What is a piker, anyhow?"

BUSINESS AT LUNCH.

New York's Noon Meal a Clearing Hour for Business.

One of the features of New York's business life that excites a great deal of comment from Europeans is the use we make of the lunch hour. Mixing commercialism with the midday meal has become such a commonplace affair with us that we give it little or no thought, but to the Englishman or Frenchman it is one of the very conspicuous American oddities, says the New York Herald.

"Leave lunch with me and we'll talk it over." Hundreds of times daily that message goes over the telephone in the busy metropolis. It has grown to be one of the stereotyped practices of our high tension business existence, and it is one of the many time-saving devices that the business delirium of the last decade has forced upon us. Europeans do not take business with their food and they cannot understand why we should do so.

Within the last two years many of the restaurants in the lower section of Manhattan have been entirely remodeled to conform to this new requirement, and all new places, especially in the financial district, are planned with particular attention to the convenience and privacy of these daily business luncheon parties. In fact, the practice has developed to such a point that many of the high class eating places down town are catering almost exclusively to this sort of patronage. The lines are being sharply drawn between these establishments, where regular customers meet for business talks, and the other sort, where man meet and eat as strangers. It is not at all unusual to find nearly all the tables reserved in one of the restaurants in the Wall street section half an hour before the noon crowd begins to come in.

There are many banking and brokerage concerns whose officers and clerks have the same tables the year round. In some of the larger restaurants private rooms are set apart for certain men or concerns and are never occupied at the noon hour by others except by consent of the regular patrons. Here in these rooms the heads of departments come together in comfortable mood, and over their roast and coffee find it easy to straighten out and adjust many affairs of the daily routine that would be very difficult of adjustment in the office. In the privacy of these little rooms many a big deal has been planned that turned the street topsy turvy a few days later. Men from other cities are frequently surprised with an invitation to settle over the luncheon cloth matters they regard of sufficient importance to be discussed only in the secluded private office of a skyscraper.

Experience, however, has taught Wall street men that danger may lurk in unguarded discussion of important financial transactions at the public tables. That is why so many tables are reserved in isolated corners of the place and why there is so great a demand for private rooms. Many times since the lunch hour clearing house became fashionable huge deals have fallen through and elaborately made plans have gone wrong through advance information someone picked up in these eating places. There are always eager ears wide open in the restaurants, the same as in every other corner where Wall street men talk of ways to make millions, and the stranger at an adjoining table may be the very chap who makes his living through traffic in "tips." He may be bolting his sweet potatoes and chops with apparent abstraction and energy, and at the same time he may be carefully noting every syllable that is spoken by his neighbors. Many a disaster in Wall street has been traced to just such cases.

But the luncheon clearing house is by no means confined to the financial district. Throughout Manhattan where there are large concerns and where men with big incomes are associated the restaurant with reserved tables and private rooms is found. There is one large publishing house in Central Manhattan that has worked out the business luncheon idea in minute detail. Each day at half after eleven "lunch bids" are exchanged among the departments. If the head of one department wishes to have a talk with two or three other heads he sends a slip of paper to them with the restaurant, table and hour marked upon it. This is the form of the bid: "Smith's, corner table, 12:30." If there is something he wishes to talk over with his own assistants or other employes of the concern the same style of bid is given. It is an established custom for the head of a department to pay the entire cost of the luncheon whenever he invites a subordinate to join him. With this concern the system is carried still further.

All matters developing during the day which are adapted to lunch time adjustment, and which cannot be settled at the moment, are noted on a slip and placed on a spindle for the lunch bids of the following day. These are labeled "lunch memo." Members of the firm say that the business of the concern is greatly simplified by this custom. They explain that many perplexing things come up daily, which if taken hold of during the pressure of office hours would almost certainly lead to friction and confusion, but if considered with greater deliberation and freedom over the luncheon straighten themselves out very satisfactorily.

Office hours among the men of large affairs in New York city are very short and business men from other cities often wonder why it is that New Yorkers can afford to give up so much of their time to luncheon. The luncheon clearing house is the explanation. It pays. Most of the office business of Manhattan is transacted below Fourteenth street, and all of the big clubs and hotels are north of that dividing line, hence the club, which is the rallying point in other large cities, is not available to the business man in New York. At the noon hour he cannot spare the time to go to his club uptown, so he meets his acquaintances at the restaurant. It is an occasion that has grown up since the residence section crept north of Fifty-ninth street and business conditions have made minutes more valuable than hours were a quarter of a century ago.

WHY MARK DIDN'T TALK.

Mark Twain in North American Review: A couple of days ago a gentleman called upon me with a message from the German emperor. The wording of the message to me was:

"Convey to Mr. Clemens my kindest regards. Ask him if he remembers that dinner, and ask him why he didn't do any talking."

Why how could I talk when he was talking? He "held the age," as the poker-clergy say, and two can't talk at the same time with good effect. It reminds me of the man who was reproached by a friend, who said:

"I think it a shame that you have not spoken to your wife for fifteen years. How do you explain it? How do you justify it?"

That poor man said:

"I didn't want to interrupt her."

If the emperor had been at my table, he would not have suffered from my silence, he would only have suffered from the sorrows of his own solitude. If I were not too old to travel I would go to Berlin and introduce the etiquette of my own table, which tallies with the etiquette observable at other royal tables. I would say: "Invite me again, your majesty, and give me a chance;" then I would courteously waive rank and do all the talking myself. I thank his majesty for his kind message, and am proud to have it and glad to express my sincere reciprocation of its sentiments.

RECALLS EDWIN BOOTH

Otis Skinner in Sunday Magazine: I never play in Boston to this day or pass up Brattle street, in Cambridge, by the old Craigie house, without recalling the wrath of Mrs. D. P. Bowers at Longfellow. I was a youth in Edwin Booth's company, and Mrs. Bowers was the leading woman. We were playing "Richlieu," and Longfellow had come over in Boston, and Longfellow had come over from Cambridge to see the performance.

After the second act he came behind to call on Booth, and the two retired to the star's dressing room. The call came for the third act; but Booth had not reappeared. We were all waiting impatiently in the wings. The audience was doubtless waiting with equal impatience on the other side of the curtain.

Mrs. Bowers swept up and down in robes of rustling magnificence. Still Booth did not appear. Then she asked me what had become of him.

Her Longfellow was with him in his dressing room. She drew herself up with all the wrath and majesty of a tragedy queen. "Longfellow, Longfellow! she said, with a scorn that words cannot reproduce nor the question mark convey. "Longfellows make long waits it seems!"

How many time had it been said of Booth, I wonder, that he was a gentleman in the true sense—a gentle man? I have seen him bullying a stage hand for some piece of blundering stupidity —as who of us have not done? But in the next five minutes I have seen him in effect penitently beg this man's pardon—as how few of us ever do! When I was first with him a special performance of "Othello" was to be given for some remedial association, and Frederick Robinson was to play the name part of his Iago. Robinson was a rather important sort of person; but the rehearsal went smoothly enough for a time, till suddenly he stopped, looking around him, and said authoritatively:

"Mr. Booth, when I have played Othello I've always had my Iago on the other side—here."

There was a deadly hush. We all expected an outburst of magnificent rage from the great star, a towering blank verse passion that would sweep this Robinson person away. But at the hush Booth moved quietly to the other side. There was not even a twinkle in his eyes. "Here, sir?" he asked humbly. "Quite contented sir. Thank you."

The hush was slowly dissolved in murmurs, then in speech. The rehearsal went on. And Robinson never knew!

ROMANCE OF AN INVENTION.

London Evening Standard: The late Joseph H. Gillott was the son of the man who invented the machine-made steel pen. While seeking his fortune at Birmingham, the latter became engaged to a Miss Mitchell, whose brothers were employed in making steel pens by hand.

Gillott realized that machinery could be devised to do the work, and he procured a press to stamp the blanks. Secretly developing his project, he eventually succeeded, with the result that the steel pen became an indispensable article of use all the world over, and he made a fortune.

On the day of his wedding he made a gross of steel pens before he went to the altar, and these were sold at 1 shilling each.

"HOW TO SUCCEED."

London Leader: Of a philanthropic nature and anxious to be able to give advice when it is asked for, perhaps more anxious still to give it when it is not asked for, or wanted, or likely to be followed, I have been "cramming" the words of wisdom on "success in life and how to insure it" that have been shot off at us at frequent intervals for some weeks past. It would be interesting to see exactly what a man would look like after a month or two if he tried to follow all the rules laid down.

Sir Alfred Jones says we ought to work twelve hours a day. Sir Clifton Robinson advises fourteen hours—personally I prefer twenty, but that is a detail. Sir Clifton Robinson believes in the sense of humor. The Ladies' Field says "No." "Ian Maclaren" will have none of it either, and swears by the young man who, if cursed with ill, does his best to stamp it out. Two "success experts" are in favor of teetotalism. Against these we have three who like "alcohol in moderation." Indeed, to be truly successful one must, according to most of these advisers, be strictly "moderate" in all things, excepting, of course, in one's daily dose of work.

A well-known man of business tells us not to smoke. Another, equally successful, tells us to "smoke a little." Leonard Hall, writing in the Rapid Review, says: "The chief of all causes of failure is fear." "Never let your spirits sink into the dust," and then adds, somewhat paradoxically, "Don't bother about your clothes." The late Mr. Whiteley attributed his success in a measure to his strength of mind in not working on Sundays. Some of us have strength of mind enough not to work on week days—and yet we don't succeed.

HUSBANDS AT PREMIUM.

London Express: Recently published statistics show that in the Swiss canton of Glarus there are three women to each of the 1,200 marriageable men in the district.

Seven hundred of the men are married, and 113 husbands are still in their teens. Three youths of 19 are widowers, and two of the same age are divorced.

One young man of 25 divorced two wives within three years, and is engaged to be married for the third time. Another youth of 22 has been married twice, and is now a widower.

THINGS IN FIGURES.

Chicago Chronicle: A mathematician in a scientific bureau of one of the departments at Washington has discovered that the number 142,857 is odd in more senses than one.

If we multiply it by any number from one to six we arrive at products expressed by exactly the same figures as the original. Not only so, but, with the exception that a different figure leads off each time, the order of the figures is the same.

142,857 multiplied by 1 is the same.
142,857 multiplied by 4 is 571,428.
142,857 multiplied by 5 is 714,285.
142,857 multiplied by 6 is 857,142.

With this multiplying by six the strangeness stops, though the result of multiplying the number by seven gives the rather odd number of 999,999.

THE GREATEST PROOF.

London Tattler: They were just coming out of Wyndham's theater after seeing a performance of that most laughable play, "When Knights Were Bold."

"Oh, George," sighed the romantic maid, "how I wish you were one of those old-time knights so that you could do something brave to show your love for me."

"What more do you want?" asked George. "Haven't I agreed to marry you, and me only getting $10 a week?"

A PAINFUL DISCOVERY.

Baltimore American: "The Upstarts seem to have suspended their interest in their family tree."

"Yes, they found a few of their ancestors hanging on some of the branches."

CORNER STONE OF THE NEW Y. M. C. A. BUILDING IS LAID AMID IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES

M. S. Rice Delivers Forceful Address to Big Crowd of Spectators.

"The Devil Take the Hindmost" is a Cruel Philosophy.

The corner stone of the new Y. M. C. A. building, being erected at the corner of Third avenue west and Second street, was laid this afternoon at 2:30. The ceremonies were most impressive and were attended by a large number of Duluthians interested in the new building.

Hon. John Miller conducted the ceremonies and the principal address of the afternoon was delivered by Rev. M. S. Rice of the First M. E. church. The Y. M. C. A. quartet sang two selections and there was a reading from scripture by Rev. Alexander Milne. Rev. Campbell Coyle offered a prayer. The state secretary of the Y. M. C. A., E. W. Peck of Minneapolis, was present and participated at the cornerstone laying.

building was begun a little over a year ago and the young men met with great success under the able direction of Phil Bevis, the general secretary of the local association. The movement for the new building met with the general support of nearly all Duluth citizens.

In the box which was placed with the cornerstone when it is laid this afternoon were the constitution and by-laws of the Y. M. C. A. articles of incorporation, list of present officers, historical sketch with list of presidents from time of organization, annual report for 1906, statement regarding Mr. Shuman and his work in Buenos Ayres, partially supported by the Duluth association, prospectus of central department, prospectus of boys' department, names of citizens and young men's committees which made canvas for new building fund, list of subscribers to new building, copy of Rev. M. S. Rice's address, copy of the daily papers, copy of list of association men and a Bible.

Dr. Rice's Address.

Rev. Rice's speech was as follows:

"I esteem it a very great honor to address to you a few words on this truly felicitous occasion. I do not arise to speak as an individual in any sense of the word. I accept this task only as an humble representative of a tremendous movement in the world, and stand here in its name, a movement, thank God, making itself every year more evident; one which has set for itself the task almost bewildering with bigness, of making this world righteous. The evolution of it's methods may be most evident, but the incentive of its work stands ever unchanged. The Young Men's Christian association stands as one of the new forms of its application. It is one of the "new bottles" which the Christian religion has provided under the inspiration of a long told story of a man who lost his wine for using old bottles. And the splendid structure soon to grace this corner and under the quivering shadows of whose steel skeleton rapidly shaping itself for life, we gather, is one of the evidences of the sense of this great movement for righteousness in applying

"I desire in a brief measure to stir you, every one of you, to the appreciation of the largeness of every such movement as this, and the sister movement just beyond. This world is out of joint; and every sane man knows this world is out of joint. Just what may be the cause of this unjointing is not mine here now to discuss; but it is very certain things have gone wrong somewhere. Men are recognizing as never before that three things are wrong. Our age is peculiarly enamored of the conviction, and enamored also of the belief that this is the age to solve the trouble. Hence a peculiar and indicative restlessness is manifesting itself. When once the powers of the world come to catch the real incentive in its task, it will recognize that in it is inspiration enough to drive us to our greatest effort. We need to catch the enthusiasm of our task so thoroughly that such enterprises as this will be the constant manifestation of every strategic point on earth. The only trouble with us, my friends, lies in the fact potent, that thus far we have been but playing at the serious business of religion. When once we arouse the talent and enthusiasm and courage of our world to the real issues that inhere in our business, we will sweep the world for God. We have logical right to expect the most absolute abandonment of men to such a task as this represents. This is a world of business today.

The Love of Money.

The love of money! Ah, how that magic phrase stirs the enthusiasm of a world, it gathers every force to its banners. It shapes men's lives, frames their architecture, moulds literature, makes and unmakes wars, creates heroes who know no fear and turn back for no difficulty. The love of money! It is whip and spur for our wonderful century, it drives men with a fierce hand. Is the love of Christ, the love of human salvation to appear in our day, paled before this giant motive, and prove too small a motive to inspire men in this day when so many ideas are being presented for the amelioration of mankind, men are being swept off their feet by all sorts of fantastic motives. Humanitarian sentiments, dreams of universal brotherhood, projects of solid reform, these may seem to gather quick force by professed independence or religion, and men there are who would strike the Christian out of this institution's name. Such unnatural zeal soon fails. For the coarse influence of the selfishness and materialism in it, win easy victory over every form of visionary altruism. Under the inspiration of the Christian sentiment which permeates this task, we learn to reverence our motive and understand the vacation of our race, and take up the complicated problems of human relationship, with a full appreciation of our task.

"An event like this is an encouragement to the struggle to redeem mankind. It is the evidence substantial of the abundant endowment of some consecrated to supplement the need of others. That's the hope of the world. There's hope in it here today. Powers capable of the task have leaped to the work. This is an index of what men can do when they set their hand to it; and the world has never yet been made to feel what men can do for the real sake of righteousness. There be some now doubtless listening here from what not an ounce of contribution to the real victory needed on earth has not been had. I call to you.

"The Devil Take the Hindmost."

"The devil take the hindmost' is a bit of sociological philosophy done in convenient proverb heard today. A sentiment this, creeping into the convictions of many, and into the actions of a multitude more, and the carelessness of a multitude more, shouts defiantly into our faces, 'Let him have them.' What's the use of a hindmost, anyhow? We don't need them. We waste energy on them. They eat valuable food. They wear warm clothing. Oh, yes, they make up number, but that is good only during census, and our interest in them ceases when we have counted them. Make up number! The most melancholy compliment ever paid to any many. Number! Is any man here for that? These do not build our cities, lay our commerce, plan our triumphs. What is the use? Oh, the sorrow of the hindmost. The awful picture of Napoleon's painful retreat from Moscow, with its spectral marks in the snow, where stragglers were slaughtered by Cossacks, leaps to our minds. That's one philosophy of our lives. 'The devil take the hindmost!' No! Every man for every other man, and there will be no hindmost for the devil to take. That is the philosophy of this period; that is the genius of Christianity; that is the sentiment we must catch. When we once get it we will have hold of a dynamic big enough to use at so big a job as we face. This is the call of the world today. It would lend of the extra strength which has made a foremost possible to compensate the falling strength which has made a hindmost imperative, and together they both win. 'For their sakes I sanctify myself' were the words of our Lord Jesus Christ. God means for that principle to win. Man as a whole has sufficient energy to unitedly bring success to all. The superabundance of ability in some, and the handicap in others, can be made to unite in hope for all.

A Wider Horizon.

Goethe once said, "The man who really has life in him, feels himself to be here for his own sake, not for the public.' It was one of Goethe's not rare heathen spots. It has been repeated a thousand times. Personal issues must be swallowed up in a sense of something better. Every man must stand inclosed in a farther flung horizon than that of his own little soul. We must have the sense of an overpowering moral indebtedness—an indebtedness rooted in the vaster relations of our being. It is the feeling that actually life is holding beggared hands to us for contributions. To you, sir! Even You! You are here to add something to the world's assets. The beauty of obligation that springs from our lives when building Young Men's Christian association buildings, and all kindred structures, convinces that we have caught the breath at least of our larger selves. Sirs, we have here caught at our high obligation. This splendid contribution, to stand here as a monument to your enthusiastic liberality, as has been so often said, 'leaps yet far beyond that.' It stands for large things. All humanity has claim on each of us. We can not shake it off.

"No man liveth to himself,' and God means that the real conviction of that shall work itself out in the expression, 'to whom do I then live?' And here we strive to express it. Lift your heads and listen. Ye hosts busy at our commerce! Stop your ships, stop your mines, stop your trains, stop your mills. Stop and catch the true ambition for this world to carry into your daily labor. We are here assembled to rejoice that we live to a far greater business than ourselves. Our work, whatever it be, will fail of sanctity unless it be done in thought, that in every department we are apprenticed to the best, in the service of all.

Progress Is Thrilling.

"The world has done well in progress thus far. It thrills me and inspires me to just go back and march up with the ages through the wonderful pages of history. I make the trip often for my own encouragement. Sometimes the ranks stagger. Sometimes they well nigh halt. Sometimes they break and retreat, but they always come on again. The tramp of the world inspires me, but it is strange how much we have progressed at the price of the weak. On the millions of the unknown, on whose crushed ashes the world has climbed up today. But we stride at a new day, a day expressed in such institutions as this. There are so many times when we are blinded by tears, and sickened at the misery of the world. It is so packed and crammed with tragedy. So many, many are behind. There come times to me when the sins of men come so heavily that the reform of the world seems a thankless task. 'My God,' I cry, 'what a task is this. Pity! Oh Pity!' these poor feeble hands and this little heart and head of mine, these crowding hosts to be reached. Then I lift my eyes from my own little strength. look upon the task under the example of our Christ, and feel the impulse of God's own personal interest. And I crowd up close to an event like this, for here men give evidence that they are girding themselves anew for work. And I take courage. God help every one of us to leap to our places, and accept here our responsibility. The battle is on in earnest. New fields here open for conquest. You! You are in reach of heroism. Come with all your strength, and add it here. Lose yourself in the splendid service. Have you forgotten the story of that soldier who was carried from the field to the hospital, during the battle when the regiment charged the city, the nurses gathered around him, and seeing the dangers of his wounds, asked: 'Where are you wounded my good boy?' 'Oh, at the top of the wall yonder,' and his face shone with that enthusiasm of the battle yet upon him. 'Yes, yes,' said they, 'but where were you struck?' 'Oh, at the top of the wall, believe me, at the very top, one second more and I would have been over,' and he fell back dead.

"I like that, such unselfish service as actually loses itself in its task. God grant us such here. We take advance ground today, we need heroism to hold it. But we must have a heroism that will not only hold it, but will use it to greater things. May there ever flow out upon this community, from this building, the evidence of a real conviction, girding our hearts and driving our efforts—evidence that we are really awake to our greatest task, and consecrated to the service of men for Christ's sake."

MASKED INDIANIANS USE THE WHIP ON PRISONER.

Bloomington, Ind., May 16.—Five masked men early today at Ellettsville, this county, bound and gagged the town marshal, took from him the jail keys and secured the only prisoner, Oscar Morris, whom they dragged to a tree and whipped severely. Morris is the son of a highly respected citizen and was caught recently in a dice game, put to work on the street to pay a fine, broke loose and was recaptured.

CAMPBELL WILL GO EAST.

Fourth Vice President of Great Northern Resigns to Join Mellen.

St. Paul, May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Benjamin Campbell, fourth vice president of the Great Northern Railway company, tendered his resignation to President L. W. Hill today, and with it made a statement that he had accepted the office of the vice presidency of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, tendered by President Mellen of that road, as announced last night.

The resignation of Mr. Campbell becomes effective at once. The appointment and resignation were two surprises for President Hill of the Great Northern, and he was not prepared to announce today who would succeed to the vacancy.

LIFE TICKET FOR PRESIDENT

Roosevelt Gets Gold Card of Admission to All Ball Games.

Washington, May 16.—President Roosevelt was today presented with a solid gold folding card, conferring upon him life membership in the National Association of Professional Baseball leagues, with the privilege of admission to all the games played by the clubs composing the association. The card is of the regulation baseball ticket size, and has on it the president's photograph, engraved in enameled gold, the date and the name of as many cities as there was room for. P. T. Powers, president of the association, introduced J. H. Farrell, the secretary, who made the presidential speech.

In accepting the card, the president expressed his warm thanks and said that the game always had his good wishes, as had every other outdoor sport.

EMBROIDERED SPATS.

New York Press: Washington has to answer for many fads this season, but none of them so prone to foppishness as the decoration of pumps with embroidery and precious stones. It almost seems as if we are to have a return of the cavalier dandies. Blue and gray dress suits are reported, but fast London has gone in this direction, it cannot compare with the Washington innovation which already has become so popular that the embroidered pumps of the men find their duplicate in embroidered spats for women. The embroidered pump made its entrance at a dance the other night in the Austro-Hungarian embassy. One exceeding gallant, and it might be added, gracious officer, resplendent in gold lace, dotted his embroidery with smoked pearls, and still another was frank in the adornment of seed pearls. Both exhibits almost made the observer sniff for delicate scents. The embroidered spat finds no objection for women, because we expect such things of the fair sex. Mme. Amaral, wife of the secretary to the Brazilian embassy, was the first to delight the femine half of Washington with a pair. That was two weeks ago. Now she has a pair to match each of her afternoon gowns.

WEST DULUTH

READY FOR THE WAGON

Repairs to West Duluth Police Station Are Completed.

Business Men Want Mounted Policeman for West Duluth.

The repairs to the West Duluth police headquarters are now nearly completed, and the place presents an entirely changed appearance. Hardwood floors, repainted woodwork and repapered walls have worked a transformation, and given the officers much more pleasant quarters. The door opening on the street from the stable portion of the building has been enlarged to accommodate the new patrol wagon, and the West Duluthians are now ready to receive it. The wagon to be turned over to West Duluth is now at the Duluth headquarters, and will be delivered at the West Duluth station in a day or two. The wagon will be a big aid to the West Duluth police, for they have been working under a handicap formerly. If they secured a prisoner in the lower end of the town, they were compelled to walk him or take a car for a long distance, subjecting the man and the case to undestrable publicity. The police will also be able to respond to calls more quickly and more satisfactory service can be given in every way.

Some West Duluth citizens are thinking of making an effort to secure a mounted policeman for this end of the city. They contend that, although the town is covered as well as possible for Lieut. Briggs' limited force, there is room for improvement and additions to the force would accomplish the desired result. Some West Duluth citizens would prefer to have that addition in the shape of a mounted policeman, as he could secure better results than several patrolmen.

"I think the Commercial club should take up the matter and endeavor to secure a mounted man from Chief Troyer," said a business man this morning. "Lieut. Briggs' present force does as well as it can, but West Duluth is a large territory for a few men to cover, and there are outlying districts which are given inadequate police protection. A mounted man, who would have a regular beat, and be kept on it constantly during the day, could patrol those districts much better than officers on foot, and the districts now unprotected could be policed thoroughly at a minimum expense."

UNITED IN MARRIAGE.

Two West Duluth Couples Are Joined in Matrimony.

This morning at St. James church, Miss Lillian Foucault and John Keller were united in marriage by Rev. Father Lynch, in the presence of a large number of friends. The first performance of two to be given by the Imperial Minstrels will be given at Great Eastern hall tonight for the benefit of St. James' church. Tomorrow evening the performance will be repeated for the Irving School Alumni association.

DOGS KNOW MUSIC TONES.

Chicago Chronicle: The capacity of dogs to distinguish musical tones has been made the subject of elaborate experiments by Dr. Otto Kalischer of Berlin and the results have just been published in the proceedings of the Berlin Academy of Sciences. Dr. Kalischer trained his dogs to pick up and eat morsels of meat set before them only when a certain note was sounded.

This he called the "feed tone." All the other notes in the scale, which he called "prohibition tones," were signals that the food in front of them was not to be touched.

He began his course of training with a set of pipes of nine notes covering the diatonic scale. When he had taught the dogs all the notes in this he progressed to the piano and harmonium and soon found that the animals were able to distinguish semitones without error.

The method of procedure was simple. He had a long note sounded and throughout its duration he gave the dog he was training bits of meat.

After two or three days, when the dog was thoroughly accustomed to this, he had another tone sounded, one of the "prohibition tones," and during that he held meat before the dog, but prevented him from tasting it, making gestures to show that it was forbidden.

The lessons were given daily, each lasting about five minutes. He found that many dogs caught on in five or six lessons, making no attempt to touch the meat during the continuance of the prohibition tone, but snapping it up eagerly when the "feed note" was sounded.

The other notes were quickly added as "prohibition tones," and, oddly enough, when he decided to change the "feed tone" a majority of dogs detected the change and accommodated themselves to it with ease.

It was proved by the experiments that all dogs have a very acute perception of music tone. They could not only distinguish the "feed tone" from the half tone above and below it, but they caught it when sounded in a chord with other notes. Finally, after long training, they showed ability to pick it out amid a jangle of discordant notes in which even the ear of a trained musician failed to detect whether it was sounding or not.

ONE KIND OF A MAN.

New York Tribune: At a dinner in Newport, Rear Admiral Evans spoke with scorn of a young man who had married an old woman for her money.

"That chap calls himself a man, I suppose," said the great sea fighter, "but there are various definitions of the word man, and I would fit our friend is the Peebles one.

"A Scot of Peebles said to his friend MacAndrew.

"'Mac, I hear ye have fallen in love wi' bonny Kate McAlister.'

"'Well, Sanders,' Mac replied, 'I was near—verra near—daein' it; but the bit lassie had nae siller, so I said to myself,' 'Mac, be a mon.' And I was a mon, and noo I pass her wi' silent contempt.'"

IN NEED OF A PILOT.

Harper's Weekly: Practicing before the federal court for the Southern district of New York are two classes of attorneys who busy themselves respectively with bankruptcy and admiralty, two widely divergent branches of the law.

A noted admiralty practitioner appeared before Judge Hough to argue a motion for the discharge of a bankrupt.

"It seems strange," said the judge, "to see a maritime lawyer representing a bankrupt."

"Not at all," replied the witty advocate; "if your honor will glance over the record in this case you will find that so far as his finances are concerned my client is entirely at sea."

What Retail Markets Offer.

Apples, 50 cents a peck.
Egg plant, 25 cents each.
Cucumbers, 15 and 20 cents each.
Strawberries, 20 cents a box.
Fish.
Veal cutlets, 15 cents a lb.

The fish in the market is of a very good kind and probably nothing will taste any better if they are cooked crisp and brown and served with some expensive, thinly sliced cucumbers, which have carefully been dressed in a French covering. After Lent a housewife is likely to avoid fish for a time and those who have been thus guilty may with safety return to this delicacy and be assured that the table will extend a hearty welcome. The market for Friday will be especially nice in this line.

Rhubarb in various guises is as nice as anything and it is rather a shame that the majority of the households neglect that tart fruit or vegetable, whichever it it. A really good rhubarb pie would be nice. But to the limited knowledge of the market page, there never has been a really good rhubarb pie, and it is not quite understood how there ever could be.

HOW THE CHILDREN WERE REFORMED

By Eleanor H. Porter.

(Copyright, 1907, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Tom was 18 and was spending the long summer days behind a village store counter—Tom hoped to go to college in the fall.

Carrie was 15; the long days found her oftenest down by the brook, reading—Carrie was a bit romantic, and the book was usually poetry.

Egbert and Rosamond, the twins—known to all their world as "Rob" and "Rose"—were 8; existence for them meant play, food and sleep. It was summer now—summer, and the two filled the hours with rollicking games and gleeful shouts—and incidentally their mother's workbasket with numerous torn pinafores and trousers.

Behind everything, above everything and beneath everything, with all-powerful and an all-wise brain, was mother. There was father, of course; but father could not cook the meals, sweep the rooms, sew on buttons, find lost pencils, bathe bumped foreheads, and do countless other things. So thought Tom, Carrie and the twins that dreadful morning when father came dolefully downstairs and said that mother was sick.

Mother sick! Tom stared blankly at the sugar bowl, Carrie fell limply into the nearest chair and the twins began to cry softly.

The next thirty-six hours were never forgotten by the Dudleys. The cool work in the woods was deserted, and Carrie spent a hot, discouraged morning in the kitchen—sole mistress where before she had been an all too seldom helper. At noon Mr. Dudley and Tom came home to partake of undone potatoes and overdone beef. At night, after a supper of soggy rolls and burnt omelet, Mr. Dudley sent an appealing telegram to "Cousin Helen," and the next afternoon at 5 she came.

Miss Helen Mortimer was pretty, sweet-tempered, and 25. The entire family fell captive to her first smile. There was a world of comfort and relief in her very presence, and in the way she said cheerfully:

"We shall do very well, I am sure; Carrie can attend to her mother, and I will take the helm downstairs."

The doctor had said that rest and quiet was what Mrs. Dudley most needed, so Carrie's task would be comparatively light; and with a stout woman to come twice a week for the heavy work downstairs, the household gave promise of being once more on a living basis.

It was at breakfast the next morning that the first cloud appeared on Miss Mortimer's horizon. It came in the shape of the crisply-fried potatoes she was serving. The four children were eating late after their father had left.

"Oh, Cousin Helen," began Tom, in an annoyed manner, "I forgot to tell you; I don't like fried potatoes. I'll have baked ones."

"Baked ones?"

"Yes; mother always baked them for me."

"Oh, that's too bad; you can't eat them, then—they hurt you!"

Tom laughed.

"Hurt me? Not a bit of it! I don't like them, that's all. Never mind; you can do it tomorrow."

When "tomorrow" came Miss Mortimer had not forgotten. The big round dish was heaped with potatoes baked to a turn.

"Thank you, I'll take the fried," said Carrie, as the dish was passed to her.

"The f-fried?" stammered Miss Mortimer.

"Yes; I prefer those."

"But there are no fried. I baked them."

"Why, how funny!" laughed Carrie. "I thought we had it all fixed yesterday. I thought we were to have both fried and baked. Mother always did, you know. You see, we don't like them the same way. Never mind," she added with a beaming smile, quite misunderstanding the look on her cousin's face, "it doesn't matter a bit and you mustn't feel so bad. It'll be all right tomorrow, I'm sure."

"Yes, and I want buckwheat cakes, please," piped up Bob.

"All right, you shall have them," agreed Cousin Helen with a smile.

Tom laughed.

"Maybe you don't quite know what you're getting into, Cousin Helen," he suggested. "If you make buckwheat cakes for Rob—it means graham muffins for Rose."

"And she shall have them; the very next morning, too."

"Oh, no—that will not do. She demands them the same day."

"What!"

"Oh, I thought you didn't understand," chuckled Tom. "When you make one, you have to make both. Mother always did—she had to; 'twas the only way she could suit both the twins, and I don't believe you'll find any other way out of it. As for us—we don't mind; we eat them all!"

"Oh!" said Cousin Helen, faintly.

"And another thing," resumed Tom, "we might as well settle the drink question right away—of course you'll want to know. Father is the only one who drinks cereal coffee. We (Carrie and I) like the real thing, every time; and the twins have cocoa—weak, of course, so there's not much to it."

This was but the beginning. Bread, rolls, pastry, meat, vegetables—each had its own particular story, backed always by that ever-silencing "mother did," until Miss Mortimer was almost in despair.

"Mother did"—"mother did"—"mother did." Miss Mortimer would murmur wearily to herself each day, until she came to think of the tired little woman upstairs as "Mother Did" instead of "Aunt Maria." "No wonder Mother Did fell ill," she thought bitterly. "Who wouldn't!"

The weeks passed, as weeks will—even the dreariest of them—and the day came for Cousin Helen to go home. Mrs. Dudley being now quite her old self. Loud were the regrets at her departure, and overwhelming were the thanks and blessings showered in loving profusion; but it was two weeks later, when Tom, Carrie and the twins each sent her a birthday present, that an idea came to Miss Mortimer. She determined at once to carry it out, even though the process might cause her some heartache.

Thus it came about that Tom, Carrie, Rob and Rose each received a letter (together with the gift each had sent) almost by return mail.

Tom's ran:

"My Dear Cousin: Thank you very much for the novel you sent me, but I am going to ask you to change it for a book of travels. I like that kind better, and mother and all my friends give me travels whenever they want to please me. I might as well have something I want as something different, I suppose, so I am asking you to change. Very lovingly,

"YOUR COUSIN HELEN."

Carrie read this:

"My Dear Carrie: Thank you for the pretty little turnover collar and cuffs you sent me for my birthday; but I think it so funny you never noticed that I don't care for pink. Mother found it out even when I was but little more than a baby. Oh, I can wear it, but I don't care for it. Don't feel badly, however, my dear Carrie; all you've got to do is just take these back and make me some blue ones, and I know you won't mind doing that. Lovingly,

"COUSIN HELEN."

Rob and Rose received their presents back with letters written in the same vein.

After a dazed five minutes of letter-reading, the four children hurried to the attic—always their refuge for a conference. There they read the four letters aloud, one after another. A dumbfounded silence followed the last word. Rose was the first to break it.

"I think she's a mean old thing—so there!" Rose was almost crying.

"Hush, dear, hush!" croaked Carrie. "She isn't mean; she's good and kind—we know she is. She—she means something by it; she must. Let's read them again."

Bit by bit they went over the letters. It was at the third mention of "mother" that Tom raised his head with a jerk. He looked sheepishly into Carrie's face.

"I—I guess I know," he said with a shamefaced laugh.

It must have been a month later that Miss Mortimer received a letter from Mrs. Dudley. One paragraph sent a quick wave of color to the reader's face; and this was the paragraph:

"I am feeling better than for a long time. Someway, the work doesn't seem nearly so hard as it used to. Perhaps it is because I am stronger, or perhaps it is because the children are not nearly so particular about their food as they used to be. I am so glad, for it worried me sometimes—they were so very fussy. I wondered how they would get along out in the world where mother couldn't fix everything to their mind. Perhaps you noticed it when you were here. At any rate they are lots better now. Perhaps they have outgrown it. I hope so. I'm sure."

DINKEY SELECTED

For President of the Steel Corporation If Vacancy Occurs.

Pittsburg, May 16.—A significant statement was given out by Vice President H. P. Rope of the Carnegie Steel company, of which Alva H. Dinkey is president. Mr. Rope said he did not think President Corey would retire from the head of the steel corporation at the present time, but admitted that if he did, Dinkey would be the logical successor and he thought the Pittsburg man would make a good president. The fact that both Dinkey and Cary were at the wedding is viewed with great interest here.

It seemed as though Pittsburg had just waked up to the Corey wedding and inner that Tom raised his head with a dignation knew no bounds. Nothing else was talked of save the wedding. The steel company made an effort to "disinfect" the wedding aftermath by issuing "official" pictures of the bride in long skirts asking that they be published in the local newspapers with the compliments of the new Mrs. Corey. Only one of the four Pittsburg evening papers reproduced the picture, others choosing to portray Mabelle in stage garb.

OPENING OF PUBLIC LANDS

Fixed for July 1 at Duluth, Cass Lake and Crookston.

Washington, May 16.—Official instructions to registers and receivers of the Minnesota land offices for the last big opening of public lands to homestead entry were issued yesterday from the government printing office.

The opening will take place at Cass Lake, Crookston and Duluth on July 1 at 9 o'clock when 229,207 acres of agricultural lands will be thrown open to the homestead settlement. The lands are in Itasca, Beltrami, Cass, Hubbard and Red Lake counties. They are not subject to provisions of the free homes act, known as the Eddy bill of 1900, for the reason that the tracts were not opened or surveyed prior to passage of said act, hence each settler is required to pay $1.25 for each acre in five equal annual installments, to be paid at the end of the first, second, third, fourth and fifth years respectively from date of entry.

Under the act of March 1, 1907, entrymen were also required to pay in addition to the fees and charges a pro rata charge for examinntion and investigation of said lands. The amount of these charges cannot now be determined. As soon as the charges are fixed officers will be fully advised in regard thereto and also instructed in regard to the issuance of receipts upon payment thereof.

All persons who go upon any of the lands from which timber has been cut and removed are, under the act of June 27, 1902, some of which are described in the schedule of lands to be opened, or upon any of the other ceded Chippewa lands described in the schedule with a view to settlement thereon prior to the hour the lands are formally opened to settlement and entry as above set out will be considered and dealt with as trespassers.

TOWNSITE AT GILBERT

Eveleth Men to Plat Town Near the Gilbert Workings.

Trouble Between City and Missabe Mountain Reaching Settlement.

Eveleth, Minn., May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The rumor that has persistently circulated for some time that a new town site is to be platted at or near Gilbert mine was verified today by local parties interested in the move. It is understood that a number of men, of whom several reside in this city, have negotiated for a considerable tract of land in the most favorable location possible, just northwest of the Gilbert workings. A town in this location should grow to considerable size as it will be in close proximity to several mines, among which are the Pettit, Mariska, Hobart, La Belle, Corsica, Elba, Sparta, Malta and Genoa properties. No further details have been given out as yet, but it is expected that something will be doing in the near future.

The committee from the city council, having in charge the matter of settling the trouble between the city of Eveleth and the town board of Missabe Mountain township over the amount each shall pay, for a sewer which was jointly constructed, has recommended that the city pay $880 as its share of the improvement. It is not known whether this basis of settlement will be acceptable to the township officials, but it is thought that the trouble may be in a fair way to settlement.

As some of the monuments have been destroyed, it was decided to have the center line of Grant avenue reestablished and this will be done by Engineer H. E. Loye of the Adams-Spruce mines.

The manager of the baseball team and other officials of the club asked the council to appropriate money to improve the park. Owing to the absence of the mayor, the president of the council and the city attorney, no action was taken on this request.

The students of the Eveleth high school have organized a baseball team with Anthony Pryor as captain and Milton Hosking as manager. The boys are out practicing whenever the weather is suitable and games are desired with highschool teams from the range towns. The tentative line-up of the team is as follows: Ed Anderson, first base; Anthony Pryor, second base; Louis Andrews, third base; Curtis Bent, shortstop; Bert Helstrum, center field; Charles Wohlman, left field; Feldman, Stevens and Hosking, batteries.

CLOSE EARLY AT VIRGINIA

All Stores in the City Now Close at 6:30 P. M.

Virginia, Minn., May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Tuesday was the day set by the Virginia Retail Clerks' association for the closing of stores at 6:30 o'clock p. m. Not only the stores that signed the agreement to close, but all stores in the city observed the rule that evening and have adhered to it ever since. The clerks on Tuesday distributed circulars asking the hungry public not to patronize those stores that remained open nights and Sundays, but their attempted boycott of such places was forestalled by the action of the proprietors in closing their places at the hour fixed upon.

A recital by the piano pupils of Miss Eva Metcalfe of this city, will be held tomorrow evening at the town hall in Biwabik, where she has been teaching a large class for a year past.

CONTRACTS AT COLERAINE.

Ducey & Co. of Duluth to Erect Trestle for Oliver Company.

Coleraine, Minn., May 16.—Ducey & Co., of Duluth, have the contract for erecting a large trestle near the washing plant of the Oliver Iron Mining company. When completed the trestle will be about 500 feet long and 100 feet high and will be used for unloading cars of dirt from the stripping operations of the Canisteo and Walker pits.

Fairbanks, Morse & Co., of St. Paul, have the contract for installing the electric light plant in the John C. Greenway school. They expect to get the work completed in time for the dedication services which will occur on May 31, when Governor Johnson will speak.

Several hundred thousand dollars will be expended in buildings here within the next twelve months. The offices of the Oliver Iron Mining company will cost $30,000. The dormitories for the unmarried employes of the company will cost $12,000. Dwellings which will be erected and which are in the course of erection by the mining company will cost about $90,000. Fourteen brick business buildings will cost about $112,000.

TALKS ON GOOD ROADS.

George W. Cooley Delivers an Interesting Address at Hibbing.

Hibbing, Minn., May 16.—At a meeting of the Hibbing Good Roads association, George W. Cooley, executive officer of the state highway commission, said that the system of road building now in vogue is a disgrace to the country. "Two fundamental principles," said Mr. Cooley, "that should invariably govern road building are that the soil should be thoroughly drained first and that a solid foundation should then be laid. It is not the water that falls on a road that hurts it, but the water that remains permanently in the roadbed." The speaker said that the state of Minnesota in the last fifty years has spent $75,000,000 on roads, and they are but little better today than they were half a century ago. Mr. Cooley declared that the system of road building practiced in Europe is by far the best. There the governments have entire supervision over it, conducted on a business basis by men who have been trained for the work, and that as a result the roads of Europe are models.

Following the address a general discussion was held by those present, and the suggestions of Mr. Cooley given sincere consideration. Mr. Cooley left this morning for Carlton, where he will address the Carlton Commercial club.

M'ARTHUR ACQUITTED

On Charge of Assaulting Oscar Bay With a Pitchfork.

Hibbing, Minn., May 16.—George T. McArthur was acquitted yesterday in municipal court of the charge of assaulting Oscar Bay with a pitchfork. Bay, it is claimed, held a mortgage on some horses and livery rigs owned by McArthur. McArthur alleged that he went to Bay on the night before the mortgage accrued, and offered to settle. He claims Bay refused to accept the money and that on the following morning, he came to his barn, to get the horses and rigs. McArthur claimed that Bay threatened him, before he attacked him. The jury was out but a few minutes.

POLITICS ESCHEWED

Viking Club is No Longer a Republican Organization.

Will be Made a Social Club for All Norwegians.

It's no longer the Viking Republican club, but just the Viking club, and any good Norwegian of reputable character is entitled to membership whether he be a Republican, Democrat, Socialist, Union Labor man, Catholic, Protestant, Free Thinker or Christian Scientist.

Politics and religions will be eschewed by the club members in the future, and the object of the club will be merely to promote good fellowship and good citizenship.

"Any Norwegian can join now, unless he be an anarchist," said one of the officers this morning. "We have done away with the political features entirely, except in so far as good citizenship is concerned.

"The Swedish people in Duluth have a strong social club here, the Svea club, and there is a demand for just such a society among the Norwegians.

"We will have club rooms in the near future.

This decision was reached at a meeting held last evening at Kalamazoo hall. The club also appointed a committee to make arrangements for the second anniversary celebration of the separation of Sweden and Norway, which will be held on June 7. The following committee was appointed to take charge of the arrangements: G. H. Huseby, K. L. Fenny, I. N. Sveen, A. Thompson, J. C. Wesenberg and M. Steen.

The present officers of the club are: H. B. Knudsen, president; K. L. Fenney, vice president; J. C. Wesenberg, secretary; G. H. Huseby, treasurer.

MARINE NEWS

SITUATION IS SERIOUS

Over Forty Vessels Blocked by Ice in Thunder Bay.

Determined Effort Will be Made to Free Wheat Carriers.

Fort William, May 16.—With twenty vessels tied up in the harbor and from ten to fifteen on the edge of the ice field in Lake Superior waiting to get in the situation here is serious. The ice is piling up to a great height and it is now almost impossible for steamers to get through.

The steamer W. D. Matthews, in attempting to leave the harbor, was shoved aground by the ice, but was later released by tugs and brought back to port. The steamer John Plankinton, coming light from Port Arthur, was also forced aground near the harbor mouth. Two tugs are now trying to release her. She is not believed to be damaged. The steamers Minch, Manitoba and Huronic, which have been off this port since Monday, were brought in yesterday by the ice breaker Whalen.

A determined attempt to lift the embargo will be made tomorrow morning, when a fleet of steamers, headed by the ice breaker will leave port and attempt to reach the lake. All are loaded with wheat cargoes consigned to lower lake points.

DECIDE OLD LIBEL SUITS.

Those Resulting From Collision Five Years Ago Are Settled.

Buffalo, May 16.—Three libel suits resulting from a three-cornered collision in St. Mary's river June 10, 1902, in which the steamers Strong and Sitka and barge Commodore came together, have been settled by Sidney W. Pettie as special master. The Strong Transportation company, owner of the Strong, wins the suit against the Gilchrist Transportation company, which owns the Sitka and receives $8,772 damages. The suit of the Gilchrist company against the Strong and Commodore is dismissed. As between the Sitka and Commodore, the latter owners by Knud Pederson, both were found at fault and were ordered to pay half of the damages to each boat, amounting to $2,769.

GOVERNMENT REGULATION.

Several Narrow Escapes at Lime Kilns Shows Necessity.

Detroit, May 16.—The urgent necessity of government regulation of shipping at the Lime Kilns, has been shown by several narrow escapes at that point during the past few days. These have been caused by vessel masters who have disregarded the request of the authorities that up-bound craft make use of the eastern channel. Arrangements have been made to have any further violations of the rule reported to President Livingstone of the Lake Carriers' association. Efforts are being made to have the government take charge of the movement of boats. The delay in having a patrol boat stationed at the Lime Kilns is said to be due to the necessity of having all interested parties agree on the necessary regulations, which will then have to be appointed by the Canadian and United States authorities.

Big Rent in Steamer's Bow.

Amherstburg, May 16.—The divers working on the sunken steamer Whitaker report that the rent in the side of the boat caused by the bow of the Gault is over fifty feet long and ten feet wide. It will be two or three days before the steamer can be patched up and pumped out. The damaged cargo of corn was today sold by the underwriters' agent to the Brantford Starch company of Brantford, Ont.

Freighthandlers Walk Out.

Cleveland, May 16.—The freight handlers on the docks of the Detroit & Cleveland line struck yesterday for more wages. The men have been getting 16½ cents an hour and they want 20 cents. Officials of the line will talk the matter over with the men today, and it is probable an advance will be granted.

Direct Wire for Cleveland.

The Western Union Telegraph company has this year established a direct wire from Cleveland to Duluth for the lake marine business. As Cleveland is the central headquarters for nearly all of the central headquarters companies, the innovation of the telegraph company will be a welcome one to Duluth vessel agencies.

Returns From Porto Rico.

A letter has been received by Capt. Ray T. Lewis from Maj. Charles L. Potter, former United States engineer at Duluth, who is now in charge of the Third lighthouse district as chief engineer. His headquarters is at Tompkinsville, Staten Island, and the district is the largest in this country. Porto Rico is included in his district and Maj. Potter has just returned from a trip to that island.

Big Tug's Trial Trip.

A trial trip will be made this afternoon by the tug Moose, just completed at Superior for Whitney Bros. She is the most powerful tug at the Head of the Lakes and has been building since last year. She will leave on her trial trip with Frank Moore in command, and will steam about the bay.

Tug Favorite in Commission.

Buffalo, May 16.—The new steel wrecking tug Favorite, built for the Great Lakes Towing company left port this morning for her station at St. Ignace. A number of prominent vesselmen from Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo will leave on board the new craft, stopping at one of the Lake Erie ports. The Favorite will be commanded by Capt. Alexander Cummings.

Will Decide Responsibility.

The courts will probably be agreed upon to decide who was to blame for the collision between the Byron Whittaker and the John C. Gault, which resulted in the sinking of the former with her corn cargo in twenty-three feet of water 300 feet below the head of Bois Blanc island, on Sunday night. The cargo, consisting of 60,000 bushels of corn, is entirely under water. The contract for raising the Whittaker has already been let.

Shoal Spot Dredged.

The shoal spot of eighteen feet four inches at the inner end of the north pier in the Duluth harbor, which caused the grounding of two vessels several weeks ago while they were leaving the Northwestern Coal dock after coaling up, has been dreged out by the government authorities. The steamer B. Lyman Smith was aground on the shoal for several hours about three weeks ago and the steamer P. P. Miller also struck the shoal.

MANY ORE BOATS HERE

Have Been Bunched at Duluth for Several Days.

Steamer Charles Hebard Sustains Minor Accident After Leaving Port.

Ore carriers have been pretty well bunched at the Head of the Lakes since the first of the week. The storm of Monday and Tuesday delayed the work of loading at the ore docks and consequently quite a fleet of boats are now in the harbor, although yesterday and today the departures have been more frequent.

Pittsburg boats have been in the harbor this week in good numbers, but are now beginning to thin out. About the usual number of coal carriers have come into port since the first of the week and the docks are gradually getting their summer supply of fuel. Conditions have been excellent for the past two days for loading and unloading the boats.

After the steamer Charles Hebard had left the harbor and steamed three or four miles down the lake one of her eccentric rods broke and she had to whistle for a tug to come to her assistance. A tug took the broken part to the shipyard at Superior where it was mended, and this morning it was placed on the steamer. The Hebard remained outside the harbor all night and departed this afternoon with her ore cargo.

Early this morning the steamer Panay went aground while entering the slip at Pittsburg Coal dock No. 3. It was about on the bank last week, but less trouble on the bank last week but less trouble was experienced in getting the steamer off than in the case of the tug as the latter had gone away up on the bank of the channel. The tugs Superior and Inman pulled the Panay of at about eight o'clock this morning.

Few grain boats are in the harbor at present and there has been but one grain carrier departed since yesterday at noon. One vessel arrived light for grain since yesterday.

Two Veteran Steamers.

In case the steamer Edward Smith goes through the present season, she will have been in commission for twenty-five years. She was built by Capt. Al Mitchell and was sailed by him for several years. The steamer Pringle, formerly the W. H. Gratwick, is another veteran. She is twenty-seven years old and has never been ashore.

At Cleveland and Chicago.

Cleveland, May 16.—Ore and coal tonnage continues in good demand and there is some inquiry for grain carriers at the head of Lake Superior. Coal cargoes are offered freely and with a scarcity of boats for Lake Michigan, vesselmen are talking of higher rates. An advance on small cargoes may be paid this week. A snow storm at the head of Lake Superior made work on the docks very slow yesterday.

Chicago—Grain chartering is still confined mostly to the lines although an occasional outsider gets a load at 1¼ cents. The Culligan was placed at that figure for Buffalo.

Gasoline Tug Inspected.

The gasoline fishing tug Grace J, which was brought up from Chicago last week was inspected yesterday by the United States inspectors. She was found to be in good shape and left this afternoon for north shore points to be engaged in the fishing trade. Capt. Monaghan and M. F. Chalk the steamboat inspectors, have gone to St. Paul, where they will inspect one or two of the river boats.

Still Much Ice.

Capt. W. B. McDonald of the steamer W. L. Brown brought his vessel in from Port Arthur this morning having succeeded in getting through the ice there after a hard battle. He reports that there is a big fleet of boats trying to get into Thunder Bay which he says is still full of ice.

Passenger Season On.

Buffalo, May 16.—The passenger season of the Anchor line was opened today by the sailing of the steamer Japan to Duluth with a large list.

Saturn to Docks.

Buffalo, May 16.—The steamer Saturn of the Gilchrist fleet went to the yards of the Empire Shipbuilding company today for repairs. The steamer was damaged in the ice at Thunder Bay, Lake Superior, in April.

Buffalo Coal Scarce.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 16.—Coal continues scarce and shippers are having difficulty in loading boats already chartered. The general strong demand for coal all over the country is the case given by forwarders. Charters reported today were the Manchester, Milwaukee, 40; P. P. Miller, Duluth, 30; Clyde, Escanaba, 40.

SUPPORTED THE FAMILY

Mrs. Buchanan Thought She Had Done Her Part.

Claimed Husband Gave Her But $5 in Three Months.

"Ah don't see where Ah's treating him wrong. Ah's working all day and paying all the bills," declared Mrs. Carrie Buchanan in the testimony for her defense in the assault case brought against her by the state of Minnesota. Mrs. Buchanan's remarks referred to the treatment of her husband, who has not been seen since the evening she pushed him down stairs, and distributed sundry cuts and gashes over the person of Mrs. Eva Patterson.

The trial, which was started yesterday morning, was expected to be finished this afternoon, as Mrs. Buchanan was the last witness to be called by the defense.

Her testimony, corroborated by that of her sister, Anna Williams, showed that the Buchanans have been married for fifteen years, coming here from South Dakota or Omaha. Mrs. Buchanan admitted that they had spats occasionally and that she would go away from her husband for a few days, but that the longest they were separated was six years ago when he spent a year in South Dakota and she remained in Omaha.

W. E. Greene, attorney for Mrs. Buchanan, indicated this morning that he would show certain conditions of Mrs. Buchanan's mind at the time the cutting affray took place, for the jury to judge whether she knew what she was doing or not. Mr. Greene carefully avoided "brain storm," claiming that he did not take much stock in that sort of a defense himself and considered it better to let the jury decide just how far Mrs. Buchanan should be held responsible for her act.

Mrs. Buchanan, according to her testimony, has been working as chambermaid in a house on St. Croix avenue for $7 per week. She claims that for a period of three months her husband gave her but $5 to run their own household and that she has contributed from her earnings the money to cover the expenses. She claimed that the main trouble leading to the outbreak on her part began the evening of May 1, when the Buchanans were on their way home from a colored social function which the witnesses have termed a ball. Mrs. Buchanan claimed her husband cursed and abused her, that she cried all night and was worried all the next day. She said that when she got home from her work the afternoon of May 2, she found a note from her husband which said she had not treated him right and he had left her forever.

Anna Williams, a sister of the accused, testified about the note and its contents and about Mrs. Buchanan's arrest.

Martha Steele, a cook at the place where Mrs. Buchanan is employed, testified to the good reputation that the accused has always borne.

George Hicks, who polishes windows and doors at the city hall, was called with the avowed purpose on the part of the defense to show that Buchanan had engaged some rooms from him and occupied or intended to occupy them with Mrs. Buchanan. The testimony was shut out, the court holding that it was necessary only to show to the jury that Mrs. Buchanan thought there was something wrong between her husband and Mrs. Patterson and that such belief affected her mental condition.

LONG SERVICE BEHIND HIM

Duluthian Has Been Letter Carrier for Twenty Years.

Twenty years' continuous service with Uncle Sam as a letter carrier at the Duluth postoffice with never a mark against him or without once being fined, is the excellent record of Alton B. Heimbach, who resides at 1807 West First street, Duluth. He completed the twentieth year of his service today.

In honor of his long service and excellent record his brother letter carriers and postal clerks presented Mr. Heimbach with a handsome pin when he came to the office for his work today. Mr. Heimbach is the oldest carrier in the postoffice service at the Head of the Lakes.

When he first began to work for the government he was known as carrier No. 10, there being only ten carriers at that time. He started at the end of the line, but now when there are sixty carried on his number is at the head of the list, No. 1.

During all of his service Mr. Heimbach has never received a mark against him, nor has he ever been fined. He is well known that some of the rules of the service are easy to break. Mr. Heimbach is popular among his fellow carriers and also with the people on his route.

During his service Mr. Heimbach has not wasted his spare time when his work is done, and is something of an inventor. One of his latest inventions is a new kind of rubber heel which he expects to put upon the market in the near future. The heel is one which can be detached at any time without the use of tools, and is said to be superior to any other kind.

He has secured a patent for the heel and has already been offered good sums for the invention.

SIZE OF BRAINS.

New York Sun: Probably no one has made as exhaustive a study of the comparative size of men's and women's brains as Dr. Roese of Berlin, who has taken the facial and skull measurements of 70,000 persons, including 45,000 schoolboys and girls. In his observations were included Germans, Swedes, Danes, Dutch, Bohemians and Swiss.

He has written a report of his deductions for a German popular health publication, in which he gives the advantage to men and boys from every point of view. Boys have bigger brain capacity than girls, he says, in a degree which cannot be accounted for on the general ground of better physical development. In fact, he confirms conclusions reached by other students, that from the ninth year to the close of school age, girls on the average are better nourished and developed than boys. The brains of well-grown girls, however, remain inferior in size to those of physically backward boys. In the full-grown woman the skull and the brain remain on a childish plane of development.

The fact that schoolgirls often seem to reach better results than boys, that their actual accomplishments seem greater, he accounts for by the fact that they reach maturity, the degree of perfection of which they are capable, sooner than the boys. But the girl stops there, while the boy goes on for years developing and acquiring and only reaches his full power of utilization years later. When he does so, however, he has far surpassed the level to which the girl attained. In other words, his mental growth as compared with the woman's is not unlike the development of his physical strength.

Dr. Roese adds that, of course, his deductions apply only to normal or average cases. He thinks the difference in the sexes is due to the fact that the principal duty of woman is motherhood, and nature cannot afford to waste on her either physical or mental powers which are not essential to that function.

THE POLICE COURT GRIST

Advertising Man Gets Loaded and Embraces Passing Women.

Alleged Green Goods Men Arrested—Norseman Had Travelled.

Whether it was due to the proverbial turning of a young man's fancy in the spring time or to the effects of the undeniable jag which he carried, Walter Ashby was last evening seized with an irresistable fondness for the gentler sex and so far yielded to his impulses as to make advances to a number of women and girls whom he encountered on Superior street between Third and Fifth avenues west. He seemed to be possessed of a certain degree of discrimination, however, in spite of the jag, for rthe best dressed and most stylish women were the ones he picked out. At times he went so far as to embrace the women and one indignant woman pounced upon officer Jerry Gleason and announced that a man had kissed her.

Upon the second complaint Gleason started in search of the amorous drunk, and found him in front of the Spalding hotel just as he was releasing his last victim from his fond embrace. Ashby was arraigned before Judge Cutting this morning and when contronted by Officer Gleason's testimony said that he could not deny it though he did not know whether it was true or not as he was too drunk. He said that he was an advertising man and had only been in the town about two days. The judge imposed a sentence of $9 and costs with a twenty day jail alternative, and up to this afternoon Ashby had been unable to raise the money.

George Callahan who lives at Lakewood, was arraigned this morning as a plain drunk. When asked by Judge Cutting how much of a family he had he said "Four children and two horses." The judge decided that this was a responsibility which would not permit of a man being locked up in prison so he suspended sentence.

Three alleged green goods men giving their names as Mike O'Shea, William Norton and Tom Burgen, were arrested by Sergeant Wilcox, Officer Link, and Capt. P. E. Reiche this morning on lower Lake avenue where it is said that they were peddling "phony" articles among the lumberjacks on the street.

Shea had a number of the articles on him when arrested and he will be held on a charge of peddling without a license, but the other two men, whom the police suspect of working with Shea were released for lack of evidence.

Shea had two bolts of cloth of the cheapest cotton variety, which the police claim he was trying to sell at about twice its value, and he also had a locket set with a "diamond," very evidently false, and a ring which an inquiring purchaser would have discovered was marked "Cripple Creek Gold" on the inside, but which might have meen sold to an innocent lumberjack as the real stuff.

"Home," said Charles Bloom when asked by the court where his home was, "Ay don't got no home. Ay been born in Norway, ay work sometime in England, Ay go to Australia, Ay been in Mexico one month, and now Ay finish up in Dulut' an' get pinch'. Firs' time Ay ever been pinch' too." he added in an effort to secure the good graces of the court.

The judge announced that he could not think of shutting the much traveled Norseman up over the Norwegian independence day so imposed a light fine of $1 and costs which was suspended later.

Mrs. Inga Mack this morning swore out a warrant for the arrest of John Anderson charging him with slander and with making assertions regarding her reputation which were damaging in the extreme. The warrant states in detail the nature of certain vile statements, which Anderson was alleged to have made concerning the complainant. Albert Ruden, Mrs. Albert Ruden, and Mr. and Mrs. Ludlwick Anderson, all residents of the West end are witnesses.

Charles Miller was ordered out of town by the judge this morning when arraigned for drunkenness. He is claimed by the police to be a dangerous character, having served time in Waupun, the Wisconsin state penitentiary on larceny charges. Judge Cutting gave him a forty day sentence which was suspended on condition that he leave town before 12 o'clock. When last seen he was hoofing it toward the city limits.

A SURER WAY.

Greenhut Justifies His Rule---Jake Winterbottom's Training.

New York Sun: "There's many o' them 't meets up with Jake Winterbottom 't don't never suspicion what stren'th o' character he's reely got,' said old man Grneehut looking out of the window at his time honored friend, who was walking up the street with Jake Bassett. His gooze was almost affectionate, and thero was a ring of absolute sincerity in his voice as he continued:

"I'd a heap druther bu'st a keg o' liquor nor to have anythin' ser'ous happen to Jake on this little 'xcursion o' hisn, but the fact o' Joe Bassett feelin' a good bit like I do in the matter 'pears to be a tol'able safeguard agin misfortune, more special as Joe's done gone along for to see fair play."

The old man said no more till the two men had disappeared from his sight. Then he rambled along reminiscently:

"Anybody 't was for to see Jake straddlin' up the street now, with a stiff horn o' whiskey into him an' two guns in his pocket, lookin' for a man 't called him a liar, or somepin', wouldn't never think o' him bein' the timid, delicate little spindlin' lad I o'n remember o' bein', when I first knowed him.

"Didn't seem like Jake had a fair show f'm the first, bein' his old man went away atween sundown an' sunup an' wa'n't never seen 'round home a'terwards. 'Pears ther'd been a hoss missin' an' some o' the neighbors kind o' s'picioned 't he mought know where 'twas, so they called 'round an' got him out in the night, for to go an' look for it. I never heer'd o' the hoss bein' found, but there was a man diskivered up a tree some later 't had on a yaller shirt like Jake's dad useter wear. There wa'n't no evidence o' who 'twas, an' the fambly 'lowed they'd ruther give it out 't he'ed went away an' was to be looked for to come back.

"I was mentionin' 't Jake was a peaked little feller, them times. He were the oldest o' seven, an' th' hull seven wa'n't big enough f'r two, but Jake licked a feller twict his size 't called his old man a hoss thief, an' he got the respect o' th' community f'm that time on. 'Pears ed like he couldn't do nothin' with the fambly, though. They died off one at a time till he were all alone at 13 with nothin' but a old cabin 't stood on another man's ground.

"Jake didn't say much. 'Twa'n't never his way, but after the last funeral he sot his face to the cabin and disappeared from the settlement his own self.

"Clay county wa'n't much of a place them days, f'r nothin' spo'ty. O' course, there was hoss racin 'an' cock fightin', an' some poker, but poppylation was some skurce. Then Jake was undeniably one o' the po' whites, an' hadn't no show with gentlemen, but he'd picked up some poker somehow, an' what he knowed about that was his hull capital when he left home.

"I never seen Jake again, f'r somepin' like twenty year, but I'd heer'd of him time to time. 'Pears him an' Caleb Mix got some acquainted, 'long o' Cale tendin' bar on the boats, an' Jake travelin' the river considerable. Then when I took to the river, like I did f'r a spell, I run the bar on the old Belle o' the Bayous, 't run f'm New Orleans to Memphis.

"First man I seen playin' cards on the boat I made on her was Jake. Not that I knowed him, f'r I didn't till after, but I took notice o' what he did, seein' he did it neat, an' didn't make no fuss about it.

"He was playin' a $500 freezeout with a planter 't was on his way to New Orleans to dispose of his year's crop money, an' couldn't wait till he got there. They was playin' straight poker, o' course, draw not bein' known them days, an' gooze was almost affectionate, and there was a ring of absolute sincerity in his voice as he continued:

"I was strollin' 'round the boat, kind o' gettin' acquainted, when I come on the two o' 'em playin' in the saloon, an' I looks on. 'Pears I come along just at the finish, f'r I seen the planter shove his pile in the pot, an' Jake called, takin' tol'able nigh all o' his pile to do it.

"Well, the planter he showed down a king full, but Jake had a ace full, an' o' course he scooped the pot. The planter he didn't say nothin' f'r a minute, but he looked at the cards close, an' then he leaned over an' picked up one o' the aces. 'That card's marked,' he says quiet, showin' a least little bend on the corner.

"Jake looked at it, tol'able cur'ous, f'r a minute, an' he says, 'Well, I reckon you mought call it marked if you was extry p'tickler. Looks to me, though, like it was just used some, like cards is when you plays with 'em.'

"Then the planter says, 'You was dealin',' an' Jake says, as quick as him, 'I sure was. What do you make o' that?'

"'Nothin' much,' says the planter, 'on'y I reckon your know'd what card that was afore you dealt it.'

"He reached for his gun while he was talkin', an' I reckon if Jake 'd been packin' his guns in his breeches pockets, like is customary, he mought h'a' got the worst of it. But he 'peared to set still, on'y just liftin' his hand, an' I seen he'd pulled a derringer f'm out his vest pocket. Afore the planter could get his hand 'round he was lookin' into a ugly-lookin' muzzle.

"He stopped sudden, o' course. Then Jake says, 'Drop your gun,' an' he dropped it, all right, an' Jake says: 'You made a mistake, stranger, when you made a remark about my dealin'. But I reckon you must 'a' made a mistake.' An' the planter, says, prompt: 'I sure did make a mistake. The deal was all right.' He wa'n't no fool, that planter, if he was some hasty.

"Jakes says, very polite, 'I'm right glad to hear you say it.' Then he turned to me, an' he says, 'You pick up the gentleman's gun, an' give it to him, some later.' An' he stuffs his winnin's in his pocket an' goes off, to bed.

"Next mornin' I gets acquainted with him over the bar, an' learnin' who he is I keeps my eye on him f'r some years. Then when I settled in Arkansas City here, I seen what a useful citizen Jake'd be, an' I gets him to settle here, too.

"'Touchin' this little difficulty he's gone out to settle with that Vicksburg gazabo 't was playin' here last night 'tain't likely there'll be no great trouble. I c'n see Jake an' Joe Bassett an' the Vicksburg yap comin' down the street now. They 'm headed this way, an' 'pear to be friendly enough. Likely Jake's convinced him he was mistook, too."

The three men entered and, marching solemnly to the bar, placed their elbows on it. Then Winterbottom, with a gesture that included all the others in the room, said: "Let's liquor."

After everybody had finished, Sam Pearsall said, with a spice of mischief in his tone, "I heer'd ye went gunnin' this evenin', Jake. D'ye get yer game?"

"Must 'a' been some mistake," said Winterbottom, gravely. "Mo an' Joe went up to the hotel for to reason out a matter o' misunderstandin' with this yere gentleman, an' his explanations was ample, more'n that, he 'lows he's some anxious for to set in, p'vidin' we uns is going' to have another game, tonight. 'Pears to be settin' heavy on his consciences, bein' some too much winner last night."

"I reckon we uns c'n accommodate the gentleman, if that's what he's lookin' for," said Jim Blaisdell, and the game was made up without delay, the stranger acquiescing, though there was a notable lack of enthusiasm on his part.

They played table stakes, each man taking a hundred in chips at the start, though it might have been noticed that no one but the stranger paid cash. The others nodded to Greenhut as they took their respective stacks and the old man carefully wrote down some figures.

From the beginning there was an evident desire to push the game along and the stranger seemed still aequiescent. His eye lighted up a little when it fell on the "motto" that old man Greenhut had recently put on the wall, "God Bless Our Home. No shooting in This Room."

"How come anybody hung that up?" he inquired. "I didn't reckon there was no place 'round hyar whar shootin' were 'counted irreg'lar."

"'Tain't allowed on the premises," said old man Greenhut promptly. "I c'n keep order without it. It can be did outside if there's any to be did."

The stranger shook his head doubtfully and turned to his cards again. Finding three kings he opened the pot for the size of it, which was $10.

"I make it twenty," said Bassett, who sat next.

"I raise that twenty," said Winterbottom, and Pearsall and Blaisdell dropped.

The stranger made good and then raised it $40. This left him something less than $20 of his stack, and Bassett noticing this shoved his own chips all in the pot.

Winterbottom dropped and the stranger was about to call for what he had, but Bassett spoke to him kindly out firmly.

"I'd advise you as a friend," he said, "for to drop, 'thouten you've got a straight flush. I hain't no scruples ag'in winnin' what you done put up afore it come to me, but I hain't got the conscience for to rob you an' not give you no warning 'Pears like 'tain't goin' to be healthy f'r you to monkey with the buzzsaw, no longer."

"Oh, very well," said the stranger, and he showed his openers and threw down his cards, whereupon Bassett scooped the pot without showing his. Then the stranger called for another stack.

This he dropped on Blaisdell's deal, catching an ace full against the dealer's four sevens, and quite without emotion he called for a third stack.

It was his own deal next, and there being a jackpot, on the strength of the last hand, he was a little surprised to see, after Bassett had opened it, that Winterbottom, Pearsall and Blaisdell each raised it in turn so that by the time it came back to him it cost him $40 to draw cards, with the prospect of a further raise if he should so in.

Looking at his hand he found a pat flush, and pushing all his chips forward without a word, he looked calmly around. Even a child would have noticed the exchange of significant glances between Bassett and Winterbottom.

Bassett threw down his hand, or at least he seemed to do so. There might have been only four cards in it. Then his left hand dropped idly by his side, just as Winterbottom straightened up in his chair and brought his right hand up from under the table.

Then, studying his cards again, Winterbottom said, "You sure be in hard luck tonight. 'Pears like you was makin' up tonight. I'm the way you done us up last night. I can't raise you, bein' as you're all in, but I see you."

The other two then dropped and there was a show down. Winterbottom had a small full, and, of course, won.

The stranger started for the door, but paused, when Winterbottom said, "Be you goin' to quit? I was reck'nin' on mere of a game."

"I sure be," said the stranger. I win 200 last night, an' I lose 300 tonight. I've got my boat fare home an' that's all. If I lose that I'll have to stay in Arkansas City and I'd a heap druther be dead an' be done with it. Can you blame me?" And without waiting for an answer he left the place.

"You all can see now the wisdom an' understandin' o' my rule ag'in shootin'," said old man Greenhut as he was setting out the glasses for Winterbottom's treat. "The best an' easiest way is a reg'lar game o' draw, an' there ain't no cleanin' up to be did after."

DISAPPEARING GERMAN CUSTOM

London Tribune: One of the most curious customs is the habit, which until quite recently was almost universal in German society, of trimming and ordering the mustachio and the hair in public.

In the cafe or the restaurant a gentleman would produce a neat leather case containing two miniature brushes. The backs of the brushes might be of the costliest materials, genuine tortoise shell, silver and even gold being comparatively common. These little brushes were used for rearranging the mustachio when it was disordered by eating or drinking. It was never a pretty custom, especially before ladies, but it became in time ridiculous, and is now disappearing.

A year or two ago it was usual enough to see an errand boy set down your hot rolls or your meat on the doorstep, and with the aid of a broken fragment of looking glass and an old brush gravely set in order the incipient down of his upper lip. I believe that this custom was originally an appendix to the invention of the imperial mustachio. But the custom is almost overpast. But many is going through a period of pessimism, and mustachios, thank goodness, begin to be worn downward.

WANTED TO GET EVEN.

Alfred H. Love, the peace advocate, had been protesting in Philadelphia against the great quantity of military features in preparation for the Jamestown exposition.

"Really," he concluded, with a smile, "one would think that the whole world was animated and kept progressing by a spirit of revenge and bitter enmity. One would think that—but, perhaps, you know the story.

"A pale, wan woman, on her deathbed, said in a weak voice to her husband:

"'Henry, if I die, promise me one thing.'

"'Gladly, my poor darling. What is it I am to promise?'

"'Promise me that you will marry Mary Simpson.'

The man started.

"'But,' he said, 'I thought you hated her.'

"'I do, Henry,' the dying woman whispered, 'I want to get even with her.'"

A FOOT OF SIZE.

New York Press: A young man wrote to a New York dealer in sporting goods for a pair of steel-shanked, ball-bearing roller skates, mentioning that the length of his foot was thirteen inches. This appeared to be so extraordinary that it provoked comment among the employes in the store, and there was a general measuring of feet. The longest was 11¾ inches. And the tallest man in the crowd was 5 feet 10½ inches. Some scientists have said that to be in perfect proportion the length of a man's foot should be exactly 15 per cent of his full stature. Let's see: Take a six-foot man—that means 72 inches; according to this formula his foot should be 10.8 inches long. Our young friend proved to be 6 feet 2 inches tall, or 74 inches. Fifteen per cent of this would give him a foot 11.1 inches long.

Give me the man of the big foot and big ear. An undersized foot indicates a finical disposition. An undersized ear is a positive sign of selfishness. Generous men of broad intellect and—liberality have more than 15 per cent of foot and ears.

Ignorance may be bliss, but it's not prosperity. To prosper you must read Herald ads.—and then you are no longer ignorant.

FESTIVAL IS ENDED

The Duluth Oratorio Society Covered Itself With Glory.

Final Concert Was Even Better Than the First.

The last concert in the series presented by the Duluth Oratorio club was given last evening before an enthusiastic audience that filled every available seat in the auditorium of the First Methodist church. In every detail, the program was presented in a way that can but reflect glory upon the organization which has worked so faithfully to make possible this spring feast of music. The Oratorio society under the leadership of Horace W. Reyner sang "The Death of Minnehaha" with an intelligence of interpretation, precision of attack, and poetic understanding, that came as a surprise even after the splendid singing of the first evening. The soloists of the cantata were Mme. Shanna Cumming and Arthur Beresford, baritone. Mme. Cumming completely captivated her audience at both the afternoon and evening concerts. Mme. Cumming's voice is a soprano of purity and range perfectly controlled, and her dramatic interpretation of her solos in the oratorio were deeply impressive. She was heard in the recitative and aria from Haydn's "Creation" in the first part of the program and at the matinee in a group of three charming little songs.

Mr. Beresford has a baritone voice of pleasing quality and range and he was heard to advantage in the cantata solos and "Why Do the Nations" from the "Messiah."

The Minneapolis Symphony orchestra with Emil Oberhoffer, director, was heard in numbers that added to the splendid impression that orchestra already had made. The artistic interpretation of the numbers impelled by the almost magic baton of the magnetic, quiet, and forceful leader, wrought last evening's audience to great enthusiasm. The orchestra program last evening was the "Tannhauser" overture, the Tschaikowsky suite "Casse Noisette" in which the series of characteristic dances was delightfully played. The Chinese dance and Pipers dance were repeated. The first part of the program closed with dance from "Rustic Wedding Symphony" by Goldmark. One of the most enjoyed numbers was the Masenet "Scene Religieuse" and "Invocation" with violin cello solos by Carlo Fischer.

At the matinee the orchestra numbers were the grand march from Tannhauser," overture to William Tell by Rossini, Dvorak's symphony "From the New World," suite from "Carmen" and the introduction of Act III of "Lohengrin."

"There are nothing but words of praise for the enterprise and untiring efforts of those who have made this first May festival such a splendid success.

PLEADS FOR SOUTH WORK

and Rev. Mr. Black of Missouri as second choice. The friends of Dr. Black became very active while the commissioners were assembling at Memorial hall for the opening sermon. Especially did the ministers from Pennsylvania urge the claims of Dr. Landrith or Dr. Black. They said, in speaking of Dr. Black, that it would be a graceful act to elect him as a man of the Cumberland church, if elected, would bring good feeling that could not be overestimated.

Dr. Coyle of Denver called the assembly to order in place of Dr. Hunter Corbett, the last moderator. Rev. Ira E. Landrith of Nashville, former moderator of the Cumberland Presbyterian assembly, and the man who was most instrumental in getting his church to join the body, delivered the annual addresss. His reference to the race question, and his declaration that the property of the minority of the objectors in the Cumberland church to the union, will be paid for were received with applause.

The theme of Dr. Landrith's sermon was "The Call of Presbyterianism's Enlarged Mascedonia," and his text "Possess Thou the West and the South." Deutronomy XXXIII; 23. The design of the discourse was to arouse the general interst of the church in educational and religious work in the South and Southwest, where Cumberland Presbyterians were most numerous at the time of the union. The merging of the two churches was interpreted by the preacher as enlarging Presbyterianism's field or work and an uttering a clarion call to the United States to "possess the West and the South." The marvelous material prosperity of Southern half of the United States, he declares, constituted both a plea and a warning of danger if the spiritual advantages of the people should not keep pace with their commercial development. He favored co-operation and ultimate union with the Southern Presbyterian church and declared the South to be ready for a widespread revival.

Dr. Landrith assured the Christians of the North that "the war is over" in matters religious, the South being fully ready now to welcome the presence and labors of any denomination that labored sanely and unselfishly for the present and eternal weal of the people. After showing that the united churches had made adequate provision for the separation of whites and blacks in presbyteries and synods of their own, thus enabling the white people of the North and South to work together for the moral and educational aid of the negro without violating the rights or the social order of either race, he declared that evangelization of the negro was to be accomplished by neither long range sentimentality nor short range indifference, and that the time had fully come when the black man's white neighbor and that same black man's too far way friends must sit down together in a mutually satisfying conference about what is his next step, neither party to the conference claiming a monopoly of wisdom, methods, or responsibilities. After naming various religious and educational opportunities for aggressive church work in the South, he concluded with a specific appeal to his own church to devote to that section for the next five years all of the funds and workers that could be spared.

At the opening of the afternoon session, the temperance committee made an enthusiastic report, prophesying the early overthrow of the liquor traffic.

Dickson, Tenn., May 16.—As a matter of sentiment a quorum of commissioners of the general assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian church went this morning to Bethlehem church, which stands on the site of the old McAdow log cabin, the birthplace of the church, and there formally constituted the seventy-seventh session of the general assembly. Rev. J. L. Hudgins, retiring moderator, offered the constituting prayer and preached a brief sermon. On retiring here shortly after noon the general assembly was constituted and Mr. Hudgins delivered the opening sermon. He made a vigorous and caustic arraignment of the leaders responsible for the union. He charged that the press was subsized, the pulpits muzzled and church agencies and boards whipped into line by resorting to schemes of ward heelers.

Birmingham, Ala., May 16.—The report of the committee of the Southern Presbyterian church named to represent that body at the international conference on marriages and divorces was made public today. It says that the law plays but a minor part in the eradication of the evil and that the real remedy is a "moral tonic to be administered internally to the whole people, which, working from within outward, will first purify the heart and then the life of the people."

ROOSEVELT IN THE CASE

Senator Borah and Haywood's Attorneys Have Lively Passage.

Prejudice Against Orchard Also Figures in the Examination.

Boise, Idaho, May 16.—The unexpected uncovering of a vein of prejudice against Harry Orchard and his testimony during further examination of talesmen in the Steunenberg murder case today led to the first sharp wrangle between counsel, and involved the name of President Roosevelt in acrimonious discussion.

The day and the incident began with Samuel Wingate, eleventh talesman, in the hands of the defense for examination-in-chief. Questioning had proceeded a short distance when it developed that Wingate was biased against Orchard and unwilling to accept the testimony that it is expected he will give against the prisoner. The defense naturally tried also to show that Wingate's state of mind on the subject was not such as would warrant his removal from the box, but when the talesman repassed to the hands of the state, Senator Borah quickly drew from him the flatfooted statement that he could not, under any circumstances, give credence to Orchard's testimony. He was excused, the defense excepting the court's ruling and from thenceforward the state was particular to test all talesmen on the point.

Talesman A. P. Burns, who succeeded to Wingate's seat, said that he was not prepared to give the same credence to Orchard that he would extend to other witnesses, but his attitude was not deemed sufficient to warrant his removal.

The question recurred at the afternoon session, when Senator Borah put the question to Talesman William McGuffin, who succeeded Talesman Henry to seat No. 6, after the latter had been evicted for implied bias on testimony of R. C. Lovelace, the first witness called, who swore that Henry had told him that Haywood, Moyer and Pettibone would not have been brought here if "they had not been mixed up in the case."

Clarence S. Darrow of the defense objected to the question, and Senator Borah sharply replied:

"After the immense latitude that the defense has taken in regard to McParland, Taft and Roosevelt, I did not think they would stick on any technicality at this late day."

"We did not ask as to the effect of McParland's testimony," said Messrs. Darrow and Richardson together.

"If Roosevelt is to be brought here to testify, we might have something more to say," went on Mr. Richardson.

"Roosevelt can take care of himself wherever he is," retorted Borah.

"Well, I don't know about that," said Mr. Darrow.

Judge Wood directed counsel to proceed with the case, but Mr. Darrow, who was standing, took formal exception to the remarks of Mr. Borah.

"I will be glad to eliminate Roosevelt if you will," replied Borah. "He was brought into the case by the defense."

"He came in himself," said Mr. Richardson. "He is 2,000 miles away and he writes letters."

"He was brought in by his own butting in," added Mr. Darrow.

The judge overruled the objection to the question, the talesman saying that he did not have any bias or opinion in the matter. The defence noted an exception and the incident closed.

The jury box was finally filled with twelve talesmen subjected to examination and temporarily passed by both sides, at 3:40 o'clock in the afternoon, and the court announced that it was in order for both sides to exercise peremptory challenges. Counsel for Haywood asked for a few minutes' delay, and for five minutes they gathered around the chair of the prisoner and engaged in earnest consultation as to their course. The state exercised its first right and excused William Van Orsdale, a grocer, who has occupied seat No. 2 since the opening day of the trial. George F. Maw, a young farmer with some strong opinions as to the acts of certain elements in the labor unions of the country, was then called to the vacant place. The state passed him, and he was still in the hands of the defense when adjournment hour was reached.

The trial will not be resumed until 2 o'clock this afternoon, because of the funeral this morning of Judge Nugent, father of John F. Nugent, one of the counsel for the defense.

SKIN SPECIALISTS SIMPLIFY THEIR WORK

Finding of Eczema Germ Leads to An Easy and Certain Treatment For All Skin Diseases.

In studying skin diseases, medical men have found the only real way to cure the skin is through the skin. Specialists have found that internal medicines are useful only as an aid in the treatment of special and obstinate cases, and that these stomach medicines alone can never effect a cure.

After finding the germ of skin disease, the work of the specialists was simplified. All they needed was a prescription that would kill the germ without injuring the skin. Various experiments developed that oil of wintergreen, properly prepared with other necessary agents, made a soothing wash that instantly attacked the germs, yet left the healthy skin intact. It made an ideal lotion, for it did away with the use of nasty salves and was cleanly and hygienic in every way.

Any physician can get the D. D. D. Prescription, referred to above, direct, by communicating with the laboratory of the D. D. D. Company in Chicago. This healing, soothing liquid, when applied to the skin, has been so successful in giving INSTANT relief that the best skin specialists recommend it freely, and credit is certainly due them when they could make so much larger fees by writing out their own prescriptions. Here is a grateful son's simple statement regarding the wonderful cure D. D. D. accomplished for his aged mother:

"On account of my mother's advanced age (she being eighty-eight), it was the opinion of all the doctors who saw her that she had eczema so badly she never could be cured, and they all failed to give her any, or very little, temporary relief.

"After using seven bottles of your remedy she is almost cured, and by the use of a little once in a while, never suffers a particle, can sleep good all night and is perfectly happy."

S. J. PEABODY, President and Treasurer S. J. Peabody Lumber Company, Columbia City, Ind.

We recommend washing with D. D. D. Soap in connection with the use of D. D. D. Prescription. D. D. D. Soap, for that matter, is the BEST cleanser for all persons who want to take perfect care of the skin.

Ask your physician or call on Lyceum drug store, in your town, which keeps a stock both of D. D. D. Prescription and D. D. D. Soap for sufferers from skin disease.

"All the learning in the world is an open book to the student."

But to learn about correct dress our store is the library.

Spring catalog sent on request if you did not get one, but a visit to our second floor will give you and us more pleasure.

The technical details of hand work—where hand work was never before known—the accurate scaling of sizes, the improved ways of shrinking materials, of modeling shoulders so as to lend them at once flexibility and permanence—these all are points that enter into the acknowledged supremacy of Columbia Clothes for young men. However, this makes dry reading and every ad-writer of the poorest store can copy high-sounding descriptions and insert them into the Evening Herald at so much per inch. To grasp the "why and wherefore" that puts The Columbia off the beaten road, you should come in and try on—you should realize what choice is offered you here to assert your personality among the weaves and designs which we spread before you. Look in the glass (you can see all sides of yourself in Columbia mirrors), you'll see the neck tight, the breast set flat, you'll note the simplicity of the draping and the out-of-the usual air of the ensemble, which is as inseparable from the Columbia label as satisfaction is from the service of the suits.

The main part of this advertisement was written by the young man who has charge of our clothes for young men and appreciates their demands and peculiarities. We waited for a beautiful spring day to insert it—one that would induce you to let your suit come out in the open. And lo! the snow storm season seems over. Miss Spring is here at last!

HERALD NEWSBOYS ARE ENTERTAINED BY FLINTS

With the gallery filled to overflowing with Herald newsboys, and with the lower floors crowded to capacity with interested people who were not newsboys, the Flints had every incentive to furnish a good entertainment at the Lyceum last night, and they showed their ability to do so. The program pleased and mystified the audience greatly.

Among the most appreciative in the audience were the newsboys themselves. Their delight in what they saw was shown at frequent intervals by applause and laughter. Shrill whoops of delight descended from the gallery and found an echo in the more moderate expressions of pleasure of the adults in the parquet and dress circle. The Flints are fun-makers from the word go and furnish amusement in plenty for everybody.

The night was an event in the lives of many of the newsboys. Their pleasure knew no bounds when they learned that they were to be permitted to attend the performance without expense to themselves, as guests of Manager Marshall and the Flints. It was thought best not to have them attend in a body, so individual tickets were given out in the afternoon at The Herald office, when the boys called for their papers.

Despite this precaution, the result was practically the same as if the little merchants had formed in line and marched to the theater, for between 500 and 600 of them were on hand before the gallery doors were open, and a seething mass of humanity filled the entrance and flowde over onto the sidewalk and into the street. It was a good-natured crowd, however, although a noisy one. Passers-by stopped to look on and smile at the words and antics of the boys.

When the doors did finally open there was a wild scramble up the stairs, and a friendly tussel for the best seats. In marvelously short order the swarm of noisy youths were seated and waiting for the curtain to be raised. The intermission was occupied by the eating of peanuts, and mystified speculation as to the probable methods which would be employed by the famous hypnotists.

The Flints have a different program every night, and they are always vastly entertaining. Even the skeptical, who doubt the genuiness of the hypnotists' methods, cannot help laughing at the side-splitting antics of the subjects, who dance and sing and do all kinds of queer stunts at the suggestion of Mr. and Mrs. Flint. And the most skeptical must admit that there is something puzzling to such acts as the one where a youth with feet and neck resting on the backs of two chairs sustains the weight of five men, while under the "influence."

OLD SUIT OF CLOTHES.

Jack Symonds, the monologuist with the Brigadiers at the Metropolitan this week, has a very picturesque suit of clothes which he wears while he is contributing his stunt to the olio. He declares that he has had the suit for the past ten years. Mr. Symonds has been playing the tramp character for a long time and it is no easy matter to get the right clothes, which really look old. So he is very careful of his 10-year suit. There will be a bargain matinee Saturday at the Metropolitan.

The dog and cat show at the Bijou this week is pleasing hundreds of children daily, and the youngsters constitute a most enthusiastic audience at the matinee performances.

Relief from Rheumatic Pains.

"I suffered with rheumatism for over two years," says Mr. Rolland Curry, a patrolman, of Key West, Fla. "Sometimes it settled in my knees and lamed me so I could hardly walk, at other times it would be in my feet and hands so I was incapacitated for duty. One night when I was in severe pain, and lame from it, my wife went to the drug store here and came back with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I was rubbed with it and found the pain had nearly gone during the night. I kept on using it for a little more than two weeks and found that it drove the rheumatism away. I have not had any trouble from that disease for over three months." For sale by all druggists.

and apparently making no effort to avoid detection.

Senator Foraker examined Sanborn closely as to what he was doing prior to going to the window. The witness replied that he was looking for something with which to light his lamp and said he was confused, greatly excited and perhaps frightened and that he could not be sure of all that had happened.

The action of the officers of the regiment in coming across the parade grounds, routing out the soldiers and forming the companies was minutely described by Sanborn. He said that the firing had entirely ceased before the officers arrived on the scene, which testimony was in conflict with the stories previously told.

On this point Senator Foraker obtained the admission that he probably did not "get out from under cover" until all of the firing was over.

Senator Buckley called attention to the fact that the witness said he could not see the hammer, the barrel or any crook to the piece carried by the men, and in explanation Sanborn said: "Well, I had to make an answer of some sort to the character of the questions asked by Maj. Glenn."

Senator Lodge picked up one of the Springfield rifles which is used as an exhibit in the investigation before the committee, and commented rather caustically:

"Of course the witness could not see the hammer of the gun. It is a hammerless gun."

On redirect examination of Sanborn, the man whom he saw enter the gate was doing something to the magazine of the weapon as though he might be cleaning it. In reply to a question by Senator Foraker, he said he had never before told anything about that fact because he knew nothing about the mechanism of the guns.

Yesterday afternoon Jose Martinez, clerk in a drug store in Brownsville last August, when he lived in a small house directly in front of Company B barracks, at the corner of Garrison road and the alley, at the point named by other witnesses as the place where negro soldiers were said to have scaled the wall to enter the town, testified that Aug. 13, a few minutes before midnight, he heard four or five shots and the reflection from the flashes of the guns passed over the paper he was reading. He got up, put out his light and closed his door, and then he heard several commands from within the garrison wall, like "hurry up" and "jump," but as they were not spoken in his language he could not be sure that he heard correctly.

After putting out the light, he lay down on the floor and he heard the men jump over the wall. He could not say he saw the men climbing over, but he was positive from the sound of jumping and subsequent sounds that they had done so. Looking out after the men he said he saw four or five men running down the alley. He could distinguish their khaki uniforms, but not their faces, for the reason he thought, that the faces were darker than their clothes. He was positive that the men had rifles and he attempted to show the committee the manner they carried the guns. This indicated that the butts of the guns were rested against the hips when they fired. After the men passed down the alley the shooting continued for about 15 minutes, the witness thought, and he intimated that 150 or 200 shots were fired.

PANAMA STRIKE IS NOT FEARED BY COL. GOETHALS.

Washington, May 16.—Secretary Bishop, of the Isthmian canal commission today received a cablegram from Col. "I have no fear of the outcome. The walk-out is condemned by all."

FURNACE OFFICIALS HERE.

Have Been Looking Over Shenango Properties on Range.

W. B. Snyder and a party of officials of the Shenango Furnace company arrived in Duluth this morning in a special car, from the Mesaba range, where they have been looking over some of the company's properties.

They are now on their way to the Michigan ranges, where the furnace company is also interested.

On the Minnesota ranges, the party inspected the mines under the chaperonage of D. C. Peacock, who is in charge of the furnace company's operations.

The officials announced themselves well pleased with the condition of their properties. Despite the delays in getting the prevent shipping season under way, they expect this to be the biggest year in the history of the Shenango Furnace company's mining operations.

Fire Board Wants Better Protection on Garfield Avenue.

Bids for Coal Supplies Are All the Same.

At a special meeting of the board of fire commissioners which was held yesterday afternoon in the mayor's office, the board decided to take immediate action in relation to the enlargement of the water mains on lower Garfield avenue, the need for which was strongly demonstrated at the Madison school fire Tuesday evening, when Chief Black made the statement that he would probably have saved the school had the water supply been sufficient.

The main now in place is only six inches in diameter and the four engines which were put to work on the fire soon exhausted the supply so that the water stopped dead in the hose on several occasions. The board appointed Commissioner Burgess and Fire Chief Black a special committee to look into the matter and confer with the water and light board to see what could be done about it.

Bids for coal for the fire department for the coming year were received at the meeting, the Finch Fuel company, the Northland Coal company and the Pittsburg Coal company, the Northwestern Fuel company and the Ohio Coal company bidding on the work. All the bidders were exactly the same on all the prices for the various kinds of coal called for, except that the Northland Coal company was 50 cents per ton higher on blacksmith coal than the other bidders. The bid was awarded to the Pittsburg Coal company as they posted a larger guarantee than the other companies.

TERRAPIN SCALE FOUND IN EVERY STATE OF EAST.

Washington, May 16.—From every state east of the Mississippi river, and from Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and the province of Ontario, Can., the terrapin scale, the enemy of the peach and other trees, has been reported to the department of agriculture. Small, parasitic, four-winged flies are the greatest benefactors in the control of this insect, and kerosene emulsion has proven an effective remedy.

RAILROADS

BIG DEMAND FOR LABOR

Agents Meet With Difficulty in Filling Their Orders.

The Rainy Lake Road Still Needs Many Men.

Railroad laborers are not so plentiful just now as the contractors wish. They are rather scarce on the market, taking into consideration the heavy demand there is for them. The construction season is well under way, and orders for men are coming in from all sides. Good wages are offered, but with all the inducements held out the employment agents are having a hard time supplying the wants of their customers.

Work of laying rails on the extension of the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg was taken up again this week, after a suspension of three or four months, caused by heavy rock work, which has just been completed. This company has orders in for about 200 laborers, at wages considerably above the average being paid by railroad contractors. Men are being sent out on the work every day, and there are also a good many quitting, as is the case with every contractor in the business. The higher the wages the harder the men are to handle, for they figure they will have no difficulty in getting a new job if they quit the old.

Several orders from as far West as Idaho and Montana are on the books of local employment agents. The National company sent fifty Austrians to Montana yesterday. Wisconsin and Minnesota are heavy in their demands. The Omaha yesterday put in a new order for forty laborers, and all the railroads are in the market to a greater or less degree.

North Dakota work, particulary near the Canadian border, has been seriously delayed by the lateness of the spring. Along the boundary the snow has only just left the ground, and the railroad contractors are just getting started on their extension work there.

FARE TOO HIGH.

Woman Has Complaint for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"What is the fare to Superior?" said a well-dressed woman this morning, addressing W. S. Chadwick at the Union depot ticket office.

"Fifteen cents," replied Mr. Chadwick.

"Fifteen cents? I thought railroad fares had been reduced."

"So they have in many cases."

"And not to Superior?"

"No, ma'am."

"How very strange and unreasonable."

"I call that a reasonable rate."

"But it should be down to at least 10 cents. I think I'll take the street car, and shall certainly see that my husband takes the matter up with the interstate commerce commission."

Nature's Laxative the Best

Many Are So-Called "Natural."

There are many Laxatives on the market that are often styled "Natural" because of the well known fact that the Laxative which Nature gives us is the best. Such ones are constantly coming up, but soon disappear, because in reality they are manufactured, and can never attain the inimitable merits of the product of Nature. HUNYADI JANOS, the genuine NATURAL Laxative Water, has stood at the head for nearly half a century as the ONLY Laxative whose established reputation is its best recommendation. It remains always the standard because it is NATURE'S remedy in its original form, pure and simple, in no way dependent, as the others are, on artificial composition. At all druggists. Try it.

A RASCAL CORNERED.

The situation in which the notorious Abe Ruef found himself yesterday is pretty convincing evidence that no "graft," no matter how good it is and how safe it seems and how permanent it promises to be, can last forever.

Nobody has been more arrogantly corrupt than Ruef. Though the citizenship of San Francisco raged and bitterly resented conditions, though the newspapers scolded themselves black in the face with big headlines, Ruef and his corrupt associates calmly continued to rake in their golden harvest, apparently possessed of the idea that there was no end to their power, and no possibility that anything could happen to them. It was the most open, the most shameful, the most flagrant rule of graft, probably, that this country has ever seen, and that is saying much.

And now, see the new picture that is presented. Yesterday Ruef stood before the bar of justice to plead guilty to an infamous assault upon public morals. His face was as pallid as that of a corpse, his trembling legs barely supported him during his confession, and at its close he sank almost fainting into a chair.

Pitiful? Yes. Pitiable? No. He has richly merited all the shame and pain that disgrace can bring him, for he has prostituted free government to the ends of immorality, and there are few crimes greater than this.

There is something intensely irritating, too, about the way the dispatches report him as sorrowing over the grief and shame that the situation is bringing to those near and dear to him. He should have thought of them when he entered upon his career of corruption. His own acts have brought them this punishment, and it is shameful for him to try to hide his own guilt behind their innocence.

This fitting end of Ruef's political career is a wholesome civic lesson. It shows that the most triumphant and the most arrogant graft must have its end, and that an outraged society will not always tolerate such criminal interferences with public duty as those of Ruef and his evil ring.

WHAT IS WHISKY?

Apparently in the belief that the public is pondering the above question, the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' association has sent out a card purporting to answer it. The reply is very succinct, if not wholly satisfactory. It follows, as the heading of the article printed upon the card: "Whisky is whisky."

This might settle it with some people. The reply even meets with the requirements of the ordinary rule of definitions, that the definition and the word defined should be interchangeable. But to others it will appear evasive, and wholly unsatisfactory. Were it not for the further information given beneath the heading, the public would be as much at sea as ever. After reading the information given by the wholesale liquor dealers, the public, on the other hand, will be more at sea than ever.

Judging from this screed, anything is whisky that is colored like whisky, that tastes something like whisky, and that has the potency of whisky. This is because the card is sent out as a defense of the dealers in rectified or "blended" goods, and is designed to educate the public upon a matter just now being considered by the federal authorities.

The question at issue is whether under the pure food laws any dealer in rectified or blended whisky has the right to use the label "whisky," when the government has taken the stand that the only liquor properly labelled whisky is that which has been distilled and stored in charred barrels until it is matured. This is a slow process. It is much cheaper and easier and quicker to take a little cheap alcohol, a few drugs, a lot of water, a bit of coloring matter, and make something that looks like whisky. Then, if the government will let the manufacturers of such stuff label it "whisky," a large proportion of the drinking public will never know the difference.

The Herald has never been found championing the cause of whisky. Its view has always been that it isn't fit for use as a beverage in its purest form, that no man has ever been the better for its use, and that millions have been made poorer in body, soul and mind, while more millions of dependent wives and children have been made miserable.

But so long as it is sold with official sanction, the government is absolutely right in refusing to permit adulterated stuff to be labeled "whisky." The criminal courts of this region know all about "rectified" liquors, a few drinks of which will turn a human being into a beast, and make him long to tear yards of blue out of the sky. Far from aiding and abetting in the fraud of selling such stuff as whisky, the governments, federal and state, would better prohibit its manufacture and sale altogether.

GUARDING AGAINST CONSUMPTION.

The practice of requiring that cases of consumption be reported to the health officers for their action is spreading, and it is very proper and beneficial that it should spread. It should be done in Duluth, and in every city, village and hamlet of the country, and when the time comes when tuberculosis is handled as carefully as diphtheria, scarlet fever and other contagious diseases the day will have arrived when the dreaded white plague will lose its hold on the nation.

Why should consumption be reported to the health officers? For the very same reason that other contagious diseases are reported: that steps may be taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

Not long ago a child died in an Eastern family, and because the mother was brokenhearted over her loss, and because the rented house in which it ocurred had hateful associations, the family moved. A little later the mother began to fail in health. As she faded the telltale flush upon her cheeks told the story, and an examination developed the fact that she had a bad case of consumption. Shortly thereafter they buried her beside her child.

Then it was discovered that in the house into which the family moved just before the mother was taken sick a man had lately died of consumption. No effort had been made to clear the disease germs out. There were millions of them there, waiting a victim, and when this woman came in, perhaps more susceptible to their attacks because of her grief and worry over her recent loss, they seized upon her.

The failure to report the case of consumption in that house was directly responsible for this woman's death. Such failures have been responsible for many similar deaths. It is hardly to be expected that physicians will report cases of consumption to the health department before they are required to do so by law, but there should be such requirements in every community in the land.

Out of eighty-six cities of more than 48,000 inhabitants in this country, forty-three, or just half, now require the registration of all cases of tuberculosis, and the requirement is generally insisted upon as rigidly as it is in cases of diphtheria, scarlet fever or smallpox.

The spread of knowledge regarding consumption has saved thousands of lives, and it will save thousands more. The facts to be remembered are these:

It is contagious in a high degree, and its germs must be fought as determinedly as those of any other contagious disease.

It is curable if it is discovered in time.

It is preventable if due care is taken of all cases, and if proper steps are taken to prevent each case being a source of contagion to others.

MORE CEMENT SIDEWALKS.

The plan of requiring cement sidewalks along all properly paved streets in this city, reported in The Herald last night, is a good one and a progressive one, and it should be made the settled policy of the city of Duluth.

The advantages and economies of cement sidewalks need no argument, for they must be apparent to every one. The board walk is a temporary makeshift, which sooner or later becomes a vast nuisance when its usefulness is outgrown and during the period when the loose and rotten boards await the action of property owners.

In the interests of municipal beauty, of economy, and of convenience, cement sidewalks should be required upon every street where the grade has been permanently fixed and a permanent and substantial pavement put in. The plan of extending the cement sidewalk districts discussed by city officials should, therefore, be taken up and put into effect as soon as may be.

It would be entirely improper, of course, to require such walks where streets have not been brought up to grade and permanently paved, because when that is done new walks will be needed, in all probability. For instance, while cement sidewalks would go very nicely on Fourth street, in the residence district, they should not be made compulsory until the street is permanently paved, nor should they be made compulsory on other streets in similar condition.

"DON'T GET THE RATTLES."

Of all the inexcusable nervous mental disorders which men and women, as well as all of the lower animals, are subject at times, the very worst is an attack of what is generally called "a bad case of the rattles." It is the more excusable because it is absolutely unreasonable and because the exercise of even a modicum of plain common sense would show how little valid cause there is for such a temporary trouble.

Yet a man or a woman receiving suddenly unexpected good or bad news—it really matters not which it may be, the effect is the same in either case—"flies up in the air," "has a case of the rattles" and immediately makes himself or herself practically useless so far as faithful attention to duty is concerned. And the strangest part about the whole matter is that the victim cannot give any good reason for the break and is always ashamed afterward of the exhibition.

Again a person who has had a small mishap in work, nearly always makes it very much worse by "flying off the handle," becoming nervously excited and ending up in a regular "ease of the rattles." When such an attack comes in the midst of a difficult piece of work, irremediable damage is often done. More frequently than not, also, the "rattles" is communicated to all with whom the victim is associated and the consequence is that the nerves of an entire office or shop are set on edge to the great disadvantage of business and detriment to duty.

When one feels an attack of the "rattles" coming on, the best thing to be done is to drop whatever one may be doing, put on coat and hat and take a brisk walk in the fresh air. If this remedy be impossible, the next best thing is to stop work for a few moments and give one's nervous and mental system a good, round shaking down with the poker of common-sense. There is next to no use in trying to continue at the task without cessation for the almost inevitable result is a decided breakdown.

"Don't get the rattles" is a resolution that a young man or young woman determined to get on in the world should form at the very outset of his or her career. It may seem hard to conquer the first few inclinations to give way but each victory will make one stronger. By and by, almost before one knows it, one's nerves will be under such control that "rattles" will be impossible. And not only the victor over nerves will feel infinitely better but all associates and friends will be blessed.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"We hear a good deal of the temptations connected with the life of an actress" said R. L. McCauley, ahead of Raymond Hitchcock in "The Yankee Tourist," at the Spalding. "An intimate association with the theater, covering a long period of years, has failed to give any confirmation of them as they are vividly pictured by good people who have no personal knowledge of the stage.

"People of the stage are neither better nor worse than the people of other occupations. The nomadic life in some cases may have a demoralizing effect upon the speech and manners of men and women alike but innate refinement, like innate virtue, is not necessarily subject to variation because of external circumstances. There is no temptation to an honest woman to be otherwise in one place or another. We all know that opportunities to forget the duties of life exist everywhere, in the theater as elsewhere.

"Men without decency and without honor lurk outside the factory, the office and on the street corner, just as frequently as they haunt the stage door. It is a fact that many of the chorus girls in inferior attractions and in some of the better ones are fond of a good time, but the fact that they are on the stage does not make them any more so. They would have this good time whether they were teaching school, milking cows, pounding the typewriter or doing anything else, and they would have just as many opportunities, if attractive enough to please men.

"Year in and year out I have seen plainly dressed women hurrying out of the stage door after the performance, intent only upon an hour of study, or a fitful sleep before the early start for the next stand in the gray of the morning, or, pale and exhausted from an all-day rehearsal, snatching a bite at a neighboring restaurant and reporting to rthe evening performance."

"America's reputation abroad has been greatly injured as the result of publicity given all over the world to stories of corruption, dishonestly, and fraud in public offices and industrial circles," said T. P. Ralph of New York at the Spalding. "Incidentally, her business interests have suffered to a very great extent. In many places, especially in the Orient, what ones were thriving businesses conducted by Americans have dwindled away to nothing.

"A friend of mine was at the head of a flourishing business in American packed meats in Sydney, Australia, when the hue and cry was raised against the packers in this country. It was not long before he began to lose money, and some months ago he shut up his place of business altogether because he could not force or cajole an Australian to buy one pound of food in which he dealt. Now in Australia the men at the front in the cattle-raising business are organizing with a view to the establishment of packing houses of their own. These will supply Australia's needs, and will also ship to the Orient, wrestling the business from the American there.

"The investigation into the irregularities of the life insurance companies in New York were recently followed by the suspension of business of two large agencies in Sydney. American business is being hurt in all countries by the reports that are circulated along this line."

When You're Married.

Washington Star: "Yes," said Thomas W. Lawson, during a discussion of the March panic, "the stock market is a gulleful maze. It is like some men's marriages.

"Mr. and Mrs. Smith, lunching at the Waldorf, met Mr. and Mrs. Jones.

"'Smith,' said Jones, 'we had a great time at the club last night. Sorry you missed it, old man.'

"Mrs. Smith gave a start, and after the Jones' departure, she said in an odd voice:

"'John, you told me you spent the whole evening at the club.'

"'So I did, dear,' said her husband readily. 'And the reason Jones didn't see me there was because he wasn't there himself.'

"'Trying to deceive his wife, I suppose.'"

Piety With Cooking.

Rochester Herald: A well-known bishop relates that while on a recent visit to the South he was in a small country town where, owing to the scarcity of good servants, most of the women preferred to do their own work.

He was awakened quite early by the tones of a clear soprano voice singing "Nearer, My God to Thee." As the bishop lay in bed he meditated upon the piety which his hostess must possess which enabled her to go about her task early in the morning singing such a noble hymn.

At breakfast he spoke to her about it, and told her how pleased he was.

"Oh, law," she replied, "that's the hymn I boil the eggs by: three verses for soft and five for hard."

THE WEATHER.

It was spring again this morning. That soft unmistakable quality of the air that met you as you faced the world this morning was characteristic, and even if the late wintry weather had left a slight touch of chill in the air, that was only to be expected, and besides the sun attended to that promptly. The lowest temperature last night was 30 degs. and yesterday's highest was 58 degs. The weather man expects occasional showers tonight and tomorrow, and he thinks it will be warmer tonight and cooler tomorrow.

A year ago today a brief northeaster was in progress.

The sun rose at 4:30 this morning and sets at 7:37 tonight, making 15 hours and 7 minutes of sunshine.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Barometric disturbances overlie Arizona, Middle Atlantic states and Lake Superior, the two latter causing rains during Wednesday or last night throughout the Lake region, Upper Mississippi and Ohio valleys, Atlantic states, the Red River valley and Alberta. Milder weather prevails throughout the West and Northwest, but it is colder from the eastern lake region southward to Alabama. Conditions favor occasional rains in this section during tonight and Friday, followed by colder Friday afternoon.

Putting Men to Death.

London Chronicle: A correspondent is desirous to know which is the most common form employed in the carrying out of the death sentence. The probability is that most people, if asked, would at once say the gallows, yet this is far from being the case.

The favorite mode appears to be the guillotine, which is employed publicly in France, Belgium, Denmark, Hanover and two cantons of Switzerland; and privately of Bavaria, Saxony, and also in two cantons of Switzerland.

The cheery gallows come next in the running, and is favored publicly in Austria, Portugal and Russia, and privately in Great Britain and the United States of America.

Death by the sword obtains in fifteen cantons in Switzerland, in China and Russia publicly, and in Prussia privately. Ecuador, Oldenburg and Russia have adopted the musket, all publicly, while in China they have strangulations by cord, and in Spain the garrote, both public; and in Brunswick death by the ax, and by the electric chair in New York.

In Italy there is no capital punishment.

DULUTH AND THE HERALD.

Ishpeming, Mich., Iron Ore: Duluth is doing a lot of building and it may be a sign of prosperity that it has a builders' strike. There are many fine business blocks and residences in course of construction. While in that city a few days ago we noticed many residences with copper trimmings. We saw many that were described as being a style of architecture very popular. Frederick Kennedy, the secretary of North Butte Mining company, has just completed a very pretty residence of this type overlooking the lake. George D. Swift is just putting the finishing touches on another North Butte home, a beauty. The North Butte and Steel people have done a lot for Duluth that the latter should be thankful for. And Duluth is a mighty good town, destined to grow and to flourish. It has a splendid site, the outlet of the greatest iron ore mining field in the world, is a splendid distributing point, possessing remarkable advantages in this respect. Duluth is all right and has a progressive lot of people. We wish her all success.

Mankato Free Press: The Duluth Herald wants to know if there is really such a things as spring, or it is merely an idle dream? If there is no spring we will escape that tired feeling. There is some consolation in that. And spring poets are put out of business. That is something for which we should all feel thankful.

Stillwater Gazette: The Duluth Herald asks "is there such a thing as spring, or is it merely an idle dream?" We are not prepared to go on record, but according to the weather man today we think so, but guess not.

Barnum Star-Gazette: The Duluth harbor has been congested lately with over one hundred large boats, the largest number that was ever before gathered at the Head of the Lakes. This denotes the rapidly increasing importance of Duluth as a commercial center and we in the surrounding country are bound to get a share.

Sleepy Eye Dispatch: The Duluth Herald declares that "It is a blot upon the name of religion in this country that ministers are not better paid, and it looks as though it were up to the churchgoers to contribute a little more freely and fully to the support of their churches." It will not be denied that many preachers are underpaid, but it would be interesting to know whether or not most of the salary agitation is not coming from people who are not very well acquainted with conditions within the churches.

Biwabik Times: The Duluth Herald has published the author's introduction to its senatorial serial entitled, "Strong Men Wanted for the Legislature."

Columbia, S. C., State: The Duluth Evening Herald of April 25 comes to us in a mammoth industrial edition of ninety-two pages. When one remembers that the prosperous and keenly progressive city in which so magnificent a journal is published is the "Duluth" over which Proctor Knott created so much Olympian laughter a few years ago, the whole achievement seems marvelous and of the world of Aladdin. But a great empire has sprung up where only the sky used to come down "at equal distances" around the spot where Duluth now stands, and this paper is one of the heralds and one of the creators of this empire of trade and industry. The industrial edition is a splendid illustration of the paper and of the city.

Red Wing Republican: The ninety-two-page special edition of The Duluth Herald is a magnificent demonstration of the power of the press in exploiting the merits, resources and prospects of a powerful city.

Stillwater Gazette: The Duluth Herald wonders if it "can be the spreading of a Fairbanks boom that is keeping it so cold?" If it is—well, we are not with that boom. We want a warm member.

AS TO SPRING.

To the Editor of The Herald:

The first line of your "Passing Show" column of this date asks "What are the spring poets writing about this spring?" How would another kind of spring effusion do for this kind of a spring? How would this answer?

I do not sing, "Whence comes the spring."
I only know,
That snow
And everything,
Comes with the spring,
This spring,
EXCEPT spring.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Remilji Sentinel: Fifteen thousand homesteads will be offered for settlement in Northern Minnesota on July 1. It's cheaper and surely better than foreign soil, and then you may live under the glorious Stars and Stripes and that's worth a whole lot, too.

Paynesville Press: The best that has been said of the recent lamented legislature is that it was the equal of any of its predecessors. This has been a familiar song for forty-five years. Is it not about time that an improvement should be noted?

Red Wing Republican: National righteousness will have to reach a considerably higher state of perfection than it can boast in the year 1907 before it will be wise to turn our swords into pruning hooks and the president better keep his big stick handy for a while yet.

Elk River Star-News: Salaries are being boosted all along the line because of the increased cost of living, but the country newspapers do business at the same old price, notwithstanding the increased cost of everything that goes into making a newspaper. There is need of business cooperation among country newspapers to protect themselves from bankruptcy.

Preston News: It is a little early yet, but did you ever stop to realize that when all is said and done there is not a more promising Republican gubernatorial candidate in sight for next year than the much abused, unjustly villified and generally lied about, Bob Dunn of Princeton?

Wadena Pioneer-Journal: All the people want is a square deal, and if the railroads want the same it will not be long before this question of transportation, which is today the most important matter, now before the people is settled satisfactorily.

Rush City Post: Uncle Joe Cannon is quietly getting knockout blows from the politicians.

Barnum Star-Gazette: Some of our legislative friends who expect to get inside jobs at the state capitol in preference to serving in the house or senate will have grouches galore when they find that the salary raise bars them for two years.

Mora Times: The tonnage tax was defeated by the legislature, not because the members thereof thought the steel trust was paying enough taxes, but because of the injustice it would do to the northeastern portion of the state. A tonnage tax would cause this section to bear more than its share of state taxes, the effect of which would be to reduce the amount of taxes that could be raised locally. A shrinkage in local revenues would retard development and affect the entire area that is tributary to Duluth and the range towns. It was for these reasons and because of the bright prospects for a large steel plant at Duluth that the tonnage tax was defeated.

Austin Register: If automobiles occasionally now act crazy, what will happen when they begin to use alcohol instead of gasoline?

DETROIT WOODMEN WINS CONTEST FOR MANAGER.

Norfolk, Va., May 16.—The only contest in the election of the board of managers of the sovereign camp, Woodmen of the World, was settled last night when E. D. Campbell of Detroit was elected the seventh member of the board to fill the vacancy made by the death of State Senator C. K. Erwinn of Milwaukee. The contest was between Campbell and William P. Thompson of Columbus, Ohio. The other members of the board elected have already been announced.

PRETTY SCHOOL TEACHER BEATEN

Acquitted by Trustees But Chastised by Her Enemies.

Chardon, Ohio, May 16.—After the school trustees had acquitted Miss Pearl Gray, the pretty teacher of the village school, of the charge of adjusting her garters and displaying too much of her dainty ankles in full view of her class, two women of Chardon took it upon themselves to remonstrate with her for her conduct. Their remonstrances took the form of waylaying Miss Gray on her way to school and administering a sound beating to the dashing teacher.

Miss Gray is 25 years old and usually would be able to take care of herself in such an encounter, but the two women proved too much for her. Another two were in reserve, but they were not needed and waited, according to the teacher, while their companions administered the punishment. Miss Gray was taken home in a carriage after the attack and says that as soon as she recovers she will swear out warrants for the women. The attack is the outgrowth of charges which were filed against the handsome schoolma'am a week ago when the women of the village declared that her conduct in school was not up to the Chardon standard. They said that her habit of adjusting her garters while the class was in session and of sitting with her feet propped up on the desk while she read novels caused a display of dainty ankles, hose, lingerie and legs "which annoyed the pupils."

When the trial was held, however, the village school trustees decided that the teacher was not guilty and refused to discharge her.

CARUSO MAKES BIG HIT ON LONDON APPEARANCE.

London, May 16.—Caruso, the tenor, made his first appearance of the season at the Covent Garden theater, in "La Boheme," last night, and his reception was a triumph. It recalled the scenes familiar to Covent Garden theater at the time of Patti's phenomenal success. Caruso was in splendid voice. He was repeatedly called before the curtain and cheered.

ALARM IS NEEDLESS

Duluth Grain Man Declares Crop Scare is Premature.

Says There is Likelihood of Good One, Despite Snows.

"These bulls who have been assuming that wheat at a dollar a bushel was low enough, make me tired," said a prominent trader on the floor of the Duluth board of trade today.

"There is no more reason why July wheat here should sell at a dollar a bushel or more, than that I should go down here and jump off the Aerial bridge; not a bit.

"It is admitted that the green bug and other things have done some damage to the Southwestern crop, the winter wheat, and I am willing to concede that conditions in Europe are not as favorable as they might be, but as far as declaring that the Northwest is in danger of not having a good crop and that prices should go much higher, I think it is drivel.

"What if the season here has been late? The season for the Northwest will be a good one anyway. I have known of instances right here in this part of the country where late snow storms have done the early wheat lots of good.

"There is no reason for becoming alarmed about the success of the Northwestern crop just because there are a few frosts and snow storms in May. The snow does not hurt the wheat unless it is headed and it is too early for that.

"The bulls in the wheat market have tried to let the idea pervade that practically no wheat has been sown yet in the Northwest. That is a great mistake. Fully 70 per cent of the Northwestern crop, and with good weather from now on, what is sown now will catch up.

"It is only in some parts of the Canadian Northwest, in the northern part of North Dakota and the northern part of Minnesota that seeding has not yet been accomplished.

"Admitting that damage has been done the winter crop and the foreign crops, there is no need of worrying yet about the Northwestern crop. Even if the Southwestern and the European crops are largely a failure, that will mean more dolars for the Northwesterners if the bumper crop that I confidently predict comes in."

That is one side of the story. The bulls have a different tale to tell and claim that dollar wheat is here to stay and that the price for this year's crop will be established at or above the $1 mark.

CUTS THROAT WITH GLASS

Demented Farmer Breaks Tumbler and Slashes Throat at St. Mary's.

After breaking the glass in which an attendant had brought him some medicine over the bedstead, thus providing himself with a weapon, Joseph Richards, a demented Culver homesteader and farmer cut his throat with a jagged fragment, yesterday, at St. Mary's hospital, severeing the jugular vein, in spite of the crudeness of his weapon, at the first slash. He sank back upon the pillow, and when discovered by one of the nurses, about five minutes later, he was dead, his head hanging over the side of the bed, and all the clothes stained crimson with the stream of blood.

Richards had been in the hospital about twenty-four hours when the suicide took place, and it is thought that the deed was committed at the height of a fit of melancholia, induced by brooding over ill health.

This is the third time that the suicide has been at the hospital for treatment, and on former occasions he has given evidence of a failing mind. On one occasion he was seized with a fit of madness, and attacked the orderly with such fierceness that had not assistance been instantly tendered he would probably have killed him.

Richards was 42 years of age, and, as far as is known here, was unmarried.

DOUBLE MURDER MYSTERY.

Mutilated Bodies of Two Men Found in the Chicago River.

ITALY FOR DISARMING IF PLAN BE PRACTICABLE.

Rome, May 16.—Foreign Minister Tittoni said that the Italian government was in favor of the limitation of armaments and would even take part in a discussion of the question at The Hague, but the government agreed with the Austro-German reservations on the subject, because of the difficulty of finding a practical, acceptable solution of the problem involved.

The foreign minister said the British government had not yet adopted a concert formula to be proposed to the conference. Should such a formula be not considered practically acceptable by the great powers it would be dropped, thus postponing the discussion of the question without causing a conflict or arousing resentment. Nobody could deny that the British point of view was prudent and wise.

THE "MISTAKE" IN INEBRIATE LAW

House Engrossing Clerk Tells How Wording Was Bungled.

To the Editor the The Herald:

An article in The Herald of May 13, headed "Misprint Is Amusing," is not as amusing as the facts in the case. When the bill was introduced in the house the section read: "It shall be lawful," etc. To correct the error the house adopted an amendment, offered by Mr. Timberlake, inserting the word "not" between the words "shall" and "be." The bill was then engrossed and sent to the senate reading: "It shall not be lawful," etc. As the bill was not reprinted for the guidance of the members of the upper house the senators supposed the house members had failed to correct the language, and Senator Nelson's amendment, changing the word "lawful" to "unlawful," was apodted by the senate. Then this amendment, together with the other senate amendments, was concurred in by the house and the bill was repassed as amended. The bill then came to me for re-engrossment and the "mistake" was discovered.

The matter was brought to the attention of Dr. Hollister, the author of the bill; Mr. Timberlake, who offered the house amendment; Senator Nelson, who "corrected" it in the senate, Dr. Dorsey, Dr. Gates and several other members of the two houses who were interested in the measure. The amendments were printed in the journals of the respective houses, and the only possible way to correct the language was to have the bill recalled, amended and repassed by both houses. As there was considerable opposition to the measure in the senate it was decided to allow the bill to become a law "as amended" rather than to take the chances of repassing it in both houses. The matter was explained to Executive Clerk Grimmer before the bill was presented to the governor for his approval.

The original bill, both engrossed copies and the enrolled bill are all on file in the office of Secretary of State Schmahl, and with the printed journals of the house and senate show how the language of the bill was reconstructed.

TWO BIG BATTLESHIPS ORDERED BY ENGLAND.

London, May 16.—Orders have been given to lay the keels of two battleships of the Dreadnaught type. It has been understood that in case the proposal for disarmament took definite shape in the conference only one Dreadnaught would be laid down. The order for two such ships is construed as Great Britain's acknowledgement of Germany's refusal to entertain the disarmament question.

WORLD'S MILK RECORD HELD BY BAY STATE COW.

New York, May 16.—The world's record milk production for a year by a single cow has been broken by the Guernsey, Dolly Bloom, according to the report of Secretary William H. Caldwell, submitted at the annual meeting of the Guernsey Cattle club here yesterday. Her record for the year was 17,-297 pounds, or about 2,023 gallons. She is owned by F. A. Ames of Boston. The following officers of the club were elected: President, J. M. Codney, Brookline, Mass.; secretary and treasurer, William H. Caldwell, Peterboro, N. H.; executive committee, ex-Governor W. D. Hoard of Wisconsin and Charles L. Hill of Rosedale, Wis.

FIREMEN OVERCOME BY BLAZE IN BARGE'S HOLD.

New York, May 16.—Half a score of firemen risked their lives today in saving six of their comrades who had been overcome by flames and smoke in the hold of a burning oil barge at the White Star line piers in the Hudson river. The six had gone into the hold when they thought the fire had been overcome and were cutting away a partition when a burst of flame and smoke swept through the opening and enveloped them. All fell unconscious and were seriously burned before they were rescued.

REVISION BOUND TO BE AN ISSUE

But Committees Must Look Into the "Demand," Says Allison.

Des Moines, May 16.—"In the next campaign, and possibly in the next session of congress, the tariff is certain to be an important issue," said Senator Allison at Dubuque. "The personalities of candidates necessarily will enter into the decision by the people.

"There is a great difference between revision of the tariff and its practical destruction. If Bryan is elected he will attempt to 'revise' the tariff in such a way as to reduce it to a strict revenue basis. He is a free trader and surely would have his party behind him. But there will be a Republican senate, so that there would be no revision at all. On the other hand, any Republican president would proceed to revise the tariff along protection lines, reducing the rates to a protective basis in all cases, but not abandoning the theory."

"Do you expect any immediate action on the tariff?"

"It will be necessary soon for the proper committees of congress to take up the tariff question. That is to say, they must investigate the demand for revision itself, find out what the people want and where serious inequalities exist, so that congress can proceed intelligently.

"In some places talk of revision is strong, elsewhere the idea of touching the tariff is unpopular. There is enough talk of tariff revision to justify attention being paid to it; but until the committees of congress act it will be impossible to estimate the strength of the movement throughout the country, and for that reason investigation will have to be made soon for the purpose of determining whether action is necessary or not."

SENSATIONAL SUIT.

Five Farmers Accused of Threatening to Hang Iowa Man.

Oskaloosa, Iowa, May 16.—Mrs. J. L. Small, a well known farmer's wife, has filed a sensational suit in district court asking for damages of $5,000 and naming five well-to-do farmers as defendants. She asserts that the five came to the Small home one night and demanded that she give them $500. She said they then threatened to hang her husband if they did not receive that amount. Her screams, she says, brought aid and the men ran away. Since that time she avers she has been in daily fear that she would find her husband hanging in some secluded spot.

PRIEST'S ESTATE IN COURT.

Maquoketa, Iowa, May 15.—For the possession of the $24,000 estate of the late Rev. Father Luehrsmann, which he bequeathed at his death to his housekeeper, Anna Sassen, one of the hottest legal fights ever held in the state began in district court. The priest's mother, now insane, started the suit, and her son, Dr. Luehrsmann, is prosecuting it. They charge that the priest was unduly influenced by his housekeeper to will his estate to her.

IOWA'S SMALLEST BABE.

Waterloo, Iowa, May 16.—The smallest baby in Iowa today has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Archie Crandall of this city. When born eight weeks ago she weighed 1 pound and eight ounces. Now she weighs 4 pounds and 2 ounces and is doing well. She was placed on a pillow and kept warm by hot water bottles in the true insubator fashion. Crandall is an Illinois Central conductor between Waterloo and Albert Lea.

BREAD DYSPEPSIA.

Bread dyspepsia is common. It affects the bowels because white bread is nearly all starch, and starch is digested in the intestines, not in the stomach proper. Up under the shell of the wheat berry Nature has provided a curious deposit which is turned into diastase, when it is subjected to the saliva, and to the pancreatic juices in the human intestines.

This diastase is absolutely necessary to digest starch and turn it into grape sugar, which is the next form; but that part of the wheat berry makes dark flour, and the modern miller cannot readily sell dark flour, so Nature's valuable digester is thrown out and the human system must handle the starch as best it can, without the help that Nature intended.

Small wonder that appendicitis, peritonitis, constipation and all sorts of troubles exist, when we go so contrary to Nature's law. The food experts that perfected Grape-Nuts food, knowing these facts, made use, in their experiments of the entire wheat and barley, including all the parts, and subjected them to moisture, and long continued warmth, which allows time and the proper conditions for developing the diastase, outside of the human body.

In this way the starchy part is transformed into grape sugar in a perfectly natural manner, without the use of chemicals or any outside ingredients. The little sparkling crystals of grape sugar can be seen on the pieces of Graue-Nuts. This food therefore is naturally predigested, and its use in place of bread will quickly correct the troubles that have been brought about by the too free use of starch in the food, and that is very common in the human race today.

The effect of eating Grape-Nuts ten days or two weeks, and the discontinuance of ordinary white bread, is very marked. The user will gain rapidly in strength and physical and mental health. "There's a Reason."

GOVERNOR FOLK LOOKS INTO KANSAS CITY GRAFT.

Kansas City, May 16.—Governor Joseph W. Folk arrived here this afternoon to confer with the police commissioners in regard to the investigation of charges of police corruption to begin tomorrow. The commissioners have communications from two detectives in which they admit receiving cash rewards of more than $100 each, which they had not reported to the department. Other new developments, it is said, will sustain some recent charges of graft.

CUTTING OUT OF TONGUE PROVES FATAL TO SINGER.

New York, May 16.—Word has been received in this city of the death in Milan of Arcagenio Rossi, the former buffo of the Metropolitan opera house, who attempted suicide last week by cutting out his tongue. He had shown signs of insanity during his last season at the Metropolitan and this was attributed by some to the hardships he suffered during the earthquake in San Francisco. His colleagues believed, however, that the loss of his voice caused his mental breakdown.

MAY GO EAST.

President of California "U" Gets Offer From Massachusetts.

Boston, Mass., May 16.—Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president of the University of California, has been offered the presidency of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology to succeed President Henry S. Pritchett, who announced his resignation last December to devote his attention to the Carnegie foundation. The election is subject to confirmation by the vote of the entire corporation which will meet on the last Wednesday of this month, but it is thought that they will approve of the executive committee's choice of President Wheeler. President Wheeler is a native of this state, having been born in Randolph in 1854.

Dr. Liebig, the famous German Chemist, says that beer is "liquid bread." By this he means that beer is a food—full of life-giving, health-sustaining qualities.

The value of beer as a food is becoming well known, and it is now used by many who have hitherto looked upon it as a beverage only.

Pabst Blue Ribbon

is the most nourishing of all beers—because it contains every particle of the healthful, wholesome nutriment of the malt and all the tonic properties of the hops from which it is made.

The Pabst Eight-Day Malting Process follows nature by slowly transforming the substance of the barley into pure, nutritious food. The quality of the materials used and the Pabst method of brewing make Pabst Blue Ribbon not only a pure beer, but a healthful, tissue-building, muscle-building, life-giving, "liquid bread." Drink Pabst Blue Ribbon, and you put health and strength into your system.

DILEMMA OF THE LINER

In Longshoremen Strike Show Trade in Wines From Italy.

French-Labeled Liquor, Which is in Reality California Claret.

New York, May 16.—The strike of the Longshoremen has caused great loss to shippers and shipping interests and demoralized transportation in the city to a very great extent. The great freight steamship Crettc, plying between New York and Mediterranean ports, had to start upon her European trip with a great portion of the cargo which she brought to New York unloaded. It was saving money for her owners to do this rather than be delayed at this port and incur the expense and loss consequent upon such detention.

Thousands of boxes and casks of Italian wines were among this returned cargo, and the wine merchants of the city have been much disappointed by nonreceipt of the stocks they had purchased or had consigned to them.

The statistics for imported wines show that this country has largely increased its importations of wine from Italy and Portugal during the last two years, and that Italy leads all other countries in the quantities of wine shipped to the United States. This is largely owing to the fine steamship service now existing between the United States and the Italian ports, and while this same service is instrumental in draining Italy of hundreds of thousands of her population, it, by its freighting facilities, adds largely to the revenues of those who cultivate the Italian vineyards by furnishing them quick and secure access to the best market of the world for their wines and fruit.

The importation of foreign wines will soon reach its maximum, and, indeed, is only kept up now by the increased number of Italians and other foreign immigrants who still use the wines they were accustomed to in their native lands.

The wines of California, Ohio, Virginia and New York state are recognized by Americans generally as being purer than the major part of the foreign decoctions sold under the names of wines.

One of the best posted wine dealers in New York city informed me that the greater part of what is sold in the United States as French claret, and bears on the bottles well-known French names, is in reality good, sound California claret, with an addition of 10, 20 or 30 per cent of water.

Even then, he remarked, this watered wine is the equal of the true French claret, but the consumers are paying fancy prices for wine they can buy in California at less than half the money they pay for it under its foreign names, and for water which they can add without cost at their homes. The Tehauntepec railway, opened this spring, is being used now for large shipments of California wines to the Eastern ports of the United States, and later on it is expected that European shipments will be made over the same route. This route will have the call certainly until the Panama canal is opened for commerce, and as that will not be available for nearly ten years, the Mexican authorities hope to have that time so thoroughly demonstrated the advantages of the Tehuantepec route for shipments from points of the west coast north of Salina Cruz, the railway's Pacific terminus, that they will be secure in their traffic connections and tributaries to that road.

There is no doubt that the volume of traffic via Tehuantepec will increase to enormous proportions during the next few years, and that hundreds of thousands of tons of freight from the west coast of the United States will be included in the transportation. A recent visit to the west coast of Mexico convinced the writer that the trend of travel from San Francisco and the part of California lying south of San Francisco was decidedly to the western coast of Mexico.

At Guaymas, Mazatlan, Manzanillo, Acapulco, Californians are now to be found in considerable numbers, and are rapidly increasing, while their activity in business circles and their growing sphere of operations at each of the ports named gives clear evidence that they are building strongly, broadly and securely as to future commercial power and influence.

The railways now being pushed to all the ports named will necessitate a steamship service to the Pacific ports of the United States which will in a very brief period of time require daily arrivals and departures and be the means of transporting thousands of passengers and in immense tonnage of freight. By the time the Panama route is opened the commerce of the Pacific coasts of Mexico and the United States will be tremendous in volume, as it will increase more in the next ten years than it has done in the four centuries the Pacific ocean has been known to the Caucasian race.

Mexico will be benefited by the opening of the Panama canal route, but Mexico is now enjoying unusual prosperity, and within two or three years will have her Eastern and Western coasts closely connected by rail, and with flourishing foreign commerce in all her ports will have the cities and states of her interior provinces, so long isolated from the coasts, brought into the midst of business life and commercial activities.

By the time of opening of the Panama canal the growth of our Eastern steamship business in the Atlantic and the Gulf of Mexico and the increase of the Pacific shipping interests referred to will be so vast that the Panama canal, the Tehauntepec route, the Mexican Central, the Southern Pacific and all the other transcontinental lines will have all they can do in the way of transportation. The transportation lines must grow up with the country. The time was 30 or 40 years ago, that railways were built and the country had to grow up to them.

That era is gone, never to return. Railway managers now will be pressed and spurred to action by the needs of the people, and too much importance cannot be attached to the remarks of James J. Hill, in which he so clearly and forcibly depicted the lack of proper and necessary facilities.

This country, and indeed the entire North American continent, is populated now by millions who are the most active individuals and the quickest-moving masses in sentiment and in action that the world has ever borne upon its bosom. They are after results, and speedy results. The railroads are their special hobby just at present, and they will continue to be until they are acceptable to the public in every way. There must be more lines, additional mileage in existing lines, more locomotives, more cars of every description, better and more extended service, and people and all else and they will have them as speedily as they can get them.

This means plenty of work at the iron ore and coal mines; demand for labor at mills, furnaces and coke ovens; plenty to do in the machine shops, car shops and foundries; work for hundreds of thousands in the various labor of yards, docks and roads.

This absolute necessity for more railways is the result of the stimulus of prosperity of the masses of the people, and it again causes greater prosperity by the widespread distribution of the money required to be disbursed in the execution of this record-breaking work of railway building and development. The capital will beg rocured by the railway companies; the work will be done as speedily as possible, and every month and every year for many to come will witness continued prosperity, if the demands of labor are not pressed to an unreasonable degree.

There is no lack of capital to do the work; there will be no lack of employment, no cessation of demand for labor, unless labor, by exorbitant rates and unfair demands, retoes prosperity for both labor and capital.

Public opinion has condemned recently unwarranted use and unreasonable demands of invested capital. Public opinion will not tolerate unfair action by either capital or labor, and will have no temporizing with the arrogance of either if prosperity of the country is endangered by such arrogance.

Harper's Weekly: A young matron of Baltimore, upon entering her nursery, found her youngest in tears.

"Why, what's the matter with Harry?" she asked the nurse.

"He's mad, mum," explained nurse, "because I wouldn't let him go to the Simmonses' across the strate."

"And why wouldn't you let him go, North?"

"Because, mum, they're havin' charades, so he said, an' I wasn't sure whether he'd had thim or not."

RUEF OWNS HIS GUILT

San Francisco Arch Grafter Makes Sensational Confession.

Names Mayor Schmitz, Railroad and Telephone Magnates and Others.

San Francisco, Cal., May 16.—Abraham Ruef, former "boss" of San Francisco and arch grafter, serious and pallid, pleaded guilty in Judge Dunne's court yesterday afternoon, to the crime of extortion.

In pleading guilty, Ruef made an impressive address from manuscript, stating that he had commenced his career in politics with high ideals for himself and for the city, but that conditions had broken him down, and he now desired only an opportunity to make reparation and restore his character before the world.

Ruef's plea followed a consultation with his attorneys, Aeh, Shortridge and Murphy, who withdrew from the defense with short statements.

In opening, Ruef told of the intense grief of his aged father and his sister, and continued:

"Last night I gathered my family about me in this prison house of mine and prepared them for the act I had determined upon. That would mean one day of sorrow. To go on would have meant months of agony and death.

"I don't know what my sentence will be. For myself I do not greatly care. I say to you now, and you can judge if I boast, that no man possesses physical nerve more than I do. I could face a crowd of 5,000 men, everyone with a rope in his hands and calling for my life. I could face them calmly and meet my end without flinching, but the suffering of those I love I could endure no longer. I say I do not know what my sentence will be. If it be five years across the bay, I can meet that when it comes. I believe that with my personality and leaving out of consideration the feelings of those who love me, I could spend five years in San Quentin almost as comfortably as in a hotel at Napa Springs. But, if the step I took this morning had meant five years or fourteen years, or 1,400 years, the fear of that would not have deterred me.

"I have made no confession. I know much. Some things I shall tell; some things I shall not tell. Whenever an innocent man has been forced into corruption against his will, that man I shall protect. Whenever a man, be he high or low, has entered into corruption with his eyes open, that man I shall expose.

"I will not say at present that Mayor Schmitz is guilty of the charges that have been brought against him, or that he is innocent. I will say this: I wanted to break away from Schmitz before his reelection, a year ago last November, and said to him: 'I am sick of the whole thing and I want to go out. I can't stand for all these union labor bums you have gathered around you and will appoint. They would cost the patrn off a house.' In answer the mayor begged me to stay with him, and he put up the argument that these fellows must be allowed their share, or we could never hold the machine together. There was all too much truth in that. I stayed with Schmitz and I stayed with the machine that at great labor and pains I had built up.

"I found then that I had taken a step away from the high and clean ideals with which I honestly assure you I originally entered the political field. I found, in short, that to hold this machine together I had to permit and connive at corruption. In the state of affairs existing it was necessary. But I myself never asked a dollar of any man; never took a dishonest dollar from the public. The things that I did were things that hurt no one. Before the boodle board of supervisors was elected I warned against the crookedness in office. Immediately after their election I got them together and said to them: 'Now you, if any one of you takes a dollar, I'll prosecute you myself,' and meant it. I was in earnest, but I found that I could not carry out my threat and keep the machine from going to pieces. Schmitz was right about that.

"And so much of this corruption was needless. Needless, I mean, from the giver's end of the deal. Take, for instance, the trolley franchise. Everybody wanted the street railways electrified. There would have been no opposition if the application had been granted. But the press of San Francisco had taught the public to believe that every officeholder was a crook; that the whole city government was rotten from stem to stern; that no privileges could be obtained unless they were paid for. It was strange that those systematic attacks, though frequently grounded, or nothing more truthful than personal suspicion in private quarters, should have led the corporation astray as to the real situation. The officers, of course, are not bad men. They do not belong to the criminal class. They no more desire to commit the crime of bribery than the newspapers or the public desire that it should be committed. But franchises are necessary to the conduct of their business, and when they are taught to believe that such privileges cannot be obtained without the aid of dishonest influences, they frequently do commit the crime of bribery rather than forego the thing they desire.

"And so it goes. Suppose that the Unit- $2,000 or $3,000 apiece for the supervisors $2,000or $3,000 apiece for the supervisors if the supervisors would call at the United Railways office. And suppose that these supervisors tripped up there one by one and took the dirty money. Such an arrangement would mean almost instant exposure and scandal and absolute defeat of the end sought. But suppose that the United Railways came to me, a lawyer, and a political leader, and asked me to accept a fee to manage the matter for them. Suppose I refused. Suppose then, these supervisors got wind that there was money to be had and I found out that they meant to get it. Would I still refuse to handle the matter for them and see my machine smashed, or would I accept the fee and connive at the corruption?

"I have not said to you that Patrick Calhoun or Thornwall Mullaley or the officers of the two telephone companies or anybody had committed the crimes charged against them. I have not made any confessions. But I repeat: Some of the many upon whom has fallen the soot of the newspaper conflagration were innocent of evil intent, but became involved by compulsion and these men shall not be made to suffer further shame and disgrace by any confession of mine. Others there are who went into the smoke with their eyes open, knowing full well what they were about and as to these I shall speak freely and fully when the time comes.

"Mr. Burns, of the prosecution (who interrupted Ruef for a few minutes while he was making the statement) has now just asked if I were willing to go before the grand jury this afternoon and 'tell all.' I told him I would certainly not. I don't give a damn for the grand jury. Why should I? There is this about it: when I have shaped my course and made up my mind in every particular as to how I shall act then I'll be willing to go before the grand jury or before William J. Burns or Heney or anybody they may appoint and tell them what I have decided to tell.

"I have no doubt that my action today, my determination to face about and my future actions in this regard, will serve with very many people to brand me as a turncoat and a coward. I can only declare and maintain that my motives are good. I am aware that I have made many enemies some very bitter and very powerful. I hope that I have too some friends. I have never pulled a man down. I have helped many a man up. There are 3,000 personss in this city now occupying positions gained for them through my help which are paying higher salaries than ever they before knew anything about. No one of them ever paid me a dollar for the service I rendered, no one of them ever contributed at my request a single dollar to a campaign fund.

"One word finally. I never in my life did a man a wrong. I never asked a favor. I never sought a fee. I never took a dollar from the public. I have been guilty, and I confess it with more emotion than you can see, of connivance of corrupt acts. For my guilt, in so far as I am guilty, I must suffer, and I am ready to accept the penalty, whatever it may be; but of many things the press has so bitterly and so relentlessly charged me, I am as innocent as you are. This is true of many others besides myself who also have been made to feel the flame of unfair accusation."

As he concluded, Ruef fell back into his chair, almost fainting, and the tears coursed down his cheeks.

Judge Dunne, at the termination of Ruef's address, made no comment except to continue the case two weeks for sentence.

Assistant District Attorney Francis Heney was probably as much astonished as anyone by Ruef's facing about in open court, with all its attendant possibilities of municipal exposure.

The specific charge to which Ruef yesterday pleaded guilty was that of extortion of $1,175 from the proprietors of the Bismonico Hotel restaurant, the amount being paid to secure a renewal of their liquor license, which had been revoked because they served drinks in private rooms.

There is no want ad. printed in The Herald to-day which does not strongly interest at least ten people—and there are some that will strongly interest thousands.

NEWCOMERS TO AMERICA

Subject of Discussion by the Mora Study Club.

Problems of Immigration Are Presented by W. A. Howard.

Mora, Minn., May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Mora Study club of this village has just finished a most interesting season in the study of present immigration problems. The last session was particularly instructive and a paper by William Asher Howard was read and discussed at length. The paper in part was as follows:

"Recently, during a single month, 150,000 aliens entered this modern Garden of Eden—called America. More than a million came last year, and nearly 4,000,000 have come during the past four years. They are coming at the rate of 5,500 per day—at the rate of 20,000 per week. A stream of Italian immigrants is pouring into the United States large enough to make, in a single year, three cities of the size of Duluth. Of Bohemians, Magyars, Jews and Slavs enough are coming in a single year to make a city the size of Minneapolis, while the Jews and Poles fleeing from Russia would make a single city the size of St. Paul in a year. If this peaceful army of invaders should choose to make its home in Minnesota the population of the state would be doubled in two years.

"Of those who came in 1905, 220,000 over 14 years of age could neither read nor write in any language. Think of a population of 220,000—enough to make 230 villages of 1,000 inhabitants each—with no use whatever for book, paper, pen, ink or printing presses. In 1905, of those who came, 750,000 had no trade or occupation.

"Formerly the immigrants were of the same race of people to which we belong and came from the same countries from which our fathers came. They were men and women of courage, energy and of lofty purpose, and were in every respect in sympathy with our ideas, our hopes and our aspirations. They became valuable additions to our citizenship.

"But the character of our immigration has changed in recent years, and the phrase 'new immigration' has been coined to distinguish the present prevailing type from those who came in former years. Formerly the immigrants as a rule came from Northwestern Europe and were from Germany, Norway, Sweden, England, Ireland, Scotland, France and Switzerland. Now the immigrants are made up largely of Italians, Poles, Slavs, Bohemians, Bulgarians, Hungarians, Turks, Jews, etc. These new classes of immigrants are unfamiliar with our language, ignorant of our manners and customs and have no conception of our political and governmental system. Many of them come here without any intention of adopting our language, without any intention of becoming citizens, home owners, men of family, or of permanently remaining here, but come simply to make money and then return to their native lands.

"But of the immigrants now coming, many of them possess but one good quality. They are industrious. They want work and they want money. But a man may be industrious and still be a menace to a republican form of government. He may be a hard worker and yet be dirty, miserly, ignorant, of an anarchistic or socialistic turn of mind, a shirker of social duty, a danger to the public health and a source of great weakness to a government like ours.

"The low plane of living of many of these people makes even their industry a curse instead of a blessing. The American laboring man is expected to be clean and comfortably dressed; he is expected to marry and support in comfort a wife and children; he is expected to own a home that will be a credit to the neighborhood in which he lives and a pleasure to his family; he is expected to read books, newspapers, magazines and to take part in the social and political life of the community.

"To accomplish all this he must have short hours of labor and good wages. He should not be obliged to sell his labor in the open market in competition with the illiterate immigrant, who has no desire to become an American citizen—who, can neither read, write or form intelligent opinions on questions of vital interest to himself and to the country at large—who takes no interest in political affairs and has no knowledge of our social and political institutions—who never marries and therefore has no family responsibilities—who has no knowledge of what American civilization stands for and who lives in hovels and scorns sanitation.

"Such immigrants are a brake on the progress of Twentieth Century civilization—they tend to lower and degrade the standard of living among American-laboring men."

There is presented herewith a group picture of the Mora Study club, composed of twenty-one members which for several months has met each week for the study of these questions. The text-book studied was "Aliens or Americans," by Howard B. Grosse. Rev. C. W. Lawson was leader of the class and last week the closing exercises of the class were held in the M. E. church. The church was fittingly decorated with flags, plants and cut flowers. The motto of the class, "A Million Emigrants, A Million Opportunities, A Million Obligations," was nicely displayed. Mrs. W. S. Titus read a paper on "The Alien Advance." The paper by W. A. Howard dealt with some "Momentous Problems of Immigration," and that by Mrs. W. S. Southwick was on "The Problem of the Christian Churches of America."

ANOTHER QUARRY

To be Opened at Sandstone During the Present Summer.

Sandstone, Minn., May 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—That the Kettle river sandstone is becoming a very popular stone for building, paving and street work is assured by the fact of another quarry which is to be opened up at this place this summer. A corporation has been formed by Twin City business men to open up a large quarry just down the river from the Kettle River Quarry company's plant, which has proven so successful.

This new corporation has a capital stock of $500,000 and will be known as the Thompson-Sandstone Quarry & Power company. The nature of its business will be the quarrying and manufacturing of building stone and paving material and the generation, storage, manufacturing, using and selling of electricity for light, heating, power and other purposes.

The head office will be in St. Paul and the officers of the company are A. W. Thompson of St. Paul, president; C. O. Lundquist of Minneapolis, secretary; W. A. Cowing, treasurer. The board of directors are A. W. Thompson, W. A. Cowing, F. R. Duxbury, W. R. Duxbury, C. O. Lundquist.

WOUNDED BY A STRAY BULLET

Mrs. Kueffell of Little Falls Probably Fatally Injured.

Little Falls, Minn., May 16.—Mrs. Kueffell of this city was probably fatally wounded by a stray bullet, Monday evening. Mrs. Kueffell was in the back yard, and, as she knelt to pick up a few sticks of wood, a shot rang out and, with a cry of anguish, she fell to the ground with the life blood gushing from a gaping wound in the back and breast.

The bullet was of a large calibre and came from the rifle of a careless hunter, who was roaming on the banks of the Mississippi river hunting small game.

The accident happened about 6 o'clock and, although medical aid was rushed to the house and everything within human conception is being done for the injured woman, small hopes for her recovery are entertained. Mrs. Kueffell's close relations have been summoned to the bedside.

FORECLOSURE OF CEMETERY

To Proceed, But It Must Continue to be a Cemetery.

St. Cloud, Minn., May 16.—Attorneys Blanchard and Cameron of Little Falls were in the city again relative to the case against the Scandia Valley Lutheran church trustees. It will be remembered that foreclosure proceedings were started by a creditor of the church a short time ago and the property was to have been sold last Saturday. The church people wanted the judgment opened up, basing their contention on various grounds. There is a cemetery located on the church property and this is where the court halted in reference to the foreclosure proceedings. An order was made by the court Tuesday that the foreclosure should proceed, but there is a proviso that the ground shall never be used for anything but a cemetery.

BAD RIVER RISING

And Town of Odanah Is Threatened With Inundation.

Ashland, Wis., May 16.—The town of Odanah, on the Bad River reservation, eight miles from Ashland, is threatened with being inundated by water. The Bad river began rising Monday and by Wednesday night one-third of the residents had to move to higher grounds, leaving their homes surrounded with several feet of water. In some cases it was necessary to secure boats in order to remove household goods.

The river is higher than it ever has been in the history of the Odanah and the sawmill of the Stearns Lumber company was forced to shut down on account of the flood reaching their engine room and flooding the fire boxes. The river is still rising and fears are entertained for the wagon bridge which spans the river just above the mill. Part of the business street of Odanah is over a foot below water level and very little business is being done.

TANNERY STRIKE

At Kenosha Marked by Clashes Between Strikers and Officials.

Kenosha, Wis., May 16.—The strike at the plant of N. R. Allens Sons' tannery was marked with clashes between the strikers and tannery officials yesterday. The first trouble occurred in the beam room, where a few of the office men and superintendents were making an effort to save the leather in the vats. One of the strikers gained an entrance and leveled a pistol at the men. He was arrested. A large number of detectives are here from Milwaukee to preserve order.

The strikers demand an increase of wages ranging from 25 to 50 per cent and in addition some demand a half holiday Saturday with full pay. Late yesterday afternoon the management offered to grant the same scale of wages paid in Milwaukee tanneries, with the further stipulation that no reduction in the present rate of wages paid to the men should prevail.

FINLANDER CUT AND HE MAY DIE

Row at Ironwood May Result in Charge of Murder.

Ironwood, Mich., May 16.—As the result of a cutting affair which took place here last night, Louis Haestron may have to face the charge of murder. Oscar Ronda, who, it is alleged, was knifed by Haestron, lies at the Union hospital here, and the physicians say he cannot recover.

Both men are Finlanders and reside at the Newport mine location, about two miles from here. They came into town during the evening with two other men, and the party began drinking. On the way home, it is claimed, they got into an argument as to who could whip the other. Ronda hit Haestron and blacked his eye.

Haestron, it is claimed, drew a knife and inflicted several severe cuts on Ronda. There is a deep gash in the back of his head four or five inches long; the left side of his face was laid open from the eye to the throat, and there is a wound in the side which exposes the vital organs.

Haestron was arrested by Chief of Police Nick Frank and Nick Anderson, his assistant, and is being held pending the outcome of Ronda's wounds. He admitted at the jail that he cut Ronda, but said Ronda was beating him.

BIGAMIST RELEASED

"Rev." Charles A. Lyon Finishes Four-Year Prison Term.

Was Run Down by Girl Whom He Had Deceived.

Sioux Falls, S. D., May 16.—The release from the penitentiary of Charles A. Lyons, after having served four years for bigamy, recalls a famous case of its kind.

Lyons first appeared in Sioux Falls between four and five years ago. He had formerly been a minister, and was known here as Rev. Charles A. Lyons, and for a short time filled the pulpit of one of the local churches. He met and fell in love with a highly respected young woman of the city, whom he married.

Then he mysteriously disappeared after a short married life, and there were circumstances which for a time indicated he had been the victim of foul play. Not the slightest trace of him could be found after a persistent search.

But the deserted wife, who at first was firmly of the opinion that the missing man had been the victim of foul play, finally became convinced that he was a villain and had voluntarily deserted her. She then single handed commenced a search for him, which after several months, resulted in his capture in the Twin Cities. Knowing he was a bookbinder by trade, she wrote personal letters, with a description of her supposed husband, to all the bookbinderies in all the leading cities of the United States, and through this means he was located.

It was not long after she commenced her search before she became aware that Lyons was alive and well, and that she was no wife at all, as Lyons had one or two other wives living, from whom he had never been legally separated.

RUN OVER BY HARROW.

Farmer Badly Scraped by Contact With Farming Implement.

McVille, N. D., May 16.—Archie McMillan had an experience which he does not care to repeat very soon. He was harrowing, and, in trying to control his team, which was quite a spirited one, one of the lines broke. In order to stop the horses it was necessary to run around ahead of them and, as he did, they became more frightened and started out on a run, pulling the harrow completely over him. Although badly scratched, he was able to catch the team, which ran some distance, and took them home.

Grand Forks—Grand Forks painters say they have won the strike which has been on for two weeks. They are employing nearly full crews, and say they have no difficulty in filling the places of the strikers.

That the Indians are becoming civilized, and the squaws are no longer meek women who will bear the cruel treatment so often their portion, was illustrated yesterday in Judge Cowan's court in Devils Lake, when Annie One-House secured a decree of divorce from her husband, Louis One House, charging cruelty, desertion and non-support.

Redfield—Charles Decker and James Morris have been arrested on the charge of securing money under false pretenses. The crime alleged consisted in the passing of old bills, issued and guaranteed by the state of Georgia before and during the Civil war. The bills are pasted together and resemble many national bank notes of the present day.

STATE DEPOSITORIES.

Public Examiner Schaefer Opposes Action Favoring National Banks.

St. Paul, May 16.—National banks failed to win out as active depositories for state funds at a meeting of the state board of investment yesterday, on account of the opposition led by Public Examiner Schaefer. The state board of investment consists of five members, the state treasurer, auditor, attorney general, secretary of state and public examiner. A resolution was introduced that the number of active depositories be increased from two in St. Paul and one in Minneapolis to four in St. Paul, four in Minneapolis and three in Duluth.

The resolution was presented by Secretary of State Schmahl. It had teh indorsement of the state treasurer, but was at once opposed by Mr. Schaefer. He believed in a policy of the state board of deposit, favoring state banks whenever possible, and this resolution would be a move in favor of the national banks, Messrs. Dinehart and Schmahl contended that national banks should be given just as much consideration as state banks. Auditor Iverson is said to have sided with Schaefer. The attorney general was not personally present, being represented by one of his assistants who did not want to cast a deciding vote in such an important issue. So the matter was laid over to be further considered at a special meeting to be held this afternoon.

STATE TO SAVE MONEY

As Result of Fire in Printing Office at Minneapolis.

St. Paul, May 16.—The state printing commission yesterday held a special meeting to give a representative of Smith & Harrison, the Minneapolis printers recently burned out, a hearing. This was the fire in which so many state reports in course of preparation were destroyed. The firm promised to have the reports duplicated inside of thirty days. The state commission agreed to have the amount of the work and the number of volumes somewhat reduced, so that the work will eventually cost the state $8,600 less than the original contracts demanded.

Seven-Year-Old Boy Painfully Injured at Lake Linden.

Lake Linden, Mich., May 16.—The 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Axford was injured while at the Hungarian fall Sunday, and though the accident was quite painful, it is not thought that it will prove serious. It is stated that the boy, in company with several others had gone to the falls, and while walking along the brink of the precipice, had lost his footing, precipitating him to the bottom. Medical assistance was summoned and at latest reports he was resting as well as possible. This is the second accident of this nature to occur this year, and still parents allow their children to journey there unaccompanied.

HAPPY WOMEN

Plenty of Them in Duluth, and Good Reason for It.

Wouldn't any woman be happy,
After years of backache suffering,
Days of misery, nights of unrest,
The distress of urinary troubles,
She find relief and cure?
No reason why any Duluth reader
Should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. M. McGillvray of 1228 Superior street, Duluth, Minn., says: "As I told in my former statement, I was troubled with my kidneys a good deal for a year or two and had heavy dull pains through my loins. My back tired easily, especially if I reclined or sat long in one position. In the morning I felt tired and worn out. The kidney secretions were unnatural and I was troubled with persistent headaches. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at the Duluth Drug Co.'s store, and began to use the preparation. I received wonderful benefit from this remedy. It imparted strength to the different organs and banished the backaches and headaches. I am glad to re-endorse such a valuable remedy for backache and kidney trouble."

Eau Claire.—Shortly after 8 o'clock Tuesday evening the floor of the west room at Schwahn's hall on North Barstow street started to cave in, and, but for the hurried exit of the fifteen members of the Germania Singing society gathered there, would have collapsed entirely. As it was, the first floor settled six feet. A large stove, in which a fire was burning, was tipped half over and the stovepipe fell apart. No one was seriously hurt.

STEEL PRICES TEND UPWARD

Scarcity of Products and Increased Wages Demand Advances.

Cleveland, May 16.—The Iron Trade Review in its current issue says: After several weeks, during which pig iron received by far the greatest amount of attention, it is now comparatively quiet in that market and finished lines are more frequent subjects of discussion in the trade. Owing to the scarcity of crude steel and increasing labor costs there is a tendency toward higher prices. A striking illustration of this tendency is shown in tool steel in which prices on ordinary tool steel have recently been advanced $10 per ton, while in some cases the advances on high speed steel have amounted to $20 per ton, due to increases in wages and higher cost of crude materials. The National Tube company has issued new discount cards showing an advance of $4 per ton on merchant pipe, which applies to business taken since March 8. It is not expected, however, that there will be a general advance in prices of finished products, as such action is not favored by some of the leading interests.

While in most centers the buying of pig iron has not been so active as in preceding weeks, this was to be expected, and there are no signs of weakness. On the contrary the market is firm and in nearly all centers prices on foundry grades have been advanced 50 cents to $1 per ton. Charcoal had advanced $1. There is some inquiry for bessemer pig for first quarter of 1908, but no sales have been made. A few sales of foundry iron for first quarter of 1908 are reported. The demand for spot iron is not so insistent and in the Central West there is less talk of heavy importations from England. For the first quarter of next year the ordinary quotation is $18.50. Birmingham and $22 valley for No. 2 foundry.

LITTLE GIRL DIES FROM HER BURNS

Margaret Morris, Terribly Scalded Tuesday, Dies at St. Mary's.

Margaret, the 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Morris of 2709 Helm street, who was scalded so seriously Tuesday night by falling on to a kettle of boiling water, which had been left on the floor by her mother, died yesterday at St. Mary's hospital.

Mrs. Morris is prostrated with grief and blames herself unduly for the accident which resulted in her daughter's death. It happened while she was preparing to scrub the floor and had taken the kettle from the stove and set it on the floor just before beginning work. She stepped out on the back porch for a minute and during the time that she was out of the room the little girl came toddling into the kitchen from the dining room, failed to notice the kettle of hot water, tripped over it, and fell, overturning the kettle and deluging herself with the boiling water. Her mother at once sent for a physician and the child was taken to St. Mary's hospital, where an examination revealed serious burns on limbs and abdomen, which resulted in her death yesterday.

The funeral was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock from the residence, Rev. C. C. Sutton of Aitkin, Minn., the family's former pastor, conducting the services. Interment will take place at Forest Hill.

"Its quality has made it famous."

SPORTS OF THE DAY

PRESIDENT WROUGHT UP

Dr. Percy R. Glass Evidently Has a False Impression.

Thought Duluth Had Undertaken to Make Over Schedule.

Today is the date on which the season of the Northern-Copper Country league opens, but in Duluth the opening game has been postponed and the first game of the Houghton series will be played Saturday. The ceremonies, which were to have attended the opening of the season today, have also been postponed to Saturday and on that afternoon, they will be carried out in full, the parade, starting from the city hall at 2 o'clock. According to advices received this morning, the season will be opened at Winnipeg today.

Dr. Percy R. Glass, president and secretary of the league, is evidently suffering from a cerebral cyclone, or some other mental affliction judging from a message received by The Herald from Houghton this morning. Dr. Glass must be having a terrible time trying to distinguish between the postponement of the opening game on account of wet grounds and the postponement of the opening of the season. The message, which is as clear as fine clay mud as to Dr. Glass' exact state of mental perturbation, is given for the fans to assimilate as best they can:

"When Houghton received word from Duluth that the opening of the season had been postponed on account of snow and bad ground, the management of the Giants and President-Secretary Glass were non-plussed. Glass says no club can postpone games. He is running the league this year and will not be handled about as he was last season. The season opens today, Thursday, despite arrangements made in Duluth. The Houghton games may be postponed and Duluth pay the Houghton club postponement guarantee. This is official from Glass to the correspondent. The umpire has the power to postpone the game, but not the opening of the season."

Glass must be laboring under the impression that the Duluth club intends to set the whole season ahead two days, throw the schedule all out of kilter, play six games with Houghton on as many days, and throw the league into confusion generally. Dr. Glass is badly mistaken. The Duluth club isn't seeking to usury any of Dr. Glass' authority, but the condition of the grounds is such that play would be decidedly inadvisable today, if not impossible.

A. W. Kuehnow made a trip to the grounds today and found that a game could not be played. The grounds are wet and soggy and a warm sun for several hours would hardly put it in condition. Had the ground not been plowed up this year, it is probable that the opening would take place today, but the diamond has not settled after being plowed up and the rain has thoroughly soaked it. A game today would be a hardship on the players, which would be entirely unwarranted.

A successful opening is looked for Saturday. The afternoon of the last day of the week is a half-holiday in a great many of the business establishments of Duluth, and a large number will have an opportunity of attending the opening game, who would not be able to do so today. It is expected the grounds will be in good condition by that time and a much more satisfactory exhibition can be given.

SUBMARINES IN SEVERE TESTS

Lake and Octopus Sent Down for 24 Hours, Submergence.

Newport, R. I., May 16.—The submarines Lake and Octopus, after some preliminary maneuvering under the direction of the naval trial board, were submerged late yesterday near the naval coaling station at Bradford, for their twenty-four hours' submerged habitability test. The members of the trial board decided not to go down on either of the boats, but remain near by on the gunboat Hist and the submarine tender Nina during the twenty-four hours.

There are nine men on the Lake and sixteen on the Octopus. At the point where the boats went down the water is from twenty-four to twenty-nine feet deep, according to the tide. After having been down twenty-four hours, the submarines will come to the surface and the board will inspect the condition of the boats and of their occupants.

Ignorance may be bliss, but it's not prosperity. To prosper you must read Herald ads.—and then you are no longer ignorant.

HARRIMAN'S SCORING NOT KELLOGG'S FINAL REPORT.

Chicago, May 16.—Frank B. Kellogg, special attorney for the government in the investigation of the interstate commerce commission of the affairs of the Harriman lines, said last night: "That story from New York outlining supposed recommendations made by me to the interstate commerce commission sounds like a rehash of my closing arguments in the case on April 6. In my closing address, I sugested legislation to correct certain evils relative to the community of interests. A copy of my address was returned to me for the customary corrections and the corrected copy was forwarded to Washington a week ago. I have made no statement to anyone regarding this case and don't intend to."

DELAYS THE GOLFERS

Little Play on Northland Links Thus Far This Year.

Putting Greens Will Not be Used for Few Weeks.

As it has done with every other athletic organization in the city, the backward spring played havoc with the Northland Country club, the golfers especially being disappointed over the weather conditions, which will not allow them to play. In former years, by the middle of May, the golf season would be in full swing and the links at the club would have their full quota of golfers each afternoon from early in April onward. This year, some of the more venturesome ones have been out on the grounds, but the general play has not yet begun, nor will if for a week or so yet, unless there is a marked change in the weather.

The uncovering of the greens, which were protected from the snow all winter, has shown them to have withstood the winter well. The protection afforded by the brush and snow, which covered the grass, prevented it from freezing and the grounds are now in excellent condition. The greens are not being used yet, however. The weather has not been favorable for the growth of the grass and it is still too small and tender to allow the players on it. A short period of warm weather, with plenty of sunshine, would put the greens in excellent shape for play.

The new putting green equipment was received some time ago and installed by the club professional. The grounds have been placed in better shape this year than they had ever been before and the members of the club are counting on having a very successful season. The first fair day will find a large number of the members on the links, for all are anxious to get into action, and it is expected a great deal of interest will be taken in the game in Duluth this season.

CULLED FROM THE SCORE BOOK.

Mr. Kuehnow says a game may be played tomorrow, but the opening ceremonies will not be held until Saturday. If an opinion may be ventured, it is extremely improbable that the first game of the season will be played tomorrow. The management would bring a storm of protest worse than a Lake Superior blizzard down about its ears. There are no more superstitious people on the face of the earth than baseball players and fans and certain disaster would face the White Sox and the league, in their minds, should the first game be played on Friday.

If Dr. Percy R. Glass is going to mount upon his high horse and lift his voice in protest every time a club acts independent of him this year, he will be in hot water all season. The clubs haven't time to consult the executive of the league every time they are confronted by a predicament, which requires quick action, and there is no reason in the howl which he sets up over the postponement of the opening game here.

"Kid" Taylor and his men are having a rough time of it on their first trip. They made the trip to Hibbing, only to be met by a wild snow storm and now they are compelled to remain idle in Duluth for two days, on account of the muddy diamond at Athletic park.

Warm weather struck Winnipeg yesterday and the Canadians will open the season with the aristocratic gentlemen from the copper mines of Michigan today. Winnipeg had its share of wintry weather this week, but the sun will put the diamond at Happyland in shape in short order.

MONUMENT IN WOMAN'S MEMORY

First White Woman to Cross Western Slope of Alleghanies.

Fairmont, W. Va., May 16.—Mrs. Charity Prickett was the first white woman to cross the western slope of the Allegheny mountains and to brave the unknown terrors of what was then an unexplored wilderness; a place where savages and wild beasts roamed and where the appearance of a white face was the signl for blood spilling. It has long been considered fitting that the memory of this brave woman should be honored, and, after many months of effort, arrangements have about been completed by which expression will be given to popular appreciation of her courage.

On or about the Fourth of July a monument will be unveiled and appropriate exercises will be held in memory of Mrs. Prickett by the citizens of Marion county, who are proud of the fact that this county holds her remains.

Mrs. Charity Prickett, accompanied by her husband, a brother-in-law and one or two other sturdy pioneers, crossed the Allegheny mountains about 1738. Avoiding the roaming bands of Indians as best they could they made their way westward until they reached the Monongahela valley. Traversing this unknown section for some distance they finally located near the mouth of a large creek, which has since been known as Prickett creek.

Other white settlers began to arrive in this territory, and in a few years a small settlement of whites had been established. The growth of the little community was watched with jealous eyes by the Indians, who roamed unhindered through those wilds, and finally they held a council of war, and the extermination of the white settlers was agreed upon.

A lone Indian, whose friendship had been won through some act of kindness shown him by the whites, crept into the little settlement and warned them of the impending danger.

Gathering up their small belongings as quickly as possible, the Prickett family, together with the other settlers, hastily retreated into the forest. Their flight, however, was soon discovered, and the savges followed their trail and overtook them. A bloody battle followed. The sturdy settlers fighting with great desperation, and the Indians were finally beaten off, many of their number being killed. Several of the little group of pioneers also lost their lives, among them being Isaac Prickett, the brother-in-law of Mrs. Charity Prickett. A noted Indian chief, Fighting Wolf, was killed in this battle, which occurred in 1794.

Having administered a crushing defeat to the Indians, the little party returned to their homes and, with the exception of a few attacks of a minor nature, suffered no serious trouble from the Indians.

Mrs. Prickett lived to be 95 years of age, and many of her descendants now live in this community, and will take part in the memorial exercises to be held in her honor. She died in 1833.

The monument which is to perpetuate her memory is a handsome shaft, costing about $1,500.

FILE ANSWER TO COMPLAINT

Defendants in Erickson's Appeal Case Have $675 Counter-Claim.

Answering the complaint of Frank Erickson of Eveleth, who has appealed from the order of the probate court disallowing his claim against the estate of Mary Erickson, deceased, and Neil McInnis, administrator, the defendants allege that Mary Erickson came to this country in 1894, that her name was Mary Anderson and that on her demise she left several minor heirs.

It is alleged that in the early part of 1895 she began to live with Frank Erickson and held herself out as his wife, that as his purported wife the two accumulated and held property jointly and paid their bills from their joint earnings, all the items claimed by Erickson being paid out of the common fund. The defendants claim Erickson's alleged claim against the estate "was merely an afterthought, a scheme to defraud the legal heirs of the deceased."

The defendants also allege that Erickson's pretended claim is not a mutual, open, current account, but consists of several separate independent accounts covering a period of more than six years.

It is claimed that "If Erickson was not the husband of Mary Erickson, as he represented himself to be, both in private and public and in the conveyance of real estate, then he was living in an unlawful condition with the decedent and whatever money he loaned to or paid out to support and continue the unlawful condition, in violation of public morals and public decency, for which plaintiff can have no redress in court."

As a counter claim against Erickson, the defendants allege that he occupied a dwelling house belonging to the estate of Mary Erickson, deceased, from Sept. 23, 1902, without paying the rent, which would amount to $675. The defendants ask judgment for that amount.

PLOT TO MURDER CZAR CONFESSED

Soldier of Palace Guard Owns Up—Leaders Still Unknown.

St. Petersburg, May 16.—A terrorist conspiracy against the life of Czar Nicholas, the existence of which had been suspected for some time, has been revealed by the arrest at Tsarskoe-Selo of a soldier of the guard regiment who confessed the acceptance of a large money bribe to assist in the murder.

Suspicion was directed to the soldier by the fact that he was seen to have considerable money. He was placed under observation. When he noticed that he was being shadowed he became panic stricken and confessed and then begged for protection.

All threads of this conspiracy, which is radically different from former attempts, are not yet in the hands of the secret service men. A few underlings have been apprehended, but the real instigators and the men who furnished the money have not been identified.

It is thought that the money used is part of the proceeds of several political robberies committed last fall and winter.

TOOK DEAD CHILD'S TEETH.

London Correspondent New York Sun: An extraordinary example of superstition comes from Freiburg, Saxony, where a rural undertaker was prosecuted on the charge of desecrating his own daughter's grave. The accused man with many tears told the following story:

He had promised his daughter before her death that he would not fill her grave with earth, as she imagined that her soul would not rest if he did. Therefore he covered the grave with planks on which he placed earth. Later the daughter appeared continually in visions and declared that her spirit could not find peace.

The father in the presence of two superstitious peasant women uncovered the grave to see if the coffin was safe. Then he opened the coffin and took some teeth from the mouth. These were supposed to bring luck. He gave some of the teeth to the women and kept one which he wore as an amulet. Since then, he says he has always had luck in business and even won right along at cards, while one of the woman who lost the tooth given to her had met with misfortune in everything ever since.

The court recognized the man's sincerity, dismissed the charge of profanition and let him go with a reprimand.

THE EDITOR WANTS NEWS.

Texmo, (Okl.) Times: My friend, help the editor in his wild-eyed search for news. When your friends come to you, if you are not ashamed of it, tell him; when your wife gives a tea party, if you have recovered from the effects of the gossip drop in with the news; when a baby arrives fill your pockets with cigars and call; if you go to a party steal some of the good things and leave 'em with the item in our sanctum. If your wife looks you come in and let us see your tears and tender sympathy through the paper; if your mother-in-law has died don't be bashful about it; give in all the commonplace news. In short, whatever makes you feel proud, sad, lonesome or glad submit it to our twenty-four-carat wisdom and see our matted locks part and stand up on end with gratitude, which will pour from every pore like moisture from the dew besprinkled earth.

Woman Thought Marriage License All That Was Necessary.

John Bartl, who was arrested this week charged with beating his wife, and who alleged in his defense that the woman in question, with whom he had been living, was not his wife, was arraigned in municipal court this afternoon.

The woman, who appeared as a witness, admitted that no minister had ever pronounced the ceremony making them man and wife, but said a marriage license was secured in Milwaukee which brought this allowed them the privilege of living together until the ceremony was preformed, and said they intended getting married as soon as they had money enough.

SCARES THIEVES.

New York Sun: The wave of crime which has been passing over Paris lately and which the police seem quite powerless to prevent has caused the citizens to adopt various devices to protect their homes from invasion by the apaches. Dogs are found utterly useless, more than one family has sought protection by placing a stand with a parrot or cockatoo possessing a specially loud squawk just inside their flats—almost every one in Paris lives in a flat.

An electrical engineer, however, has found a phonograph the best possible watchman. He locates it with the megaphone attachment directed to the door and he has wired the hall and arranged batteries so that the moment the door is opened three inches the phonograph gets into action.

It begins to bellow "Police! Help! Murder! Thieves!" and it keeps it up until he gets out of bed and turns off the current.

His flat is well furnished with plate and other valuables and several attempts have been made to rob it, but no thieves have yet withstood the phonograph bombardment. They run so quickly that they are never caught.

GOOD FISH LINES.

Outing Magazine: In the proper care of lines one is apt to balk. It is too much trouble to unwind and dry every time one returns from a hard day's fishing, and the most we do is to rewind parts to test if any kinks are there. A silk unvarnished line is the worst to kink, so that it is always advisable after the season is over to take the lines from the reels and wind them on a large wheel. A careful and prudent brother angler has devised a unique plan of winding his lines around a bicycle wheel, after the tire has been removed. Placing the bicycle upside down he works the pedals and winds it through an oiled rag. This softens the lines and keeps them moist and pliable, as well as prevents cracking. I refer to the oiled trout and salmon lines—plain silk or linen need only to be well dried before winding. Even the best and most expensive lines become weak and worthless through want of proper care and attention—it is impossible to prevent mildew or rot, unless a line it put away for the winter in ship shape order. The sloven who throws his flies, leaders and lines all in a heap, with the idea of arranging them on arrival at the river, finds himself very miserable and ill-tempered—especially when in the company of friends who are kept waiting till his tackle is fit for work.

VALUE OF THE THUMB.

Chicago Tribune: "Solomon says thumbs up," because the thumb is said to be worth fully one-third the entire value of the hand. The different fingers are far from having all the same value before the eyes of the law. Much the most important among them is the thumb, for without it the hand no longer is a pincers, but merely a claw. The French court allows in damages 15 to 25 per cent value for the right and 10 to 15 per cent for the left thumb. The Austrian schedule gives 15 per cent for the left to 25 per cent for the right. In Germany 20 to 28 per cent, and even as high as 33.3 per cent, has been awarded. The percentage is based on 100 as the total value of the hand, industriously speaking, before the accident.

HUSBAND'S GOOD LOOKS.

Question of Marriages of Homely Women and Handsome Men Discussed.

New York Sun: "Look at those blowy women around here and welcome to their good-looking husbands. I'm not envying the silly things," said Mrs. Rubberino to her caller. "I'd like to see the inside of a woman's head that hankers for a handsome husband, 'deed I would.

"There never was a good-looking husband yet that wasn't the selfishest beast! A woman can get some good out of a homely husband, but I'd like to see the woman that can do a single, solitary thing with one of these Adonis handsome husbands.'

"What made me think of it is that that dowdy little Mrs. Lookitmee upstairs is always afflicting folks with her constant gabble about her husband's good looks. He's just a great, big, hulking, mush-faced thing, with a smooth face and nothing one bit striking about him except his conceit.

"But to hear her talk you'd think he was a regular Apollo Belvidome—Belvidere did you say? Well, I always heard it called Belvidome, and everybody can't be wrong but you, my dear—a regular Apollo Belvidome, and everybody that knows her just hates to see her coming, she's so crazily addicted to the idea that she's married to the handsomest creature that walks on two legs.

"Lots of good his good looks do his wife! Everybody knows that he's a perfect hog, and that he spends every bit of the velvet money that he gets hold of on clothes for himself, while she, the poor, little, humble, mild-mannered thing, never has a rag to her back. No wonder he's ashamed to go out with her!

"Don't you imagine that I haven't often told the silly creature how everybody talks about the way he dresses and the miserable duds that he provides her with; but what do you suppose she says? Why, that her husband is in the tailors' supply business, and that therefore he gets his clothes made for little or nothing, and that's why he can afford to dress the way he does.

"My husband, when I told him, had the nerve to say the same thing about Lookitmee's being in the tailors' supply business. I didn't believe a word of it and don't now; but even if he is in that business, and even if he gets his clothes at a snap, wouldn't you suppose that he'd be ashamed to go swaggering around in his purple and fine linen, and his wife looking like something the cat dragged in?

"I'd just like to see my husband outshine me in clothes; 'deed I would!

"Another woman that's always bragging about her husband's good looks is that talky-talky little Mrs. Iamitt in the main floor court flat. She, too, thinks that her tall, lanky, skinny, long-shanked man is the finest looking thing on the globe.

"He's one of these men with tallowy, short cropped curls all over his head—and, oh, yes, what do you think she asked me the other day. She asked me if I didn't think her husband had a head like an Antonine? An Antinous, you say? My dear, I'd be greatly obliged to you if you wouldn't try to catch me up every time I open my mouth, and it's Antoine, anyway.

and who ever heard of such a silly name as Anthous? But that's what Mrs. Iamitt asked me.

"'Has he not a head like an Antoine?' she asked me, just like that.

"He has not!' I told her, just like that, and the way she did close up right there like a jackknift—it was laughable, 'deed it was.'

"Well, she's another victim of what she calls a good looking husband. She's as homely as a plate of pancakes herself—did you ever notice how these hideously ugly women manage to get hot dog good looking men, while really fine looking women generally marry regular pie faces?—but she is terribly plain, and, of course, she can't help but know it, and that's why she is just worrying day and night for fear thit some other woman is going to take him away from her, and, of course, he knows that she's crazy over him and takes advantage of it to bully him and browbeat and boss her around as if she was the dirt beneath his feet. I'd just like to have a tintype of a man I'd be afraid of losing, 'deed I would.

"I wouldn't care if he was as handsome as a picture and had the manners of a Chesterville—my dear, it is not Chesterfield. I know better—the manners of a Chesterville. If he tried to spunk up to me on account of his good looks I'd trim him.

"If Iamitt stays out ten minutes later than his usual time to get home from the office she's in a perfect panic for fear that he's run away. When Iamitt says anything she looks up into his eyes as if he was an orator—oracle? Yes, so it is—I mean to say oracle—and it positively makes folks sick to see the way she defers to him in everything.

"Mrs. Heepbig, in the third floor rear flat, has got the idea, too, that her pudgy, dumpy, fat faced husband is the grandest looking being on earth. Can you imagine a woman saying anything so groveling as that her husband could have married any one of a thousand enormously wealthy women, but that he picked her out in spite of her poverty? Of course that's kind of a left handed compliment to her herself, but I really don't believe she meant it that way, for she has a face that would stop a steam hammer, and Heepbig must have been suffering from snow-blindness when he married her.

"A fine time of it she has with her stodgy looking husband. Everybody around here knows that he's fooling her all the time, for he's away from home often, as much as twice a week of nights when he tells her that he goes to his lodge, but we all know about that lodge business—all of us except Mrs. Heepbig, and she never even suspects a thing, the poor crackbrained thing.

"He's another one that spends every thing he makes in adorning himself and never gives her a cent. I know that she never has a penny, because the other day when I met her downtown and we came home together on the surface car she offered to pay the fare and dug around in the bottom of her pocketbook so long that I could just see that it was a bluff and that she didn't have the dime to pay with.

"So, just to make sure, I pretended that I didn't have anything but a $5 bill, and then I just leaned over and watched her while she floundered around with her fingers in that empty pocketbook. Finally, she had to come right out and own up to it that she didn't have a cent, but she tried to make me believe that she'd left her money at home.

"I paid the fare then, of course, but I showed her up all right, and she hasn't been so blowy about her since.

"Yes, my darling, thank the Almighty my James looks like a valentine—please don't deny it and try to tell me that he's quite fair looking and presentable, for I know different. But he's a good husband, even if I don't ever let him think so—that's the sure way to ruin a husband, to commend him for anything he does, no matter how liberal—and I wouldn't trade him for all of these male prettles, that look like clothing store dummies, from here to Hackensack and back, 'deed I wouldn't!"

"GARTER SELLER" PROMOTED.

Brooklyn Eagle: One of the most noteworthy figures on lower Broadway has disappeared. No, I do not refer to any millionaire or captain of industry! I have in mind a man whose face has been known to every pedestrian on Park Row and Broadway, below that point, for twenty years, as a seller of men's garters. He has been stationed upon the steps of one of the best known banks in this metropolis—always in his humble capacity.

The fact has been known to the well-informed in the locality that this man was one of the highest paid detectives in New York. Although he was apparently selling stocking supporters for men at 25 cents per pair, he was closer to the desks of the cashier and the paying teller of the bank behind him than any other man in the great establishment. In the woodwork of the outer doors, that appeared so swing as freely as the air of heaven permitted, were two large spots that seemed to every other eye than his like brass screw heads.

They were in reality electric buttons that kept him informed of the absence or presence of doubtful characters or detected thieves inside the bank. When the danger signal was given to him, the vendor of garters turned a knob at the left hand of the entrance to the bank and the front doors were closed by secret bolts, rendering impossible the escape of all persons inside the bank. The man who had presented a forged check or a stolen bond was caught.

The detective would then abandon the few dollars' worth of stock in garters or ear mufflers, as the season served. He would enter the bank by a narrow iron door at the left of the main entrance and place the alleged culprit under arrest.

That man has saved hundreds of thousands of dollars for the great bank he served. But now that a new building is completed, he has been promoted to a place inside, and the most complicated machinery ever known for stopping the escape of a suspected character is under his control. Not only is he able to close the doors leading to Broadway, but he can instantly warn every man on the main floor who handles money to seal himself inside the steel lattice that surrounds him. Success by a "pocketbook dropper" or "a man on the paying line," who reaches for the cash handed to the man in front of him, is impossible.

CHOOSE THEIR COFFINS.

People Who Make Sure of a Comfortable Burial.

New York Sun: "Do people ever pick out their own coffins? Why certainly," said the undertaker. "There have always been people who have kept a coffin on hand for themselves, ready for use when required. Don't you know you read in the papers every now and then of some old citizen who has just died, off somewhere in some country town, who had had his coffin in his house for forty years? We were once called upon ourselves to bury a man who had had his own coffin ready for, I guess, a longer time than that.

"This was a man who at the time of his death had come to have large means and to be widely known. When he was young and living in the country there was one day when he took a hickory cut down on his home place a hickory tree that he thought would provide good material for a coffin; and out of some of the planks sawed from this tree he had fashioned for himself a coffin which he stored away in the garret of the old house.

"He had no thought of dying then, but he liked that hickory tree and he wanted to be buried in a coffin made from it.

"Well, in due time the old gentleman did die, an old man then, and dying, he indicated his desire to be buried in the old hickory coffin. We sent men up into the country and got it down out of the garret of the old house and brought it here, but when we had got it here it wouldn't do at all, it was far too small.

"He was a young man and slender when he had the coffin made, but now with the large of many years, and with his vigorous employment through many of those various employment through many of those ous employment through many of those yours in great outdoor enterprises, he had come to be a man of large frame and body and the old coffin simply wouldn't do. But his survivors desired that his wishes should be respected, and then we took the old coffin apart and used it as a lining for the burial casket in which he was buried. And so he was buried in the old hickory coffin after all.

"We once had in storage for years a coffin of basket construction that was sent to us by a gentleman who brought it frm a country which the burial customs are different from ours. Many of the burial caskets such as we use are of very solid construction; some indeed are of metal, as of aluminum, and some are metal lined; all are calculated to preserve the body for a long time. But not so the basket coffin. It is calculated to preserve the body for a long time. But not all of us have the same views about burial, and it was the desire of the owner of the basketwork coffin that when he died he should as soon as might be, go back to mother earth.

"People do sometimes nowadays make their own selection of the sort of casket they would prefer to be buried in; young people, sometimes, though those making such selection would more likely be old.

"There came to us once, with no thought of death, a young man who selected a casket such as he would like to be buried in if he should die. He did die, not many months after, and his relatives buried him in a casket such as he had selected.

"Some years ago we had a visit from a man of not much if any more than middle age and of good health who selected a style of casket that satisfied him. We told him politely and cheerfully that he had no need for a casket and didn't appear likely to need one for a good many years to come, but he chose, nevertheless, not despondingly at all, but because he wanted to, the sort of casket that he preferred, and told us that he should make provision for its supply and where the papers providing for it would be found when it should be required. We have not yet been called upon to furnish this casket and so we have no doubt that he is still living.

"While, as I have said, it would be most likely older people who actually made selection of their burial caskets, and these might not prefer to make any unusual provision for their funerals, and while these might not select the casket in which they desired to be buried yet they might prescribe the manner of their burial.

"Of course there are now many thousands of people—there have always, to be sure, been many such—who, though they may leave no property and make no will, do in one way or another make in life, suitable provision for their funeral expenses. It is a very common custom now, for the survivors of one dead to make their selection of the casket in which the deceased is to be buried.

"In old days when everybody was buried there was no such choice; however much they might differ in the materials used in their construction and in the quality of their workmanship and finish, all coffins were alike in shape, and a mahogany coffin, for instance, was still simply a mahogany coffin.

"But now three-fourths or more of all the people dying, in the large communities, at least, are buried in caskets, which are very different in design and appearance from the old-time coffin, and which are produced in very great variety as to their actual styles, as to the materials used in them, as to modifications of shape and as to their cost.

"Now it is a very common thing, if not indeed the prevailing practice, for the survivors of the deceased to make a selection of the casket in which the body shall be buried. Such a selection is often made from the illustrated catalogues of the casket manufacturers, or it may be made from among actual caskets displayed in his establishment by the undertaker; or it may be that the undertaker will take those making such selection to the warerooms of the casket manufacturer. Here caskets may be seen in very great variety, but presenting to the eye an appearance different indeed from that which we would be presented by an array of an equal number of the old-time coffins, for many of these caskets are of fine and costly and beautiful materials, as they may be also elaborate in workmanship, while they are all as far removed as it is possible to make them from the old-time coffin in form.

"Modern burial caskets are now made in such variety as to the woods and other materials used in their construction that it is quite possible, if that should be desired, to select one that shall harmonize with the fittings and furnishings of the room in which it is placed. The arrangement of the flowers may add to the beauty of their effect.

"Funeral flowers have often been photographed, thus to preserve a remembrance of them. It is now not unheard of to photograph the room containing the casket with the flowers surrounding it. While the casket may be costly the flowers may be equally so; a blanket of violets, for instance, making a coverlet over the casket and reaching on either side of the floor, costing, it may be, $1,000 or more."

Chicago Tribune: A railroad terminating in Chicago announces its annual sale of unclaimed baggage. The 2,894 articles to be sold include some things left in the cars and many more which were checked but never claimed. The fact that 564 umbrellas and sixty canes are among the number shows that the travelling public is both careless and suspicious. But the seven baby carriages, thirty-six bicycles, 270 trunks, 759 satchels and suit-cases and the other things which were checked, but for which the railroad has had no call, and for which it has not been able to find an owner after a whole year, have something mysterious about them.

Admitting that one-half of the articles failed to be delivered through the fault of the railroad employes, although that is an improbably high proportion, there remain hundreds of pieces of baggage which are abandoned by the owners. Why? How could thirty-six persons go away and forget their bicycles or seven their baby carriages after checking them? How could 50 to 1,500 persons be content to leave their trunks and satchels and never ask for them? Did they drop dead or were they carried off to jails, hospitals and asylums. Here is a mystery to which the imagination in vain tries to find a solution.

THE RURAL POSTOFFICE.

Rivals of Country Postmaster Often Make His Life interesting.

Human nature is seen at its best in a rural postoffice.

It is no reflection on the intelligence or the character of the great majority of rural postmasters and postmistresses to relate the idiosyncrasies of a few, says the Chicago Chronicle.

Not long ago an inspector was dispatched to visit a postoffice in a sparsely settled Western community. There had been complaints of lack of adequate service and of inattention on the part of the postmaster.

When the inspector arrived at the cross roads store in which the postoffice was located he was confronted by the sign, written on a card and tacked on the door:

I HAVE GONE FISHING.
WILL BE BACK SOON.

While the inspector was standing looking at the sign in blank astonishment the postmaster, returning from a three days' fishing trip, came up the road. He was whistling. In his hands were fishing tackle and a string of fish.

The inspector grasped the old man by the shoulder and with all the dignity and authority of a representative of the government accusing a recalcitrant servant, demanded an explanation.

"So you're from the department, eh?" asked the old postmaster. After looking at the commission of the inspector the old man unlocked the door of the house and invited him in.

"Now, I've got you, I want to tell you this. I've been tryin' to get rid of this office for three years, and no one would make their selection of the casket in take it. The government said I'd have to keep it till some one relieved me. Why, I don't make my salt here. Now," he continued, there's your postoffice and go," he said.

"It is often amusing to go into the country towns," said an inspector recently. "You will find that if one grocer best another in getting the postoffice his business competitor will keep a weather eye on him for any dereliction of duty and at every opportunity will make trouble.

"I remember going to visit a druggist in a small town in New York state just after he was appointed. At that time he carried in his store only two lines of cigars, a 5-cent cigar and a Pittsburg stogie. Three months later when I visited him he had on sale ten brands of cigars, a large glass case containing fine confections and a remarkable array of toilet articles.

"He said he was making money. Now, across the street was another druggist who had tried to get the office. This man, I believe, began mailing letters to try to get the postmaster into trouble. He timed his letter sat mailing and endeavored to find if there was any delay in their delivery; after the postoffice would close on Sundays he would come and demand his mail.

"Among the chief sources of trouble everywhere are persons dealing with mail order houses and women who send invitations to socials by mail.

"Every postmaster," said an inspector, "has trouble with women who are accustomed to give social functions. If she does not wish to invite a person she will not send an invitation, but will allege that one was sent and lost in the mail.

"Persons dealing with mail order houses often pay by installments. It is not rare that when they do not date they will write to the firm asserting they sent the money by mail on time. Perhaps they will actually send it a long time afterward, but the country postmaster in the meantime has been troubled and the whole department has been uselessly engaged in making an investigation."

"Some society women," Postmaster Frank Wyman of St. Louis, is said to have stated recently after a controversy with a society woman regarding the delivery of invitations, "are fit members for the Society of Ananias. The people who get invitations and don't wish to go to a function say they never got them. Those who give the functions and do not wish to include certain persons declare the invitations have been lost in the mail. In any case, there is a row and the whole thing is put up to the postmaster."

Recently, according to an inspector, a postmistress in a little community in Pennsylvania had a quarrel with some of her friends.

One day they came into the office and among themselves made remarks about the little woman who was engaged in cancelling letters. She turned and pointed to the postal regulations.

"Now, if the ladies will be kind enough," she said very sweetly, "it is against the law for them to monopolize the postoffice discussing their neighbor's affairs. You may come in and ask for your mail or to have it sent and then go immediately."

The regulations specify that the country office shall remain open during the week during business hours and open once on Sunday. Now, persons with a grievance against the postmaster often select the day of rest to make him uncomfortable.

In almost all small communities the office is opened on Sunday for a short time. Those who wish to add to the postmaster's woes, call later, compelling the weary distributer of the mails to open the office, or, if he refuses, take pleasure in reporting him. The department, however, takes little notice of these complaints.

Recognizing the abuse of the postoffice in country towns on Sunday, Senator Burdett of Nebraska, recently began a campaign in the senate for Sunday postoffice closing.

THE WOMAN AND THE CHECK.

A woman stepped up to the window of the paying teller in a Denver bank Tuesday morning and pushed a check through the grating. It was for $4.

"Put your name on the back, please," said the teller.

She did so.

"Is this your name?" he asked.

The woman sighed. "Yes," she replied, "that's my name. It calls for $4, doesn't it?"

"It does," said the teller.

While the man in the cage was looking the check over the woman fumbled in her handbag and then placed a $5 bill before him.

"Take it out of that, please," she said. "It seems to me I'll never get through paying bills."

For a moment the teller was puzzled. Then he realized that the woman didn't understand the check. "You don't have to pay me," he said; "I have to pay you $4."

He pushed back her $5 bill and gave her $4 in silver. The woman was very much surprised. "You have to pay me?" she said. "Why, I thought it was a bill and that I had to pay it."

She smiled, gathered up her money and went out.

"That," said the teller when she had gone, "shows about how much some women know about banking methods."

EXPERT MEDICAL TESTIMONY.

Washington Star: Members of the medical profession with a leaning toward the study of mental diseases are beginning to realize that the "expert alienist" business has been rather overworked and that a popular prejudice has set in against the hiring of specialists to testify in murder trials in which the insanity defense is introduced. In Philadelphia recently one of the leading specialists in brain troubles was interviewed on the subject and expressed himself strongly as favoring a new system of ascertaining the mental condition of defendants in such cases. He holds that it is now necessary to abandon the ex parte method of ascertaiment and seek the judgment of non-partisan boards of specialists named by the court in all cases in which the state of the mind of an individual is brought into question.

TEMPUS FUGIT.

Do not stop to kiss your wife—
Hurry!
There's a car! Drop fork and knife,
Hurry!
When you go to get your lunch,
Push and struggle with the bunch,
Anything will do to munch,
Hurry!

If you wish to catch a train,
Hurry!
One may never come again,
Hurry!
If you are a second late
And you find they've shut the gate,
Climb the fence—but never wait,
Hurry!

Now remember, life is brief,
Hurry!
Even though you come to grief,
Hurry!
Save a minute, time is cash;
Grab your hat and make a dash,
Don't care if you come to smash,
Hurry!

—Bohemian.

Chicago Chronicle: "Times are changed," said Mark Twain, speaking of Washington. "I doubt if nowadays a man of Washington's unswerving integrity would be able to get on.

"A rich lawyer after dinner the other night went to his den for a smoke. He took down from his pipe rack a superb meerschaum, a Christmas present from his wife, but, alas! as he started to fill the pipe it came apart in his hands. The bowl had been broken in two and then carelessly stuck together.

"With loud growls of rage the lawyer rushed from his den and demanded to know who had broken his new meerschaum. His son, a boy of 11, spoke up bravely.

"'Father,' he said, 'I cannot tell a lie. I did it.'

"The lawyer praised the lad's Washingtonian veracity, but that night on his pillow he groaned and went on terribly about the incident.

"'Heaven help me!' he said. 'It had been my life's dearest wish to rear up my son to my own profession, but now—alas! alas!—'"

TOOK DEAD CHILD'S TEETH.

London Correspondent New York Sun: An extraordinary example of superstition comes from Freiburg, Saxony, where a rural undertaker was prosecuted on the charge of desecrating his own daughter's grave. The accused man with many tears told the following story:

He had promised his daughter before her death that he would not fill her grave with earth, as she imagined that her soul would not rest if he did. Therefore he covered the grave with planks on which he placed earth. Later the daughter appeared continually in visions and declared that her spirit could not find peace.

The father in the presence of two superstitious peasant women uncovered the grave to see if the coffin was safe. Then he opened the coffin and took some teeth from the mouth. These were supposed to bring luck. He gave some of the teeth to the women and kept one which he wore as an amulet. Since then, he says, he has always had luck in business and even won right along at cards, while one of the women who lost the tooth given to her had met with misfortune in everything ever since.

The court recognized the man's sincerity, dismissed the charge of profanation and let him go with a reprimand.

THE EDITOR WANTS NEWS.

Toxmo, (Okl.) Times: My friend, help the editor in his wild-eyed search for news. When your friends come to you, if you are not ashamed of it, tell him; when your wife gives a tea party, you have been robbed from the effects of the same, drop in with the news; when a baby arrives till your pockets with cigars and call. If you go to a party steal some of the good things and leave 'em with us. Come in our sanctum. If your wife licks you come in and let us see your scars and tender sympathy through the paper. If your mother-in-law has died don't be bashful about it; give in all the commonplace news. In short, whatever makes you feel proud, sad, lonesome or glad submit it to our sworn-to-corral wisdom and see our matted locks part and stand up on end with gratitude, which will pour from every pore like moisture from the dew besprinkled earth.

SCARES THIEVES.

New York Sun: The wave of crime which has been passing over Paris lately and which the police seem quite powerless to prevent has caused the citizens to adopt various devices to protect their homes from invasion by the Apaches. Dogs having proved utterly useless, more than one family has sought protection by placing a stand with a parrot or cockatoo possessing a specially loud squawk just inside their flats—almost every one in Paris lives in a flat.

An electrical engineer, however, has found a phonograph the best possible watchman. He locates it with the megaphone attachment directed to the door and he has wired the hall and arranged batteries so that the moment the door is opened three inches the phonograph gets into action.

It begins to bellow "Police! Help! Murder! Thieves!" and it keeps it up until he gets out of bed and turns off the current.

His flat is well furnished with plate and other valuables and several attempts have been made to rob it, but the thieves have yet withstood the phonograph bombardment. They run so quickly that they are never caught.

GOOD FISH LINES.

Outing Magazine: In the proper care of lines one is apt to balk. It is too much trouble to unwind and dry every time one returns from a day's fishing, and the most we do is to reel wind parts to test if any kinks are there. A silk unvarnished line is the worst to kink, so that it is always advisable after the season is over to take the lines from the reels and wind them on a large wheel. A careful and prudent brother angler has devised a unique plan of winding his lines around a bicycle wheel, after the tire has been removed. Placing the bicycle upside down he works the pedals and winds it through an oiled rag. This softens the lines and keeps them moist and pliable, as well as prevents cracking. I refer to the oiled trout and salmon lines—pluth silk or linen need only to be well dried before winding. Even the best and most expensive lines become weak and worthless through want of proper care and attention—it is impossible to prevent mildew or rot, unless a line it put away for the winter in ship shape order. The sloven who throws his flies, leaders and lines all in a heap, with the idea of arranging them on arrival at the river, finds himself very miserable and ill-tempered—especially when in the company of friends who are kept waiting till his tackle is fit for work.

VALUE OF THE THUMB.

Chicago Tribune: "Solomon says thumbs up," because the thumb is said to be worth fully one-third the entire value of the hand. The different fingers are far from having all the same value before the eyes of the law. Much the most important among them is the thumb, for without it the hand no longer is a pincers, but merely a claw. The French court allows in damages 15 to 35 per cent value for the right and 10 to 15 per cent for the left thumb. The Austrian schedule gives 15 per cent for the left to 25 per cent for the right. In Germany 20 to 28 per cent, and even as high as 33.3 per cent, has been awarded. The percentage is based on 100 as the total value of the hand. Industriously speaking, before the accident.

HUSBAND'S GOOD LOOKS.

Question of Marriages of Homely Women and Handsome Men Discussed.

New York Sun: "Well, those blowy women around here are welcome to their good-looking husbands. I'm not envying the silly things," said Mrs. Rubberino to her caller. "I'd like to see the inside of a woman's head that hankers for a handsome husband, 'deed I would.

"There never was a good-looking husband yet that wasn't the selfishest beast! A woman can get some good out of a homely husband, but I'd like to see the woman that can do a single, solitary thing with one of these English handsome husbands!

"What made me think of it is that that dowdy little Mrs. Lookitmee upstairs is always afflicting folks with her constant gabble about her husband's good looks. He's just a great, big, hulking, mush-faced thing, with a smooth face and nothing one bit striking about him except his conceit.

"But to hear her talk you'd think he was a regular Apollo Belvidome—Belvidere did you say? Well, I always heard it called Belvidome, and everybody can't be wrong but you, my dear—a regular Apollo Belvidome, and everybody that knows her just hates to see her coming, she's so crazily addicted to the idea that she's married to the handsomest creature that walks on two legs.

"Lots of good his good looks do his wife! Everybody knows that he's a perfect hog, and that he spends every bit of the velvet money that he gets hold of on clothes for himself, while she, the poor, little, humble, mild-mannered thing, never has a rag to her back. No wonder he's ashamed to go out with her!

"Don't you imagine that I haven't often told the silly creature how everybody talks about the way he dresses and the miserable duds that he provides her with, but what do you suppose she says? Why, that her husband is in the tailors' supply business, and that therefore he gets his clothes made for little or nothing, and that's why he can afford to dress the way he does.

"My husband, when I told him, had the nerve to say the same thing about Lookitmee's being in the tailors' supply business. I didn't believe a word of it and don't now; but even if he is in that business, and even if he gets his clothes actually for nothing, wouldn't you suppose that he'd be ashamed to go swaggering around in his purple and fine linen, and his wife looking like something the cat dragged in?

"I'd just like to see my husband outshine me in clothes; 'deed I would!

"Another woman that's always bragging about her husband's good looks is that talky-talky little Mrs. Jamitt in the next door court flat. She, too, thinks that her tall, lanky, skinny, long-shanked man is the finest looking thing on the globe.

"He's one of these men with tallowy, short cropped curls all over his head—and, oh, yes, what do you think she asked me the other day. She asked me if I didn't think her husband had a head like Antonine? An Antinous, you say? My dear, I'd be greatly obliged to you if you wouldn't try to catch me up every time I open my mouth, and it's Antoine, anyway, and who ever heard of such a silly name as Anthous? But that's what Mrs. Jamitt asked me.

"'Has he got a head like an Antoine?' she asked me, just like that.

"'He has not!' I told her, just like that, and the way she did close up right there like a jackknift—it was laughable, 'deed it was.

"Well, she's another victim of what she calls a good looking husband. She's as homely as a plate of pancakes herself—did you ever notice how these hideously ugly women manage to get hol dof good looking men, while really fine looking women generally marry regular pie faces?—but she is terribly plain, and, of course, she can't help but know it, and that's why she is just worrying day and night for fear that some other woman is going to take him away from her, and, of course, he knows that she's crazy over him and takes advantage of it to bully and browbeat and boss her around as if she was the dirt beneath his feet. I'd just like to have a thimble of a man I'd be afraid of losing, 'deed I would.

"I wouldn't care if he was as handsome as a picture and had that manners of a Chesterfield—my dear, it is not Chesterfield, I know better—the manners of a Chesterville, if he tried to spunk up to me on account of his good looks I'd trim him.

"If Jamitt stays out ten minutes later than his usual time to get home from the office she's in a perfect panic for fear that he's run over. When Jamitt says anything she looks up into his eyes as if he was an orator—oracle? Yes, so it is—I meant to say oracle—and it positively makes folks sick to see the way she defers to him in everything.

"Mrs. Heepbig, in the third floor rear flat, has got the idea, too, that her puggy, dumpy, fat faced husband is the grandest looking human on earth. Can you imagine a woman saying anything so groveling as that her husband could have married any one of a thousand enemores-ferral women, but that he picked her out in spite of her poverty? Of course it at's kind of a left handed compliment to her herself, but I really don't believe she meant it that way, for she has a face that would stop a steam hammer, and Heeping must have been suffering from snow-blindness when he married her.

"A fine time of it she has with her stodgy looking husband. Everybody around here knows that he's fooling her all the time, for he's away from home often, as much as twice a week of nights when he tells her that he goes to his lodge, but we all know about that lodge business—all of us except Mrs. Heepbig, and she never suspects a thing. the poor crackbrained thing.

"He's another one that spends everything he makes in adorning himself and never gives her a cent. I know that she never has a penny, because the other day when I met her downtown and we came home together on the surface car she offered to pay the fare and dug around in the bottom of her pocketbook so long that I thought just sure that it was a bluff and that she didn't have the dime to pay with.

"So, just to make sure, I pretended that I didn't have anything but a $5 bill, and then I just leaned over and watched her while she floundered around with her fingers in that empty pocketbook. Finally, she had to come right out and own up to it that she didn't have a cent, but she tried to make me believe that she'd left her money at home.

"I paid the fare then, of course, but I showed her up all right, and she hasn't been so blowy about her since.

"Yes, my darling, thank the Almighty my James looks like a valentine—please don't deny it and try to tell me that he's quite fair looking and presentable, for I know different. But he's a good husband, even if I don't ever let him think so—that's the sure way to ruin a husband, to commend him for anything he does, no matter how liberal—and I wouldn't trade him for all of these male pretties, that look like clothing store dummies, from here to Hackensack and back, 'deed I wouldn't!"

"GARTER SELLER" PROMOTED.

Brooklyn Eagle: One of the most noteworthy figures on lower Broadway has disappeared. No; I do not refer to any millionaire or captain of industry! I have in mind a man whose face has been known to every pedestrian on Park Row and Broadway, below that point, for twenty years, as a seller of men's garters. He has been stationed upon the steps of one of the best known banks in this metropolis—always in his humble capacity.

The fact has been known to the well-informed in the locality that this man was one of the highest paid detectives in New York. Although he was apparently selling stocking supporters for men at 25 cents per pair, he was closer to the desks of the cashier and the paying teller of the bank behind him than any other man in the great establishment. In the woodwork of the outer doors, that appeared to swing as freely as the air of heaven permitted, were two large spots that seemed to every other eye than his like brass screw heads.

They were in reality electric buttons that kept him informed of the absence or presence of doubtful characters or detected thieves inside the bank. When the danger signal was given to him, the vendor of garters turned a knob at the left hand of the entrance to the bank and the front doors were closed by secret bolts, rendering impossible the escape of all persons inside the bank. The man who had presented a forged check or a stolen bond was caught.

The detective would then abandon the few dollars' worth of stock in garters or ear mufflers, as the season served. He would enter the bank by a narrow iron door at the left of the main entrance and place the alleged culprit under arrest.

That man has saved hundreds of thousands of dollars for the great bank he served. But now that a new building is completed, he has been promoted to a place inside, and the most complicated machinery ever known for stopping the escape of a suspected character is under his control. Not only is he able to close the doors leading to Broadway, but he can instantly warn every man on the main floor who handles money to seal himself inside the steel lattice that surrounds him. Success by a "pocketbook dropper" or "a man on the paying line," who reaches for the cash handed to the man in front of him, is impossible.

CHOOSE THEIR COFFINS.

People Who Make Sure of a Comfortable Burial.

New York Sun: "Do people ever pick out their own coffins? Why certainly," said the undertaker. "There have always been people who have kept a coffin on hand for themselves, ready for use when required. Don't you know you read in the papers every now and then of some old citizen who has just died, off somewhere in some country town, who had had his coffin in his house for forty years? We were once called upon ourselves to bury a man who had had his own coffin ready for, I guess, a longer time than that.

"This was a man who at the time of his death had come to have large means and to be widely known. When he was young and living in the country there was cut down on his home place a hickory tree that he thought would provide good material for a coffin, and out of some of the planks sawed from this tree he had fashioned for himself a coffin which he stored away in the garret of the old house.

"He had no thought of dying then, but he liked that hickory tree and he wanted to be buried in a coffin made from it.

"Well, in due time the old gentleman did die, an old man then, and dying, he indicated his desire to be buried in the old hickory coffin. We sent men up into the country and got it down out of the garret of the old house and brought it here, but when we had got it here it wouldn't do at all, it was far too small.

"He was a young man and slender when he had the coffin made, but now with the lapse of many years, and with his vigorous employment through many of those years in great outdoor occupations, he had come to be a man of large frame and one to be a credit to the old coffin simply wouldn't do. But his survivors desired that his wishes should be respected, and even when we had got the old coffin apart and used it as a lining for the burial casket in which he was buried. And so he was buried in the old hickory coffin after all.

"We once had in storage for years a coffin of basket construction that was sent to us by a gentleman who brought it from a country in which the burial customs are different from ours. Many are of metal, as of aluminum, and some are metal lined; all calculated to preserve the body for a long time. But not all of us have the same views about burial, and it was the desire of the owner of the basketwork coffin that when he died he should as soon as might be, go back to mother earth.

"People sometimes nowadays make their own selection of the sort of casket they would prefer to be buried in; young people, sometimes, though the choice making such selection would more likely be old.

"There came to us once, with no thought of death, a young man who selected a casket such as he would like to be buried in when he should die. He did die, not many months after, and his relatives buried him in a casket such as he had selected.

"Some years ago we had a visit from a man of not much if any more than middle age and of good health who selected the style of casket that satisfied him. We told him politely and cheerfully that he had no need for a casket and didn't appear likely to need one for a good many years to come, but he chose, nevertheless, not despondingly at all, but because he wanted to, the sort of casket that he preferred, and told us that he should make provision for its supply and where the papers providing for it would be found when he should be required. We have not yet been called upon to furnish this casket and so we have no doubt that he is still living.

"While, as I have said, I would be most likely to consider people who actually made the selection of their burial caskets, and these might not be numerous, it is not unusual for persons dying to make provision in their wills for their funerals. We have not yet been called upon to furnish this casket and so we have no doubt that he is still living.

"While, as I have said, I would be most likely to consider people who actually made the selection of their burial caskets, and these might not be numerous, it is not unusual for persons dying to make provision in their wills for their funerals, and while these might not select the casket in which they desired to be buried yet they might prescribe the manner of their burial.

"Of course there are now many thousands of people—there have always, to be sure, been many such—who, though they may leave no property and make no will, do in one way or another make in life suitable provision for their funeral expenses. It is a very common custom now, for the survivors of one dead to make their selection of the casket in which the deceased is to be buried.

"In old days when everybody was buried in a coffin there was no such choice; however much they might differ in the materials used in their construction and in the quality of their workmanship and finish all coffins were alike in shape, and a mahogany coffin, in most instances, was still simply a mahogany coffin.

"But now three-fourths or more of all the people dying, in the large communities, at least, are buried in caskets, which are very different in design and appearance from the old-time coffin, and which are produced in very great variety as to their actual styles, as to the materials used in them, as to modifications of shape and as to their cost.

"Now it is a very common thing, if not indeed the prevailing practice, for the survivors of the deceased to make a selection of the casket in which the dead shall be buried. Such a selection is often made from the illustrated catalogues of the casket manufacturers, or it may be made from among actual examples displayed in his establishment by the undertaker; or it may be that the undertaker will take those making such selection to the warerooms of the casket manufacturer. Here caskets may be seen in very great variety, but presenting to the eye an appearance different indeed from that which would be presented by an array of an equal number of the old-time coffins, for many of these caskets are of fine and costly and beautiful materials, as they may be also elaborate in workmanship, while they are all as far removed as it is possible to make them from the old-time coffin in form.

"Modern burial caskets are now made in such variety as to the woods and other materials used in their construction that it is quite possible, if that should be desired, to select one that shall harmonize with the fittings and furnishings of the room in which it is placed. The arrangement of the flowers may add to the beauty of their effect.

"Floral flowers have often been photographed, thus to preserve a remembrance of them. It is now not unheard of to photograph the room containing the casket with the flowers surrounding it. While the casket may be costly the flowers may be equally so; a blanket of violets, for instance, making a coverlet over the casket and reaching on either side of the floor, costing, it may be, $1,000 or more."

Chicago Tribune: A railroad terminating in Chicago announces its annual sale of unclaimed baggage. The 2,694 articles to be sold include some things left in the cars and many more which were checked but never claimed. The fact that 564 umbrellas and sixty canes are among the number shows that the traveling public is both careless and suspicious. But the seven baby carriages, thirty-six bicycles, 270 trunks, 759 satchels and suit-cases and the other things which were checked, but for which the railroad has had no call, and for which it has not been able to find an owner after a whole year, have something mysterious about them.

Admitting that one-half of the articles failed to be delivered through the fault of the railroad employes, although that is an improbably high proportion, there remain hundreds of pieces of baggage which are abandoned by the owners. Why? How could thirty-six persons go away and forget their bicycles or seven their baby carriages after checking them? How could 50 to 1,500 persons be content to leave their trunks and satchels and never ask for them? Did they drop dead or were they carried off to jails, hospitals and asylums. Here is a mystery to which the imagination in vain tries to find a solution.

THE RURAL POSTOFFICE.

Rivals of Country Postmaster Often Make His Life interesting.

Human nature is seen at its best in a rural postoffice.

It is no reflection on the intelligence or the character of the great majority of rural postmasters and postmistresses to relate the idiosyncrasies of a few, says the Chicago Chronicle.

Not long ago an inspector was dispatched to visit a postoffice in a sparsely settled Western community. There had been complaints of lack of adequate service and of inattention on the part of the postmaster.

When the inspector arrived at the cross roads store in which the postoffice was located he was confronted by the sign, written on a card and tacked on the door:

I HAVE GONE FISHING.
WILL BE BACK SOON.

While the inspector was standing looking at the sign in blank astonishment the postmaster, returning from a three days' fishing trip, came up the road. He was whistling. In his hands were fishing tackle and a string of fish.

The inspector grasped the old man by the shoulder and with all the dignity and authority of a representative of the government accusing a recalcitrant servant, demanded an explanation.

"So you're from the department, eh?" asked the old postmaster. After looking at the commission of the inspector the old man unlocked the door of the house and invited him in.

"Now, I've got you, I want to tell you this. I've been tryin' to get rid of this office for three years, and no one would take it. The government said I'd have to keep it till some one relieved me. Why, I don't make my salt here. Now," he continued, there's your postoffice and go."

"It is often amusing to go into the country towns," said an inspector recently. "You will find that if one grocer has another in getting the postoffice his business competitor will keep a weather eye on him for any dereliction of duty and at every opportunity will make trouble.

"I remember going to visit a druggist in a small town in New York state just after he was appointed. At that time he carried in his store only two lines of cigars, a 5-cent cigar and a Pittsburg stogie. Three months later when I visited him he had on sale ten brands of cigars, a large glass case containing fine confections and a remarkable array of toilet articles.

"He said he was making money. Now, across the street was another druggist who had tried to get the office. This man, I believe, began mailing letters to try to get the postmaster into trouble. He timed his letter sat mailing and endeavored to find if there was any delay in their delivery; after the postoffice would close on Sundays he would come and demand his mail.

"Among the chief sources of trouble everywhere are persons dealing with mail order houses and women who send invitations to socials by mail.

"'Every postmaster,' said an inspector, 'has trouble with women who are accustomed to give social functions. If she does not wish to invite a person by mail will not send an invitation, but will allege that one was sent and lost in the mail.

"Persons dealing with mail order houses often pay by instalments. It is not rare that when they do not date they will write to the firm asserting they sent the money by mail on time. Perhaps they will actually send it a long time afterward, but the country postmaster in the meantime has been troubled and the whole department has been uselessly engaged in making an investigation.'

"'Some society women,' Postmaster Frank Wyman of St. Louis, is said to have stated recently after a controversy with a society woman regarding the delivery of invitations, 'are fit members for the Society of Ananias. The people who get invitations and don't wish to go to a function say they never got them. Those who give the functions and do not wish to include certain persons declare the invitations have been lost in the mail. In any case, there is a row and the whole thing is put up to the postmaster.'

Recently, according to an inspector, a postmistress in a little community in Pennsylvania had a quarrel with some of her friends.

One day they came into the office and among themselves made remarks about the little woman who was engaged in canceling letters. She turned and pointed to the postal regulations.

"Now, if the ladies will be kind enough," she said very sweetly, "it is against the law for them to monopolize the postoffice discussing their neighbor's affairs. You may come in and ask for your mail or to have it sent and then go immediately."

The regulations specify that the country office shall remain open during the week during business hours and open once on Sunday. Now, persons with a grievance against the postmaster often select the day of rest to make him uncomfortable.

In almost all small communities the office is opened on Sunday for a short time. Those who wish to add to the postmaster's woes, call later, compelling the weary distributer of the mails to open the office, or, if he refuses, take pleasure in reporting him. The department, however, takes little notice of these complaints.

Recognizing the abuse of the postoffice in country towns on Sunday, Senator Hartley of Nebraska, recently began a campaign in the senate for Sunday postoffice closing.

THE WOMAN AND THE CHECK.

A woman stepped up to the window of the paying teller in a Denver bank Tuesday morning and pushed a check through the grating. It was for $4.

"Put your name on the back, please," said the teller.

She did so.

"Is this your name?" he asked.

The woman sighed. "Yes," she replied, "that's my name. It calls for $4, doesn't it?"

"It does," said the teller.

While the man in the cage was looking at the check over the woman fumbled in her handbag and then placed a $5 bill before him.

"Take it out of that, please," she said. "It seems to me I'll never get through paying bills."

For a moment the teller was puzzled. Then he realized that the woman didn't understand the check. "You don't have to pay me," he said; "I have to pay you $4."

He pushed back her $5 bill and gave her $1 in silver. The woman was very much surprised. "You have to pay me?" she said. "Why, I thought it was a bill and that I had to pay it."

She smiled, gathered up her money and went out.

"That," said the teller when she had gone, "shows about how much some women know about banking methods."

EXPERT MEDICAL TESTIMONY.

Washington Star: Members of the medical profession with a leaning toward the study of mental diseases are beginning to realize that the "expert alienist" business has been rather overworked and that a popular prejudice has set in against the hiring of specialists to testify in murder trials in which the insanity defense is introduced. In Philadelphia recently one of the leading specialists in brain troubles was interviewed on the subject and expressed himself strongly as favoring a new system of ascertaining the mental condition of defendants in such cases. He holds that it is now necessary to abandon the ex parte method of ascertainment and seek the judgment of non-partisan boards of specialists named by the court in all cases in which the state of the mind of an individual is brought into question.

TEMPUS FUGIT.

Do not stop to kiss your wife—
Hurry!
There's a car! Drop fork and knife,
Hurry!
When you go to get your lunch,
Push and struggle with the bunch,
Anything will do to munch,
Hurry!

If you wish to catch a train,
Hurry!
One may never come again,
Hurry!
If you are a second late
And you find they've shut the gate,
Climb the fence—but never wait,
Hurry!

Now remember, life is brief,
Hurry!
Even though you come to grief,
Hurry!
Save a minute, time is cash;
Grab your hat and make a dash,
Don't care if you come to smash,
Hurry!

—Bohemian.

Chicago Chronicle: "Times are changed," said Mark Twain, speaking of Washington. "I doubt if nowadays a man of Washington's unswerving integrity would be able to get on.

"A rich lawyer after dinner the other night went to his den for a smoke. He took down from his pipe rack a superb meerschaum, a Christmas present from his wife, but, alas! as he started to fill the pipe it came apart in his hands. The bowl had been broken in two and then carelessly stuck together.

"With loud growls of rage the lawyer rushed from his den and demanded to know who had broken his new meerschaum. His son, a boy of 11, spoke up bravely.

"'Father,' he said, 'I cannot tell a lie. I did it.'

"The lawyer praised the lad's Washingtonian veracity, but that night on his pillow he groaned and went on terribly about the incident.

"'Heaven help me!' he said. 'It had been my life's dearest wish to rear up my son to my own profession, but now —alas! alas!—'"

WHEAT HAS ADVANCE OF MORE THAN 4 CENTS

After Weak Opening, Prices Soar in the American Markets.

Duluth is Very Strong—Flax Closes Lower Here.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 16.—Wheat had a sensational advance in all of the American markets today, closing at more than 4c over yesterday's closing prices. The opening was weaker and prices went off during the first half hour of trading, but then the buying orders began to come in and the prices began to soar. Buy! buy! buy! Everyone suddenly became imbued with a desire to buy wheat, and the price kept going up. July wheat had an advance of nearly 6c in the Duluth market during the session.

There was no bullish news in particular; that is, nothing more than has been generally heard for the past few days. The weather predictions were quite favorable for the crop.

Wheat was active in the Duluth market. At the opening, prices eased off, but the reaction began after the first half hour of the session and the advance continued until the close, which was away up. The range was wide, May wheat was inactive at the opening, sold at 98¼c and advanced by the close to $1.01⅛, a gain of 4¾c over yesterday. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opens Weak on Favorable Weather All Over Northwest.

Chicago, May 16.—Lower cables, a decline at Minneapolis and favorable weather in the Northwest and Canada, caused a weak opening in wheat today. Trading was mostly in July, which option under heavy selling opened a shade to 1⅜@⅞c olwer at 92¼ to 93⅝c. At the reduction many resting orders to buy were reached under which July rallied to 94½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago receipts were 412 cars against 426 last week and 158 a year ago.

The market near the end turned excited and very strong with purchases on an immense scale, largely on the Russian reports of crop losses. July rose to 96½c, December to $1.02 and September to $1.03¾. The close was very strong with nearly all the gains held. July 5¼c up at 98½c; December 5c higher at $1.01¾c. September 4¾c improved at 99½.

The corn market opened weak on favorable weather for painting and in sympathy with wheat, July 3c to ⅜c lower at 51⅝c to 52⅜c. Support was reached at 51½c and a rally to 52¾c followed, largely with wheat. Local receipts were 158 cars, 17 of contract grade.

In sympathy with wheat July corn advanced to 53c and closed firm at that point, ⅛c over yesterday.

Oats followed the lead of other cereals. July opened ⅜c to ½c down at 43¼c to 43½c and recovered to 43⅞c. Trade was small in volume. Receipts were 116 cars.

July provisions opened 2½c to 7½c under yesterday in sympathy with lower hogs, pork at $16.45 to $16.47½, lard at $9.07½ to $9.10, and ribs at $8.75.

Chicago Record-Herald: "B. W. Snow says that even allowing 30 per cent has been seeded up to this time in Manitoba it will be simply impossible to raise half a crop of wheat there this year. Barley authorities assert that the entire acreage of that grain that will be seeded this year is already in. It is now too late to seed barley with safety. Northwest and land originally intended for wheat but which was to have gone into barley will now go into oats and flaxseed. The latter promises to be an exceptionally large acreage this year. Barley stocks are light all over the country and prices are now the highest in twenty-five years."

Broomhall, Liverpool, May 16, on wheat: "Although there was a steady undertone to the wheat market early prices showed a decline of ¾d to ⅞d, being influenced by the weakness of American cables yesterday and better reports from Manitoba regarding the seeding outlook together with a poor demand. During the morning there was further pressure to sell, prices losing an additional ¼d to ½d. Toward noon, however, a firmer undertone developed and some of the decline was recovered owing to unfavorable private reports from Russia."

Chicago to Paine, Webber & Co.: The wheat went right into the hands of the big warehouses, perhaps 5,000,000 bushels the first thirty minutes. This was a hint to the sellers of wheat that it was time for a change of front. From that moment until two minutes before the close prices showed advances which were simply astonishing to every one. There was very heavy buying early by houses identified with the Northwest. A Northwestern leader wired that the promise of better weather has been so disappointing in the past that the trade has been induced to sell out and get itself in a hole. Cables report exporters selling to interior at better prices than bid by foreigners. The trade sold out an dsold short, over played itself in working for further break. While the conditions which created the bull market are unchanged or possibly intensified, it looks like a possible 550,000,000 bushels of both winter and spring wheat for the year and this it will be remembered is just about the amount needed for home uses. The market is again under full headway with the biggest people in the trade and the entire country under the market and there is nothing to stop it from going much higher.

THE WOODEN SHOON.

London Express: Only a visit from Queen Wilhelmina and her consort, Prince Henry, who played so notable a part in the rescue of the Berlin survivors, is necessary to give the finishing touch to the "boom" in all things Dutch which is growing in London.

A visit from the young Dutch Queen who has never paid a state visit to London, is within the bounds of probability this year, and London seems to be unconsciously preparing itself for such an event.

Dutch art, Dutch songs—or songs about Holland—and Dutch shoes are becoming more and more popular. A few years ago Nico Jungman's Dutch pictures began to take the public fancy.

A year or two ago the print-shop windows began to be filled with Dutch figure sketches—rows of little Dutch boys in baggy trousers and sabots and Dutch girls in little round bonnets, pigtails and sabots, and old Dutch fishermen and fishwives in the quaint costume of the Low Country—including sabots.

The pictures of quaint Dutch clothes, and especially the sabots, struck the popular taste, and now the real sabot has invaded London. It hangs in the shop windows in the West end and the suburbs, tied up with ribbons and labeled: "Dutch sabots for English feet."

A pair of sabots has become the latest fancy with the girl with a trim pair of ankles, and "sabot tea parties," with Dutch costume and Dutch songs, are beginning to enliven the suburban home.

The theater and the music hall have taken up the Dutch boom. "Miss Hook of Holland" is enjoying success at the Apollo, and at half a dozen halls in London and dozens throughout the country "Dutch" songs are the order of the day.

The latest feature of the Dutch "boom" is in picture postcards and newspaper advertisement pictures after the pattern of the old Dutch tile.

Day after day The Herald want columns show a procession of opportunities—opportunities to buy, to sell, to lease, to hire, to find people to work for you, to find people to work for, to find boarders, lodgers, tenants, or partners. These want ad. opportunities touch almost all phases of life and living in this city.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS

Market Was Very Dull and Professional and Closed Weak.

Prices Carried Below Wednesday by the Jump in Wheat.

New York, May 16.—Opening prices of stocks were very little altered from last night's closing, a number of the usually active issues starting unchanged. The dealings were insignificant in volume.

A demand for Reading, which carried it a point above the opening price, steadied the remainder of the market, but the list did not hold long in the face of liberal offerings of Union Pacific, Atchison and the metal stocks. Average losses were limited to fractions outside of the leaders, but speculation became exceedingly quiet when the list made an effort to rally. Granby Mining yielded 6⅝, Allis Chalmers preferred gained 3. The market was steady at fractional recoveries at 11 o'clock.

Pressure to sell stocks diminished and allowed the scanty demand to lift prices slowly. United Railways Investment preferred sold at a decline of 2½ and Central Leather 1⅝. Bonds were heavy.

An abrupt fall in Lead to 64⅞ a loss of 3⅛ was arrested by the announcement that the dividend rate had been increased to 5 per cent. There was quick rally of 2 points after which it lapsed into the rut the rest of the list was in. Newhouse Mining hardened a point.

Special stocks gathered strength slowly as the day progressed, particularly Reading and Union Pacific, which sold ⅝c and ⅞c respectively above yesterday's closing. Other stocks also hardened perceptibly. Illinois Central fell ½ and General Electric 2½.

The market closed weak. There was a moderate reduction in stocks, reflecting the renewed jump in the wheat market which carried prices below last night again. Chesapeake & Ohio, Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic fell 2 each, and Reading, St. Paul, Union Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Northern Pacific and Colorado and Southern 1 to 1¾. The trading became lifeless without effective rally.

Stock Gossip.

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was very dull and very professional. In the early afternoon there was an effort made to put up prices and Union Pacific rallied snarply, but there was so little interest created that it lost the advance. In the last half hour the market became decidedly weak on small transactions and closed at the lowest prices of the day.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market was steady today in spite of the strength in grains. Trading was on a very small scale. The public interest being small, the operations of professionals, who are bearishly inclined, dominate the market at this level and, in the presence of continued agitation against corporations, it is very doubtful if public interest will be stimulated. A material decline, however, is not looked for.

Losers Must Give Banquet.

The contest between the two divisions of the Epworth League of the First Norwegian-Danish M. E. church, in the West end, has ended, and the side captained by Miss Millie Olsen will be the guests of honor at a banquet to be arranged and paid for by the losing side, which was captained by A. B. Anderson. All winter long the different sides have prepared and given literary programs at the church, in which much interest has been taken. The rivalry between the sides has been keen, and each has striven to outdo the other in the matter of exercises. After this week's program the judges decided in favor of Miss Olsen's forces. The date for the banquet has not been set yet.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 16.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 7@6 points on covering and the steady showing of the Liverpool market, but soon eased off under scattering liquidation and selling for a turn, encouraged by the rumors that the bull clique had liquidated its July holdings and the better weather reports from the South. Trading was moderately active and offerings were pretty well absorbed at a decline of 4@5 points on the new crop during the middle of the morning, while July was supported by brokers supposed to be working for the leading bulls, and ruled relatively steady within a point or two of last night's close.

Futures closed firm. Closing bids: May and July, 10.88; July, 10.91; August, 10.89; September, 10.81; October, 11.01; November, 11.03; December, 11.05; January, 11.22; February, 11.28; March, 11.30. Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 12.05; middling gulf, 12.30. Sales, 400 bales.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Gay & Sturgis: The market in general today has been no different from what we have had the past week and at times it was almost at a standstill. There was some improvement around the noon hour, and Union Pacific got up to 145½. At this time there was a spurt of 5 cents in wheat, which drove the market off, then it lapsed into another Rip Van Winkle and closed with no interest shown whatever. In early dealings there was a good demand for Copper Range, Outside of this stock there was little interest taken in the local market.

THE PRODUCE MARKET.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange and shippers can rely upon them as being correct. The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows separately the market conditions up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers:

CONDUCTOR IS REMEMBERED

Oratorio Society Presents H. W. Reyner With Oriental Rug.

At the close of the final concert of the May festival given by the Duluth Oratorio society at the First M. E. church last evening, the members of the society who sang in the big chorus tendered Horace W. Reyner, the society's conductor, a very pleasant surprise.

Just as the group were gathering for the flashlight photo which was taken after the affair was over, Harry W. Lanners, on behalf of himself and fellow members of the chorus, presented Mr. Reyner with a very handsome oriental rug of considerable value.

The affair was entirely a surprise to Mr. Reyner, but he replied briefly thanking his fellow workers for their token of appreciation and for the part they had played in making the big concert a success.

A vote of thanks was then tendered to the solists and to the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra for their assistance.

DULUTH MAN IS HONORED

Grant E. Owen Appointed Horse Expert by Wisconsin Commission.

Grant E. Owen left last evening for Milwaukee where he is to act as appraiser of horses, harness and wagons as provided by the act of the Wisconsin legislature at their last session. A tax commission was appointed with authority to select experts where needed to help them in securing a fair valuation of the property throughout the state and an appointment by them is a considerable honor.

Mr. Owen has been employed by J. U. Sebenius as superintendent at his model farm at Lakeside for about a year, coming here from Milwaukee where he had a reputation as a judge and general horse man. The horses, harness and equipment belonging to the Milwaukee Street Railway company are thought to be assessed at far below their true value, and Mr. Owen will work largely in appraising this stock.

WHEAT GOES UP 5 CENTS

July and December Take Sensational Jumps Near Close.

December Also Within 2 Cents of High Mark of Season.

Chicago, May 16.—The wheat market experienced another sensational upturn near the end of the session on the board of trade today, July jumping from the lowest price of the day—92¼ cents to 99½ cents, and closing 5 cents over yesterday's final figures, at 98½ cents. December rose to $1.02 and closed with a net advance of 5 cents, at $1.01. September options were also in the "dollar wheat" class for a time, at $1.00¾, but the close was at 99½ cents. The closing figures on December are only 2 cents under the high point of the season reached a few days ago. The volume of business in the wheat pit was immense, a few of the leading firms alone taking on between 5,000,000 and 8,000,000 bushels.

QUITS.

Harper's Weekly: Judge Caswell Bennet, for many years judge of the Kentucky court of appeals, while a resident of Frankfort, made his home on upper Main street. Next to the judge's yard was a livery stable. In the capital city, as in most small cities, the liverymen did not have room to house all the conveyances of their customers, especially on big days, and the buggies, carriages, etc., were lined up in the streets, close to the curbing.

This was very annoying to Judge Bennet, and he decided to try to break up the practice. He first appealed to the liverymen, then to the newspapers, and finally to the city authorities, but the custom was too firmly planted in the city, and his efforts availed him nothing.

One day Judge Bennet was walking downtown and was accosted by a friend, a prominent member of the Franklin county bar.

"Judge, how did you come out on your fight against the liverymen; did you win out or not?"

"Well," said Judge Bennet, "we compromised the matter, yes, we compromised it."

"I am glad to hear that, judge, and if it's no secret, I would like to know the terms of the compromise."

"It's no secret at all, no secret; I merely agreed to quit grumbling, complaining and kicking, and they agreed not to put any of their vehicles in my parlor."

HAYWOOD JUDGE, STIRRED OVER ORCHARD INTERVIEW, ORDERS STRICT INQUIRY

The Prosecution Denies Knowledge of Talk With State Witness.

Defense Indignantly Denounces Matter as Trick of Governor.

County Attorney Instructed to Take Any Warranted Action.

Boise, Idaho, May 17.—When the Haywood trial was about to begin this morning, Judge Wood caused a decided sensation by saying that he had read in the morning papers articles concerning interviews with the state's most important witness against the defendant. He declared the publications were highly improper, coming as they did during the impanelling of the jury.

"While they appear to the court as not precisely in contempt," continued Judge Wood, "they are nevertheless calculated to influence the jury in this case. Something must be done to prevent a recurrence of this if we are ever to get a jury. The court is much surprised at this publication at this time, and will be glad to hear from counsel on the subject."

Mr. Hawley, senior counsel for the state, said: "We are now and always were opposed to the publication of anything at any time tending to prejudice possible jurors. Just how the court can prevent a recurrence, except by a public request to the newspaper men, I don't see."

Judge Wood replied: "If the purpose of these publications was to influence the jury, there is a way to reach it."

"If the court's request does not prove

COSSACKS SHOOT SCORES IN REVENGE FOR ROBBERY

Terrorists Hold Up Ticket Office in Center of Warsaw.

St. Petersburg, May 17.—Forty-five officials and workmen of Kuttner's spinning mills at Lodz were shot down this morning by a partol of Cossacks, because a band of terrorists attacked a mail wagon in the neighborhood, killed a Cossack guard and wounded another Cossack and two postoffice officials.

While the wagon was passing through Lonkewa street in Lodz, the terrorists appeared from a side street, opened fire on the Cossack escort, seized $1,000 from the wagon and escaped. A moment later a partol of Cossacks arrived and, infuriated by the fate of their comrades, rushed into the Kuttner factory, which was near the spot and began firing indiscriminately, killing fifteen and wounding over thirty persons. The greatest indignation prevails, as it is claimed that the employes of the factory had nothing to do with the attack on the mail wagon.

A band of terrorists held up the city office of the Vistulat railroad, on Dluga street in Warsaw, at 10 o'clock this morning and got away with $5,000 after a severe fight in which four persons were killed and nine wounded.

The office was full of people at the time and soldiers were guarding the approaches, but the terrorists attacked them with revolvers, killing two and injuring four of the guards, before they reached the place where the money was kept.

Then, snatching up a bag containing $5,000 the men ran out of the office. The soldiers fired a volley at the fleeing terrorists but only succeeded in hitting some bystanders, two of whom were killed and five wounded.

Belenzoff, the man who carried out the great Moscow bank robbery, March 20, 1906, when a band of terrorists secured $75,000, and who escaped from a train while being extradited from Switzerland, died in the prison hospital at Moscow yesterday of consumption. The general belief was that the police allowed him to get away on condition that he betrayed his accomplices and others and that he had been living here under police protection ever since his "escape" was announced. He was possessed of the belief that terrorists were attempting to

MAYOR SCHMITZ, UNDER GRAFT CLOUD, GIVES CONTROL OF SAN FRANCISCO TO COMMITTEE OF BUSINESS LEADERS

Seven Delegates of Commercial Bodies to Manage City.

Ex-Police Commissioner to Tell of Executive Extortion.

Fallen "Boss" Ruef Details to Grand Jury Railway Bribery.

San Francisco, May 17.—The Call today says: "From this time forward, Eugene Schmitz will be mayor of San Francisco in name only. He has relinquished the reigns of government to a committee of seven, representing the five great commercial organizations of the city.

"Beginning with today, the city is under the the control of men whom the mayor selected to administer the city's affairs upon the lines demanded by the public.

"The capitulation of the mayor is complete. He has transferred in writing his authority, tantamount to a power of attorney, to the following citizens: F. B. Anderson, F. W. Dohrmann, Percy T. Morgan, F. W. Van Sicklen, Louis Rosenfeld, C. H. Bentley and Charles W. Slack.

"On the committee of seven is a representatives from each of the following commercial bodies: Merchant exchange, chamber of commerce, board of trade, Merchants' association and Manufacturers and Producers association."

Dr. Joseph Pohrm a former police commissioner, has, it is said, furnished Detective William J. Burns details of Mayor Schmitz's alleged action in compelling Pohrm to vote on the matter of the French restaurant licenses in order that Abraham Ruef might be able to extort from the proprietors of these resorts fees of thousands of dollars to insure them protection. Burns relies on the confession of Dr. Pohrm to secure the conviction of Schmitz on the charge of extortion on which he has been jointly indicted with Ruef.

Abraham Ruef, the fallen "boss," who pleaded guilty of corruption in court Wednesday, obeying a subpoena from the grand jury, went in the charge of Special Agent Burns, Elisor Biggy and another guard to the grand jury chamber yesterday afternoon and submitted to an examination that lasted from 3:20 o'clock until after 5 p. m. When the ordeal was over he called the newspaper men around him and said that he had promised the grand jury to divulge nothing.

District Attorney Langdon and Assistant District Attorney Heney refused to make any statement whatever. From Special Agent Burns it was learned that the only matter on which Ruef was questioned was the alleged bribing

STEPHENSON IS ELECTED AS WISCONSIN SENATOR

Long Deadlock Broken by Millionaire Lumberman's Victory.

Madison, Wis., May 17.—Isaac Stephenson, millionaire lumberman of Marinette, and adherent of Senator La Follette, was elected United States senator on the first ballot of the joint legislative session today, to succeed Senator John C. Spooner, resigned. He received eighty-seven votes—every Republican present voting for him.

State Senator George W. Bird received the complimentary vote of the Democrats and State Senator Jacob Rummel is accorded a similar honor from the Social Democrats. There were twenty-five absentees.

The deadlock was broken last night when Stephenson was nominated on the first ballot of the Republican legislative caucus. The result was accompanied by the breaking up of the opposition, which, when the anti-Stephenson men realized that they were beaten, returned to their former favorites, Esch and Hatten. The final result was announced as follows: Stephenson, 54; Esch, 23; Hatten, 19; scattering, 3.

The credit for the Stephenson victory is given to Lieutenant Governor Connor, who secured for his chief the support of two members claimed to have been pledged for Hatten. If they had voted for Hatten, Stephenson would have been defeated.

The ballot was the end of a deadlock existing since April 16. Since that day a daily ballot has been taken in the legislature, in joint session of house and senate, and nearly eighty ballots in all in the Republican caucus. There were originally five candidates, but Congressman Cooper and Former Speaker I. L. Lenroot withdrew a week ago, leaving Esch, Hatten and Stephenson in the field.

Isaac Stephenson of Marinette is a millionaire lumberman and banker. He was born in Fredericton, N. B.,

CANNED BEEF TRADE FALLS

Exports This Fiscal Year Only One-Fourth Those of Last.

Washington, May 17.—Continued decrease in the exportation of canned beef is shown in a statement issued by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor today. The exports for April amounted to 893,017 pounds, against 4,121,000 pounds in the same month last year. For the ten months ending with April the exportations showed only 13,032,703 pounds, against 56,730,873 during the same period last year. This seems to indicate, it is stated, that the total of canned beef exported in the full fiscal year 1907 will scarcely reach 15,000,000 pounds, while last year's total aggregated 64,500,000. The value of the canned beef exports will not exceed in the fiscal year about to end $1,500,000 in value, compared with $6,500,000 during each of the past two years.

BLAZE AND EXPLOSION

Two Firemen Injured and Five Pittsburg Factories Destroyed.

Explosions Play Havoc in the Midst of the Conflagration.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 17.—Two firemen were injured, five manufacturing plants destroyed and a number of small residences badly damaged early today by a fire of unknown origin, that started in the Brusk & Stevens company's pattern and model plant, on Penn avenue.

While the fire was at its height there was a terrific explosion, followed by several smaller ones, and when the smoke cleared away it was found that Capt. Joseph Schloss had been caught in the debris and seriously hurt, and William Miller, fireman, had been burned by the explosion and hurt by falling timbers.

The buildings destroyed were the Keystone Mining & Supply company, Hook & Callan, blacksmithing, Brusk & Stevens' Pattern and Model plant, Watt Ornamental Iron & Wire company, and the Second Hand Cooperage company.

Throughout the fire the firemen fought in the face of great danger, as in one of the buildings a great quantity of dynamite was stored. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

Tacoma, Wash., May 17.—"President Roosevelt told me that he was considering advocating the appointment of a commission by congress to appraise the value of railroad properties in the United States" said B. TRADE HURT BY STRIKE

Big Massachusetts Print Works Unable to Secure Cloth.

President Ismay of Steamship Lines Stands by Companies.

North Adams, Mass., May 17.—As a result of the longshoremen's strike in New York, large consignments of cloth, engaged in the South by the Windsor & Arnold Print works, are held up, and it has been found impossible to get sufficient cloth to keep the works going at nearly their full capacity. Enough orders are already on hand to keep the full force of 800 hands working overtime if the cloth could be obtained. At present there are about 400 hands at work in the different departments.

New York, May 17.—J. Bruce Ismay, president of the International Mercantile Marine company, will not make any move in the direction of bringing to an end the strike of longshoremen in this city. The company of which he is the head controls several of the largest steamship lines seriously affected by the strike.

After a long conference with the local representatives of the various lines operated by his company, he said he was thoroughly in accord with the attitude taken by the steamship men here since the strike began.

Secretary Connors of the Longshoremen's union, when he learned of Mr. Ismay's decision, said: "All right, it goes on as usual. There will be no advances made by us. If they want us they can come here after us, if that's the stand they are going to take."

RELICS OF OLD CRIME

Bonds and Gold of Missing Cleveland Man Unearthed.

Erie Securities, Hidden Since 1874, Claimed by Contractor.

Cleveland, May 17.—Erie railroad bonds worth $116,740 and $575 in blackened gold coins were found yesterday when the rusted tin box which contractor B. W. Hollingsworth recently unearthed in the ruins of the old Ohio City Inn at 2811 Detroit avenue, N. W., was forced open.

The original owner of the treasure was George C. Moran, who mysteriously disappeared in 1874. A heap of charred bones, found several days before the box was dug up by Hollingsworth in a bricked-in fire place, now seems to substantiate the theory that Moran was murdered.

The Erie railroad company made a systematic effort to locate the bonds during the three years from 1876-79, practically every newspaper in the country carrying advertisements for them. Originally they had a par value of $40,000. Accumulated interest, dividends and market rises have brought their value up to $116,740.

Because he was to have all the material in the building as compensation for tearing it down, Hollingsworth claimed

CUTS DOWN BIG VERDICT

Supreme Court Slashes $10,000 From Great Northern Judgment.

Rulings by Tribunal on Three Other Damage Suits.

St. Paul, May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Oscar W. Strand, who was blown up in the explosion of a locomotive boiler on the Great Northern road, can collect only $20,000 from the Hill road, although the jury awarded him $30,000. The supreme court today, Justice Lewis writing the opinion, ordered a new trial unless Strand consents to reduce the verdict to $20,000.

Christian J. Floan, who was run over by a St. Paul road switch engine, fared better in the court, Justice Brown handing down an opinion reversing the order of the trial court in taking Floan's case away from the jury. He will have a new trial.

The Great Northern too failed to secure the overturning of the verdict of Harry Roose obtained against it for being hurt by a hole in its roadbed.

Mrs. Eva Cedarberg has to abide by the verdict of the jury of the lower court that the Soo road was not negligent so as to be liable in damages for the death of Frank E. Johnson, whose adminstratrix she is, Johnson was killed by the breaking of a side rod on a Soo engine.

COAL RATES SAME TO ALL

Railroads Forbidden to Receive Favors Over Regular Dealers.

Stray Seipments Must be Set Aaight Free of Expense.

Washington, May 17.—The interstate commerce commission in one of two rulings just made public sugests that there may be some instances, such as the movement of needed fuel, in which, in order to keep the trains or boats moving "such traffic could be given preference in movement without creating unjust or unwarranted discrimination." It adds that there probably is not a railroad in the country that has to pay the regular tariff on any of its supplies from the initial point to the point of destination. This is especially true of coal which is shipped to a given point from the mines at a rate far below that which a dealer at that point would have to pay in freight charges. The commission holds, in effect, that this is discrimination, and that the railroad must pay the same tariff as the individual.

A second ruling relates to the return of a stray shipment. "Instances occur," says the commission, "in which, through error or oversight on the part of some agent or employe, a shipment is billed to an erroneous destination, is unloaded short of destination or is carried by. The commission is of the opinion that in a bona fide case of this kind carriers may return such stray shipments to their proper destination without the assessment of additional charges and may arrange for such movement as for shipments with each other on mutually acceptable terms without the necessity of publishing, posting and filing the tariff under which it will be done."

BIG JUMPS BY WHEAT

All Leading Options Go Above Dollar and Stay There.

Traders Almost Overwhelmed by Record-Breaking Business.

Chicago, May 17.—The scenes of wild excitement which attended yesterday's sensational advance in wheat prices on the board of trade, were duplicated during early trading today. The market, however, instead of opening at a higher level, was predicted by many, showed sharp declines on initial transactions, the losses ranging all the way from ½c to 2c, compared with final quotations of the previous session. Within the first fifteen minutes, however, the market had not only regained all the opening loss but had in some cases advanced to a point 1½c above yesterday's closing prices. The July option opened at 96½c to 98c and advanced to 99¼c. September after opening at 97½c to 99c, reached the dollar mark and touched $1.01. The December delivery also touched $1.01, after opening at 99c to $1.00.

By noon the market had become sensationally strong and the rise had extended into corn and oats. Wheat, however, was the most attractive when July made a frenzied jump to $1.02 which was 3½c higher than yesterday's close. September swept past the dollar mark without a second's hesitation and went in long jumps to $1.02¾c. The December option, which earlier in the week, led the way to the dollar mark, eclipsed the other options at noon by a quotation of $1.03¾.

The upward trend of prices during the forenoon caused considerable short selling among professionals who play habitually for a downward turn, but the nation wide demand completely engulfed selling orders and figures continued to grow on the blackboard almost as if there were no sellers.

In the volume of trade all records including those of the Leiter "corner days" and of men who went before him were eclipsed according to the statements of traders who have been on the board for more than a generation. Even the largest brokers are unable to care for the great mass of orders sent them for execution in the pit. Their private telegraph wires are swamped with business and their clerical forces are not only working at top pressure during the day, but during the better part of the night to keep track of the transactions.

The boom continued to the close of the day, July winding up at $1.00¾—1⅞ cents over yesterday—September stopping at $1.04¼; and December going to $1.03⅝, a new high record, and closing at $1.02¼.

Day after day The Herald want columns show a procession of opportunities—opportunities to buy, to sell, to lease, to hire, to find people to work for you, to find people to work for, to find boarders, lodgers, tenants, or partners. These want ad. opportunities touch almost all phases of life and living in this city.

RAILROADS

RATES TO BE IN EFFECT

The Homeseekers' Tickets Will be on Sale as Usual.

They Will Cost More in Some Cases Than Before.

Homeseekers' rates to points in Western Canada and the United States will be in effect as usual this year, although they will be higher in some cases than they were last. After the passage of the new rate laws by different Western states it was virtually announced by the railroads that special rates such as the homeseekers' would be discontinued, but the different companies interested have evidently reconsidered their decision.

Heretofore homeseekers' round-trip tickets were to be had at one fare plus $1. Now they are a fare and one-third to all points in Minnesota and to parts of the Dakotas, and one fare plus $2 to points in Montana and Washington, and to stations in Northwestern Canada. To some places in the Dakotas the round-trip rate will be one fare plus $5.

If the railroads really had cut off the homeseekers' rates it would have been a case of cutting off the nose to spite the face. In the past these rates have benefited the roads themselves just as much or more, than the general public, by assisting in settling up the country tributary to the roads, and thus assuring more business for the several lines in the future. It is not so much the money paid for the tickets themselves that counts, as it is the business resulting later on from the settlement of the homeseekers in some part of the territory the special rates gave them a chance to look over. Of course, all who buy these tickets do not ultimately settle in the West, but a liberal percentage follow out this course.

Another thing that would make cutting out the homeseekers' rates appear very unreasonable is the fact that the Southwest just now is making a strong bid for the homeseeker business. During the past two or three years the Southwestern lines have been cutting into this business at a great rate, and this season are prepared to spend more money than ever before in getting settlers. They offer very liberal inducements to the homeseeker, and nothing would please them better than to have the Northern lines step out of the field altogether, for then the money thus expended would bring even better results.

According to information received by local agents, the dates of sale will be May 21, June 4 and June 18, or on Tuesdays.

LOW RATES WEST.

Round Trip to North Pacific Coast Points for $50.

It appears that special rates on interstate business are not to be so badly hurt by the new rate laws as was at first supposed. In addition to the low rates to Eastern points, local agents were notified yesterday that low rates to points in the West, on account of different gatherings to be held there will be in effect this summer.

From June 20 to July 12 a first class round-trip rate to North Pacific coast points may be purchased for $50. The Baptist Young Peoples' union will meet at Spokane, Wash., July 4 to 7, and the International Christian Endeavor convention will be held at Seattle, July 10 to 15. The grand lodge of Good Templars will meet at Seattle, July 15 to 22, and the National Eclectic Medical assiciation will gather at Los Angeles June 18 to 20.

The rate of $50 for the round trip will apply to all these conventions, except that to California points it will be $53.90, with about a $72 rate if the ticket reads to both California and North Pacific coast points.

HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

Martin Johnson Dragged Beneath Train Wheels for Considerable Distance.

Martin Johnson a laborer at Proctor, had a narrow escape from death there yesterday. He attempted to board a moving train at the crossing near the D. M. & N. depot but slipped and fell under the wheels. He had presence of mind enough to seize a projecting portion of the car preventing himself from being ground to pieces, but when picked up it was discovered that he had sustained a compound fracture of the leg beside the painful bruises about the body.

He was brought to Duluth on the passenger train yesterday afternoon and was taken to St. Mary's hospital. Johnson had been employed as a section hand at Iron Junction.

Some homers have been imported from England, and as soon as they have increased sufficiently, attempts to establish a regular post between the two islands will be made.

BRYAN HAS LIVELY DAY

Speaks at Macalester College and the State University.

Will Make Two Addresses to the Sons of Norway.

St. Paul, May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—William Jennings Bryan arrived in St. Paul shortly before 8 o'clock today. Jumped into a waiting automobile at the union station and was driven to the residence of President T. M. Hodgman of Macalester college, ate a hurried breakfast, and fifteen minutes later began addressing 400 students and their friends in the chapel of Macalester college.

Mr. Bryan spoke for forty-five minutes, then shook hands with members of the faculty and a number of personal friends in the audience, descended the stairs and entered a motor car and was taken to the state university, where he addressed another big delegation of students. He will end his strenuous day in St. Paul and Minneapolis tonight by addressing two gatherings of the Sons of Norway at the Auditorium in each city.

Mr. Bryan's visit to Macalester college came about largely as a result of his personal relations with President Hodgman, with whom he has long been on terms of intimacy, and the Rev. H. C. Swearingin, who formerly was pastor of the church which the famous Nebraskan attended in Lincoln.

In addressing the students of Macalester, Mr. Bryan chose for his topic "Faith." He outlined the importance of faith in creating the character not only of individuals, but of nations, saying there were varieties of faith that were essential to humanity—faith in self, faith in others, faith in government and faith in God.

SUPERIOR NEWS

MRS. BOYESEN DIES.

Recovering From Operation and Heart Failure Caused Death.

Mrs. A. T. Boyesen, a well-known resident of Superior, died last evening at 8:30 at one of the Superior hospitals. She has been ill for some time, and ten days or more ago she was operated upon successfully at the hospital. She recovered from the effects of the operation, and seemed to be recovering until yesterday, when she again became worse. Heart failure was the immediate cause of death.

Mrs. Boyesen was 41 years old, and had lived in Superior for a number of years. She was the wife of Dr. Boyesen, and their home was at 1021 North Twelfth street. She was quite prominent in Norwegian circles at the Head of the Lakes, and was grand secretary of the order of Nordisk Sasterlag.

The funeral arrangements will be made later.

Action is Deferred.
On account of the objections voiced yesterday by Aldermen Hallam and Thorpe, at the meeting of the board of public works, action on the plans for the extension of the trolley system to Allouez, and for the installing of a loop on Cass avenue for the proposed extension, has been deferred until next Monday. It is expected that an official of the traction company will be present at that time, and the plans for the improvement will be thoroughly discussed.

PRESBYTERIANS GAIN LARGELY IN MEMBERSHIP.

Columbus, Ohio, May 17.—The special committee on evangelistic work will report this afternoon to the Presbyterian general assembly that 79,589 persons were taken into the church in 1906, against 66,271 the year before. The committee spent about $80,000, of which $65,000 was contributed by thirty-three individuals. Its most important recommendation is that the committee of thirty—twenty ministers and ten elders—be continued, and one month during the present year, to be fixed later, be given over entirely to reclaiming ex-church members.

Pastor of Corey-Gilman Wedding Changes Views Suddenly.

First Talked of "God Made Marriage" and Praised Match.

New York, May 17.—Rev. John L. Clark, pastor of Bushwick Avenue Congregational church, Brooklyn, who officiated at the marriage, early Tuesday morning, of W. E. Corey, president of the United States Steel corporation, and Miss Mabelle Gilman, submitted to the credentials' committee of the church, at a meeting last night, a letter, in which he begged forgiveness for having performed the marriage ceremony in question, and said that he had returned the fee given him at the wedding. He added that he realized that he had done a great wrong, both to the congregation of his church and to the Christian conception of the marriage relation in marrying a divorced person, and he said he would humbly receive whatever censure the committee might impose. He concluded by promising to use his ecclesiastical office in the future strictly in accordance with the principles of his denomination.

The committee decided to recommend, in its report to the congregation that, in view of the pastor's integrity and righteousness, together with his letter of apology, no action in the matter be taken.

In defending his action before the church took the matter up, Dr. Clark said: "It was a love match and a God-made marriage. There would be a lot of immorality in this world if all ministers refused to marry divorced persons, if quarrels and unhappiness follow a marriage, that is proof that the union was not made by God, but by men. If after people have obtained divorces they meet some one, and their hearts and minds are in accord, that is the sort of marriage where the precept, 'Whom God has joined together,' applies. I would not perform a ceremony after divorce which I did not think was a union of this kind.

"I have a good opinion of a man who, when he sees that things are unhappy at home, is gallant enough to allow his wife to get a divorce without contesting it. He may have things said about him by people, and some may not think well of him; but I am sure that he will stand well in the eyes of the Almighty. I think it is the gallant thing for him to do to sit still and let his wife say what she wants to about him."

Mr. Clark said that no one who saw Miss Gilman and Mr. Corey together could doubt that it was a love match and a God-made marriage. In a case like their's I would not hesitate to unite in marriage a divorced person," he added. "I will state here that my fee had nothing to do with it. The fee was never mentioned, in fact. I would have married Mr. Corey to Miss Gilman just as gladly if there had only been a $2 fee in it. Then it would not have been noticed."

Mr. Clark said he was the only minister whom Mr. Corey had asked to perform the ceremony, and that the arrangements were made through Mr. Corey's secretary a week ago Monday.

WATTERSON REMAINS MUM

To Many Inquiries as to an Available Dark Horse.

Louisville, Ky., May 17.—As a result of his statement in an editorial that he has in mind an available dark horse for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1908, Editor Henry Watterson is getting a great many telegraphic inquiries from different parts of the country as to the identity of the man. Mr. Watterson, however, declines to be interviewed in the matter. He says that he is not playing Warwick, but that he merely suggested in the editorial that Mr. Bryan shall play Warwick.

BEE BOX BROKE.

Buzzers Sting Express Driver Who Tried to Scoop Them Up.

New York, May 17.—The two boxes seemed harmless enough when Frank McNally, a Long Island Express company's driver, loaded them on the tail of his wagon at Glen Cove yesterday. McNally was driving through School street, when both boxes fell from the wagon and broke open. McNally heard the crash, pulled up his horse, jumped off and ran to see what had happened.

If the boxes had been full of eggs it would have been simple enough. McNally would have scooped up the remains and returned them to the express company, reporting "damaged in transit," but the boxes had been full of bees, which, being liberated, most actively and pointedly resented McNally's feeble attempts to scoop them up. They stung the driver until he retreated behind a tree and scratched his head in bewilderment and rubbed his face and neck and hands in pain.

He left the bees and reutrned to the office.

OLD EEL CAUGHT.

Contained Old Spoons, Copper Cents and Bullets of '76.

Bloomingfield, N. J., May 17.—An eel dating from revolutionary days was caught here yesterday.

Laborers were cleaning the accumulated mud of ages from the stream where it runs through Hugh Adkins' land on Washington street, between Clinton and Thomas streets. And there they found the eel.

"Water snake," yelled some of the laborers as the eel thrashed about with its tail. The workmen killed it with their spades; it proved to be quite a historical museum or aquarium, if you please. The most interesting article in its midst was a silver spoon.

The spoon is of purest colonial pattern. Besides the eel contained several large old copper cents and a lead bullet, which seems to have been used as a fish line sinker and which never fitted anything but a musket of '76.

INMATE OF HOSPITAL

Heir to Three Million Dollars Instead of Being Pauper.

St. Louis, May 17.—The identity of a woman of 29 years who has been in the city hospital here for several weeks, registered as a pauper, has been established and it is found tha tshe is Mrs. Rose Sheridan of Montreal, Canada, and instead of being destitute, is heir to an estate of 3,000,000 in England.

Mrs. Sheridan arrived in St. Louis en route from Hot Springs, Ark., to the home of her sister in Millery, Mass. She had been ill of brain fever at Hot Springs and was accompanied by her sister's little daughter and a nurse. She became separated from the sister and fainted, later became delirious and was taken to the hospital.

Mrs. Sheridan is a granddaughter of Sir Alexander John Ball of London, who died several years ago, leaving a large estate.

Itching, bleeding, protruding or blind piles yield to Doan's Ointment. Chronic cases soon relieved, finally cured. Druggists all sell it.

MUST GET RECRUITS.

Recruiting Officers Will Use Every Means to Secure Applicants.

On account of the prosperous times and the great demand for men of all kinds, the army recruiting offices are having a hard time finding men for enlistment and the conditions at the navy stations are as bad or even worse.

A circular letter has been sent out from the office of the head of the United States army recruiting department at Washington to all recruiting stations directing them to make every effort to secure applicants for enlistment. The recruiting officers are directed to advertise in every possible manner the many advantages of the army life and the life on Uncle Sam's warships.

The officers at the stations are also given more leeway and are instructed to accept any recruit about whom there may be some doubt and have him sent to the recruiting depot where he will be re-examined and final judgment passed.

London, May 17.—Probate of the will of the late Charles T. Yerkes was granted today. The will in the United Kingdom was sworn at $28,200.

SALARY QUESTION.

Public Affairs Committee May Recommend Raise for Teachers.

W. B. Patton, chairman of the new municipal committee of the public affairs committee will call the first meeting of the committee next week, probably Monday or Tuesday, and at that time there will be a discussion of the salaries paid the Duluth teachers. The attention of the club was called to this matter last winter, when the subject was being so strongly agitated.

Members of the committee have not expressed themselves on the subject, but it is understood they are in favor of an increase in salaries of the teachers. The scale paid in Duluth is lower than in most cities of the state, regardless of the fact that living expenses here are considered rather high.

DR. ROBERTS MODERATOR FOR THE PRESBYTERIANS.

Columbus, Ohio, May 17.—The election of a moderator for the Presbyterian general assembly, yesterday afternoon, was reduced to a formality by the withdrawal of all candidates except Rev. Dr. William H. Roberts of Philadelphia, for years stated clerk of the assembly. When the acting moderator declared Dr. Roberts elected, the latter stepped forward, his eyes glistening with tears. The acting moderator extended the gavel to him, and congratulated him as the first moderator of the re-united church.

The new moderator said he appreciated the honor conferred, because of what he had stood for for many years, and that it was for this, rather than personal reasons that he had been chosen. He believed that little by little, but steadily, there would come but one Presbyterian denomination in this land."

TALKED INTO PRISON.

Kansas City Star: "About thirty years ago Henry Clay Dean, the eccentric Missouri lawyer and orator, was attending a term of court at which I was defending a man on a pretty serious charge," said Judge Risdon of Kirksville the other day. "Two horse thieves that were in jail sent for Dean. He took their case, and after looking at it from all sides concluded the best thing for them to do was to plead guilty and take two years each.

"His men balked on the idea of pleading guilty. He told them that the penitentiary wasn't a bad sort of place; he had been all through it and knew. 'The warden—a personal friend of mine—is one of the kindest men that ever lived,' said Dean; 'he never makes you work when you are tired and when you are sick he always looks after you like a mother. You get roasted beef and brown bread every day, and pie and turkey on Sunday. Why, when Bill Jenkins—you boys know Bill—used to run a little sawmill over in the corner of Putnam county, they sent him up for—er—borrowing corn. When he went there he didn't weigh over a hundred and thirty pounds, regular skin and bones, and in six months he weighed 300 pounds avoirdupois and was made captain of the guard—just getting along fine; said he wouldn't swap his job for any other in Missouri, and wrote his folks to come down and live with him. The prison can't hurt anything but your reputation, and what does a fellow who's been stealing care about reputation anyway?'

"The two horse thieves by this time were dead anxious to plead guilty and begin life in the pen. More than that, all the other fellows in the jail who had heard Dean's talk insisted on pleading guilty and going along."

A RURAL CRITIC.

Dr. R. D. Evans, the mental expert of the Thaw trial, was criticising at a physicians' dinner the browbeating method of cross-examination that the courts permit.

"But my criticism," Dr. Evans ended, "has been feeble, and what good is feeble criticism? The critic, to score, must be epigrammatic, unexpected, humorous. Thus, in my native Bridgetown, a candidate for congress spoke at a mass meeting, and afterward a politician asked an old farmer what he thought of the speech.

"'Wall, I dunno,' said the old man soberly, 'but I think six hours' rain would 'a' done us a lot more good.'"

A BOY'S MEMORY.

Smith County, Kan., Pioneer: A number of years back a burly Western Kansas man gave his nephew, a lad of 15 years, an unmerited chastising. The boy promised his assailant a like compliment when he became a man. Now you may think the boy forgot all about his words, uttered in the heat of a passion, but this wasn't that sort of a kid. The uncle was about his duties on the farm one day last winter when a husky six-footer came up and gave him a glorious thumping. It was the 15-year-old nephew, only he was six years older. Then the uncle sued for $1,000 for personal injuries inflicted. An unsympathetic jury couldn't see it that way and he took the case to the supreme court. Last week that august body handed down a decision affirming the lower court's decision.

Which Store Gives You Best Returns?

IN ANY community, the store that gives the most for one's money is the store that does the largest business. This is true for two reasons:—First, the expenses on each sale are less; second, immense buying from manufacturers and importers makes lower costs—hence lower selling prices.

In Duluth Panton & White Co. is in a class of its own. No other store begins to equal its enormous volume of business; no other store buys nearly such quantities—nor carries such great stocks.

All this makes Panton & White Co.'s the BEST STORE for you—whether you want medium or high grade goods. We realize that none but thoroughly reliable and trustworthy merchandise will be countenanced by the Duluth public—and that makes this store the SAFE STORE.

We steadfastly maintain that this store DOES GIVE more satisfactory returns for the money you pay, than other stores CAN GIVE.

THE CZAR IS BEING SUED

Has Been Summoned to Appear Before a French Magistrate.

League Against Alcoholism is Carrying on Crusade in Paris.

Paris, May 17.—Legal proceedings are being taken against no less a personage than the emperor of Russia, who is summoned to appear before a magistrate at Nice as owner of a property on which stands a mausoleum erected in memory of his uncle, the elder brother of Alexander III, who died in a villa on that very spot. The czar purchased the land round the mausoleum a few years ago in his own name, and thus has enabled neighbors of one end of the estate to take legal measures against him personally, the reason being their objection to the encroachment of branches of huge trees over its walls. On the application of the lawyer of the Russian consulate, the affair has been adjourned.

A new departure has just been taken by the league against alcoholism, which now numbers 70,000 members. It has opened a temperance restaurant at the corner of Boulevard St. Germain and the Rue Dante and offers meals for 75 cents in which a glass of beer or one of wine is included.

Bills of fare in this new establishment, which appears to be designated primarily for students, will be varied. For the 75 cents a meal can be obtained consisting of meat and vegetables, and then another vegetable or eggs, winding up with dessert, the drinks being the same as at the lower priced repast and bread "at discretion." For $1, hors d'oeuvres or fish or another plate of meat, vegetables or dessert can be had.

This temperance restaurant has been founded in the hope that it will be productive of good, by M. Mirabaud, and such excellent results of a pecuniary nature are anticipated that it has already been decided to apportion the profits in the following way: Forty per cent to be devoted to charities in the district, 20 per cent to the management, the same average to the employes, the capital used in starting the temperance eating house having the benefit of the remaining 20 per cent.

Miss Nellie MacCarthy, aged 19, has already acquired the reputation of being a heroine. She came here from England a few years ago in search of a situation, and when she lost her way on the Boulevard Sebastopol accepted as a guide a respectable looking person of her own sex to whom she had confided her perplexity.

The two women were walking along when the guide informed her companion that they were close to her abode and invited her to rest there for a moment. Miss MacCarthy gratefully accepted the offer, but when her guide so abominably infringed the laws of hospitality by summoning her to hand over her purse and jewelry, and on her refusal tried to seize the property by force she whisked out her revolver and, blazing away, lodged a bullet in the woman's arm.

The report attracted neighbors to the room, the police were sent for, and while the wounded woman was conveyed to the hospital Miss Nelly was conducted to the station. But she had no difficulty in making her peace with the commissary, who promptly released her.

M. Millies-Lacroix, the colonial minister, has instituted an investigation into a queer affair. After the Martinique catastrophe parliament voted a special credit of $900,000 to repair the damages and of this sum the minister of colonies claimed a trifle over $100,000 for the copying of the archives of St. Pierre, which had been destroyed, and duplicates of which were kept at the ministry at Paris.

M. Millies-Lacroix has just made public his discovery that the expenditure of a large proportion of this money has not been duly accounted for, hence this investigation. He is represented as having added in the course of an interview that some of this work was distributed by clerks among friends and acquaintances outside of the department, that even a chauffeur was pressed into the service, and that members of parliament asked for copy for their proteges, and all this to the detriment of the lower classes of the employes of the ministry who would have been only too glad of such an opportunity of supplementing their modest salaries. That the minister is described as particularly wanting to know is whether some of this work was let out on the cheap; that is to say, whether certain officials only paid copyists at the rate of 25 cents for which they were themselves being remunerated at the rate of $1.

The removal of the time-honored morgue from its present premises seems to be imminent. It is well known that the small building which it occupied was in a dilapidated condition, and a committee of the conseil general of the Seine, which visited it recently, has recommended its removal. The prefect of the department of the Seine will, it is said, propose its demolition to the municipal council, and the building of a new morgue in the neighborhood, probably in the Rue de Poissy, to which a medico-legal institute will be attached.

Wonderful Eczema Cure.

"Our little boy had eczema for five years" writes N. A. Adams, Henrietta, Pa. "Two of our home doctors said the case was hopeless, his lungs being affected. We then employed other doctors, but no benefit resulted. By chance we read about Bucklen's Arnica Salve; bought a box and soon noticed improvement. We continued this medicine until several bottles were used, when our boy was completely cured." Best of all blood medicines and body building health tonics. Guaranteed at all drug stores. 50c.

HAS DOUBTS ABOUT TESTS

Matt Haug Refuses to Kill Two Condemned Cows.

Has Quarantined Animals and Will Watch for Developments.

Refusal by Supt. Matt Haug of the county poor farm to kill two cows in the poor farm herd that have been condemned by the local health office under tuberculin test, has raised a nice point of law as to what the health authorities can do in the matter.

Dr. D. D. Murray, the city health commissioner, will go down to St. Paul within the next few days to confer with Dr. Ward of the state board of health and on his return the local health officials will be guided in their actions by the recommendations of the state officials.

In the meantime Mr Haug has quarantined the cows and has stated his intention of keeping them for a month before making another test.

Heretofore, ever since the law providing for the slaughter of condemned cows went into effect there has been no question of the authority of the local health officials. Whenever the inspector made the tuberculin test and condemned the cows, the owner, although he might protest pretty hard, always took his cows to the slaughter house and was paid $35 a head for those killed.

During the time that the law has been effective there has been more or less complaint about it by the dairymen, although the health department claims that the mortality through diseased milk has been greatly reduced by the weeding out of the animals affected with tuberculosis.

The complaint has been mostly along the line that the tests were not always infallible, that valuable cows have been killed when they were not in the least affected.

In the case of the poor farm herd it is claimed that two years ago several valuable animals from the herd were condemned and killed when a post morten examination failed to disclose any disease.

In the present instance the two cows condemned by the inspector are some that Supt. Haug has raised on the farm. He claims that the animals have had the best of care, have been stabled in sanitary barns and fed hay and produce from the farm. He cannot understand why they should be diseased and is not satisfied with the test. While the county poor commission has not yet taken any action in the matter it has been surmised that Supt. Haug has had some advice in the matter from members of the commission.

WAR COLLEGE READY FOR USE

Most Striking Feature of Great Military Improvement Scheme.

Washington, May 17.—In little more than three years since President Roosevelt laid its cornerstone, the war college of the United States army has been finished. Gen. Mackenzie, chief of engineers, has notified the secretary of war that the new building is ready for occupancy.

Designed by McKim, Mead & White, the war college is the most striking feature of a great military improvement scheme. It occupies a prominent site in the Washington barracks reservation, overlooking the Potomac. To this college will come the picked men, the cream of the army, to receive instructions in the broader and more advanced problems of warfare. At one end of the building stands the statue of Frederick the Great, presented to the United States by Emperor William.

In architecture and in construction the war college is a remarkable creation. The cost was nearly $700,000, and the entire work was done by day labor under the supervision of Maj. John S. Sewell of the engineer corps. The building is in the form of a cross, with a dome at the intersection. The whole is after the Roman basilica style. Brick and Indiana limestone form the exterior walls, and the roof is dark slate. Unobtrusive dignity characterizes the architectural design. In front and at each end is an entrance pavillion, each above and massive piers and Ionic columns beneath. On the front, flanking the central pavilion, are pilasters several feet lower than the Ionic columns.

Despite the fact that it is only three stories high, the war college is well protected from fire. In the floors, partitions and stairways the army engineers have made liberal use of hollow tile blocks chosen as the safest material for the purpose. Thus they have made the college practically indestructible.

Inside, on the main floor, is a lecture room that will seat 225 men. The plan of the interior is very similar to that of many modern university buildings. The distinct feature is a central rotunda.

Washington Star: According to a dispatch from Butte, Mont., the land of the "red, red sky," the national capital may soon be treated to a really true surprise party by the appearance on the streets here of a Montana cow-girl in full ranch regalia, sitting astride her own Pinto pony. The dispatch relates the details, to the effect that Mrs. White Beaver will ride all the way from Butte to Washington to make a demand upon the government for aid in a fight to retain title to a mine which is now in jeopardy from claim jumpers.

COREY'S MOTHER

Hides Her Regret Over the Wedding in Farm Obscurity.

Philadelphia, May 17.—To hide her mortification at the act of her son, Mrs. Adaline Corey, the aged mother of William Ellis Corey, has sought obscurity on a farm.

Notwithstanding that her sentiments in this divorce matter are no secret, still Corey's mother, when seen at the farmhouse yesterday, uttered no bitter words against her recreant son.

"My son and I are friends," she said, "and his first wife and I are friends. I do not want to break either of these friendships."

With the mother is Corey's sister, Ada, who would not even attend the marriage. The girl is so mortified that she would not question her mother about the wedding.

When Mrs. Corey, Sr., was shown a newspaper clipping containing an interview with Rev. Mr. Clark, who married Corey and the actress, she read it attentively. In the statement Rev. Mr. Clark sought to justify the Corey marriage.

"This is the minister's opinion, and suppose he has a right to express it," said Corey's mother.

It was easy to conclude from the way Mrs. Corey's lips set, as she said this, that the minister's opinion was not hers.

Suddenly Mrs. Corey changed the subject.

"There's one thing I want to say in justice to my son. It is not true that he tried to buy me over with $200,000 or any other sum. It is not true that he tried to buy over his son and his sister. Nothing of the sort was done by him. He knew better."

BACKACHE AND DESPONDENCY

MISS LENA NAGEL

Are both symptoms of organic derangement, and nature's warning to women of a trouble which will sooner or later declare itself.

How often do we hear women say, "It seems as though my back would break." Yet they continue to drag along and suffer with aches in the small of the back, pain low down in the side, dragging sensations, nervousness and no ambition.

They do not realize that the back is the main-spring of woman's organism and quickly indicates by aching a diseased condition of the feminine organs or kidneys, and that aches and pains will continue until the cause is removed.

made from native roots and herbs has been for many years the most successful remedy in such cases. No other medicine has such a record of cures of feminine ills.

Miss Lena Nagel, of 117 Morgan St., Buffalo, N. Y., writes:—"I was completely worn out and on the verge of nervous prostration. My back ached all the time. I had dreadful periods of pain, was subject to fits of crying and extreme nervousness, and was always weak and tired. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cures Female Complaints, such as Backache, Falling and Displacements, and all Organic Diseases. Dissolves and expels Tumors at an early stage. It strengthens and tones the Stomach. Cures Headache and Indigestion and invigorates the whole feminine system.

JURY FINDS HER GUILTY

Carrie Buchanan Convicted of Assult in Second Degree.

Used Razor on Another Woman in Fit of Jealousy.

Indicted for assault in the first degree, Mrs. Carrie Buchanan, who inflicted serious wounds on Mrs. Eva Patterson with a razor on the evening of May 2 last, was found guilty yesterday afternoon, of assault in the second degree. The verdict was returned after the jury had deliberated about an hour.

The testimony showed that Mrs. Buchanan, who is colored, went to Mrs. Patterson's room at 23 Fifth avenue west, where she found her husband conversing with Mrs. Patterson and another colored visitor. Mrs. Buchanan is claimed to have assaulted her husband with a stick and pushed him down the stairs, and then to have assaulted and cut Mrs. Patterson with a razor. Jealousy was the cause asigned for her actions.

In the instructions to the jury, the court said that the verdict must either be for assault in the first or the second degree or for acquittal.

ESCAPED GREAT DANGERS AND DIES FROM SCRATCH

William Kirkpatrick Came Unscathed From Perilous Situations.

Blood Poisoning Follows Trivial Cut, Results in Death.

After having many hairbreadth escapes from death in violent forms, it was the fate of William Kirkpatrick to die from blood poisoning, resulting from a scratch received in handling a beer keg.

The notice of Kirkpatrick's death was published in last evening's Herald. He died Wednesday evening at St. Mary's hospital, and since then his friends have been recalling the many narrow escapes the man had.

A few years ago Kirkpatrick was employed by the Duluth Street Railway company, driving one of their wagons, and was engaged in collecting a load of empty oil barrels from the engine room of the Interstate bridge.

Contrary to the ordinary ruling, the company's team was permitted to remain on the big draw as it was swung open to permit the passing of a boat. Just as it was going through the draw the vessel whistled, frightening Kirkpatrick's team. They started at a wild gallop along the draw toward the upper end of the structure. Kirkpatrick was on the seat when the team started on their mad career toward the open end of the draw and made vain efforts to check them, until they struck an obstruction, which hurled the nervy driver from the seat into the traces. He hung tangled in the traces for a moment or two, but some miraculous accident released him when the team was within ten feet of the end of the bridge, and he fell to the roadway, fortunately dropping between the wheels and escaping practically unscathed. The team and wagon went crashing downward from the end of the draw, and the horses were drowned.

On another occasion Kirkpatrick was running one of the company's work cars, which was coming down Third avenue west with a trailer, loaded with ties. At the top of the hill the brake broke, and the cars came tearing down the hill at about sixty miles an hour. At the foot of the avenue the work car jumped the track and, plunging across Superior street, very effectively demolished the car starter's box before stopping. In some incomprehensible way Kirkpatrick escaped absolutely uninjured in this affair also.

That the veteran of such hairbreadth escapes as these should have succumbed to a scratch on his finger, which would have been adjudged insignificant by a child, is a most curious irony of fate.

FALSE COIN IN PRISON

Counterfeiter Plies Trade in Jail for Months Undetected.

Keeper Was His Partner and They Shared the Profits.

Warsaw, Poland, May 17.—Only in Russia, surely, could a coiner's den be found within the walls of a prison. In the czar's domain, however, all things are possible, even that a prisoner, under lock and key in a cell, should be able to make and circulate counterfeit coins for months without arousing the suspicions of the authorities. The statement sounds incredible, yet it is absoolutely true.

At Kovno, a large town in Lithuania, the public have been complaining for some time past of the multitude of false rubles, half rubles and 15-kopeck pieces in circulation. The passing of such coins is not in itself punishable in Russia, and the most punctilious persons do not hesitate to try to get rid of false coins. The best place is the market, where the Jews take and pass them with the greatest of ease. In respectable households the false coins go to the cook, who exchanges them for meat and vegetables at the market place. But at Kovno things were getting too bad, and even the Jews grew careful of what money they took.

The governor of the prison, who followed the same plan as ordinary mortals for getting rid of spurious coin, had complaints from his cook, who got back as good—or rather as bad—as she gave, and received false coins in her change whenever she went to market. The governor, in turn, complained to the head of the police, who promised to unearth the coiners and set an "ajent" (a sort of private detective) to watch the market place. The ajent soon discovered that a woman named Lednicka was constantly passing false coins—now at this stall, now at that. One day he had her arrested, taken to the nearest police station and searched. A good deal of money was found on her, and it was all false. She protested her innocence, saying that her husband had given her a month's money for the housekeeping.

"What is your husband and where does he live?" the head inspector asked. She replied that he was a jailer, and lived at the local prison. Mr. Lednicka was promptly sent for and questioned as to his wife's money. At first he refused to answer, but finally admitted that he got the money from one of the prisoners under his charge—a man named Mucha, who had been in prison awaiting his trial on a charge of banditism, for the past eight months.

"What part of the prison does he live in?" asked the astonished inspector. "In a cell, of course," was the answer. "No. 25—on the ground floor, to the left side of the courtyard." The police set off to the prison and asked for leave to search cell No. 25.

"Are you mad?" cried the governor. "The prison's under my charge! You call bring me people here, but I'm hanged if you're going to inspect my place whenever it suits you!"

Then they explained that Lednicka had confessed to getting fale coins from cell No. 25, and hinted that he himself had asked to have the coiners discovered. He reluctantly gave way and the cell was opened—much to the discomfiture of the occupant, who, sure that Lednicka alone had the keys, was coining false money and had not time to put away his plant.

The indignation of the governor was only equaled by the mirth of the police when the plant for coining false roubles, half roubles and 15-kopeck pieces was found in the cell. Caught red-handed, Lednicka and Mucha made a clean breast of it. They took a fancy to each other from the moment they first met in the prison.

Mucha soon confided to the jailer that he knew how to make false coins if Lednicka would go to a certain address in the town and bring the plant. Lednicka, for passing the coin, was to share profits. He agreed, brought the plant and always warned the prisoner when the prison officials were likely to inspect the cell, when the plant was taken out and hidden in Lednicka's rooms. The plan succeeded admirably. They made and circulated the false money for over half a year, and had it not been for the governor's cook, would probably have gone on till Mucha went up for trial. Kovno is convulsed with the story and, of course, those are not lacking who hint that the good governor himself knew something about the matter.

STEAL $50,000 CRUCIFIX.

Ivory Masterpiece, J. P. Morgan Tried to Buy is Missing.

New York, May 17.—The mysterious theft of a wonderful carved ivory crucifix, said to be worth $50,000 because it was the workmanship of one of the old masters, was reported to the detective bureau.

J. P. Morgan is declared to be the person who set the value on the crucifix by negotiating to purchase it at that price.

Dr. H. W. Carter reported the robbery. It took place between 5 o'clock Tuesday evening and 11 o'clock Wednesday morning. The crucifix is large and heavy, being nearly three feet in height, and it could not possibly have been taken by a sneak thief. The Carters are inclined to suspect some art collector or dealer.

It is credited to Michael Angelo, and is about 350 years old. The recent history is that it was stolen from Spain and first appeared in this country in possession of an art dealer.

CORTELYOU CREDITED WITH HEARING A BEE.

New York, May 17.—The Times prints a dispatch from Washington charging that the most active and influential enemy of the Taft boom is a member of President Roosevelt's cabinet, who believes he can be nominated president himself with Taft out of the way. This man is George B. Cortelyou, secretary of the treasury, says the Times. He has not been an openly declared opponent of the nomination of Taft, but his work is none the less effective.

Cortelyou is the only member of the cabinet who maintains any political relations with the "reactionaries," despite all that is printed to that effect about Secretary Root. Cortelyou's relations with J. Pierpont Morgan were always close and never have been interrupted.

As a member of that cabinet he has never said a word or done a thing to align himself with the radicals, of whom the president is the leader. He has simply performed his official duties.

The reactionaries know well enough they have got to take somebody who has been identified in the public mind with President Roosevelt. Mr. Cortelyou, in whose hat the presidential bee has been buzzing busily for a long time, is aware of that.

SCISSORS AND FILES ARE USED

Paris Apaches Get Around Law Prohibiting Deadly Weapons.

Paris, May 17.—Scissors and files are the latest weapons of the Apaches of Paris. Their latest victim is an Englishman and their latest scene of action is no less frequented a street than the Avenue de la Grande Armee.

While this Briton—a well known and wealthy resident of Paris named Roche—was passing along the avenue the other night, two of the Apaches, hidden in shadow, suddenly sprang upon him. The Englishman carried a cane—as most of his countrymen do—and fortunately it was a heavy stick with which he gave his assailants some hard blows. In return Mr. Roche received some ugly gashes from scissors and files which the footpads used as weapons. The combat was proceeding fiercely, with the odds in favor of the plucky Englishman, when there was police interference. The assistants rushed to the scene, but one was knocked out upon his arrival by savage kicks from the Apaches. The other cop stoutly grappled with one of the marauders, while a night watchman, and a stranger who came to assist, caught the second thug, and both were carried off to the police station.

I was fortunate in having a talk with the victim of the attack. He still bore ugly marks of the battle—several gashes on his hands and arms made by the files.

"That file," Roche said, "was a very effective weapon. It had been cut away to a fine point to serve as a murderous instrument. The other man carried a pair of large scissors. You know the object of that? If an Apache has a pair of large scissors in his pocket, he cannot be accused of concealing arms, which carries with it a penalty; moreover, it gives color to his contention that he is a tailor. He may back this up, as he often does, by producing a card showing that he is a member of a tailors' union."

The police declare that the files and scissors are becoming the popular weapon among the Apaches. They are abandoning both pistols and knives, as these are illegal weapons and punishable accordingly. Even the women Apaches—or squaws—carry scissors, I am told, not so much as to attack the wayfarer as to drive home an argument with one of their own sex.

While the police are acting with great courage and determination in an attempt to exterminate this tribe of desperadoes they are handicapped by a regulation prohibiting the use of revolvers except in extreme cases of self-defense. The officer who disobeys this injunction is certain to incur disgrace.

The insecurity of the streets of Paris after nightfall has become a grave scandal, but it is to be feared that nothing can be done until corporal punishment is inflicted. This is the opinion of the police themselves. There is, however, not the least likelihood of parliament sanctioning the use of such methods upon the sacred person of an elector even of the most detestable class. A decree of M. Clemenceau has abolished the frog's march under penalties; thus is removed the only deterrent, prison being a somewhat pampered existence in France.

HUNTING A CARGO.

French Ship Has Kept Up Search Twelve Months.

Sydney, N. S. W., May 17.—The French ship Notre Dame d' Arvor, which recently arrived in Sydney harbor, has been searching the world for a cargo for nearly twelve months.

She sailed in ballast from France at the instance of the French government for Hobart, where the captain was informed orders would be awaiting him. After an uneventful passage she arrived there with quite a fleet of other French bounty-fed ships, and, as there was no prospect of securing a charter, she was instructed to proceed to Puget Sound on the chance of securing a cargo there.

Once, again, however, she was disappointed, and has now returned to Sydney with the same ballast she originally carried when she sailed from France.

HORSE SHOW RAN BEHIND

Toronto's Four Hundred Has Abandoned Once Fashionable Event.

Canadian City Has a Severe Attack of Long-boat Fever.

Toronto, Ont., May 17.—Managers of the thirteenth Horse Show, which they entitled the Canadian National Horse Show, have been doing sums in addition, subtraction and long division since the show closed. The upshot of their arithmetical calculations is the discovery of a deficit of nearly $2,000. The task now is to convince all curious persons that this deficit does not represent a lack of interest in the show. In connection with it there is a tale to unfold.

In the beginning the Horse Show was three things. It was a horse show; it was a military tournament; it was the biggest society function of the year. The last was not least. Milliners and costumers swore by the Horse Show. It was always customary to secure the attendance of some social lion or lioness, announce the capture and then sell the spectators' boxes to the highest bidder. In this way large and fat sums were procured. The military tournament part of the show died first, and there are those who regret the loss of this feature, more especially the musical ride of the bold dragoons and certain drills of the Highlanders. The two other features remained, the 400 and the horses. With these the show worried along very well until it fell upon evil days and came to its unlucky thirteenth year. First among the mishaps was the loss of the armories, where all the shows had been held. The military authorities arrived at the conclusion that the stern necessities of war precluded the holding of horse shows in the armories. Then it appeared that no social lions or lionesses were available. Lord Minto when governor general bestowed a prize and attended the shows. His successor, Lord Grey, continued the prize, but business and a recent bereavement prevented him from attending. The management thought deeply and suggested a number of people, the lieutenant governor of the province and his personal adviser. "Them," objected the 400, "we have always with us." A few of the promoters were for letting the whole project drop for a year. They were overborne. It was decided that the show should be held.

Deprived of the armories, the committee had to look elsewhere, and the disquieting discovery was made that Toronto had nothing to offer. Driven to extremities, the committee, with many regrets, agreed upon the northern section of the new St. Lawrence market, hitherto unused except by a few hucksters who paid nothing for the privilege of being there. The city consented to fix the place up and did fix it up, building stands, boxes and promenades, with a big oblong space in the center. These heroic efforts were only partly successful. The box sale brought in something like half of the total of the sale last year. The idea of a hucksters' market—even rechristened the St. Lawrence Arena—was not persuasive, and there were no social lions coming. Thus the horse show was confronted with the task of succeeding as a show of horses and no more. Last year there had been trouble in the ring with the judging of certain horses of the heavyweight class, whose owners forthwith withdrew them from the show. This year the management discreetly did without the heavydroughts, and for their judges they went to the United States, bringing one all the way from Kansas. They said, "We will get experts who do not know the Canadian exhibitors." Also the management endeavored to popularize the show by reducing the prices of general admission. It was no use. There were plenty of good horses on exhibition, there were some keen competitions and the hucksters' market proved to be not such a bad place after all. But it was only a horse show. And now there is a deficit of nearly $2,000.

Toronto has the Longboat fever, a virulent attack. When the Indian came back with the Boston Marathon in his knapsack, Toronto rose mightily to the glorious occasion, met the hero with a torchlight procession and a band and presented him with a civic address read by none other than his worship Mayor Coatsworth. That was not all. The city council recognized the moment as the psychological one and forthwith voted the sum of $500 to be the beginning of a fund for the education of Mr. Longboat. The man with the last legs (albeit he was beaten in Buffalo) comes from Brantford, in the vicinity of which place the people of his race still sacrifice the dog and dance the corn dance. He had a little schooling in Brantford, a very little. He went to Hamilton, where he was first heard of as a man with speed. He came to Toronto, and is at this moment employed in a humble capacity by the W. J. Gage company, publishers. He is in the charge of the West End Young Men's Christian association, and is so closely guarded that no common person is permitted to go and talk to him without a special permit from the physical instructor of the Y. M. C. A. He is thus cherished because his friends and instructors fear that some wily person or persons may beguile him with palaver on the subject of racing for a cash prize, which is professionalism, and which the West End Young Men's Christian association abhors. Now the idea of the Toronto city council is that Longboat, the fast man, because he can win foot races, should be taken in hand, filled with "book larnin'" and thus permitted to command the world. There are sympathetic observers whose acquaintance with the speedy Indian is older than the city council's, who think that Longboat will be a fast runner and nothing but a fast runner, no matter how much he is schooled, and they advance arguments therefore. Some such idea seems to be shared by everybody with money. The city council's cash must be supplemented by private subscriptions. The private subscriptions have been called for. Three have come in, three little ones. The city council is wondering whether or not it was too hasty, whether its generosity was not mistaken.

Milk drinkers of this city are on the bridge between a milk famine and the unknown—probably another milk famine. Toronto drinks 100,000 quarts of milk per day. The dealers pay the farmer for this fluid $1.15 per can of eight gallons and sell it at $2.56. The farmer thinks he is being done up, that some more of the profit taken out of the helpless consumer ought to come to him. He demands an increase of 15 cents per can. The distributors refuse. This week the farmers have been bringing pressure to bear. They refused to bring their milk to the city, fed it to the pigs or poured it into the thirsty earth in the rear of the barn. The dealers have been hard put to it, have been ransacking Western Ontario for milk, and have been delivering half supplies to their customers. The shortage has been severely felt by the poor, people with invalids at home and women with young babies to feed. The farmers held on till finally a conference was arranged and the dispute was referred to arbitrators. Dealers have been put to all sorts of resources for getting milk into the city. The cans standing at the roadsides for collection were hutted into by agrarians and the contents spilled. One man tried to get his cans through with a covering of hay. An automobile ran into him and disclosed the fraud and spilled the milk. The dealers are now willing to give a 5 cent increase, but there remains a 10-cent difference and little prospect of an amicable settlement. The producers' and retailers' associations met the county judge and the deputy minister of agriculture as arbitrators, and will hold a second conference next week. The two sides are not at all friendly and no settlement is in sight. If a raise is given, the consumer will have to bear it.

F. VAN NORMAN, MANAGER.

A REAL SHERLOCK HOLMES.

An English Detective Who Tracked Down Many Criminals.

London, May 17.—There has just retired from the detective force of Scotland Yard a man who after nearly thirty years of service has won records of which Sherlock Holmes might well be proud. This is Detective Inspector John Walsh, who helped to capture the dynamiters of the '80s, to track down the anarchists of the '90s, who arrested the notorious "Invincible No. 1," who closed the infamous "Autonomy club" and who has taken no small part in the work of protecting Queen Victoria, the present king, the czar and the kaiser, as well as other rulers of Europe. Pressed for the most interesting incident in connection with his career, he would only recall the incident of "The Forty Thieves."

"'The Forty Thieves,'" said Inspector Walsh, "were a well known band of criminals when I first joined the force in 1878 and was stationed at Bow street. They consisted of a number of pretty girls between the ages of 14 and 18 who walked the streets of London and decoyed men into dark thoroughfares in and around St. Giles and the Seven Dials, where they were set upon by a gang of men in league with the forty fair ones, deprived of their valuables and sometimes beaten, sometimes worse. The men numbered among them some of the worst criminals to be found in London, and how they managed to get hold of so many really pretty and really young girls and maintain a hold over them has always been something of a mystery. Among the men were some of the most famous criminals of thirty years ago, burglars, coiners, footpads and thieves. Along with some colleagues at Bow street I was instrumental in breaking up the gangs, and within twelve months there was not one of them who was not doing penal servitude."

MONTE CARLO BANK LOSING

Receipts $800,000 Less Than Those of Previous Year.

Monte Carlo, May 17.—The report read at the annual meeting of the Casino company shows that the total income—derived from the gambling rooms falls $800,000 below that of the previous years' returns which were also much below the average. A dividend of $60 per share was voted, which was $12 less than last year. It was stated that the total receipts continue to decrease and show no signs of improving.

QUAKE UNEARTHS TREASURE

Ancient Arms and Valuable Coins Thrown Up In Portugal.

Lisbon, May 17.—An earth tremor followed by a moderate tidal wave has thrown up a remarkable treasure trove on the shores of Nazareth, one of the prettiest seaside resorts on the Portugese coasts.

Among the articles found are a large quantity of ancient arms, valuable coins of al nationalities, gold buttons, scarf pins, and other jewelry of considerable value, which proves to be treasure hidden in an ancient stronghold of the bussaneers of the Spanish Main.

Excavations are being made and further discoveries are being expected.

"THE BRIGHT SIDE."

W. J. Oliver, the lowest bidder for the construction of the Panama canal, said of a contract that a friend had lost:

"Oh, well, there's a bright side to everything. Had you gotten this contract you might have lost money on it. All things have their bright side. It is like the case of the rejected suitor.

"'Oh, Mabel,' the youth moaned, burying his face in his hands after his rejection, 'make it easier for me to bear, can't you, dear?'

"'Yes, Will,' Mabel gently answered. 'I snore terribly.'"

SCISSORS AND FILES ARE USED

Paris Apaches Get Around Law Prohibiting Deadly Weapons.

Paris, May 17.—Scissors and files are the latest weapons of the Apaches of Paris. Their latest victim is an Englishman, and four is almost scene of action is no less frequented a street than the Avenue de la Grande Armee.

While one Briton—a well known and wealthy resident of Paris named Roche—was passing along the avenue the other night, two of the Apaches, hidden in shadow, suddenly sprang upon him. The Englishman carried a cane—as most of his countrymen do—and fortunately it was a good stick with which he gave his assailants some hard blows. In return Mr. Roche received some ugly slashes from scissors and files which the bandits use as weapons. The combat was proceeding fiercely, with the odds in favor of the plucky Englishman, when there was police interference. The officers rushed to the scene, but one was attacked upon his arrival by savage kicks from the Apaches. The other cop soon grappled with one of the miscreants, while a night watchman, and a chauffeur who came to assist, caught the second thug, and both were carried off to the police station.

I was fortunate in having a talk with the victim of the attack. He still bore many marks of the battle—several gashes on his hands and arms made by the files.

"That file," Roche said, "was a very effective weapon. It had been cut away to a fine point to serve as a murderous instrument. The other man carried a pair of large scissors. You know the object of this? An Apache has a pair of large scissors in his pocket, he cannot be accused of concealing arms, which carries with it a penalty; moreover, it gives color to his contention that he is a tailor and may back pills up, as he often does, by producing a card showing that he is a member of a tailors' union."

The police declare that the files and scissors are becoming the popular weapon among the Apaches. They are abandoning both pistols and knives, as these are illegal weapons and punishable accordingly. Even the women Apaches—or sapheads—carry scissors, I am told, not so much as to attack the wayfarer as to drive home an argument with one of their own sex.

While the police are acting with great courage and determination in an attempt to exterminate this tribe of desperadoes they are handicapped by a regulation prohibiting the use of revolvers except in extreme cases of self-defense. The officer who disobeys this injunction is certain to incur disgrace.

The insecurity of the streets of Paris after nightfall has become a grave scandal, but it is to be feared that nothing can be done until corporal punishment is inflicted. This is the opinion of the police themselves. There is, however, but the least likelihood of parliament's authorizing the use of such methods upon the sacred person of an elector even of the most detestable class. A decree of M. Clemenceau has abolished the frog's march under penalties; this is removed the only deterrent, prison being a somewhat pampered existence in France.

HUNTING A CARGO.

French Ship Has Kept Up Search Twelve Months.

Sydney, N. S. W., May 17.—The French ship Notre Dame d' Arvor, which recently arrived in Sydney harbor, has been searching the world for a cargo for nearly twelve months.

She sailed in ballast from France at the instance of the French government for Hobart, where the captain was informed orders would be awaiting him. After an uneventful passage she arrived there with quite a fleet of other French bounty-fed ships, and, as there was no prospect of securing a charter, she was instructed to proceed to Puget Sound on the chance of securing a cargo there.

Once, again, however, she was disappointed, and has now returned to Sydney with the same ballast she originally carried when she sailed from France.

HORSE SHOW RAN BEHIND

Toronto's Four Hundred Has Abandoned Once Fashionable Event.

Canadian City Has a Severe Attack of Long-boat Fever.

Toronto, Ont., May 17.—Managers of the thirteenth Horse Show, which they entitled the Canadian National Horse Show, have been doing sums in addition, subtraction and long division since the show closed. The upshot of their arithmetical calculations is the discovery of a deficit of nearly $2,000. The task now is to convince all curious persons that this deficit does not represent a lack of interest in the show. In connection with it, there is a tale to unfold.

In the beginning the Horse Show was three things. It was a horse show; it was a military tournament; it was the biggest society function of the year. The last was not least. Milliners and costumers swore by the Horse Show. It was always customary to secure the attendance of some social lion or lioness, announce the capture and then sell the spectators' boxes to the highest bidder. In this way large and fat sums were procured. The military tournament part of the show died first, and there are those who regret the loss of this feature, more especially the musical ride of the bold dragoons and certain drills of the Highlanders. The two other features remained, the 400 and the horses. With these the show worried along very well until it fell upon evil days and came to its unlucky thirteenth year. First among the mishaps was the loss of the armories, where all the shows had been held. The military authorities arrived at the conclusion that the stern necessities of war precluded the holding of horse shows in the armories. Then it appeared that no social lions or lionesses were available. Lord Minto when governor general bestowed a prize and attended the shows. His successor, Lord Grey, continued the prize, but business and a recent bereavement prevented him from attending. The management thought deeply and suggested a number of people, the lieutenant governor of the province and his personal adviser. "Then," objected the 400, "we have always with us." A few of the promoters were for letting the whole project drop for a year. They were overborne. It was decided that the show should be held.

Deprived of the armories, the committee had to look elsewhere, and the disquieting discovery was made that Toronto had nothing to offer. Driven to extremities, the committee, with many regrets, agreed upon the northern section of the new St. Lawrence market, hitherto unused except by a few hucksters who paid nothing for the privilege of being there. The city consented to fix the place up and did fix it up, building stands, boxes and promenades, with a big oblong space in the center. These heroic efforts were only partly successful. The box sale brought in something like half of the total of the sale last year. The idea of a hucksters' market—even rechristened the St. Lawrence Arena—was not persuasive, and there were no social lions coming. Thus the horse show was confronted with the task of succeeding as a show of horses and no more. Last year there had been trouble in the ring with the judging of certain horses of the heavyweight class, whose owners forthwith withdrew them from the show. This year the management dispensed with the heavydroughts, and for their judges they went to the United States, bringing one all the way from Kansas. They said, "We will get experts who do not know the Canadian exhibitors." Also the management endeavored to popularize the show by reducing the prices of general admission. It was no use. There were plenty of good horses on exhibition, there were some keen competitions and the hucksters' market proved to be not such a bad place after all. But it was only a horse show. And now there is a deficit of nearly $2,000.

Toronto has the Longboat fever, a virulent attack. When the Indian came back with the Boston Marathon in his knapsack, Toronto rose mightily to the glorious occasion, met the hero with a torchlight procession and a band and presented him with a civic address read by none other than his worship Mayor Coatsworth. That was not all. The city council recognized the moment as the psychological one and forthwith voted the sum of $500 to be the beginning of a fund for the education of Mr. Longboat. The man with the last legs (albeit he was beaten in Buffalo) comes from Brantford, in the vicinity of which place the people of his race still sacrifice the dog and dance the corn dance. He had a little schooling in Brantford, a very little. He went to Hamilton, where he was first heard of as a man with speed. He came to Toronto, and is at this moment employed in a humble capacity by the W. J. Gage company, publishers. He is in the charge of the West End Young Men's Christian association, and is so closely guarded that no common person is permitted to go and talk to him without a special permit from the physical instructor of the Y. M. C. A. He is thus cherished because his friends and instructors fear that some wily person or persons may beguile him with palaver on the subject of racing for a cash prize, which is professionalism, and which the West End Young Men's Christian association abhors. Now the idea of the Toronto city council is that Longboat, the fast man, because he can win foot races, should be taken in hand, filled with "book larnin'" and thus permitted to command the world. There are sympathetic observers whose acquaintance with the speedy Indian is older than the city council's, who thing that Longboat will be a fast runner and nothing but a fast runner, no matter how much he is schooled, and they advance arguments therefore. Some such idea seems to be shared by everybody with money. The city council's cash must be supplemented by private subscriptions. The private subscriptions have been called for. Three have come in, three little ones. The city council is wondering whether or not it was too hasty, whether its generosity was not mistaken.

Milk drinkers of this city are on the bridge between a milk famine and the unknown—probably another milk famine. Toronto drinks 100,000 quarts of milk per day. The dealers pay the farmer for this fluid $1.15 per can of eight gallons and sell it at $2.56. The farmer thinks he is being done up, that some more of the profit taken out of the helpless consumer ought to come to him. He demands an increase of 15 cents per can. The distributors refuse. This week the farmers have been bringing pressure to bear. They refused to bring their milk to the city, fed it to the pigs or poured it into the thirsty earth in the rear of the barn. The dealers have been hard put to it, have been ransacking Western Ontario for milk, and have been delivering half supplies to their customers. The shortage has been severely felt by the poor, people with invalids at home and women with young babies to feed. The farmers held on till finally a conference was arranged and the dispute was referred to arbitrators. Dealers have been put to all sorts of resources for getting milk into the city. The cans standing at the roadsides for collection were butted into by agrarians and the contents spilled. One man tried to get his cans through with a covering of hay. An automobile ran into him and disclosed the fraud and spilled the milk. The dealers are now willing to give a 5 cent increase, but there remains a 10-cent difference and little prospect of an amicable settlement. The producers' and retailers' associations met the county judge and the deputy minister of agriculture as arbitrators, and will hold a second conference next week. The two sides are not at all friendly and no settlement is in sight. If a raise is given, the consumer will have to bear it.

A REAL SHERLOCK HOLMES.

An English Detective Who Tracked Down Many Criminals.

London, May 17.—There has just retired from the detective force of Scotland Yard a man who after nearly thirty years of service has won records of which Sherlock Holmes might well be proud. This is Detective Inspector John Walsh, who helped to capture the dynamiters of the '80s, to track down the anarchists of the '90s, who arrested the notorious "Invincible No. 1," who closed the infamous "Autonomy club" and who has taken no small part in the work of protecting Queen Victoria, the present king, the czar and the kaiser, as well as other rulers of Europe. Pressed for the most interesting incident in connection with his career, he would only recall the incident of "The Forty Thieves."

"The Forty Thieves," said Inspector Walsh, "were a well known band of criminals when I first joined the force in 1875 and was stationed at Bow street. They consisted of a number of pretty girls between the ages of 14 and 18 who walked the streets of London and decoyed men into dark thoroughfares in and around St. Giles and the Seven Dials, where they were set upon by a gang of men in league with the forty fair ones, deprived of their valuables and sometimes beaten, sometimes worse. The men numbered among them some of the worst criminals to be found in London, and how they managed to get hold of so many really pretty and really young girls and maintain a hold over them has always been something of a mystery. Among the men were some of the most famous criminals of thirty years ago, burglars, coiners, footpads and thieves. Along with some colleagues at Bow street I was instrumental in breaking up the gangs, and within twelve months there was not one of them who was not doing penal servitude."

Monte Carlo, May 17.—The report read at the annual meeting of the Casino company shows that the total income—derived from the gambling rooms falls $800,000 below that of the previous years' returns which were also much below the average. A dividend of $60 per share was voted, which was $12 less than last year. It was stated that the total receipts continue to decrease and show no signs of improving.

Lisbon, May 17.—An earth tremor followed by a moderate tidal wave has thrown up a remarkable treasure trove on the shores of Nazareth, one of the prettiest seaside resorts on the Portugese coasts.

Among the articles found are a large quantity of ancient arms, valuable coins of al nationalities, gold buttons, scarf pins, and other jewelry of considerable value, which proves to be treasure hidden in an ancient stronghold of the bussaneers of the Spanish Main.

Excavations are being made and further discoveries are being expected.

AS TO THE WEATHER.

It is really wonderful what a difference a few degrees in temperature make in everybody and everything.

Early in the week, with a cold northeaster drenching the city, Duluth was draped in gloom and pessimism. It seemed impossible that such a phenomenon as good weather could possibly materialize, and nearly everybody looked and felt grouchy and unpleasant. And when the northeaster wound up its ravages with a snowstorm that would have done credit to December, the climax seemed to have been reached, and all Duluth was in the depths of despair.

Then, as though the snowstorm had cleared the atmosphere, yesterday morning dawned "brite and fair," as Plupey Shute used to say. The sun shone merrily and with penetrating warmth. The wind blew softly and brought the scent of summer. Nature smiled and was glad, and everybody smiled and was glad with her. Again this morning came the reign of brilliantly beautiful weather, and the spirits of weary humanity rose several degrees along with the temperature.

Today you can almost hear things grow. The lawns are getting brighter every minute, the buds are swelling, the busy workshop of nature in the earth is humming, and peace and pleasantness pervade all Duluth.

Howdy, Summer! Hope you've come to stay.

A MISTAKEN REFORM.

Those who advocate the reinstatement of the army canteen are certain to be misunderstood, but the evidence is overwhelmingly in their favor, and against the well-meaning but misguided people who secured its abolition and who continue to oppose those who would restore it.

Father Joseph Casey, chaplain of the First infantry, now stationed in the Philippines, while home on a leave of absence told the St. Louis Times what he thought about it.

He said that there is at the present time more dissipation among the soldiers in the Philippines than when the canteen was in existence. Further, he said that he believes his opinion is shared by all other army chaplains and officers.

"I believe," he added, "that the W. C. T. U. and other forces which fought the army canteen were perfectly sincere in their efforts, but they were not familiar enough with the conditions of army life."

No question has ever been raised as to the sincerity of those that have opposed the canteen. To them it is nothing more or less than a process by which the government goes into the retail liquor business. In the army canteen beer and light wines were sold to the soldiers, with strict regulations preventing drunkenness and gambling, and absolutely no strong liquors were permitted.

As soon as the canteen was abolished in response to the efforts of those who looked upon it only in the light of a government saloon, every military reservation became fringed with evil resorts, where soldiers who had been content with the mild beverages of the canteen found fiery liquors of doubtful purity but of undoubted potency. The result, according to most of the army officers who have testified on this point, was a marked increase in drunkenness and in the more or less grave offenses that grow out of excessive drinking.

This is true in the Philippines, and it is true in this country. In the little village of Highwood, adjacent to Fort Sheridan, near Chicago, there is an evil brood of cheap saloons, intended solely for the patronage of soldiers. There the soldiers in the hours when they are off duty are warmly welcomed, and there they can carouse with none of the restrictions that were thrown about them in the canteen. Highwood, which was once a Chicago suburb, prettily located and promising to become the location of handsome residences, is now a plague spot, a place to be avoided by honest men and honest women.

The abolition of the army canteen, while it put the government out of the business of selling beer and wine, was a boon to the proprietors of places where license and bad whisky reign supreme.

OKLAHOMA'S CONSTITUTION.

Some time ago The Herald referred to a rumor that the president might lend his aid to a plot to head off the seven Democratic electoral votes that Oklahoma threatens next year by rejecting the proposed constitution and postponing statehood, thereby, a couple of years more. At that time The Herald expressed a positive disbelief in the report that the president would stoop to any such petty political trickery as this.

The rumor is still current, however, and seems to be gaining in force. Residents of other states, singularly enough all Republican politicians, are exhibiting deep interest in the welfare of the Oklahomans, and expressing grave fears over what the proposed constitution is going to do to them. They think the document ought to be rejected, because it is "such a conglomeration of constitution and legislative enactments."

The main charge appears to be that the constitution includes matters that are not in the constitutions of other states, but that are regarded in those states as subjects for legislation rather than for constitutional enactment. This is hardly sufficient excuse for the rejection of a constitution. If the people of Oklahoma want to preserve certain theories of government by embalming them in their constitution, that is their privilege. It is no business of the president, or of any resident of any other state.

Below are some of the principal provisions of the proposed constitution:

The initiative and referendum; primary nomination of all public officers; prohibition of succession in state offices; submission of the prohibition question to the people; elective state corporation commission; 2-cent passenger fares; forbidding railroads from owning any productive agency of a natural commodity; fellow-servant liability law; prohibiting corporations from owning more land than is absolutely necessary in the operation of their business; prohibiting the issuance of watered stock and requiring that books of corporations be open to inspection at all times; appointing a commission to negotiate the purchase of the segregated mineral lands in the Indian territory; fixing the legal rate of interest at 6 per cent and the contract rate at 10 per cent; compulsory and separate school system; labor and arbitration commission; commission of charities and corrections; agriculture commission; oil, gas and mineral commission; requiring majority vote to amend the constitution.

The worst charge that can be made against any of these provisions is that some of them are experimental and more or less theoretical.

But if the people of Oklahoma want to experiment with them, whose business is it?

Surely that desire is no excuse for holding off statehood until after the presidential election. Whatever the excuse may be, the real object will be to head off those seven probably Democratic electoral votes.

NORWEGIAN INDEPENDENCE.

Among all the peoples from faraway lands that have come to Minnesota to make their home in the country that welcomes sturdy citizens from everywhere, there are none more resourceful, more industrious or more patriotic than the Norwegians, who are today celebrating their Independence day.

Those who know them, as a race and as individuals, realize fully that they are not a people that could ever be content with anything short of absolute freedom and independence. That is why they enter into the spirit of their adopted land so promptly and with so much understanding.

Ninety-three years ago today the union with Denmark was dissolved, and a new Norwegian constitution was promulgated that declared Norway to be a free and independent nation. This it has been ever since, though for many years Norway was a party to a voluntary union with Sweden, which was broken June 7, 1905, so that now Norway is a nation among nations, with no ties except those of friendship and kinship binding her to any other country. The spirit of her people is illustrated by the fact that though they voluntarily accepted the kingship, making the country a monarchy, it is that in form merely, and in reality the most marked difference between the Norwegian government and a republic is that the Norwegian ruler is there for life, and the head of a republic is selected for a fixed term.

Minnesota is proud of its Norwegian citizens. Though strong in their love of and devotion to the mother country, they are no less strong in their loyalty to the country of their adoption. They make sober, steady, reliable and productive citizens, and their fellow-countrymen in whose veins runs the blood of many other peoples join today in wishing them and their brothers at home in Norway long-continued prosperity and freedom.

FEDERAL RATE MAKING.

A Washington Dispatch to the Boston Transcript says that the prevailing view there is that the federal government has just entered upon its career as a regulator of the transportation companies, and that no man dare predict where it will stop.

According to this correspondent, men of conservative minds are convinced that eventually the government is going to fix the railroad rates itself, instead of letting the railroads do it, and contenting itself with having a commission to tinker them in response to complaints.

It is said further that the subject is uppermost in the mind of President Roosevelt, and that he will attempt at the next session of congress to obtain from that body more advanced laws relating to rate-making.

The trouble is that while the new rate law requires all of the railroads to submit all of their freight schedules to the interstate commerce commission, they have little meaning to the lay mind, or even to the members of the commission.

Nothing is more certain than that so long as the people have the feeling that they are being made to pay the railroads undue profit, or profit upon watered stock, they will not be satisfied with anything short of full and complete government regulation of rates.

It makes the railroads very uneasy and resentful to talk about such things. Their friends in Wall street kick up little panics, and then swear that agitation of such objects is blighting prosperity and ruining the country. Such talk may always be expected, so long as anybody dares mention the subject of government rate regulation.

But if the present method of regulation, in response to complaints, proves inadequate, the people are not going to be contented with it, nor should they be. They have a right to expect exact justice from the railroads, and they need not expect it so long as the railroads are permitted to make rates independent of public supervision. If supervision does not effect the desired result, then the government is going to make the rates itself. If that won't work, then the government—which means the people—is going to take over the railroads, and operate them for the benefit of the people, independent of the wishes of Wall street and the promoters of high finance.

The first step toward government rate-making will be a valuation of the railroads of the country. The test will then be, as to the rates on any particular line, whether they yield an inordinate profit on a fair valuation, exclusive of watered capital. Railroads can earn money on inflated capital only so long as the people are willing they should. They are entitled only to fair returns on a fair valuation, and ultimately that is all they are going to get.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"There is some of the best fishing in the country around Cass Lake," said H. J. Todd of St. Paul at the Lenox. "I suppose nearly every one in Duluth has been there and tried his luck. It is well worth while. Two men can catch a barrel full of pike and pickerel in two hours' time if they feel of a hoggish disposition. It is hard for most people to stop when the fish are biting so good that they can pull them in as fast as they throw out their line.

"I was up there two summers ago with two other fellows, and I never saw such fishing in my life. I guess there are places where one can catch bass, but we were satisfied with pike and pickerel and got so many of them that we took only a part of them home. As a matter of fact we threw all the pickerel, except the big ones, back into the water as soon as we pulled them out, and kept the pike and the big fellows. Even with this precaution we could not take all of our catch home.

"A man by the name of Jimmy Church sat in the middle of the boat. He was something of a scoffer, and as that was his first experience on the lake he did not believe the stories he had heard of all the fish there were to be caught. He laughingly agreed to take care of his own line and ours, too, taking the fish off as fast as we pulled them in. He found he had a pretty big contract on his hands, for either I or the other fellow was dropping a fish into his lap every minute, and he didn't have time to take the first fish off the hook until we pitied him and relieved him of the job.

"It's remarkable what a lot of pretty summer towns Northern Minnesota has. It's really not the towns, but the lakes around them that are pretty. When one comes to sift the matter down, one discovers that the towns are pretty hard on the eyes. Most of them take on the appearance of frontier settlements, which is about all they are, when you consider their age. A redeeming feature is that usually they have first-class hotel accommodations, and a man can forgive much if he is properly fed and has a good place to sleep. There is nothing to be ashamed of in the fact that some of the towns are not pleasing to the eye, for they have made the most of their opportunities. I never yet saw a new town, east, west, north or south, that was very pleasant to look at."

"Business is booming through the West," said M. R. Scott of Seattle, Wash., at the Spalding. "We never had better times out there than we are having right now. There is plenty of money in sight, and more work than the labor supply can take care of. This condition is rather unusual, for the North Pacific coast generally is the first place headed for by the man who intends locating in the West, and this fact keeps the towns pretty well filled with idle men. This had led to false reports being sent East to the effect that the whole north coast was flooded with labor.

"These reports do an injustice to the country. As a matter of fact, while there are plenty of idle men lying around the streets and more moderate priced hotels, it will be noticed that they are not the same ones from day to day. They land in town, get acquainted with the situation, and in two or three days find employment in the interior through some office in the city, if they do not get located in town itself. The demand for labor is good enough outside the city, and as soon as the supply gets distributed it is seen that supply and demand are pretty equally divided.

"Perhaps I am speaking from a prejudiced viewpoint, but I think Seattle is undoubtedly the best town on the coast. There is more business and hustle there than anywhere else in the West. The city has been called the Chicago of the West with good reason. Seattle reminds me something of Duluth, in that it is built on a hill. The residence district, however, and some of the business district, such as grocery stores and the like, extend back over the hill, and are connected with the city proper by a fine system of street car lines. These lines extend into the country in all directions, and furnish as fine a service as one could find in the East."

Equal to the Emergency.

Chicago Tribune: The Rev. Dr. Fourthly was reading the evening lesson from the Book of Job.

"Yea, the light of the wicked shall be put out—"

At this instant, by one of those inexplicable accidents that sometimes happened, all the electric lights went out, leaving the church in total darkness.

"Brethren," said Dr. Fourthly without a moment's pause, "in view of the sudden and startling fulfillment of this prophecy we will spend a few minutes in silent prayer for the electric lighting company."

The Wrong Number.

Patrick, who was employed in the yards of a railroad, one day happened to be in the yard office when the force was out. The telephone rang vigorously several times, and Pat at last thought it ought to be answered. He walked over to the instrument, took down the receiver and put his mouth to the transmitter, just as he had seen others do.

"Hillo!" he called.

"Hello!" answered the voice at the other end of the line. "Is this six-one-five-nine?"

"Aw, g'wan! Phwat d'ye think Oi am—a box-car?"

THE WEATHER.

Bad weather has its uses. Among other things, it teaches us how to properly enjoy such charming weather as that which has visited Duluth today and yesterday. Certainly it has been enjoyed, not only by the people, but by the birds and the plants and the trees. The birds have carolled joyously, and the buds have swelled with happiness. A few days like this would cast into the realm of things forgotten the unpleasant weather of the backward spring. Last night's lowest temperature was 42 degs. and yesterday's highest was 62 degs. The weather man expects northerly winds to make it cooler tonight, and some threatening weather is probable.

A year ago today it was raining, with a hail accompaniment.

The sun rose this morning at 4:29 and sets tonight at 7:39, making 15 hours and 10 minutes of sunshine.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Light rains fell during Thursday or last night in Atlantic states, the western lake region, Upper Mississipi valley, Western Dakotas, Montana and Alberta, due to low pressure areas centered over Lake Superior and the Southwest. Temperatures are higher in central districts and the Southwest, but rising pressures in the Northwest and Atlantic states are attended by colder weather in these districts. Temperatures as a rule are moderate to mild. Pressure conditions in the Northwest and Southwest favor partly cloudy and occasionally threatening weather and northerly winds in this locality tonight and Saturday.

Following were yesterday's highest temperatures as recorded by the weather bureau:

At Bridge.

She still sits at bridge at midnight
As the clocks are striking the hour;
Nor thoughts of her home or her family
To move her have the power.

How often, oh, how often,
Summer and winter through,
Has she sat thus at bridge at midnight—
Aye, sometimes till one and two.

And how often, oh, how often,
Through the golden hours of day,
Has she striven with others like her
For purse or prize at play!

And forever and forever,
While this fad our fair land sweeps,
Will she bridge the interval daily
'Twixt the time she wakes and sleeps.

So, she sits still at bridge at midnight,
And pride in her bosom stirs,
For she holds the best score of a series
And the tournament trophy is hers!

Plant South to Pine.

Barnum Star-Gazette: The Pioneer Press threw a very tiresome fit last week endeavoring to show its readers why the northern part of the state should be planted with fir cones and made to grow tall, green pines. This is not its first splurge, but only one of many that the lumber barons interested have caused to come forth. The press should be informed of the conditions of this Northern Minnesota and stay closer to home. It would doubtless be a surprise to the staid old paper to find that things had changed wonderfully in the last few years and that now this section of Minnesota had broken into the dairying and agricultural ranks with open bids for first place. But it is a fact that pineries are needed around the southern and western parts of the state. This part of the state is advancing so rapidly that we cannot take the time to hoe and water an acre of pinelets, but our southern and western brethren, who are having such trouble with drouths and floods need these wind-breaks to equalize the climate and let them get on an equal footing with a country that has lots of wild pines that will probably endure forever. So long as Greater Duluth and the ranges furnish our farmers with the best market in the world, the Press will shout in vain and the vegetables, dairy products and fruit will be cultivated in larger and larger quantities until the state, with the present apportionment will look foolish. The tail will wag the dog.

Coy, But Not Too Coy.

New York Tribune: H. C. Frick described at a directors' meeting the amalgamation of two railroads.

"At first," he said, "the XYZ people were coy. Yet they were not too coy. They were like Pat and Biddy.

"'Biddy,' says Pat, timidly, 'did ye iver think o' marryin'?'

"'Shure, now,' says Biddy, looking demurely at her shoe, 'shure, now, the subject has niver entered me mind at all, at all.'

"'It's sorry Oi am,' says Pat, and he turned away.

"'Wan minute, Pat,' said Biddy, softly, 'Ye've set me thinkin'.'"

The Scribe Can Now Rubber.

Letting Alone Wouldn't Hurt.

Chicago Journal: The display of finery in the windows of department stores causes the ruin of many girls, according to Chicago women. Why not pass a law compelling them to wear blinders when walking in State street?

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1887.

Charles A. Carlson has gone on a visit to his Fatherland. He will return to Duluth in about three months.

G. E. Saeger left yesterday for his home in Cleveland, and will remain in the East for some time.

A man by the name of Andy Boy was drowned on Monday last in the St. Louis river, about three miles south of Fond du Lac by the upsetting of a batteau, in which he and another man were breaking a jam of logs. He was a single man, and had made Northern Pacific Junction his headquarters for some time.

J. A. Presley, Jr., was badly injured at Mankato by escaping gas, and is not expected to live. He is a brother of C. R. Presley of this city, who has gone to Mankato.

Miss Kedney of Faribault, who has been staying here with her sister, Mrs. Poole, for some time past, returned to her home on Wednesday.

The marriage of Miss Kate Culver, one of the best known young ladies of Duluth, to Mr. Whitelaw of Atchison, Kan., was announced last week. They are on a trip to Saratoga Springs, and it is expected they will make their home in Kansas.

The Duluth ball team has been greatly strengthened. Joe Quinn, late of the St. Louis Browns, has been signed as captain, and will play second base.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded:

Oberne, Hoosick & Co., Chicago dealers in hides and wool, have decided to open a branch house in Duluth. Mr. Oberne is now in the city with his agent, W. J. Burnett, looking for a suitable location.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Albert Lea Tribune: The comments of the state press over the work of the late legislative session are more than usually commendable, and there seems the best of reason for this action on the part of the editors, for there were more laws enacted the past session in response to the demands of the people and in accordance with the demands in the platform of the dominant party, than ever before in the history of the state, at least since it became a commonwealth of great importance as it now is. This is an excellent sign, and the favorable opinions as to the work done are proof that honor is conceded where honor is due.

Albert Lea Standard: Again we rise to remark, Trust busting is busted. It don't do the business and never will. But it is well to keep trying, for agitation, continual knocking, will evolve the correct solution of the question by and by.

North Branch Review: The fellow who proposed to Carrie Nation a short time ago should receive a chunk of the Carnegie hero fund.

Ely Miner: Voters of the northern end of the state will please bear in mind that there are a few names to appear for official honors of men who are opposed to this section of the state and its development. Keep them in mind and vote for the interests of the north country.

Austin Register: The Governor Johnson boom for the Democratic presidential nomination seems to be gaining strength. Henry Watterson, in a recent issue of the Louisville Courier-Journal, refers to him as a presidential possibility in very complimentary terms. Governor Johnson's nomination is a strong possibility. He would be an ideal compromise candidate between the Bryan radicals and the conservative element of the party who favored Parker three years ago.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: There is nothing to indicate it, beyond the marks on the calendar, but it is a fact nevertheless, that the Fourth of July is only removed a little better than six weeks.

Grand Rapids Herald-Review: Hibbing is enterprising. That town has captured the county fair from Duluth and proposes to hold it there. The premium list for next fall has already been issued. The edition consists of 4,000 copies. Hibbing is all right, and knows a good thing when it appears on the business horizon.

Stillwater Gazette: Cloquet and Virginia, Minn., expect to soon join the ranks of the cities favored with free delivery. Two towns to begin on be able to rank as a second-class office, showing that the towns in Northern Minnesota are surely coming.

Minneota Mascot: There is no need of going to Canada, for those who want good and cheap land. Our own Northwest offers better opportunities in this line, and you don't need to leave the United States to take advantage of them. Thousands can still find room in Northern Minnesota, and we all know that there is not a better state in the Union than the "North Star."

Walker Pilot: On to Winnipeg! is the cry of the M. & L. When the line is completed it will afford a number of homesick Canadian land suckers a direct route to Northern Minnesota—God's country.

Pointed Paragraphs.

Chicago News: If you have anything to say to a mule, say it to his face.

How easy it is to suggest a remedy for other people's ills!

Fortunately for the average man, his brains are not on exhibition.

An ideal woman is one we frequently hear about, but seldom see about.

Tempted and tried, won and tied—then divorce proceedings and alimony.

Why is it that a married woman seldom has any use for a pretty female servant?

It's time to stand from under when the man who knows it all starts to tell you all he knows.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A college education is good for a boy who can't do anything else.

Politics wouldn't have any interest for the average man if it was respectable.

Most people are ashamed to admit they don't understand politics and do poetry.

A girl gets married the first time for excitement and a widow the second time to get rid of it.

A woman thinks that to be a gentleman you've got to admire the way she plays whist, no matter how bad it is.

Kathleen Mavourneen.

Kathleen Mavourneen!—The song is still ringing
As fresh and as clear as the trill of the birds;
In world weary hearts it is sobbing and singing
In pathos too sweet for the tenderest word,
Oh, have we forgotten the one who first breathed it—
Oh, have we forgotten his rapturous art—
Our need to the master whose genius bequeathed it?
Oh, why art thou silent, thou voice of the heart?

Kathleen Mavourneen; Thy lover still lingers;
The long night is waning—the stars pale and few;
Thy sad serenader, with tremulous fingers,
Is bowed with his tears as the lily with dew;
The old harpstrings quaver—the old voice is shaking—
In sighs and in sobs moans the yearning refrain—
The old vision dims and the old heart is breaking * * * Kathleen Mavourneen, inspire us again!
—James Whitcomb Riley.

Good Nature.

Addison: Good nature is more agreeable in conversation than wit, and gives a certain air to the countenance which is more amiable than beauty. It shows virtue in the fairest light, takes off in some measure from the deformity of vice, and makes even folly and impertinence supportable.

MIRTHFUL REMARKS.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: Prospective Purchaser—I like the looks of this automobile, but suppose I should run over someone and—

Salesman—The springs are so easy, sir, you'd scarcely be jarred at all.

Washington Star: "Do you believe that water in stocks does any great harm?"

"Well," answered Mr. Dustin Stax, "water in stocks, combined with the sunshine of publicity, is responsible for a great many faded reputations."

Philadelphia Press: Citiman—Aren't any of you suburbanites preparing to grow anything in your gardens this year?

Stubbubs—Well, there's one thing most of us have grown already.

Citiman—Indeed? What is that?

Subbubs—Tired.

Philadelphia Ledger: "Horribly dull," remarked the artisan; "the certainty of regular work at high wages is wearing me out."

His comrades agreed that monotony was the bane of life.

Thus was the strike epidemic accounted for.

Cleveland Leader: The prodigal had returned.

"No," responded the old man, looking the youth over carefully; "no, I'll let you live. But I'll put you to work and train some of that fat off."

Baltimore American: Visitor—I found the policeman at that down-town station a very sociable lot with one another.

Citizen—Yes, I believe they generally club together.

Philadelphia Ledger: The embezzling teller had been sentenced to six years' imprisonment.

Chicago Tribune: First Interne—What a funny little appendix that last patient had.

Second Interne—Yes; regular comic supplement.

Philadelphia Ledger: The month of May shivered.

"Perhaps it was all right," she said, "for you to linger in the lap of spring, but I won't have any old loafer mussing up my summer suit, just understand that."

Winter, however, begged for delay, and hung around awaiting a final decision.

Philadelphia Press: "Hello, old man!" exclaimed Dudley at the Literary Circle reception, "it's a pleasant surprise to meet you here."

"Good of you to say so, old chap," replied Brown.

"Yes, you see I was afraid I wouldn't find anybody but bright and cultured people here."

Unexpected Contents.

Lippincott's: There is a state senator in one of our Western states whose burly appearance might possibly lead one to mistake him for a laboring man, but who is as sensitive as a woman to all unpleasant circumstances.

He happened one night to be standing on the sidewalk outside of an undertaking establishment, conversing with a friend on some important political matter. One of the employes of the shop approached them and said: "Say, will you give me a lift with a casket?" The senator shuddered, and said hesitatingly, "Is there—is there—anything in it?"

"Sure," came the hearty reply; "there's a couple of good drinks in it."

NO MONEY IN PARK FUND

Park Board Can Make Few Improvements This Year.

Boulevard Extension Will be About Only Work Done.

However far the mayor's plans for the acquisition of more park property may go, one thing is certain Duluth's parks which are already in existence will get very little improvement during the coming summer. The reason for this is brief, but all sufficient. The park board is "broke."

The western boulevard extension will be put through this year, if possible, and while no definite estimate as to the cost of the work still to be done on this job has been made, it is expected that it will just about use up the funds at the disposition of the board. This puts a very effective damper on hopes for any other extensive improvements in the parks of the city. Practically all the work done will be charged up to maintenance, though the maintenance men who are employed in the parks do in some instances a certain amount of improvement work.

A portion of the grading on the boulevard extension, westerly from the Lincoln park approach, was done last year, but a large portion of the grading and all of the graveling of the roadbed will have to be done this year, and the expense will not be small. The extension will make the boulevard drive about two and one-half miles longer, and will join the Oneota cemetery road very close to the cemetery itself. The extension runs along the bluffs several hundred feet above the Duluth, Missabe & Northern tracks, west of the ore docks, and the view from this portion of the drive will be almost as magnificent as from the present drive.

The eastern extension of the boulevard will be paid for by private subscription, the greater portion of the money being already in the hands of the park board. Work on this will be commenced next week. The property owners along the line of the proposed extension, from the Chester creek descent to Wooland avenue, subscribed the money for this extension, simply asking the park board to superintend the work. The gravel roadbed, which is to be put on both extensions, has proved itself practically as good as macadam for roads on the easily drained, dry, hillside.

"Plans for the summer? Why, we haven't made any," said Secretary Helm of the board yesterday. "We won't have the money, that is all. I wish we might do a lot of work, but I am afraid that it will be confined for lack of funds to the western boulevard extension. After we get our appropriation we will be expected to make the first of our four annual payments on the Lake Shore park. We are to pay $2,500 each year until the $10,000, which was our share of the purchase price, is paid up."

There is a good chance to spend a large amount of money in the parks already purchased. Fairmount park, at Seventy-first avenue west, is but half developed, the acreage on the western side of the creek which runs through it being almost untouched, except for the efforts at clearing of one man, who is employed as caretaker. Lincoln park would also bear almost as much development work, and the condition of all of the city's parks would leave the board plenty of channels by which to spend their money for some time to come.

SPECULATION RIFE IN JAPAN

"Get Rich Quick" Fever Has Seized the Nipponese.

Tokio, May 17.—"The 'get rich quick' fever has seized Japan, and, unless the nation sobers down, speculative crises will soon become as common here as they are in Wall street."

Such is the opinion of an American merchant who has just been interviewed in connection with his business tour throughout the East.

"I was amazed at the amount of speculation which is now being indulged in by all classes in the principal cities," he said, during the course of his interview.

"The stock exchange in Tokio, which, unlike ours in Wall street, is thrown open to the public, is frequently the scene of great excitement and bucket-shops of the worst description abound both in the capital and in other cities. The produce and rice exchanges are other centers of feverish gambling, and already the newspapers are predicting that unless legislation is changed some Japanese Leiter will yet attempt to corner rice.

"I have just learned that companies and syndicates floated during the twelve months ending January last, represented the astonishing total capitalization of $700,000,000. Many of these concerns were originally of the soundest description possible, but Japanese company promoters, whose numbers are rapidly growing, have recently been responsible for the most rotten concerns. In land and house property, too, there was much speculation. In Northern Japan, more especially, property has, in many cases, trebled in value.

"Happily Japanese women do not speculate, and take very little interest in business affairs. The railways owned by the state also afford no field for manipulation and speculation, and the tramways in Tokio are shortly to be municipalized. I have talked with some of the sober minded statesmen of Japan and they believe that the present fever is a passing phase, due to the great wave of prosperity which is passing over the nation, and to the elation consequent upon her victories."

STORK AS A SONGBIRD.

So Classed by Law in Montana---Joke of Legislature.

Helena, Mont., May 17.—In Montana the stork is by law classed among the singing birds. This is the result of a joke started by a legislator in which the whole legislature joined.

In 1895 the game laws were up for amendment. The house resolved itself into committee of the whole for the consideration of the amendments.

The committee was about to arise and report progress, when a Lewis and Clark representative saw an opportunity to spring a joke at the expense of a Cascade county colleague named Stork. To make it more effective, he stepped over and informed the Great Falls representative of his purpose to introduce an amendment including the stork in the protected class, that is, to make it a violation of the law to kill a stork at any season of the year.

Not seeing the joke, the Cascade county member assented to the amendment, which was duly offered, to the effect that the stork be included in the singing bird class and, therefore, entitled to protection from sportsmen and their shotguns. The Cascade county representative seconded the adoption of the amendment, declaring that he thought it a splendid step.

Then another member from Helena, a lawyer, made a somewhat extended speech in support of the amendment, declaring that those who had heard the stork sing, could not fail to appreciate its melodious notes, and he asserted with great vehemence that it should by all means be protected against the onslaughts of the cruel hunters. Still another Helena member arose to second the motion, and told of the visits of the stork in certain parts of Cascade county.

By this time the Cascade county representative realized that a joke was being perpetrated, and endeavored to catch the chairman's eye that he might portest. But the chairman was deaf to his entreaties, until half a dozen speeches had been made in favor of its adoption.

Finally Mr. Stork was recognized and he became especially bitter in his remarks, which caused his colleagues to become all the more determined to put the amendment through, which was done, to the discomfiture of the Cascade representative.

The bill as amended was recommended for passage and passed on third reading, despite Mr. Stork's speech in protest, and it went to the senate. Here again, Mr. Stork made a vain attempt to kill the bill with the objectionable amendment.

It went to the governor, as did Mr. Stork, but the governor was as obdurate as the two houses had been, and thereafter the Montana statutes classified the stork with the singing bird class. So the law still stands.

THE FARMER'S WIFE

Is very careful about her churn. She scalds it thoroughly after using, and gives it a sun bath to sweeten it. She knows that if her churn is sour it will taint the butter that is made in it. The stomach is a churn. In the stomach and digestive and nutritive tracts are performed processes which are almost exactly like the churning of butter. Is it not apparent then that if this stomach-churn is foul it makes foul all which is put into it?

The evil of a foul stomach is not alone the bad taste in the mouth and the foul breath caused by it, but the corruption of the pure current of blood and the dissemination of disease throughout the body. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes the sour and foul stomach sweet. It does for the stomach what the washing and sun bath do for the churn—absolutely removes every tainting or corrupting element. In this way it cures blotches, pimples, eruptions, scrofulous swellings, sores, or open eating ulcers and all humors or diseases arising from bad blood.

To aid in healing old sores, or ulcers, apply Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve to them while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" to purify and enrich the blood.

Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve is cleansing and pain relieving. It destroys the bad odors arising from suppurating, or running, sores and puts them in the best possible condition for healing.

The "All-Healing Salve" is a superior dressing for all open, running, or suppurating, Sores or Ulcers. For healing open wounds, cuts and scratches it is unsurpassed.

If your medicine dealer does not have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock mail 50 cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and you will receive it by return post.

In treating all open sores, or ulcers, boils carbuncles and other swellings, it is important that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery be taken persistently to purify the blood and thereby remove the cause of the trouble. It is in the blood that the great battle of health has to be fought. The ulcer and the sore are simply the outward flowers of disease, with roots running down into the blood. These roots must be eradicated or the disease will break out afresh. "Golden Medical Discovery" cleanses the blood of all foul and poisonous accumulations, pushes out the dead and waste matter, and thus purifies the entire life current. Disease in the flesh must die out when it is no longer fed by foul blood. "Golden Medical Discovery" effectively cures disease in the flesh by curing its cause in the blood.

If you have bitter, nasty, foul taste in your mouth, coated tongue, foul breath, are weak and easily tired, feel depressed and despondent, have frequent headaches, dizzy attacks, gnawing or distress in stomach, constipated or irregular bowels, sour or bitter risings after eating and poor appetite, these symptoms, or any considerable number of them, indicate that you are suffering from biliousness, torpid, or lazy liver with the usual accompanying indigestion, or dyspepsia and its attendant derangements.

The best agents known to medical science for the cure of the above symptoms and conditions, as attested by the writings of leading teachers and practitioners of all the schools of medical practice, have been skillfully and harmoniously combined in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. That this is absolutely true will be readily proven to your satisfaction if you will but mail a postal card request to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for a free copy of his booklet of extracts from the standard medical authorities, giving the names of all the ingredients entering into his world-famed medicines and showing what the most eminent medical men of the age say of them.

Cures Woman's Weaknesses.

We refer to that boon to weak, nervous, suffering women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. John Fyfe one of the Editoral staff of THE ECLECTIC MEDICAL REVIEW says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) which is one of the chief ingredients of the "Favorite Prescription": "A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator * * * makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system." He continues "In Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Fyfe further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Pain or aching in the back, with leucorrhea; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women; constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flooding), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhea (suppressed or absent monthly periods), arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and anemic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medical properties of which it most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root another prominent ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says: "It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. In all catarrhal conditions * * * and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original Little Liver Pills, first put up by old Dr. Pierce over 40 years ago. Much imitated, but never equaled. Easy to take as candy.

"HERE COMES THE BULL!"

El Toro Tosses Men, Mules and Horses in Gay Seville.

Madrid, May 17.—The English and Americans who have been in Seville for the celebrated fair witnessed a sensational event the other evening while they were leaving the theaters. Just as some bulls were being taken to the troll adjoining the arena one of them got away from the herd and rushed about the streets of the town. Everybody was in a great state of alarm and the cafes were hurriedly shut. The bull charged carts and carriages, wounding horses and mules and tossing several men, one of whom was seriously injured.

Of course there were practical jokers in the crowd who shouted "Here comes the bull!" whereupon everybody in the street would stampede and climb lamp-posts, balconies or trees. However apart from the frightening process the matter was serious enough as the bull, a very fine animal was at large for two hours and was then killed.

During the panic which prevailed numbers of people sought refuge in the houses of perfect strangers and refused to leave for fear of meeting the bull.

REMEMBER THE MEETING

Anglo-Indians Were Fearful of the Fiftieth Anniversary.

Extraordinary Spring in India—Hailstones Big as Billiard Balls.

Calcutta, May 17.—Because of the agitation and many uprisings among the Hindus of the Punjab, considerable fear was expressed lest the fiftieth anniversary of the Indian mutiny might result in another uprising, but fortunately it was not realized. It was at first proposed to celebrate the dates in connected with the mutiny, but military authorities said that it would be difficult to calculate the effects of such celebrations on the Oriental mind, and for this reason the entire subject has been practically abandoned, though some of the older soldiers more nearly allied with the traditions of the uprising and its suppression celebrated in a small way.

The mutiny began on Sunday afternoon, May 10, 1857, fifty years ago, with Sepoys of the Bengal army at Meerut, the largest military station in India, who shot some of their officers, released their comrades from prison, massacred all the European residents, set fire to public buildings and the next day roused the neighboring city, Delhi, which the rebels seized. Then through all the valley of the Ganges the rebellion spread. In nine or ten places there were masacres of women and children.

The annals of war contain no deeds more thrilling than those of Delhi, Lucknow and Cawpore; nor modern warfare any horrors to surpass Nana Sahib's massacres at Cawnpore; while British history and enroll among its most inspiring names the commanders, Nicholson, Sir Henry Lawrence, Havelock, Outram and Sir Colin Campbell.

Upon the native side, for instance, there stands out the picturesque figure of the Rance of Jhansi, who died fighting at the head of her troops.

The rebellion of which Lord Roberts is now the most illustrious survivor, was not suppressed until April 1859.

Extraordinary weather has been experienced this year in India. For instance, an unprecedently severe hailstorm passed over parts of Kathiawar. The Diwan of Limbdi states that twenty-three men were killed and twenty injured, while numbers of animals and birds were killed, and the damage to crops was enormous. Mr. Hotson, superintendent of the managed estates in Kathiawar, was caught in the storm and reports that he was subjected to a veritable cannonade, the hailstones coming down like shrapnel. The largest were of the size of billiard balls. On emerging from shelter, Mr. Hotson's party met many persons with bleeding wounds, while all around lay dead sheep, goats, cows, hares, sparrows and partridges.

The damage done to mango and other fruit trees and to standing crops in the Hoogly district was very serious, indeed, and many windows were broken, one window having 5,000 panes smashed.

Market street, Calcutta, was recently the scene of a tragic comedy which illustrated in a striking degree the limitations of the lower class native. Two native lads, aged between 8 and 10 years, by some unaccountable means, got possession of a double barreled pocket pistol, which happened to be loaded with ball cartridges. Not knowing what the weapon was, they took it to a tinsmith in Market street and asked him whether he had any knowledge of it, and whether it was salable.

The tinsmith, without betraying his own ignorance, offered to satisfy the lads. Assuming an air of importance, he began to scrutinize the pistol. Suddenly one of the barrels went off, the bullet striking in the back of a female betel seller, who was attending to her shop, not far away. The woman shrieked and sprang out of her shop, bleeding from her wound and crying for help. Simultaneously the tinsmith dropped the pistol and ran away.

In an instant a large crowd assembled and noticed the pistol on the ground. An excited discussion followed as to the mysterious looking object. Eventually one man made bold, and, picking up the pistol, began examining it, when the other barrel went off, the bullet striking and shattering one of his fingers. He dropped the pistol, and, believing that some evil spirit was at work, took refuge in flight. The crowd, panic stricken, dispersed, but, after a short time, another crowd assembled round the pistol, and, after a short discussion, one man stepped forward and, after cautiously fastening the end of a string to the butt, began dragging it in the direction of the Fenwick Bazaar police station, followed by an excited crowd. Eventually a constable appeared and picked up the pistol. The two injured persons were not fatally injured, however.

BABY'S FACE IN TERRIBLE STATE

Awful Humor Was Eating Away Face and Ears—Body Mass of Sores—Three Doctors Tried to Help Little Sufferer But She Grew Worse—After Spending Many Dollars On Doctors and Medicine

CUTICURA CURES IN TWO WEEKS AT COST OF 75c.

"I feel it my duty to parents of other poor suffering babies to tell you what Cuticura has done for my little daughter. She broke out all over her body with a humor, and we used everything recommended, but without results. I called in three doctors, they all claimed they could help her, but she continued to grow worse. Her body was a mass of sores, and her little face was being eaten away. Her ears looked as if they would drop off. Neighbors advised me to get Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and before I had used half of the cake of Soap and box of Ointment the sores had all healed, and my little one's face and body were as clear as a new-born babe's. I would not be without it again if it cost five dollars, instead of seventy-five cents, which is all it cost us to cure our baby, after spending many dollars on doctors and medicines without any benefit whatever. Mrs. George J. Steese, 701 Coburn St., Akron, Ohio, Aug. 30, 1905."

MANY THOUSANDS IDLE.

Workmen and Peasants in Italy Are on a Strike.

Milan, May 17.—Strikes of workmen and peasants are assuming an epidemic character and the people now voluntarily idle number many thousands.

In the province of Ferraria the sowing of the crops over a large tract of land has been suspended and the cattle left without attendance have either died of starvation or have been sold at ruinous prices.

In the Lombardy provinces the hands have left many industrial establishments, and a private railway line in Sicily has suspended its service owing to a strike of the drivers, firemen, conductors and guards.

A large steel factory at Terni has been closed as 3,500 workmen have laid down their tools. The discontent of the working classes is due to the energetic action of the Socialistic leaders rather than to real economic causes.

THROTTLING FOREIGN DEVIL.

London Standard: All things considered, it is not surprising that the big railway scheme which China has on hand has been transferred from the control of the imperial authorities to the provincial.

John Chinaman at home does not like the railway. To him it is a devil of the foreign devils. It runs with irresistible strength, whether prayers be directed for or against it; it makes its way unharmed through regions supposed to be peculiarly sacred to the spirits of the mighty dead.

When Turkey admitted the telegraph it was because her wise men believed that the devil runs up and down the wires with the messages, and so would be kept too busy to worry good Turks below.

There is no such consoling reflection as this for the Chinaman with his iron horse. The Boxers made bold to break up some trains and set fire to others. Some even ventured onto an engine. Steam was up. One of the creatures burned his hand and clutched at a valve.

The engine shot forward with a load of Boxers clinging to it. Down hill it went at terrific speed, until it came to a place where the Boxers had thoughtfully torn up the line. Then over a high embankment it leaped, to smash itself and every man aboard it.

PEANUTS IN DEMAND.

New York Sun: An enterprising girl who makes money by supplying novelties in food has profited largely all winter by salted peanuts. "The plebeian peanut," she says, "has almost displaced the aristocratic and expensive almond on the tables of the rich. Of course, some people cannot rid themselves of the old notion that peanuts look cheap, so they order salted almonds as well. But they always confess that it is only for appearance—that they know the almonds will be left, while every peanut will have disappeared before the dinner is over. If the once despised little peanut only continues in favor again next winter, I shan't have to wear shabby clothes any more."

A Coffee Fact!!

Many Highly Organized People Are Definitely and Distinctly

Diseased by Coffee

Not with all people, but many, particularly those highly organized—brain workers and their kind—the alkaloid—caffeine—contained in ordinary coffee, has a direct action upon the delicate nerves of the stomach, and by a pathological law the nervous system is gradually and surely affected.

The result will show in a variety of ways, such as headaches and bowel or kidney trouble in some people; in others, smothering sensations about the heart, dyspepsia, etc., and in many the power of the brain is imparied.

Different people will be affected differently, but common sense should teach that if you have any disease or symptoms of disease, you should endeavor to locate the source and cause.

It's useless to take medicine and at the same time continue the use of some injurious article of food or drink that not only caused the disease, but continues it from day to day.

Leaving off coffee takes away the cause and the natural food elements obtained by long boiling of go instantly to replenish and rebuild the delicate gray matter in the nerve centers throughout the body.

Mental poise and sturdy physical health can be turned into wealth, fame and happiness.

"There's a Reason"

DON CARLOS LEGAL KING

Of Spain and France is Now Living in Venice.

His Word Can Drench the Spanish Sod With Blood.

Madrid, May 17.—Nowhere was the birth of a child to the royal house of Spain awaited with greater anxiety than at the palace in Venice where dwells Don Carlos, at whose word 100,000 Spanlards, fully armed and perfectly organlzed, will drench their country, with blood in an effort to place him on the throne of Spain, of which he is the legal occupant, and to re-establish the French monarchy which is his by inheritance.

In order to make clear the exact position of the Spanish succession, and to understand the situation of Don Carlos, close study of the more modern historical developments of Spain is necessary. When King Carlos IV. died he left two sons, Ferdinand and Carlos.

Ferdinand succeeded to the throne. His first two marriages were childless, but his third union with Donna Maria Cristina, resulted in the birth of a daughter, Donna Isabella. As, however, the Salic law forbidding the succession of women prevailed in Spain, she could not succeed, and the heir to King Ferdinand was his brother Carlos. The members of the court party, however, were bitterly opposed to Don Carlos, and they managed to get King Ferdinand to abolish the Salic law by royal decree, thereby allowing his daughter Isabella to become queen.

Ios entered a protest based on constitulos enptered a protest based on constitutional grounds; but as he was a man of indolent character and utterly wanting in energy he at first did nothing more than protest. A few years later an attempt to secure his throne by force of arms was a failure, and on his death his son took up the struggle and managed to keep a little life in the Carlist party.

When on account of her improper life, Isabella, who by this time had a son, Alfonso, was driven from the throne, the short-lived Spanish republic came into being. With the assassination of the president, General Prim, the republic came to an end, and Prince Amadeus of Aosta, an Italian prince, was elected king in spite of the protests of Don Carlos. He soon tired of governing such a turbulent kingdom, adjocated and returned to Italy. It was then that the present Carlist pretender came prominently to the front. He entered a vigorous protest against the succession of Don Alfonso, and followed this up by calling his partisans to arms, and in 1873 began the Carlist war which drenched Spain with blood.

After varying fortunes, Don Carlos lost the struggle and crossed the French frontier with the wrecks of his army. Since then he has been living in Venice, awaiting a favorable opportinity for renewing the struggle for his rights.

This serves to make clear the position of Don Carlos. He and his supporters say that his great-uncle, King Ferdinand, performed a coup d'etat in abolishing the Salic law; that the rights of the brother of King Ferdinand, were clear and absolute under the law, and that King Alfonso XIII. is a usurper sitting on a throne to which he has no right.

From a strictly technical point of view, not only is Don Carlos the legitimate heir to the throne of Spain, but he is undoubtedly the heir to the throne of France as well. It was for this reason that he was expelled from French territory by the government of the republic. If he should even set foot in France he would instantly be arrested. A small but highly aristocratic party exists in France known as the "Blancs d'Espagne," with the aim of placing Don Carlos on the throne of France. In fact, these French Carlists are more Carlist than the Spanish Carlists themselves, and they are very anxious to see Don Carlos get the throne of Spain as a stepping stone to the throne of France.

It is for this reason that the French republican government has always favored the Alfonsist party in Spain. Indeed, though the fact is known to few people, it was the action of the French government which caused Don Carlos to lose the last Carlist war. In 1875 Don Carlos' army had the Alfonsist troops at their mercy strategically, for the latter had their backs to the French frontier and were cut off from the interior of Spain. With the connivance of the French government the Alfonsist army crossed the frontier into France, secured provisions and ammunition from the French arsenal at Bayonne, and then marched back to the Spanish territory, attacking the Carlists from the rear. This action of the French government was, of course, unexpected, and could never have been foreseen by the Carlists.

The surprise was complete, and the wreck of the army of the pretender was eventually driven on French territory near Biarritz and of course receiving not the slightest encouragement from the French people or the French government, was forced to disband.

Don Carlos chartered a special train, hurried to Calais and crossed over to London. It is an amusing fact that he never paid the $1,500 which that train cost and the item appears year after year in the French budget as a debt to be recovered.

The head of the Carlist party in France at the present time is the Comte de Maille. One of the leading spirits was the late Marquis de Chauvelin. The organization in Paris with which men of this type affiliated was known as "the head center."

The way it was worked was as follows:

There is, a say, a group of twenty Carlists. They owe obedience to and receive instruction from a leader. Twenty such leaders receive orders from a man belonging to the inner circle, and this man in his turn receives instructions from the "head center." None of the rank and file know any one except the heads of their respective groups. The members of the group do not of necessity know each other; they may occasionally act together for some special service, but the only man who needs to know the name and address of each of the persons comprising the group is the leader.

If the Spanish police arrest a man of the rank and file all that he can possibly do is to betray the name of his immediate leader. The leaders furthermore do not know each other. Each leader knows only the man in the inner circle from whom he receives his instructions.

All therefore that can be betrayed is a small section of the organization. Every Carlist swears to provide himself with a rifle and ammunition, and to keep them concealed. He is further bound to take the field on the first signal from Don Carlos.

This whole organization was the work of a Spanish marquis, for many years the trusted confidante of Don Carlos. The younger members of the party, however, soon became dissatisfied with him as they thought that he was not enterprising enough. Two years ago at a meeting of the leaders held in Paris at the Grand hotel, he was deposed and replaced by a committee of three, two of whom are in France and one in Spain. It is interesting to note that this particular marquis is at the present time in Spain, and is supposed to be watching the drift of events, though of his quarrel with other members of the Carlist organization, and of his actual deposition, there is not the slightest doubt. But he is supposed to be acting under the personal direction of Don Carlos himself.

At the present moment there are 150,000 stands of arms in the possession of the Carlist party in Spain. But what, it will be asked, are the chances of an insurrection. That is a difficult problem to answer, even at best, since it is difficult even for the Spaniards to understand the mysteries of Spanish politics.

But this much it is safe to say: The instant a signal is given, 100,000 men will respond to the call, armed and ready for the fray.

The whole of the Basque provinces and nine-tenths of the province of Catalonia may be said to be for Don Carlos, first, last and all the time. In every hut of every peasant in these sections the portrait of the pretender is hanging, and the owner has the rifle and the cartridges carefully concealed in some spot which can be reached in a few minutes. The only uniform which they possess is the colored "beret," the graceful headdress of the Basques. Each of the four districts into which, for Carlist purposes, Spain is divided, has a different color—the four being red, blue, white and green.

Of the fidelity of the Carlists to their leader there can be no doubt. It is curious that there should be even now 100,000 men in Spain ready to take the field and die for a man whom they have never seen.

Don Jaime, son of the pretender, a week ago made a journey through Spain, and though he was recognized on several occasions, he recrossed to the French frontier without the French government being aware of his mission.

ST. PAUL FINED FOR REBATING

Railroad Pays $20,000 on Two Indictments in New York.

New York, May 17.—The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway company, through its general counsel, Charles B. Keeler of Chicago, pleaded guilty before Judge Holt in the United States circuit court yesterday to two indictments recently returned against the road for granting rebates in violation of the Elkins anti-rebating law. The court assessed a fine of $10,000 on each count, which Attorney Keeler paid.

The grand jury returned fifteen indictments against the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, charging the granting of rebates on coffee shipments in favor of the Woolson Spice company, an Ohio corporation, on Western shipments from New York to Toledo. After a consultation with United States Attorney Stimson and his assistants, who have been prosecuting the rebate cases, Mr. Keeler arranged to plead guilty to two of the indictments with the understanding that the remaining counts be dismissed.

In a brief address to the court, Attorney Keeler pleaded that his road had not endeavored or wished to evade the law, but that, owing to the spirited competition of other roads, minor traffic agents of the company had consented to the granting of rebates in order to meet the sharp competition, but without the knowledge of the company's chief executive officials and its attorneys, all of whom, he said, would have instantly advised to the contrary.

It is understood that the Northern Pacific company, the Rock Island, the New York, Ontario & Western railroads, and the Western Transit company, all named in the recently returned indictments for rebating, will stand trial on the charges.

SITUATION RELIEVED

Conditions in Produce Market Gradually Are Growing Better.

Still Far From Reaching the Normal State However.

Green vegetables are beginning to be a little more plentiful on the local market, although they are still very slow in arriving, for this season of the year. It continues to be a backward spring all through the growing districts, and frosts, rains and cold weather generally are retarding all kinds of vegetable growth. The supply is gradually growing larger, but it is by no means as large as the commission men desire. The railroads are handling the shipments from distant points of both fruit and vegetables somewhat more speedily now than they were a few weeks ago, but the service is still far from rapid, except in a few isolated cases.

This should be almost the height of the strawberry season, but the situation now is about the same as it usually is in the latter part of April, so far as the quantity of berries and their price is concerned. Bad weather has set the crops backs to an alarming degree, and the receipts have, as a result, been very unsatisfactory, both in quantity and quality. Under existing conditions there is little or no profit in handling the berries, and the commission men are disgusted with the situation. In some cases the lasting qualities of the berries on their arrival here has been such as to result in a loss to the dealer.

The entire outlook is looking a little better now than for the last two or three weeks, and, with suitable weather from this on, dealers expect to find themselves working along under normal conditions within the next two or three weeks or possibly sooner.

New potatoes are freely arriving from Texas. Texas seems to have fared better than the other Southern states this spring in the matter of weather. It is coming to be an important producing state, in the line of fruits and vegetables, and the shipments out of the state are increasing every year, as the country is settled up and developed. Old potatoes are getting pretty well cleaned up in many sections, and higher prices prevail.

There isn't anything new in the orange situation. Receipts are freer than they were, and the fruit continues to be of an exceptionally fine quality. Up to the present time the receipts have been almost entirely navels, but now other varieties are coming forward.

Now that the trade is being accustomed to purchasing bananas by the pound, it is aproving of the new system, and wondering why it was not established long ago. It is understood that the new method gives better satisfaction all around than the old.

Apples keep advancing in price.

The price of creamery butter is gradualy sliding down the scale. Receipts of dairy butter are light, and there is no drop in the price. As was the case last week, cheese prices have not dropped at all in sympathy with butter. Eggs are unchanged. All the surplus receipts are being placed in cold storage. No hope is held out that egg prices will go below their present level this year.

Fish are a little more plentiful on the local market this week. There is enough poultry on hand, but most of it is frozen stock. Not much strictly fresh poultry is being received.

BLAST KILLS AND INJURES

Three Dead, Five Hurt and Train Wrecked by Explosion.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 17.—Clint Shafer, engineer, and William Hyder, fireman of a pile driver of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad, and J. Fitzgerald, a negro fireman of the Southern railway, were killed, and five other men injured, a Southern railway freight engine and eleven cars were hurled through a bridge into Chattanooga creek, and three dwellings destroyed yesterday afternoon by the premature explosion of a blast at the foot of Lookout mountain, on the Stevenson extension, which is being constructed by W. J. Oliver & Co.

The bridge was crushed in by several tons of rock hurled by the blast just as the Southern railway freight train was going on it. Other pieces of rock hurled for over 300 yards crashed through the pilot of the pile driver, killing two men. Still other pieces of rock, hurled five and six hundred yards, struck the dwellings on the side of Lookout mountain and crashed through the roofs and floors.

HER BANK "BUSTED."

Secret Depository of Massachusetts Girl Was Full of Holes.

Taunton, Mass., May 17.—"Just like finding it," said Miss Nellie F. Healy, a dry goods clerk, as she picked up a wad of bills containing $30 on Main street.

"How careless," said Policeman Morris, as he picked up $20 not far away.

"I needed it," said Capt. Walker, as he lifted a $10 bill.

Further down the street, James McMahon, miller, said as he scooped up a $10 gold piece, addressing Mrs. Joseph Chambers of Pine street, "Is this yours, madame?"

"I don't know," said Mrs. Chambers. "I had one. Wait and I'll see."

She stepped into a doorway, thrust her hand beneath her skirts and turned pale.

"Mercy," she cried, "I put $70 in my stocking when I came down shopping this morning and it's all gone."

She had holes in the stocking. Later she recovered most of the money from the police and Miss Healy was rewarded.

CHANGES HIS PLEA

Konkovich Confesses to Indictment Charging Assault on Officer.

Mansfield's Trial for Forgery Will Begin Monday Morning.

Joseph Konkovich, who was indicted for assaulting an officer at Hibbing April 16, withdrew his former plea of not guilty, and pleaded guilty, in the district court this morning. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $150, with the alternative of a six months' term in the county jail. Konkovich is in communication with some of his friends at Hibbing in the hope of raising the money to pay his fine.

According to the information in his case Konkovich was in a saloon in Hibbing when William Sowl and another man entered and started to have some fun at his expense. They pretended to hire him on some job and invited him to go outside. On the way out Konkovich is said to have become suspicious that they had evil intentions toward him and he drew his revolver. When the men were outside the building Sowl is said to have made a motion to take hold of Konkovich when the latter raised his gun and fired, the bullet just grazing Sowl's abdomen. Sowl and his companion then fled while Konkovich ran up an alley.

Officer Albert Brelder, who heard the shot, chased Konkovich and overtook him in the alley. The latter is claimed to have feared that Sowl and the other man were after him, so he turned and threatened to shoot the officer. He was finally arrested without bloodshed.

Konkovich was represented by L. H. Corcoran.

Sowl, it is claimed, did not care to appear against Konkovich, so he was indicted for assaulting the officer.

After Konkovich's case was disposed of this morning it was expected that the trial of C. H. Mansfield, indicted for forgery in the second degree, would be started. Mansfield, however, is suffering from a hard cold and the trial was postponed until Monday morning.

Mansfield has been in the county jail, awaiting trial, for about four months, two continuances having been had at his request.

According to the information against Mansfield he interested Philip Malberg and a man named Robertson in some substance he claimed to have invented that was a substitute for eggs for use in baking. He is alleged to have formed the Malberg-Mansfield company in one part of the city, to manufacture the substance, and the Robertson-Mansfield company in another part of the city for the same purpose. Malberg is claimed to have deposited a check on one of the local banks with Mansfield and the latter is said to have indorsed Malberg's name and drawn out the money. It is further alleged that Mansfield was arrested in Superior as he was about to take a train in an attempted "get-away."

Mr. Robertson is said to have given Mansfield a signed check with the space for the amount left blank. This check, it is alleged, was never presented at the bank.

All the jurors not engaged in the trial of cases were excused this morning until next Monday. The court directed another venire of forty names for additional jurors to complete the May term. Those summoned will appear next Wednesday morning.

PEARY TALKS OF NEW PLANS

Explorer Confident of Reaching North Pole on Next Trial.

Boston, May 17.—Commander Robert E. Peary has decided upon some changes in his next attempt to reach the North Pole, according to an interview made public today.

"The main improvement over the last plan," said the explorer, "will be that I shall continue farther to the westward along the North Grant land coast and then, when I take to the ice, I shall bear always to windward and thus offset the continuous drift to the East. The second great difference will be that I shall so arrange matters that there can be no recurrence of the unfortunate contingency that cost us the prize last year. This time I shall win."

Peary said that he thought the necessary $100,000 to equip the expedition, half of which had already been subscribed, would be forthcoming soon. He denied the reports that his wife would accompany him upon the next polar expedition.

THE BEST WAS GOOD ENOUGH

R. B. Whiteside Took Long Trip to Buy Horses.

In an effort to secure the finest team of horses that money could buy, R. B. Whiteside recently took a trip which lasted three weeks.

Mr. Whiteside took with him Dr. J. W. Cook, the veterinarian, and they travelled until they found what they wanted. They finally brought their search to a successful conclusion in Toronto, Can., where they picked out a pair of light bays, that are just about the finest thing in driving horses ever seen, in Duluth, at least. The horses have been brought to Duluth and are stabled at the Lyceum barn.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

The colored comic supplement and the matter of an increase in teachers' salaries constituted the new business that came before the meeting of the Women's council which was held this morning at the club room of the library with Mrs. James D. Morrison, presiding. The question of the comic supplement was brought to the council by means of a communication from Mrs. F. H. Barnard, who wrote strongly of the baleful influence of "this invasion of our homes." In the discussion which followed the evils of the supplement, the wrongs springing from it, and its bad effect upon children of the home, were spoken of glowingly. There was no doubt about the opinions of the members of the council upon the question, but the method of warding off the evil or discontinuing it was not so easily settled upon. Educators of the country through the National Kindergarten union took action at a meeting held some months ago, and the council closed its work of the morning by endorsing the action of the national union in endeavoring to provide some substitute for the comic page. The motion was unanimously passed.

An unsigned communication bearing on the much agitated question of teachers' salaries was introduced by the president, Mrs. J. D. Morrison. It was as follows:

"Before the financial crisis here the teachers were receiving ten months' pay. Ever since that time the salaries have been paid for nine months only, making the maximum at present $675 instead of $750 a year.

"Considering the increasing prosperity of the city, is it not reasonable to expect a return to the ten months' basis.

"The expenses of the teachers have increased fully 33 1-3 per cent.

"The salaries of stenographers, firemen, postal clerks and many others have been increased.

"The demands upon the teacher, by virtue of her position are much greater in the way of first, preparation; second, charity; third, lectures; fourth, literature; fifth, summer schools; sixth, dress; seventh, traveling expenses.

"Including Christmas, Easter and summer vacations, the teacher is on expense sixteen weeks with no income, unless she is provident enough to put aside for a rainy day, out of a sum that, at a maximum, is equivalent to a daily wage of $1.85."

A motion was passed authorizing a committee from the council to appear personally before the board of education with the forgoing statement of facts and any vital statistics concerning conditions in other cities that might be available. The movement for an adequate increase of the teachers' salaries was heartily endorsed by the council. The committee was appointed by the president, to consist of Mrs. Robert Smith, Mrs. F. H. Barnard and Mrs. W. A. McGonagle.

The reports of the various committees were heard. Mrs. William White reported for the cooking school committee. The committee has been in communication with Mrs. Emily McCurdy of Illinois who was instructor during the last two years, and plans for the summer work are going forward.

The report from the school gardens committee, of which Mrs. H. S. Ely is chairman, was a written report from Carl J. Ulrich, science teacher of the high school, who is in charge of the work this year, read by Mrs. Ely. The boys interested in gardening have attended lectures twice each week since April 3, and the practical work has been begun.

The arts and Crafts exhibit will probably be held the first week of June. No definite report from the committee was given. The resignation of Mrs. J. R. McGiffert as chairman of the committee was received, and Miss Jessica Hopkins appointed.

A finance committee was appointed as follows: Mrs. A. W. Bradley, Mrs. F. H. Barnard, Miss Ensign and Mrs. M. Kelly.

A committee was appointed, with Mrs. William White as chairman, to keep the matter of establishing domestic science in the schools of Duluth before the members of the board of education. The other members of the committee are Miss Ensign and Mrs. H. C. Marshall.

The report of the seed committee was given. This work is not being carried on directly through a committee of the Council this year, as in former years, but each school is getting the seeds desired directly. The number of packages of seed ordered this year by the various schools amounted to 13,788.

Reports from the clubs in regard to the constitution drawn up for the formation of a possible department club were called for, but there were no reports, the matter having come before the clubs so late in the year. The matter will probably be considered at the first meetings of the club in the fall.

A committee was also appointed to confer with Prof. R. E. Denfeld concerning the feasibility of establishing saving accounts with the school children of the city. The committee consists of Mrs. H. S. Ely and Mrs. Swangie.

SPRING NEEDS Of Bethel Home Made Known to Duluth Women.

That the spasm of housecleaning, which has engaged the attention of all feminine Duluth, has not escaped the Bethel Rescue Home, is made evident in the last report in the Bethel Record. A prominent little notice in the last issue says: "Spring cleaning is upon us and we need carpets, rugs and paint to brighten up our floors." The work of the home has an especial appeal to the women of the city and appeals from the refuge seldom go unnoticed. The list of needs as taken from the Record is as follows: Good cheap Bibles, carpets and rugs, muslin curtains, shades, chairs, paint for spring cleaning, hot water bottles, baby dresses, outing flannel, cereals of all kinds, vegetables.

Y. W. C. A. Notes.

The latest reports of the building fund of the Young Women's Christian association reports more than $121,600, making less than $8,400 still to be raised. Prompt subscriptions are requested.

Graduate Deaconess.

Miss Grace Scribner, formerly of this city, is expected home from Chicago within a few days to pass her vacation in Duluth. Miss Scribner is a graduate of last week of the Lucy Rider Myer school of Chicago, where training for home and foreign missionary work and deaconess work is taught. Miss Scribner has graduated from the deaconess course, a two years' course, and is as yet undecided where her work will be. Before her departure, Miss Scribner was prominently identified with the local Y. W. C. A. work, and she will be the speaker at one of the devotional services while here. During her course she was private secretary to Mrs. Myer, principal of the school, and upon the completion of her duties, she will return to this city for a short vacation before engaging in the regular deaconess work.

Green beans, 20 cents a qt.
Tomatoes, 40 cents a small basket.
Hens, 20 cents a lb.
Roasters, 25 cents a lb.
Broilers, 30 cents a lb.
Milk lamb, $2.25 a hind quarter.

The market for Saturday is a joy forever. Things are just expensive enough to taste like luxuries, and yet not so expensive as to preclude the possibility of most people having their share. The tomatoes, firm and round, and red and small, are only 40 cents for a three-pound basket; cauliflower, in dear little heads, crisp and cream colored and most attractive, is in, and the pineapples, that most delicious of fragrant fruit, are plentiful and not prohibitive as to price. There will be berries in abundance, and there are a few ripe and luscious California cherries to be had.

In the meat line there are hens and roasters and broilers, and tender milk lamb and other delights.

COSSACKS SHOOT SCORES

Further details of the plot at Tsarskoe-Selo against the czar indicate that his escape during Passion week was narrow. The conspirators were members of the emperor's personal escort. The arrest of a Cossack sergeant, made it possible to trace the conspiracy back four months and shows that preparations were being made February 2, when the secret police issued orders to use every effort to identify the purchaser of a uniform of his majesty's own Cossack regiment, which had been found during a raid. The use of the regulation uniforms is a favorite device of the terrorists, and the Cossack garb is an open sesame to the precincts of the palace at Tsarskoe-Selo and Peterhof.

After the arrested soldier confessed, the news went the rounds among the members of the imperial guard. The Cossack sergeant, who was a gatekeeper at one of the entrances to the palace, became frightened at possible discovery and also confessed. He betrayed a plan according to which he was to let into the palace a number of conspirators dressed in Cossack uniforms.

A brother of Premier Stolypin confirms the report that numerous arrests already have been made.

The lower house of parliament is taking the keenest interest in the story, and it is reported that the leaders of the Constitutional Democrats only await official confirmation to introduce a motion expressing joy at the preservation of the emperor's life.

ONE MORE BORE FOR NEW YORK

North Tube of Long Island City Tunnel Broken Through.

New York, May 17.—Another of the tunnels that are to connect the island of Manhattan with surrounding territory was nominally completed yesterday when workmen broke through the last crust of rock and dirt in the north tube of the Belmont tunnel, from New York to Long Island City, and some of the engineers and workmen walked through the tube from shore to shore. Announcement was made that this tube would be ready for trains by Aug. 1. The boring of this tunnel has taken two years. It was a difficult engineering job, the bore running more than 100 feet under the East river. Quite a number of workmen lost their lives during the progress of the work. The tunnel is to be connected with the Grand Central station in New York.

FOUNDLINGS FUND HOME IN FAMILIES OF SOUTH.

New York, May 17.—Fifty-eight babies and children under seven years of age, from New York charitable institutions, are being distributed in New Orleans and Louisiana today. JAPAN'S COMPANY CRAZE COMES TO SUDDEN HALT.

Victoria, B. C., May 17.—Advices from Japan state that the speculative craze is being stopped and within the past three weeks thirty projected companies with an aggregate capital of $35,000,000, have dissolved. The market is to be relieved, it is expected, by the abondonment of other concerns with an aggregate capital of $100,000,000. This has necessitated the cancelling of large orders for machinery, most of which were placed in the United States. The Japanese government has also declined to sanction the construction of no less than thirty electric lines on the ground that to grant the charters for these roads would be opposed to the government's policy of state ownership.

MINISTERS ARE TO HELP

Temperance Society Asks Them to Preach Special Sermons.

Talk on Present Conditions and Means of Bettering Them.

The Duluth Union Temperance society, which is composed mostly of West enders, is planning a campaign against drink and immorality and is asking the assistance of all the clergymen in the city.

The local ministers are all asked to preach on the following topic Sunday evening, May 26, "What can be done to better the moral condition of our city, and what can we as citizens do to accomplish good results?"

The following letter has been sent out to ministers and others, by the society.

"At the last regular monthly meeting of the Duluth Union Temperance society, a resolution was adopted to ask the different pastors of churches and temperance organizations throughout the city to deliver a discourse on the following subject, Sunday evening, May 26, 1907:

"'What can be done to better the moral condition of our city, and what can we, as citizens, do to accomplish good results?'

"The society is of the opinion that the subject should be kept before the public and would respectfully urge the different pastors and temperance organizations to speak on the above topic on date mentioned, and would confer a favor on the society if they could give notes of sermon to the press in order that it would receive as much publicity as possible.

"If not, please notify Duluth Union Temperance society, 1931 West Third street."

The society has a large and enthusiastic membership in the West end. A rousing temperance meeting was held last Sunday evening in the First Norwegian-Danish M. E. church.

MAYOR SCHMITZ

of Mayor Schmitz and eighteen supervisors by the United Railroads to grant to that corporation a change in its franchise, allowing the electrifying of its 250 miles of street railway.

If Burns' understanding of Ruef's testimony is correct, the fallen "boss" told the grand jury that President Patrick Calhoun, Assistant to the President, Thornwell Mullally, Chief Counsel Tirey L. Ford and Assistant Counsel William M. Abbott, of the United Railroads paid or caused to be paid $200,000 for the provision named; that $61,000 of the amount was Ruef's "fee;" that $50,000 went into the pocket of Mayor Schmitz; and that the remaining $89,000 was handed to the eighteen supervisors, sixteen of them receiving $4,000 each, another demanding and getting $10,000, and Chairman Gallagher of the finance committee being paid $15,000, for acting as go-between.

After the examination of Ruef was concluded the grand jury remained in executive session until 6:30 o'clock. Subsequently, the statement was made, but not officially confirmed, that indictments had been voted against four high officials of the United Railroads and Schmitz, but the grand jury adjourned without action.

Seen in his prison room last night, Ruef said: "I was received and treated by the grand jury with a consideration that touched me deeply. When I entered the room every one of the seventeen jurors present arose and took me by the hand. When I Finished my testimony, every one of them got up and bade me good night, with a hearty handclap. No disposition was displayed to 'grill' me. The trying task I had voluntarily set for myself was made as easy by kindness as I could have hoped. I do not know when I shall be again called to testify—perhaps tomorrow. I shall be ready.

"The report published locally today that it is my intention to tell everything I know, no matter who may be dragged down into shame and disgrace, is untrue and unwarranted. I stand by the statement made yesterday that my purpose is to expose only those who entered knowingly and willingly into corruption. I must not discuss the United Railroads, for I am bound to silence by my promise to the grand jury. But you will recall that I told you yesterday, after my act in court, that there was no necessity for the offering of bribe money by the United Railroads; that the permit desired by that corporation would have been granted as a matter of course by the supervisors if it had been merely and customarily asked for."

The understanding is that the carrying out of the sentence to be imposed upon Ruef, two weeks hence by Judge Dunne, will be indefinitely suspended, in order that when the former municipal dictator and ally of Mayor Schmitz takes the stand in court against "those higher up," his testimony shall not be that of a convict. Detective Burns is authority for the statement that it is the purpose of the prosecution to send Ruef eventually to San Quentin penitentiary, but the trial of corporation officials, who have been indicted, and others who have not yet been formally charged will, it is thought, take so long that Ruef's incarceration will be delayed for at least a year. No move has been made for his admittance to bail. It is said that he himself prefers to remain in the custody of Elisor Biggy for the present at least.

Ruef claims that Mayor Schmitz "knew all about the supervisors' dirty deals." Ruef declares he himself has lost money in politics—more money than he made.

JOHNSON WILL STIR UP THE SOUTH

shall permit him to extend the trip several days, he may visit other parts of the South and make some speeches.

"His presence in that section is expected to stir up presidential politics. As the only Democrat ever elected governor of Minnesota, the feeling is growing that probably he would make a winning candidate for 1908.

"The relations between him and the Bryan element are entirely harmonious and it is suggested that if Governor Johnson should make a favorable impression in the South and the Nebraskan should conclude not to take the nomination next year, he would favor the Minnesota man."

TO APPRAISE RAILROADS

of estimating merely the cost of reproducing the railroad properties. Roosevelt is willing to give the railroads allowance for the energy, enterprise and patronage entering into the business.

"While in Washington a conversation with United States Senator Daniel and others revealed that the government control of the railroads will be a big issue of the day and showed a surprising abandonment of party lines. The railroads will curb expenditures as much as possible until after the presidential election.

"Either states must abandon attempts to regulate railroads by legislation and turn over to the national government the power to regulate rates on equitable appraisements of values of railroad properties or there will be government ownership. This will inevitably follow a refusal of the states to turn over control of the railroads to the government."

KID MILTON IS ANXIOUS

Wrestler Wants to Meet Clarence McClennan Here.

Thinks it Time Frank Myers Was Saying Something.

George Milton, the local wrestling midget has a grievance and he wants to take it out on the mat with Clarence McClennan. He encountered ye sportig scribe this morning and poured his tale of woe into the sympathetic ear of said typewriter pounder.

"Say, this Clarence McClennan, who backed Kid Sago against me, has been around telling people that he has been trying to reach me and arrange a match for about a month," he said. "I haven't even seen McClennan, and I have been in Duluth all this time. If he is looking for any of my game, I will go on the mat with him at any time and let him weigh in at any figure he cares to make. He weighs from 126 to 130 pounds, while I am now about 117, but I will take him on at that weight if he wants to wrestle.

"I will make only one condition. I want a side bet. I think I can throw him, and am willing to put up any sum from $25 up to say so. If he thinks he is a better wrestler than I am, let him put up the same amount of money and I will sign articles immediately.

"I am waiting anxiously to hear from Frank Myers, and it is about time we were making some sort of a noise. When he was in Duluth he seemed anxious enough to meet me and I am surprised at his continued silence since he has returned to the Twin Cities. He claims the lightweight wrestling championship of the Northwest. I do also, and if Myers wants a clear title, he must come up here and beat me. I am ready any time now and he has only to say the word. Tommy Doyle wants a match with me, but I can't take him on now. I would have to train down to 112 or 113 pounds for that match, and I don't want to get down there until I have heard something definite on those other matches I have in sight."

Charles Milton, George Milton's brother, who claims that he is something of a boxer wants to show Duluth people that he can handle the gloves, and he is anxious to get on with some of the light boys around the Head of the Lakes. He says he will meet any 122 pound man in the Northwest, preferring Kid Cohan of Hibbing, Kid Brownlee or Mickey Towers of Superior.

MAROONS BLANK ARISTOCRATS

League Season Opens at Winnipeg With Whitewash for Calumet.

Winnipeg, May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Winnipeg lived up to her reputation as the livest baseball town on the circuit yesterday when she turned out a record-breaking crowd of enthusiastic fans to witness the defeat of Calumet at the hands of Eddie Herr's colts by a score of 5 to 0. The game was preceded by the customary parade, the two teams, headed by the city officials and a brass band, filing up and down the main streets of the city before the contest. Mayor Ashdown officially opened the season by pitching the first ball in the direction of the home plate.

Winnipeg secured two in the first two innings after which Newcombe, who did the twirling for Calumet settled down and blanked the home team for four innings. In the seventh the Copper country ball chasers went up in the air, however, and Winnipeg scored three times, cinching the contest.

Terry allowed only three hits while nine were recorded against Newcombe. The Maroons played an errorless game.

The score by innings:

POLICE WORK FOR GOULD.

City Detective Bureau Turned to Private Concern by Wealth.

New York, May 17.—The potency of Howard Gould's millions is enough, it seems, to turn the detective bureau of this city into a private agency for obtaining divorce evidence. Since the estrangement between Gould and his wife eight months ago "the professional transom climbers" whom, she asserts, he has had on her trail, have been reinforced by city police.

MUST WAIT EXTRA DAY

No Baseball in Copper Country on Memorial Day.

Double Header Between Houghton and Calumet Goes Over.

Houghton, Mich., May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—There will be no baseball games or other sporting events in the Copper country towns on Memorial day this year. The various military organizations of Calumet, Houghton and Hancock have revolted against what they term this desecration of the day. The movement was started a week or more ago and has already borne fruit. The managements of the Calumet and Houghton teams have been approached and have promised to call off their games for that date.

On the morning of Memorial day the Houghton baseball season, in the Northern-Copper Country league was to have opened at Ripley park and at Calumet in the afternoon. Now the fans will have to wait till the next day to see the first game of the season in this district.

There is a possibility that Roy Beecher the kid pitcher who was one of the genuine stars of the Northern-Copper Country league last season, may come back to the Giants this year. Houghton let him go to St. Paul of the American Association team and they let him out to Springfield of the Three-Eye league. At Springfield he has been doing phenomenal work, winning all the games he has pitched this year. One game he bumped Peoria and didn't allow a hit.

PLAY BALL!

Read the baseball bargains in Panton & White's ad. on page 5—this paper. Some of them are cracker jacks.

CULLED FROM THE SCORE BOOK.

Tomorrow's the big day.

All ye fans get out and howl for the Sox, win or lose.

Knockers will not be in fashion at Athletic park this year.

So boost just as long as the men play ball. They can't do any more than their best and are liable to mistakes.

If a decision of the umpire doesn't look right to you, please remember he is nearer the play and your judgment is not infallible. Give him the benefit of the doubt. He knows his business.

Just as soon as the pitcher gives a base on balls, don't demand that he be yanked out of the box. He may settle down and another man may be just as wild. The manager knows when to take a man out of the box.

For a lot of champions, Mullane's outfit isn't likely to burn up the league, judging by the performance yesterday. Likewise, Eddie Herr's red clad Canadians are playing some ball, when they start off with a boobleless game at the opening of the season.

Calumet was let down with three hits yesterday. On his performance in the exhibition games and again yesterday, that Terry boy threatens to do things this year. He's the luckiest man in the box who ever pitched on the circuit. He hasn't a thing and his floaters come over the plate as big as Georgia watermelons. But they can't hit him and he wins his games.

According to reports which precede him, "Rube" Miller, the Houghton pitcher, is as wild as any weed forty miles from civilization. Taylor hopes to get him working right and with Egan, Neubauer, Kaiser and Rogers he claims to have some pitching staff. Gibson will do most of the work behind the plate, changing off with Solbraa from time to time.

The season of the Western Canada league opens next Monday. The league is composed of Lethbridge Calgary Edmonton and Medicine Hat. The teams have all taken extensive training trips, advertising the towns which they are to represent and now they are headed toward the great Canadian Northwest to furnish good American baseball to the natives.

The Kelley Hardware company's baseball team will go to Hibbing tomorrow and Sunday they will meet Judge Brady's Colts. After defeating the Sox the Kelleys are capable of doing anything and the range team will be compelled to look to its laurels with strained eyesight, or the honors may travel Duluthward.

Wix Treadway says he is to quit baseball and with Artie O'Dea take to the woods in the Beaver Bay district to live in peace and quietude on his homestead. O'Dea has secured his release from Lethbridge and Treadway is also anxious to secure his from Duluth. Both men have stood high with Duluth fans and their retirement from baseball in the Northwest is deeply regretted by those whom they have thrilled with their performances.

WRESTLING AT THE MET.

Beaulieu and Peterson Will Meet on Mat This Evening.

The last wrestling match of the season at the Metropolitan opera house will be pulled off this evening, when W. H. Beaulieu and Emil Peterson will contest for honors at 160 pounds. Beaulieu has won honors in matches with Dick Johnson and Thibideau at the Met and Peterson has claimed the heavyweight wrestling championship of the city for some time past. The match should be a good one and will undoubtedly be witnessed by a large number of local followers of the game.

PLAY FIRST GAME TODAY

White Sox and Giants Performing at Athletic Park.

Parade and Other Opening Ceremonies Billed for Saturday.

Despite the fact that there are those who will vow by all the diamond stars, who ever broke into print, that a season-long hoodoo will settle down over the Duluth and Houghton clubs for their defiance of the laws of baseball tradition, the first game of the season is on at Athletic park this afternoon, the Duluth White Sox and Houghton Giants being the performers. There are no more superstitious people on the face of the earth than ball players and fans, but the managements of the Duluth and Houghton teams are free from the taint and decided to wait no longer, but to play the first game today, Friday.

This being ladies' day, the members of the fair sex have been invited to attend the game free, and a large number of them will lend their best efforts to aid Duluth to win. The fans were on hot coals yesterday. Above them, the sun shone brightly and a gentle west wind made the day an ideal one for baseball, but the diamond at Athletic park refused to dry quickly enough for the game and the festivities had to be postponed.

Though the two teams are playing today, tomorrow is the big opening day. The parade and ceremonies at the park arranged for yesterday, will be put through tomorrow. The procession of city officials, players and fans headed by a band will leave the city hall at 2 o'clock sharp. It will move west on Superior street to Eighth avenue west, where the members of the teams will take carriages for the ball park. At the park, Mayor Cullum will make a speech and throw the first ball.

This morning, neither manager had picked his twirler for this afternoon. The performers drawn up in line are as follows:

ORCHARD IN NEW LIGHT

Principal State's Witness in Miners' Cases Pleads Conversion.

Tells of Readings and Treatment and Denies Immunity Pledges.

Boise, Idaho, May 17.—Harry Orchard, the prisoner-witness on whom the state of Idaho chiefly relies to prove its charge that an inner circle of the Western Federation of Miners planned the murder of Governor Steunenberg, discussed in the state penitentiary yesterday himself and his imprisonment. Orchard denied that he had been submitted to any mistreatment during his long confinement; denied that duress or force had been used upon him to secure the statements he had made; and denied that Detective McPartland and the officers of the state had promised him immunity for his confessed crime or reward for the value of his alleged confession in the hands of the state. He seemed perfectly sound in mind and body and deep in Christian zeal.

Asked "Do you read much?" Orchard replied: "Yes; I have done an immense amount of reading. I see the newspapers, but I read books the most. I have been reading Rowland and Romaine's history, the lives of John Wesley and George Whitfield, a number of works on the Reformation, and something about the history of England 100 years ago. Much of it has been ecclesiastical and religious. I used to read a great deal of other literature and a lot of novels."

"Why did you change?"

Orchard hesitated for a moment and then in a quiet voice said: "It is like a little boy who always lied to his father about everything and then suddenly decided to tell the truth about everything. That is the best way that I can explain this idea. I used to like novels and all the other kinds of books, but now I don't care for such trash."

"It is like a man," he went on a moment later in earnest tones, "who has been doing all wrong during his life and suddenly decides to do right. He cannot undo all the wrongs he has done, but he can at least do something to clear things up."

Of his treatment in prison, Orchard said: "I am free to go anywhere in the yard and to speak to any one I like to. But I do not speak to many of the men. I don't feel that I am any better than the rest, but you know how it is—a man takes a notion to certain men and does not to others. And besides, I have felt that I ought to be careful. Some of the men seemed anxious to learn too much. I do talk to several of the men. There are some good men out here, brought to prison by misfortune and I talk to them. I attend the religious services and I talk to some of the men in the hope of doing them some good."

"Was force or duress of any kind used on you by Capt. McPartland or anyone else in securing your alleged confession or statement, and have any promises of any kind been made to you in that connection?"

"I have never admitted, and don't admit now, that I have ever made a confession," said Orchard. "Mind that. But at no time was I ever subjected to force or pressure of any kind, and anything I ever said to Capt. McPartland was without force or threat of any kind. Anything I said was of my own free will and accord. It was just as I talk to you here. There was nothing else. No promise of any kind has ever been made me by Capt. McPartland or anyone else."

Orchard said he had been down the St. Lawrence and had been about Wisconsin and other middle states. Almost with pride he asked his interviewers what they thought about the Great West. He was curious to know about the Thaw trial, and if Delmas of the West had held his own against Jerome of the East. He talked in a general way about the formation of the Haywood jury, and said that he was following the proceedings in the local and other Western newspapers. He asked to be excused from telling where he had been born and what his church might be.

As a precautionary measure, the actual place in the penitentiary where Orchard is confined is kept secret, and the subject is one that the warden and the guards decline to discuss.

Governor Goodling supplemented the statement of Orchard on the subject of possible immunity, saying: "At times, up to a few months ago, I feared lest in some of my interviews with Orchard I might have inadvertently given him some hope of immunity. I am now very positive that he had no expectation of any such thing at the hands of the state of Idaho. This was demonstrated to me one day by Orchard himself, when he stopped me in the middle of a conversation and warned me that I was treading on dangerous ground. Orchard said, 'Governor, I don't want you to say anything that might even lead me to hope for immunity from the consequences of my crime. I do not expect any, and am ready to pay the penalty.'"

Within fifteen minutes after the session of the Haywood trial began yesterday, after George F. Maw, a young rancher, who was called Wednesday to replace the first juror peremptorily challenged by the state, was disqualified by the defense. He declares that, while he had no prejudice against Haywood as a man, he had a very strong prejudice against labor unions and could not give the defendant a fair trial. The state joined in the challenge which took Maw from the trial panel.

John Henderlider and F. M. Jackson, both ranchers, who were called in turn to seat No. 2, vacated by Maw, were quickly challenged and excused after declaring they had formed and expressed unqualified opinions.

George Cole, formerly of New York city, but now a rancher in this county, declared that he had been an invalid for the past six years. He was excused.

Charles Mace, another rancher, was under examination for nearly half an hour in Seat No. 2. He said he had an opinion which would require some evidence to remove. A challenge by the defense was opposed by counsel for the state but sustained by Judge Wood.

Milton Burns, a Boise valley farmer, was the fifth talesman called into the troublesome seat. He, too, had a pretty strong opinion, he declared, and was excused.

The jury panel as it stood last night was as follows: A. L. Ewing, carpenter; Joel Matthews, farmer; Samuel D. Gillman, farmer; Walter Shaw, farmer; Frank E. Madden, who as yet has not been examined as to his qualifications; William L. McGuffin, coal dealer; George H. McIntyre, farmer; W. N. Rudge, farmer; Orrie Cole, mining broker; W. W. Bisby, real estate dealer; A. P. Burns, retired business man; Samuel F. Russell, farmer.

SUBMARINES BREAK RECORDS

Octopus and Lake and Crews Stay Submerged 24 Hours.

Newport, R. I., May 17.—With all hands well and contented, with a bountiful supply of fresh air, and with records of submergence broken, the submarine Octopus and Lake rose to the surface of Narragansett bay at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, ending a test of twenty-four hours under water.

The Octopus rose first, and the members of the naval trial board crowded about her as the conning tower hatch flew open. The members at once went below to see the conditions and test the air supply. Samples of air were bottled every two hours throughout the test for analysis by the board. The Octopus blew out foul air only twice during the twenty-four hours she was at the bottom of the bay. It was computed that only one-forty-fifth of her air supply was exhausted, and if these figures are correct they tend to show that the boat could remain submerged forty-five days, provided the food and fuel supply was sufficient.

The Lake also stood the test well, although a leak was sprung in the super-structure. She pumped out twice, but what proportion of her air supply was used up could not be learned.

Both crews passed the time comfortably while at the bottom of the bay. They slept well during part of the time, and games, books and other diversions helped to pass the twenty-four hours below the surface.

The man who never tries to trade something he needs slightly for something he needs badly overlooks a "Herald want ad. opportunity."

TWO MEN SWEAR NEGRO SOLDIERS DID SHOOTING.

Washington, May 17.—Two witnesses in the Brownsville investigation before the senate committee on military affairs testified yesterday that they saw negro soldiers shooting up the Texas town on the night of Aug. 13 last. One of these was Lieut. Dominguez of the Brownsville police, who received a bullet through the arm, and had his horse shot while trying to warn citizens of the approach of the armed men, whom he declared positively to be negro soldiers from the garrison, and another was Policeman Padron, who described a busy quarter of an hour dodging bullets.

S.S.S. PURIFIES THE BLOOD

There is no other part of our physical system upon which so much depends as upon the blood. The muscles, nerves, bones, sinews, skin, and other portions of the body are sustained, developed and enabled to perform their different duties, because they are supplied with nourishment and healthful properties through the circulation. In various ways the blood becomes contaminated and polluted. A sluggish, inactive condition of the system, and torpid state of the avenues of bodily waste, will leave the refuse and waste matter of the body to sour and form uric and other acids, which are absorbed into the blood and Rheumatism, or some itching, disfiguring skin disease is the result. Muddy, sallow complexions, eruptions, splotches, pimples, etc., all show that some humor has taken root in the circulation and rendered it sour and unfit for nourishing the body. There is scarcely any disease which cannot be traced to the blood. Often the disease-tainted blood of parents is handed down to children and their lives are a continual battle against disease in some form, usually of a scrofulous nature. Rheumatism, Catarrh, Skin Diseases, Sores and Ulcers, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., are all deep-seated blood troubles, and until this vital fluid is purified they cannot be cured. For all blood diseases S. S. S. is the best remedy ever put upon the market. This great medicine is made of roots, herbs and barks of recognized blood-purifying and building-up properties. It goes down into the circulation and removes all poisons, impurities and humors, supplies the blood with the healthful properties it needs and completely cures blood diseases of every kind. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Skin Diseases, Sores and Ulcers, Contagious Blood Poison, etc. because it purifies the blood. Book on the blood and medical advice free.

IMPORTANT DECISION

Prisoner at St. Paul Released Under Habeas Corpus Proceedings.

St. Paul, Minn., May 17.—Because the charge against Harry Ross was not definite enough in the St. Paul police court, Judge W. L. Kelly of the Ramsey county district court released Ross from the workhouse and at the same time filed an important decision affecting the procedure of the municipal court.

Ross was released on habeas corpus proceedings in the district court. When he was charged in the municipal court he was simply entered on what is known as the tab. He was charged with disorderly conduct, but there was no definite complaint stating the time, place or nature of the offense. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced, but because of the indefinite charge, the court held that he had not been tried in police court and should be released. Ross may be tried again, however, without being twice placed in jeopardy, the court holding that he has never been tried at all.

The law allows a brief notation to take the place of the formal complaint where the ordinances only are violated, but Judge Kelly says they should be more definite. They may charge a man with a crime years back and the prisoner would plead guilty, knowing no better. The same system is in effect in all the municipal courts of the state.

SHOECUTTERS' STRIKE.

Stillwater Fractory Men Insist on Better Wages for Their Work.

Stillwater, Minn., May 17.—A dozen or more shoe cutters employed by the Western Shoe company, which has the prison labor contract, walked out yesterday because of dissatisfaction with the wage scale. The company offered to put them on a piece-price basis with a minimum wage of $16.50 a week, but this was refused, the men holding out for $18 a week. All the shops are running and the company is not worrying apparently.

St. Paul, Minn., May 17.—The transfer of an apparently important iron ore lease to state land has been filed with the state auditor. Lane, to the Neville Mining Company of Duluth, a subordinate company of the United States Steel corporation. The property involved is the se¼ se¼ of section 4, township 58, range 18, right on the edge of the town of Iron Mountain. The transfer is for $1, with an agreement that the Neville Iron company is to assume all costs of operation, and to pay the state royalty of 25 cents per ton, and in addition a royalty of 10 cents per ton to the original leaseholders, the heirs of the late James S. Lane. These heirs are named as follows: James A. Lane, Aubine Lane, Verna Kilgore, F. O. Kilgore, Elizabeth M. Rose, B. A. Rose, Cera Bell Lane, Mittie B. Woodward, P. E. Woodward.

AFTER MANKATO CONCERN.

Creditors Ask That Moyer Brothers be Declared Brankrupt.

Mankato, Minn., May 17.—Thirteen of the creditors of Moyer Bros., incorporated, have filed a petition asking that the company be declared an involuntary bankrupt in the federal court. The company has been conducting a large plant, including foundry and machine shop, and has forty men on the pay roll. It has a bonded indebtedness of $50,000, besides a floating debt of $15,000, and having defaulted the January interest on the bonds. It turned the entire plant over, May 4, to Henry F. Leonard, who is named as trustee for the bondholders in the trust deed. Mr. Leonard is still operating the plant.

FOUR NEW TOWNS

In Koochiching County Certified to State Auditor by the Surveyor General.

St. Paul, May 17.—The surveyor general at St. Paul has certified to the state auditor plats of four complete and one fractional town in Koochiching county. They take in about 100,000 acres. Of this amount, the state will receive 74,000 acres as this amount is shown to be swamp. The remaining 25,000 will eventually be opened for homestead entry. The date for such opening of entry is of course not yet set, but will be through the Cass Lake office and probably in August or September.

HAYES ACQUITTED OF SELLING LIQUOR.

Fergus Falls, Minn., May 17.—The jury in the case against Samuel Hayes, which was tried in the federal court here returned a verdict of not guilty late Wednesday night. The conviction was generally anticipated. Mr. Hayes had been engaged in the liquor business at Island Lake, on the border of the reservation, and it was claimed that he had been selling freely to Indians.

Little Elsie Graves, a 12-year-old girl, while on her way home from school Monday afternoon, was attacked by Smith who dragged her from the road. The whole country was up in arms in a few hours, but Smith escaped.

Descriptions were telegraphed all over the county and yesterday morning Detective Sweeney arrested his man at the union station.

The company has never done a good business, especially during the past year.

CONTRACTS ARE MADE

By Co-Operative Coal Company for a Dock at Ashland.

Dredging to Cost $10,000 Awarded to a Duluth Company.

Ashland, Wis., May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—R. B. Harder, president of the Northwestern Co-operative Coal & Dock company, has let two important contracts for what will be Ashland's most modern and up-to-date coal dock.

Several men representing large coal dock construction concerns have been here submitting plans and specifications to Mr. Harder. The plans submitted by the Fairbanks-Morse & Co. people of Chicago, were the most suitable, and Mr. Harder entered into a contract with the company's representative, E. B. Kennedy, to erect all the dock machinery that will be put in this year. The actual amount of the contract figures $75,500. The dock machinery will consist of steel trestle work, which contains unloading facilities from the boat and also car loading facilities for six railroad tracks.

The guarantee made by Fairbanks-Morse under their contract is that the dock must be completed and in readiness to receive coal by Sept. 1.

Another contract let by Mr. Harder was for the dredging. This was closed with the Northern Dredging company of Duluth. A. L. Merritt, vice president and treasurer of the company, and Lucian Merritt, manager, were here yesterday and signed the contract on behalf of their company.

This contract was for the removal of 88,000 cubic yards of material at 12 cents a cubic yard, and it figures up to nearly $10,000. The company is to dredge a channel seventy-five feet wide from the present government channel, 2,000 feet into the dock and also in front of the dock, and thence out again 2,000 feet to the main channel.

Under the terms of the contract the company is to start work this week.

Outside of these contracts there is not much work to do on the dock, except the pulling and driving of the piling, and this contract will be let in a few days.

DAKOTAS

GRAIN MEN OPTIMISTIC

Grand Forks Dealers and Farmers Not Discouraged.

Crop Will be Late and Acreage Somewhat Smaller.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Increased optimism with regard to the crop outlook represents the attitude of local grain men toward the situation at the present time.

That the season will be the latest on record is tacitly admitted even by the most optimistic grain men, but the well-known ability of the Northwestern farmers to raise a crop even under the most adverse circumstances is being relied upon this year to stave off the crop failure that has been frequently predicted of late.

As a matter of fact, the Northwest has never known what a crop failure is, and the indications are strong that this year is not to be an exception to the rule. The concensus of opinion among old grain men is that ninety days of favorable weather will be sufficient for raising almost any grain crop except corn. With planting finished by the 20th of the month, there will still be plenty of time for the crops to ripen before the end of August.

There is good reason to believe that except in certain parts of North Dakota, seeding is from two-thirds to three-quarters completed. In Southern and Central Minnesota and South Dakota seeding is well advanced and in many localities practically finished. The crop outlook in the two states is rated somewhat lower than last year, and the acreage is somewhat less. In the Red River valley and in some other parts of Minnesota and North Dakota the situation is reported to be approximately as favorable as last year.

BURKE, THE COUNTY SEAT

Of Bowman, the New Territory Recently Opened Up.

Fargo, N. D., May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The new county of Bowman will comprise over thirty-three townships, over 750,000 acres. The county is well watered and was well known for years as the stockman's paradise. The Little Missouri river runs through the western part of the county. The county seat of the new county will be called Burke, and that it will become one of the most important towns on the Milwaukee road is evidenced by its favorable location and its environments. That section is settling up so rapidly, the necessity for road improvements and school facilities so urgent, the organization of the county becomes a necessity. People from that region declare the immigration has been little short of phenominal and over wide areas of territory tributary to the Milwaukee road there is a homestead settler on every quarter section.

MORE ELEVATORS

Will be Constructed in North Dakota on Account of Car Shortage.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—That a large number of new elevators will be erected in North Dakota this year is certain. There will also be a large number of additions made to the elevators that are already in the state. The conditions resulting last fall from the car shortage will be responsible for the construction of the new storehouses. In many parts of the state farmers were obliged to dump the wheat on the ground, the elevators not being large enough to take care of the grain. The farmers will also build a large number of granaries during the summer. Elevator contractors expect to have their hands full the next three or four months.

D., May 17.—Special to The Herald.)—At a recent meeting of the Odd Fellows here one of those present mentioned the famine prevailing in sections of China and one of the brothers remarked that he would save the life of a Chinaman. At this some one over in the corner tossed a dollar over in the middle of the room with the remark:

"Here's to save a Chinaman."

The example was contagious and dollars rained from every direction, and when they were gathered up it was found that $35 had been thus contributed for this noble cause.

PASSES OVER CORPSE.

Train Goes Over Dead Man Without Even Disturbing the Body.

Grand Marais, Mich., May 17. — (Special to The Herald.)—The body not being seen in time in the rapidly descending twilight, a heavy train of logs on the Manistique railway passed entirely over the lifeless form of Samuel Mischelle, a woodsman, before the engineer could bring the cars to a stop. Upon investigation the man was found lying lengthwise between the rails; his remains were cold, and the passage of the train had not as much as removed the hat from his head, not in anyway injuring the body. Inasmuch as he had not been hurt in any way by the train and had been dead prior to the discovery of his remains, it is thought that the direct cause of his death was acute alcholism.

BASORICH SENTENCED

Court Imposes Maximum Penalty of Twenty Years Imprisonment.

Was Convicted of Murder in the Third Degree.

Twenty years' imprisonment in the state penitentiary at Stillwater, the maximum penalty for murder in the third degree, was the sentence meted out to Dan Basorich, the Austrian, who was convicted of shooting and killing Marco Breklacich at the Rust mine location, Jan. 8, last.

Basorich heard the sentence without a sign of emotion and was remanded to the jail to await transportation to Stillwater, which will take place within a day or two. He is in bad health and the county authorities believe that as soon as he is taken to the penitentiary and given some sort of work he will be better off as his mind will be taken off his troubles. Confinement in the county jail since early in January and constant brooding, are said to have weakened his mind to some extent.

L. H. Corcoran, who defended Basorich, placed much weight on the evidence given by state's witnesses that Basorich's revolver, when he was arrested had only two empty shells, while there were three bullet wounds in Breklacich, according to the doctor's testimony. Mike Dosan, the state's principal witness claimed that he saw Basorich fire the shots that killed Breklacich. The defense relied on the evidence favorable to Basorich, given by the state's witnesses. Basorich claimed that he was drunk and did not know what happened, but he did not go on the witness stand.

County Attorney Norton represented the state in the prosecution of the case.

LOCAL COMPANY APPEALS.

Union Match Company Claims Twelve Errors Were Made In Case.

An appeal from the interlocutory decree rendered in favor of the Diamond Match company, on April 29 last has been filed by the Union Match company of this city in a case brought against it for alleged infringement of patent right on machinery in its plant for the manufacture of matches.

An assignment of error was made in which the Union Match company alleges that the twelve errors were made in the last case, and for this reason prays that the action may be taken up in the United States circuit court of appeals.

The case was brought by the Diamond Match company against the local company at the last term of federal court and it was decided in favor of the former by Judge Morris on April 29.

The Union Match company has been the defendant in a number of cases brought against it by the Diamond company during the last few years.

WANTS $1,000 FOR INJURY.

Judgment Asked by John Mattson for Injury to Hand.

An action to secure damages for a personal injury was begun in the United States district court yesterday by John Mattson against the Northern Pacific. He asks for a judgment of $6,000 for the crushing of his right hand and amputation of a thumb and two forefingers.

The injury was sustained while Mattson was employed in the railroad shops at Brainerd, where he was employed as a helper assisting at a large iron working machine called a "bulldozer."

Mattson was ordered to clean up the machine on February 17, 1906, and while doing so his hand caught in the cog wheels and was drawn in and badly crushed. The amputation of three fingers was necessary.

FOR UNION OF CHURCHES

Presbyterian General Assembly Hears Report of Big Committee.

Plan to Elect Delegates to Council of Reformed Bodies.

Columbus, Ohio, May 17.—The Presbyterian general assembly was opened today by the new moderation, and Rev. William Henry Roberts of Philadelphia. After prayer, he introduced Governor Harris, who delivered an address of welcome to the 1,000 commissioners and their wives on behalf of the state. Mayor Badger then welcomed the assembly on behalf of the city.

The report of the special committee on church and co-operation was submitted after Dr. Palmer had presented the moderator with a gavel. This was listened to with great interest, but the portion of especial moment was that in regard to the articles of agreement adopted at the last general assembly. To put these into effect, it is necessary for the assembly to elect thirty-two representatives to the council of the reformed churches in America, holding the Presbyterian system. The committee submitted the following plan: The first two members of the delegation to be the moderator and the stated clerk; the other members to be divided into three classes of five ministers and five ruling elders each, one class to be elected by this assembly for one year, one for two years and one for three years and the election thereafter to be annual—one class of ten minutes each. It is recommended that the assembly appoint a committee to nominate the thirty delegates by classes.

The committee reported it had taken under consideration the following matters and disposed of them in the manner named: As to a union with the Reformed Presbyterian church general synod, action postponed by the general synod and recommended that the assembly postpone further negotiations "until God in His providence shall open a way for their resumption, in informing the general synod of this action and assuring the Reformed church of a desire for its continued prosperity.

As to the relations with the Reformed church in the United States—at a joint meeting of committees of the Reformed church and the Presbyterian church in the United States of America, at Charlotte, N. C., resolutions passed to recommend to both assemblies the appointment of committees to further consider the question of closer relations. Recommended that the matter be recommitted to the committee on co-operation and union.

As to the plan of federation of Christian churches of America, that the Presbyterian church in the United States of America is entitled to thirty representatives in the federal council. Recommended that the twenty-four members of the committee on co-operation and union be made representatives, and in addition the following: Rev. J. Ross Stevenson, Rev. D. Stuart Lodge, Rev. William McEwan, D.D., Hon. Robert N. Wilson, Hon. John M. Gault, and S. S. Brownell.

Overtures referred for the presbyteries of Bellingham, Olympia, Puget Sound and Spokane, regarding organic union with the reformed churches holding the Presbyterian system: Recommended, that the assembly pass a resolution expressing willingness to enter into such relations of co-operation, federation or organic union as may be mutually acceptable; this because the reformed church in the United States has not had opportunity to act on the resolution of the committee on closer relations of its general synod.

Reconstruction and on consolidation of the boards and permanent committee of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America and the Cumberland church: Recommended that the assembly pass resolutions directing each of the incorporated boards to proceed as promptly as possible to transfer all its property and accounts to the appropriation board of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America and to legal dissolution unless otherwise directed by competent legal counsel; and the meantime each of these boards be considered as holding boards only unless otherwise specifically directed by the assembly. The committee states that the situation has been complicated by the bringing of civil suits in the courts and for this reason advises the assembly to proceed cautiously and take no action further than that recommended.

Cumberland university: Recommending that the amended charter of the Cumberland university be recognized as the law defining the relations of the theological department of the university; that the trustees require all theological professors to adopt the confusion of faith of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America before assuming their duties; and that at least two-thirds of the trustees of Cumberland university shall be members of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America. On adoption of these resolutions the committee understands the trustees of the university will immediately amend their charter.

Regarding the legal complications: That a committee of four ministers and five elders be appointed to investigate and recommend appropriate action at the earliest possible moment.

HAYWOOD JUDGE ORDERS STRICT INQUIRY

sufficient," said Mr. Hawley, "its power might be well exerted to prevent any recurrence in the future. We, of the prosecution, will heartily assent to any method the court may adopt."

When Mr. Hawley had again taken his seat, Mr. Richardson, of counsel for Haywood, said: "I don't know and I don't say that these publications of this morning come from the prosecution. But they are obvious. The presence of prospective jurors alone prevents my saying what I would otherwise."

Judge Wood ordered all members of the special juror panel to leave the court room, excusing them for one hour. He then directed Mr. Richardson to proceed.

"I want, in the first place," said the attorney, "to exonerate counsel for the prosecution for what has occurred. This man Orchard, after being secluded for fifteen months, is suddenly made accessible at this time while we are in the midst of jury selection. It occurred at the examination of one of the jurors the other day that there was some prejudice, perhaps, against this man Orchard and his testimony. Thereupon, the governor of this state organizes a party and takes the newspaper fraternity—not all, but the representatives of the Associated Press and that portion of the press which is reporting the trial agreeably—down to the penitentiary, of which he is the supreme officer, and has them interview this man.

"It was done, your honor, for the express purpose of influencing these jurors—to give credence to this witness. It was a dastardly outrage on this defendant. Anything that the court can do to protect itself and to protect this defendant and insure to him the fair trial to which he is entitled, will be heartily seconded by us. We do not believe the attorneys for the prosecution are responsible. We have been watching them closely and if they think they have done anything that we do not know they are much mistaken. I call on them now to denounce these things as emphatically as we have done. We especially object to the purported interview of the governor saying what he had done to establish the credence of the witness. If it was not patent before that the governor of this state never intended that this defendant should not have a fair trial, it is very evident now."

Judge Wood directed the county prosecuting attorney to make an investigation of the facts connected with the Orchard interview and to take such action as he found to be warranted.

XTRAGOOD CLOTHES FOR BOYS

Ask the mother who has bought one of our "Xtra Good" Suits for her boy, what she thinks of it, and she will tell you that in all her experience it is the best garment her boy ever wore; wouldn't have any other brand. It's what mothers think and do that counts more than what we say in our advertising. But it's only fair to suppose that it's the way the clothes wear, and the way they look while they are being worn that wins the favor of frugal and critical parents. The patterns, the style, the fit and the way they withstand the test of wear, are the qualities which commend the "Xtra Good" brand above all others.

SHOW PEOPLE HAVE GOOD TIME

Planked Whitefish Banquet Held on Stage of Metropolitan.

After the curtain went down on the last act of "Mr. Dooley on the Empire Circuit," at the Metropolitan last night, there were a number of stunts not down on any program and enjoyed only by members of the Brigadiers company, the employes of the Metropolitan Opera house and a few invited guests.

This is the last week of burlesque at the "Met," and to properly observe the end of the theatrical year, a sumptuous feast was spread and eaten and nearly everyone present contributed some little bit to the general entertainment that followed.

Comedians, singers, chorus girls, stage hands, theatrical managers, newspaper men and others enjoyed the delicious planked whitefish and the thousand and one other good things to eat which were to be had in such generous quantities.

After all had satisfied their hunger, they repaired to the parquet, the boxes and the wings to watch the stunts. Tim Healy perpetrated a burlesque recitation; Bernard Williams, Lester Pike, Joseph Scanlon, Gladys St. John, Tillie Cohen and many others sang and told stories. The orchestra played. W. H. Longstreet, manager of the "Met," presided as master of ceremonies and official announcer.

META NORTHMORE DIES.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Northmore Passes Away.

Meta Northmore, the 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Northmore of 124 Eighth avenue east, died at her home at 8 o'clock last evening after a brief attack of spinal meningitis complicated by kidney trouble. She was stricken last Tuesday and succumbed after an illness of about forty-eight hours.

The child attended the Jefferson school and was very popular among her friends and playmates. Her health had always been considered excellent up to the time of her attack Tuesday, and her death is a severe shock to her many friends.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon from the residence at 2:30 o'clock, and interment will be at Forest Hill.

TO INVESTIGATE VOLK FRANCHISE

Ald. Foubister Would Have City Attorney Test Its Validity.

As a result of a movement inaugurated in West Duluth this week, Alderman J. E. Foubister is planning to introduce a motion in the city council next Monday evening asking the city attorney to pass upon the validity of the Volk street car franchise. Mr. Foubister bases his claims of the invalidity of the ordinance on one of its provisions, which stated that the car line was to have been completed by 1904, and while the city has lived up to all its provisions as required by the ordinance, the company has not. Mr. Foubister thinks that the promoters are waiting until such a line would be a paying proposition, after the proposed steel plant has built up the country west of the present terminus of the West Third street line, instead of building the line in the hope that it would build up the country, as was the idea of the council when the franchise was granted.

The great objection to allowing the company to build the line is, according to the alderman from the Eighth ward, that New Duluthians and others located west of the West Third street terminus would have to pay two fares in order to reach the city, and if the city must wait until the country is built up enough to make a paying proposition of the line, the Duluth Street Railway company would probably be glad to make such an extension by that time and charge but the one fare for the whole trip.

The route has been graded by the city, as required in the ordinance, and every term of the contract has been lived up to, according to Mr. Foubister's investigation, while the Volk company has failed to carry out its part of the agreement.

SUDDEN DEATH TO AUTO EXPERT

Albert Clement, Noted Racer, Thrown From Car on Turn.

Dieppe, France, May 17.—Albert Clement, son of the well-known automobile builder, was killed instantly today during a run in preparation for the Auto club's grand prize, which is to be competed for July 2. He was thrown out of his automobile at a sharp turn and sustained a fracture of the skull. His chauffeur escaped with comparatively slight injuries.

Albert Clement finished second in the first race for the Vanderbilt cup in 1904, over the Long Island course, was third in the race for the French grand prize, 1904, and while the city has lived up to all its provisions as required by the ordinance, the company has not. Mr. Foubister thinks that the promoters are waiting until such a line would be a paying proposition, after the proposed steel plant has built up the country west of the present terminus of the West Third street line, instead of building the line in the hope that it would build up the country, as was the idea of the council when the franchise was granted.

The great objection to allowing the company to build the line is, according to the alderman from the Eighth ward, that New Duluthians and others located west of the West Third street terminus would have to pay two fares in order to reach the city, and if the city must wait until the country is built up enough to make a paying proposition of the line, the Duluth Street Railway company would probably be glad to make such an extension by that time and charge but the one fare for the whole trip.

The route has been graded by the city, as required in the ordinance, and every term of the contract has been lived up to, according to Mr. Foubister's investigation, while the Volk company has failed to carry out its part of the agreement.

MORRISON'S

MODERN TAILORING HOUSE,

No 8 Lake Avenue S.

Dear Sir: The subject matter of this letter—as well as those which will follow—is custom made clothes in general, and "Morrison" clothes in particular. I will tell you from time to time of the different kinds of cloth, linings, trimmings, etc., which go to make a fashionable suit for the modern up-to-date man. I shall probably tell you something of the struggle for supremacy in the tailoring business here as well as introduce some of the side lights which bear on the production of the better grade of made-to-order clothes in Duluth and elsewhere.

The principal theme, of course, will be the "Morrison Suit," and the object—a wider recognition of the merits of my production. Meantime, I wish to tell you who are not already acquainted with Morrison's modern tailoring house that I have here in Duluth one first-class cutter, three first-class coat makers, also good vest and pants makers. A large stock of fine woolens—new ones all the time—and for styles—the entire range of the best American and European designers. My guarantee as to fit is—YOU CAN'T HAVE IT UNTIL IT DOES FIT. Come in and leave your measure as soon as you can, or write or telephone for samples.

Yours truly,

D. M. MORRISON.

LARGE DEAL IS CLOSED

Merchants Hotel Property Changes Hands for $100,000.

I. M. Thomas Sells It to the City Realty Company.

Superior street frontage hit the $2,000 per foot mark, today, when a deal was closed for the sale of the Merchants hotel property at the southwest corner of Superior street and Second avenue west, from Isaac M. Thomas of Wilkesbarre, Pa., to the City Realty company of Duluth, for $100,000. The transfer by deed will take place tomorrow.

The City Realty company is composed of local men, and was organized and incorporated a few weeks ago for the purpose of taking over the property. Among those interested in the company are George W. Buck, A. H. Brown and Marion Douglas.

The sale was made through the office of Stryker, Manley & Buck, who also negotiated a sale of the property from William Meinhardt to Mr. Thomas in 1892, when the consideration was $45,500.

Besides making a profit of $66,000 on the sale, Mr. Thomas, during the nine years he has held the property, is said to have made a net income of 6 and 8 per cent.

The hotel was built by William Meinhardt, the present lessee, over twenty years ago. The present deal has been some time under negotiation owing to the details concerning the arrangements to secure the lease rights.

The property has a frontage of fifty feet on Superior street and is 115 feet deep. The plans of the new owners as to rumored future improvements have not yet been announced.

The Merchants hotel property has long been considered one of the best locations in the business part of the city and the price paid is claimed to have a great deal of significance as marking an era of a substantial increase in prices of other property along the same thoroughfare.

TIGER HUNT IN KOREA.

Washington Herald: "The tiger," said George Robertson of Scotland, who has had many exciting experiences in hunting tigers in Far Eastern countries, "is usually looked on as a tropical beast, but as a matter of fact he is found pretty much throughout the continent of Asia. He is an animal of great power, resource and intelligence and exerts a large influence on the lives of the people.

"In Korea, where I have hunted, there are no forests on the seaboard, but the inland ridges are heavily timbered, and here the tigers are found. The beasts are numerous and are pursued on foot. After two or three chases I was told by the natives that no tigers could be found unless a sacrifice were offered, and accordingly I gave up some coin for the necessary rice and wine. The sacrifice was accordingly made, and the next day I shot a very handsome specimen. In every Korean village there is an official hornblower, whose duty it is to sound his horn whenever a tiger gets into a village at night. The natives are sorely afraid of them, and many a human life is destoyed by the savage beasts.

"In the province of Amoy I ran across the cave tigers. The land is bare of woods or brush, and the tigers live in long tunnels in the rocks. The Chinese hunt them with torches, carrying three-pronged spears, and the boys who go on these dangerous expeditions proceed with as much coolness as the average youth in this country does in a rabbit hunt. A tiger, however, will not charge a light, but woe to the hunter whose light goes out.

"In Java there are more tigers than anywhere I have hunted. In some places the brutes were so numerous that the inhabitants slept in houses built on piles, so as to be protected from their assaults. The Javanese hold them in such awe that many of the natives abstain even from using the name of the beast.

ELECTRIC RAILWAYS.

Vienna Letter to Pall Mall Gazette: Comprehensive plans are under consideration in the ministry of railways for the introduction of electricity on all the state railways in the western part of Austria, embracing the lines between Vienna and Bregenz, and Salzburg and Teleste. It is proposed to use the water power in the country through which the roads run, and an engineering commission has been engaged for some months in investigating the amount of power available. As Austria is particularly rich in rivers and mountain streams, an almost unlimited water power is to be found in many parts of the country.

GREAT CATCH OF PIKE.

The State Gets Biggest Supply of Eggs on Record.

Tower, Minn., May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—S. F. Fullerton, superintendent of fisheries, has just completed the biggest collection of pike eggs ever made by any state. Most were taken from Pike river, above Vermilion lake. They had remarkable success in spite of freezing weather and a fall of snow every day from April 28 to May 15.

A total of 1,500 quarts of eggs have been placed in cans at the St. Paul and Glenwood hatcheries, and as soon as hatched they will be distributed to the lakes o fthe state. As the eggs will run 175,000 to the quart, Mr. Fullerton estimates that there are 250,000,000 on hand. Young pike are cannibals, and the biggest problem is to get them into deep water as soon as possible after they hatch, before the larger fry eat the small ones.

WEATHER IS FAVORABLE

Work of Loading and Unloading Boats Being Done Rapidly.

Many Boats Still at Ore Docks at West Duluth.

The favorable weather yesterday and today has been what marine men at the Head of the Lakes have been wishing for for several weeks, and as a consequence, the work of loading and unloading the boats is going forward at a rapid rate. At the ore docks there are still a large number of vessels being loaded, and several are still waiting for a chance to get to the docks, but they are all being rapidly disposed of today.

The favorable weather will also tend to help the situation at the Canadian ports of Port Arthur and Fort William, where the ice is still most bothersome and the boats are constantly being delayed. For several weeks it has been predicted by marine men that all that was needed there is a few days of good, warm weather.

The number of coal boats to arrive at Duluth since yesterday is not very large, and there was but one grain carrier to arrive and two to depart. The grain carriers are evidently bunched at the other end of the lakes at present. The lumber traffic is progressing very smoothly and—no complaints have been heard so far from either the shippers or the vessel agents.

No attempt was made by the Booth line steamer America to get into Port Arthur this trip. She returned this morning from north shore points and Isle Royale with a good list of passengers and a cargo of freight. The report of one of the captains yesterday that he had seen the America bucking the ice on her way into Thunder Bay was wrong.

BOILERS FOR NEW BOATS.

Blue Prints Are Filed at Office of Steamboat Inspectors.

Blue prints of the boilers which are to be installed in the new steamer Ward Ames, now being built at the yards of the Superior Shipbuilding company at Superior, were filed today at the office of the United States steamboats inspectors in the federal building, this city.

The boilers which will be installed are of the water tube kind and a very high pressure can be obtained from their use. The construction of the boilers must be passed upon by the inspectors before they are built or placed in the vessel. The Babcock and Wilson company has the contract for their construction.

The steamer Ward Ames is being built for the Acme Steamship company of Duluth and is nearly completed. She will probably be the next vessel to be launced at Superior. Blue prints for the steamer H. P. Pope were also filed with the inspectors this morning.

BOAT TRANSFERRED.

Otto C. Hartman Sells a Part Interest in Steamer Fremont.

Otto C. Hartman, owner of the well-known harbor steamer Fremont has sold six-ninths of his interest in the boat and bills of sale for the transfer were filed today at the marine customs office in the federal building. Four-ninths of boat was transferred to the Interstate Traction company for $4,000 and two-thirds to A. W. Hartman for $2,000.

The Fremont is a steamer of the paddle wheel variety and was brought up here last year from Sandusky, Ohio, to be run in connection with the White City on Park Point. She made trips from the Fifth avenue dock to the White City and can carry 500 passengers. It is expected that she will be used on the same run and in the excursion business this year.

She was built at St. Joseph, Mich., in 1900, and has a gross tonnage of 99. She is 112 feet long, 20 feet broad and 5 feet deep.

PASSENGER SERVICE SOON.

Will Begin When Port Arthur Blockade is Lifted.

Passenger service between Duluth and Sarnia, Ont., will be commenced by the Northern Navigation company just as soon as the ice blockade is lifted at Port Arthur so that the boats can get in and out of that port without delay.

Already the passenger steamer Huronic is making trips to Port Arthur, but owing to the delay in getting in and out of that port she has so far been unable to come to Duluth and therefore the passenger service has not been commenced.

Freight is being brought up the lakes to Port Arthur and then transferred to another boat and brought to Duluth. Harry Hurdon the local agent of the line, expects the passenger service will be begun within a few days unless the conditions at Port Arthur become worse.

BEGIN WORK SOON.

Improvement on Pier at Milwaukee Will be Begun in June.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 17.—Work on the improvement to the breakwater pier will begin in June, says the United States engineer. The section from the fair weather opening south will be changed from wood to cement. It is expected the work will occupy the entire summer season.

As soon as the Western piles arrive preparations will be started for lengthening the pier 1,000 feet. Owing to the congested condition of railroad traffic on the northern transcontinental roads there is no certainty when the timber will reach the city. The federal authorities are hopeful, however, that the first consignment will arrive during the summer months.

The federal authorities, are hopeful, however, that the first consignment will arrive during the summer months.

Mad. Judson is desirous of laying the foundations for the McKinley memorial lighthouse out in the Milwaukee bay before next winter sets in. The money for this structure has been available for nearly two years, yet work on it cannot begin until the lines for the pier extensions have been definitely laid.

TO LOAD AT NEW DOCK

Half of Allouez Ore Dock Soon to be Operated.

It Will Not be Completed Before Middle of June.

On account of the delay caused by the severe storms last winter work on the new Great Northern ore dock at Superior has not yet been completed. The contract for the erection of the dock called for its completion by May 1, but under the circumstances it will not be completed before the middle of June.

It was stated yesterday, however, by J. C. Morril, superintendent of the Great Northern dock, that part of the new dock may be in use by the middle of next week and vessels will probably be able to load at that time. About half of the dock will be ready for use next week in the opinion of Mr. Morril.

The construction of the dock was begun last fall after the old dock had been torn down. The work has been progressing steadily except during the times when the winter storms interrupted. The dock will be one of the largest on the lakes when completed and will be able to accommodate as many vessels as any of the ore docks at the Head of the Lakes.

It will have 374 pockets and the dock proper will be 2,244 feet in length, 75 feet high and 62 feet wide. The dimensions are the same as those of Nos. 2 and 3 docks at Allouez.

Ever since the season of navigation opened the big ore carriers have been loading at the other two Allouez docks and the building of No. 1 has not interfered with the operation of the others.

WILL RAISE MASCOTTE.

Reid Wrecking Company is Awarded Contract and Will Begin Soon.

Port Huron, Mich., May 17.—R. Parry Jones of Cleveland, acting for the underwriters, has awarded the contract of raising the passenger steamer Mascotte, sunk at her dock at Hancock, to the Reid Wrecking company of Port Huron on the no-cure-no-pay plan.

The boat lies in twenty-four feet of water aft, and twenty feet forward. Capt. C. H. Sinclair, who went to Hancock for the underwriters, thinks the mishap was caused by the breaking of a seacock. The cause cannot be definitely determined until the steamer is up.

TELLS OF GROUNDING.

Captain Reports What He Saw When Saxon Went On.

Detroit, May 17.—A Free Press special from Sault Ste Marie, Mich., says:

The steel steamer Saxon, owned by the Pittsburg Steamship company, which stranded Wednesday night during a fog on the north side of Caribou island, will be a total loss it is feared. The accident was reported yesterday by Capt. Brown of the steamer E. W. Oglebay, which was in company with the Saxon when she struck the rocks.

"We were running a short distance ahead of the Saxon," said Capt. Brown, "and our steamer must have missed the reef which the Saxon struck, by only a few feet. The Saxon was going along at full speed and struck the rocks with terrific force. I tried to get near enough to take the Saxon's crew abroad my own ship, but was unable to do anything because of the danger of running my own steamer on the rocks in the storm. The Saxon's men were able later to reach the island in small boats."

The wrecked steamer registered 2,348 tons and is valued at $110,000. She was built in 1890.

UNCLE SAM MORE STRICT.

Will Not Pay Employes for Time They Are Absent.

According to a circular letter just received in Duluth addressed "To all disbursing officers of the United States," the United States government is becoming more strict in its dealings with its employes and intends to pay them only for the time while they are at work.

Under the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act, June 30, 1906, all employes paid on a yearly basis shall be paid once a monta and shall be paid for only the time he is at work. For any purposes all months in the year will be reckoned as containing thirty days.

One-thirteenth of a monthly installment of salary will be a deducted for every day's absence in a month where such absence is not in a pay status during such absence.

Now Captain of Colonial.

William F. Morrison has recently been appointed master of the steamer Colonial of the Gilchrist line, the regularly appointed captain having resigned. Capt. Morrison only commenced sailing about six years ago and his rise to the captaincy of the Colonial has been a rapid one.

Tug Arrives From Houghton.

The tug Duncan Robertson arrived today from Houghton and will be placed in commission immediately by the Zenith Dredge company of this city. This company recently purchased the entire dredging outfit formerly owned by James Pryor at Houghton. The Robertson will be inspected by the United States steamboat inspectors. The steamer Aztec will also be inspected tomorrow.

Reward for Recovery of Bodies.

A reward of $25 has been offered by residents of Manistee for the recovery of the bodies of John Puls, Harry Powers and Stephen McIntyre, who were lost in the wreck of the steamer Arcadia on Lake Michigan, April 12. The victims were all residents of the city of Manistee and the people there are taking much interest in the recovery of the bodies.

Schooner Was Burned.

The schooner A. J. McBrier burned Sunday when about two miles away from Drummon island according to a message received at Saginaw. The vessel had landed household goods and other utensils at Maxton, for the establishment of a lumber camp. The crew of six were rescued with some difficulty. The boat was in command of Capt. C. B. Molles of Saginaw, the owner, and was bound for Cleveland.

Ore Carriers Still Bunched.

Cleveland, May 17.—Coal tonnage continues in good demand, with light offerings for Lake Michigan ports, and the feeling is strong. No charters were reported yesterday. Ore carriers are still getting around in bunches and there is at present a scarcity of tonnage at loading ports on this account. Many vessels are now on the way up with coal.

Fire on Steamer Wolvin.

Cleveland, May 17.—Fire on the big steamer A. B. Wolvin on Lake Erie yesterday which originated in the bathroom, damaged the vessel $100.

Steamer Oliver Grounded.

Buffalo, May 17.—The steamer H. W. Oliver, ore laden, which grounded while going to the Pennsylvania ore dock, was released this morning after lightering part of her cargo.

Gault Damaged Only Slightly

Bay City, May 17.—The steamer John Gault, which collided with and sank the steamer Whitaker at Limekiln crossing, reached port yesterday.

The Gault has her stem twisted slightly out of place, her fender rail broken and her starboard anchor almost buried in rotten oak, which was torn from the hull of the other vessel.

Capt. Humphrey of the Gault says he does not think that the Whitaker would have sunk if the anchor hadn't punched a hole in her, and says he is going to keep the oak torn out to use in case the collision should result in a lawsuit.

Suspend Engineer's License.

Cleveland, May 17.—The local inspectors of steamboats, yesterday suspended the license of Henry Hess for fifteen days. Hess was engineer of the tug L. B. Johnson, which was stranded near Fairport, April 30.

The inspectors found that Hess acted in a negligent and unskilful manner, thereby violating cestion 4441 of the revised statutes. The Johnson, which was bound from Cleveland to Ashtabula, was headed four miles west of Fairport, and is a total loss.

Canadian Boat Aground.

Sandusky, May 17.—The Canadian steamer City of Mt. Clemens, Capt. J. S. McQueen, the first boat to load coal at the new Hanna docks here, ran into a submerged rock near the lake late last night, and filling with water, was beached on Cedar Point, inside the government dock.

The Mt. Clemens has a big hole in her bottom. The tug Ina today removed her cargo and the sandsucker Protection is pumping her out. It is thought that the boat can be easily floated before morning.

Lighthouse at Jackfish Bay.

Cleveland, May 17.—George A. Marr, secretary of the Lake Carriers' association, received the following letter from President Livingstone yesterday: "I am just in receipt of private advices from Ottawa that the Canadian government has decided to build a lighthouse at Jackfish bay. They will begin work on it in a very short time, and hope to get it completed this season. So that this practically disposes of the entire question of a lighthouse at Jackfish bay, very much to our satisfaction."

Caledonia Is Floated.

Port Huron, May 9.—The steamer Caledonia was released from the Middle Ground today by the Reid Wrecking company after lightering about 500 tons of ore. The steamer is lying at Sarnia, reloading the lightered cargo. The lighter Newman was sent to its assistance, but arrived after the Caledonia had been floated.

GREAT CATCH OF PIKE.

The State Gets Biggest Supply of Eggs on Record.

Tower, Minn., May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—S. F. Fullerton, superintendent of fisheries, has just completed the biggest collection of pike eggs ever made by any state. Most were taken from Pike river, above Vermilion lake. They had remarkable success in spite of freezing weather and a fall of snow every day from April 28 to May 15.

A total of 1,500 quarts of eggs have been placed in cans at the St. Paul and Glenwood hatcheries, and as soon as hatched they will be distributed to the lakes in the state. As the eggs will run 175,000 to the quart, Mr. Fullerton estimates that there are 250,000,000 of them. Young pike are cannibals, and the biggest problem is to get them into deep water as soon as possible after they hatch before the larger fry eat the small ones.

WEATHER IS FAVORABLE

Work of Loading and Unloading Boats Being Done Rapidly.

Many Boats Still at Ore Docks at West Duluth.

The favorable weather yesterday and today has been what marine men at the Head of the Lakes have been wishing for for several weeks, and as a consequence, the work of loading and unloading the boats is going forward at a rapid rate. At the ore docks there are still a large number of vessels being loaded, and several are still waiting for a chance to get to the docks, but they are all being rapidly disposed of today.

The favorable weather will also tend to help the situation at the Canadian ports of Port Arthur and Fort William, where the ice is still most bothersome and the boats are constantly being delayed. For several weeks it has been predicted by marine men that all that was needed there is a few days of good, warm weather.

The number of coal boats to arrive at Duluth since yesterday is not very large, and there was but one grain carrier to arrive and two to depart. The grain carriers are evidently bunched at the other end of the lakes at present. The lumber traffic is progressing very smoothly and no complaints have been heard so far from either the shippers or the vessel agents.

No attempt was made by the Booth line steamer America to get into Port Arthur this trip. She returned this morning from north shore points and Isle Royale with a good list of passengers and a cargo of freight. The report of one of the captains yesterday that he had seen the America bucking the ice on her way into Thunder Bay was wrong.

BOILERS FOR NEW BOATS.

Blue Prints Are Filed at Office of Steamboat Inspectors.

Blue prints of the boilers which are to be installed in the new steamer Ward Ames, now being built at the yards of the Superior Shipbuilding company at Superior, were filed today at the office of the United States steamboats inspectors in the federal building, this city. The boilers which will be installed are of the water tube kind and a very high pressure can be obtained from their use. The construction of the boilers must be passed upon by the inspectors before they are built or placed in the vessel. The Babcock and Wilson company has the contract for their construction.

The steamer Ward Ames is being built for the Acme Steamship company of Duluth and is nearly completed. She will probably be the next vessel to be launched at Superior. Blue prints for the steamer H. P. Pope were also filed with the inspectors this morning.

BOAT TRANSFERRED.

Otto C. Hartman Sells a Part Interest in Steamer Fremont.

Otto C. Hartman, owner of the well-known harbor steamer Fremont has sold six-ninths of his interest in the boat and bills of sale for the transfer were filed today at the marine customs office in the federal building. By the deal the boat was transferred to the Interstate-Traction company for $4,000 and two-thirds to A. W. Hartman for $2,000.

The Fremont is a steamer of the paddle wheel variety and was brought up here last year from Sandusky, Ohio, to be run in connection with the White City on Park Point. She made trips from the Fifth avenue dock to the White City and can carry 541 passengers. It is expected that she will be used on the same run and in the excursion business this year.

She was built at St. Joseph, Mich., in 1900, and has a gross tonnage of 99. She is 112 feet long, 20 feet broad and 5 feet deep.

PASSENGER SERVICE SOON.

Will Begin When Port Arthur Blockade is Lifted.

Passenger service between Duluth and Sarnia, Ont., will be commenced by the Northern Navigation company just as soon as the ice blockade is lifted at Port Arthur so that the boats can get in and out of that port without delay.

Already the passenger steamer Huronic is making trips to Port Arthur, but owing to the delay in getting in and out of that port she has so far been unable to come to Duluth and therefore the passenger service has not been commenced.

Freight is being brought up the lakes to Port Arthur and then transferred to another boat and brought to Duluth. Harry Hurdon the local agent of the line, expects the passenger service will be begun within a few days unless the conditions at Port Arthur become worse.

BEGIN WORK SOON.

Improvement on Pier at Milwaukee Will be Begun in June.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 17.—Work on the improvement to the breakwater pier will begin in June, says the United States engineer. The suction from the fair weather opening south will be changed from wood to cement. It is expected the work will occupy the entire summer season.

As soon as the Western piles arrive preparations will be started for lengthening the pier 1,000 feet. Owing to the congested condition of railroad traffic on the northern transcontinental roads there is no certainty when the timber will reach the city. The federal authorities, are hopeful, however, that the first consignment will arrive during the summer months.

Owing to the congested condition of railroad traffic on the northern transcontinental roads there is no certainty when the timber will reach the city. The federal authorities, are hopeful, however, that the first consignment will arrive during the summer months.

Maj. Judson is desirous of laying the foundations for the McKinley memorial lighthouse out in the Milwaukee bay before next winter sets in. The money for this structure has been available for nearly two years, yet work on it cannot begin until the lines for the pier extensions have been definitely laid.

TO LOAD AT NEW DOCK

Half of Allouez Ore Dock Soon to be Operated.

It Will Not be Completed Before Middle of June.

On account of the delay caused by the severe storms last winter work on the new Great Northern ore dock at Superior has not yet been completed. The contract for the erection of the dock called for its completion by May 1, but under the circumstances it will not be completed before the middle of June.

It was stated yesterday, however, by J. C. Morril, superintendent of the Great Northern dock that part of the new dock may be in use by the middle of next week and vessels will probably be able to load at that time. About half of the dock will be ready for use next week in the opinion of Mr. Morril.

The construction of the dock was begun last fall after the old dock had been torn down. The work has been progressing steadily except during the times when the winter storms interrupted. The dock will be one of the largest on the lakes when completed and will be able to accommodate as many vessels as any of the ore docks at the Head of the Lakes.

It will have 37 pockets and the dock proper will be 2,244 feet in length, 75 feet high and 62 feet wide. The dimensions are the same as those of Nos. 2 and 3 docks at Allouez.

Ever since the season of navigation opened the big ore carriers have been loading at the other two Allouez docks and the building of No. 1 has not interfered with the operation of the others.

WILL RAISE MASCOTTE.

Reid Wrecking Company is Awarded Contract and Will Begin Soon.

Port Huron, Mich., May 17.—R. Parry Jones of Cleveland, acting for the underwriters, has awarded the contract of raising the passenger steamer Mascotte, sunk at her dock at Hancock, to the Reid Wrecking company of Port Huron on the no-cure-no-pay plan.

The boat lies in twenty-four feet of water aft, and twenty feet forward. Capt. C. H. Sinclair, who went to Hancock for the underwriters, thinks the mishap was caused by the breaking of a seacock. This cause cannot be definitely determined until the steamer is up.

TELLS OF GROUNDING.

Captain Reports What He Saw When Saxon Went On.

Detroit, May 17.—A Free Press special from Sault Ste Marie, Mich., says:

The steel steamer Saxon, owned by the Pittsburg Steamship company, which stranded Wednesday night during a fog on the north side of Caribou island, will be a total loss it is feared. The accident was reported yesterday by Capt. Brown of the steamer E. W. Oglebay, which was in company with the Saxon when she struck the rocks.

"We were running a short distance ahead of the Saxon," said Capt. Brown, "and our steamer must have missed the reef which the Saxon struck, by only a few feet. The Saxon was going along at full speed and struck the rocks with terrific force. I tried to get near enough to take the Saxon's crew abroad my own ship, but was unable to do anything because of the danger of running my own steamer on the rocks in the storm. The Saxon's men were able later to reach the island in small boats."

The wrecked steamer registered 2,348 tons and is valued at $110,000. She was built in 1890.

UNCLE SAM MORE STRICT.

Will Not Pay Employes for Time They Are Absent.

According to a circular letter just received in Duluth addressed "To all disbursing officers of the United States," the United States government is becoming more strict in its dealings with its employes and intends to pay them only for the time while they are at work.

Under the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act, June 30, 1906, all employes paid on a yearly basis shall be paid once a month and shall be paid for only the time he is at work. For any purposes all months in the year will be reckoned as containing thirty days.

One-thirteenth of a monthly installment of salary will be deducted for every day's absence in a month where such absence is not in a pay status during such absence.

Now Captain of Colonial.

William F. Morrison has recently been appointed master of the steamer Colonial of the Gilchrist line, the regularly appointed captain having resigned. Capt. Morrison only commenced sailing about six years ago and his rise to the captaincy of the Colonial has been a rapid one.

Tug Arrives From Houghton.

The tug Duncan Robertson arrived today from Houghton and will be placed in commission immediately by the Zenith Dredge company of this city. This company recently purchased the entire dredging outfit formerly owned by James Pryor at Houghton. The Robertson will be inspected by the United States steamboat inspectors. The steamer Aztec will also be inspected tomorrow.

Reward for Recovery of Bodies.

A reward of $25 has been offered by residents of Manistee for the recovery of the bodies of John Pula, Harry Powers and Stephen McIntyre, who were lost in the wreck of the steamer Arcadia on Lake Michigan, April 12. The victims were all residents of the city of Manistee and the people there are taking much interest in the recovery of the bodies.

Schooner Was Burned.

The schooner A. J. McBrier burned Sunday when about two miles away from Drummon Island according to a message received at Saginaw. The vessel had landed household goods and other utensils at Maxton for the establishment of a lumber camp. The crew of six were rescued with some difficulty. The boat was in command of Capt. C. B. Molles of Saginaw, the owner, and was bound for Cleveland.

Ore Carriers Still Bunched.

Cleveland, May 17.—Coal tonnage continues in good demand, with fight offerings for Lake Michigan ports, and the feeling is strong. No charters were reported yesterday. Ore carriers are still getting around in bunches and there is at present a scarcity of tonnage at loading ports on this account. Many vessels are now on the way up with coal.

Fire on Steamer Wolvin.

Cleveland, May 17.—Fire on the big steamer A. B. Wolvin on Lake Erie yesterday which originated in the bathroom, damaged the vessel $400.

Steamer Oliver Grounded.

Buffalo, May 17.—The steamer H. W. Oliver, ore laden, which grounded while going to the Pennsylvania ore dock, was released this morning after lightering part of her cargo.

Gault Damaged Only Slightly

Bay City, May 17.—The steamer John Gault, which collided with and sank the steamer Whitaker at Limekiln crossing, reached port yesterday.

The Gault has her stem twisted slightly out of place, her fender rail broken and her starboard anchor almost buried in rotten oak, which was torn from the hull of the other vessel.

Capt. Humphrey of the Gault says he does not think that the Whitaker would have sunk if the anchor hadn't punched the hole in her, and says he is going to keep the oak torn out to use in case the collision should result in a lawsuit.

Suspend Engineer's License.

Cleveland, May 17.—The local inspectors of steamboats, yesterday suspended the license of Henry Hess for fifteen days. Hess was engineer of the tug L. B. Johnson, which was stranded near Fairport, April 30.

The inspectors found that Hess acted in a negligent and unskillful manner, thereby violating section 4411 of the revised statutes. The Johnson, which was bound from Cleveland to Ashtabula, was headed four miles west of Fairport, and is a total loss.

Canadian Boat Aground.

Sandusky, May 17.—The Canadian steamer City of Mt. Clemens, Capt. J. S. McQueen, the first boat to load coal at the new Hanna docks here, ran into a submerged rock near the outer jetty in trying to reach the lake late last night, and filling with water, was beached on Cedar Point, inside the government dock.

The Mt. Clemens has a big hole in her bottom. The tug Ina today removed her cargo and the sandsucker Protection is pumping her out. It is thought that the boat can be easily floated before morning.

Lighthouse at Jackfish Bay.

Cleveland, May 17.—George A. Marr, secretary of the Lake Carriers' association, received the following letter from President Livingstone yesterday: "I am just in receipt of private advices from Ottawa that the Canadian government has decided to build a lighthouse at Jackfish bay. They will begin work on it in a very short time, and hope to get it completed this season. So that this practically disposes of the entire question of a lighthouse at Jackfish bay, very much to our satisfaction."

Caledonia Is Floated.

Port Huron, May 9.—The steamer Caledonia was released from the Middle Ground today by the Reid Wrecking company after lightering about 500 tons of ore. The steamer is lying at Sarnia, reloading the lightered cargo. The lighter Newman was sent to its assistance, but arrived after the Caledonia had been floated.

DYNAMITE IN TREE STUMP DEADLY TO A WORKMAN.

St. Paul, May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—While engaged in grubbing out tree stumps near Dellwood with James Cronin yesterday afternoon Patrick Hanlon struck a dynamite cartridge and was blown twenty feet away, receiving injuries from which he afterward died. Dr. J. K. Finnell, deputy coroner ordered the body taken to the county morgue.

Cronin, the only witness of the accident, does not know how it occurred, but is of the opinion that some one placed a cartridge in the root, intending to blow it up and then forgot it. Neither he nor Hanlon were using explosives.

LODGE NOTES

WILL HONOR OLD NORWAY

May 17 is the Anniversary of Norwegian Independence.

Duluth Norwegians Will Hold Celebration at the Armory.

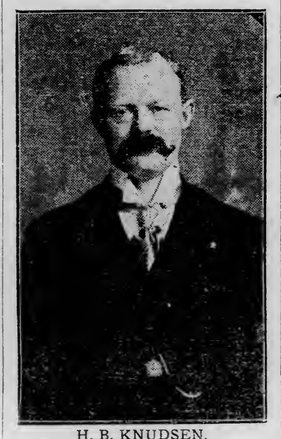
The weather man evidently has a kindly feeling for the Sons of Norway of the Northwest, for upon the day that they are celebrating, the ninety-third anniversary of the declaration of independence of Norway, he has turned out a genuine, balmy spring day. May 17 is to the Norwegians what the Fourth of July is to Americans, and is being appropriately celebrated.

Celebrations are being held today over the United States where Norwegians are residing, as well as in the other country across the Atlantic. The Duluth celebration will take place this evening at the Armory, and a good program of patriotic speeches, songs and readings will be rendered.

The affair is being given under the auspices of Fram lodge, No. 5, West Duluth, and the Norden lodge, No. 16, Sons of Norway. H. B. Knudsen has been chosen to act as chairman, and the address of the evening will be delivered by Congressman J. Adam Bede. Mayor M. B. Cullum will deliver the address of welcome.

The following is the program in detail to be given at the Armory this evening:

Overture, "America," Tobani, Flaaten's orchestra; address of welcome, Mayor M. B. Cullum; "Naar Fjordene-Blaaner," Paulson, Normanna Singing society; address, "Seventeenth of May," B. B. Haugan; "Hilsen fra Norge," Mostue, orchestra; "Hjemover fra Langreis," K. Windelberg, Normanna Singing society; address, "America," Hon. J. Adam Bede; "Tempel Dance," from Olaf Trygvason; Greig, orchestra; recitation, "Peer Gynt," E. O. Hesdal; Norwegian fold melodies, orchestra; "America," Normanna Singing society and audience.



H. B. KNUDSEN,
Who Will Be Chairman at Norwegian Celebration.

DELEGATES ARE HOME

Pythians Happy Over Honors Shown Duluth by Grand Lodge.

Error in Press Dispatches Concerning Barring of Bartenders.

A delegation of ten Duluth Knights of Pythias, who attended the annual meeting of the grand lodge at St. Paul, returned to Duluth yesterday and today, feeling very good over the fact that local men were honored with two of the highest offices in the state. Frank L. Young of Duluth was elected grand chancellor commander, and George L. Storms was elected president of the Pythian Veterans' association, which is composed of men who have been active in lodge work for twenty years or more.

"Press dispatches sent out to the effect that saloonkeepers and bartenders would be barred from the lodge were slightly in error, in giving the impression that this was a new thing," said James L. Cromwell this morning. Mr. Cromwell was formerly grand chancellor of the state and was at the head of the local delegation which succeeded in getting the office again this year for Duluth.

"As a matter of fact," he continued, "this has been the rule of the organization for the past fifteen years. The only question with us was to make the grand lodge laws comply with the supreme law, adopted at the meeting of the supreme lodge, held at New Orleans last fall, to the effect that druggists who sell intoxicants on the blind pig order, or as a drink just the way saloons do, shall be barred from becoming members, also hotelkeepers who make saloons in connection with their hotels the principal part of their business, with the hotel as sort of a side issue. Legitimate hotelkeepers, with a bar as only a side issue, are not barred from becoming members.

"The convention was a very successful one in all respects. We had a total attendance of about 175. At first there was some opposition to the candidacy of Mr. Young, on the ground that Duluth had the office only a short time ago. I held the place before Mr. Young's predecessor, who, however, has been in office only two and a half years. We pointed out that Duluth was the most live town in the state so far as lodge affairs were concerned, and that our activity and importance entitled us to the office. After arguing along this line for a time, we succeeded in doing away with the opposition altogether, and the members came gracefully into line."

The Duluth delegates were: J. A. Wharton, George E. Storms, James L. Cromwell, J. H. Davis, S. W. Hill, S. L. Pierce, Humphrey Jones, Otto Kruger, F. L. Young and C. W. Stilson.

HALLS ARE CHOSEN.

Committees Active in Arrangement for Coming Fraternal Congress.

The chairmen of the various committees that have in charge the arrangements for the conventions of the National Fraternal Congress and the Associated Fraternities of America, in this city, the third week in August, met at a luncheon at the Commercial club yesterday and considered several matters of importance in connection with the coming events.

The assembly halls for the two organizations were selected and announcement will be made concerning them as soon as the leases are signed.

The conventions will need two very large halls. Frank Crasweller, chairman of the committees on halls, expects to call the committee together in the immediate future, for the purpose of getting all the details arranged as soon as possible.

The arrangements are moving along at a favorable rate. It is the intention of the committees to leave nothing undone to make the conventions the best ever held in the city. They realize the importance to Duluth of the two big gatherings, and expect to make the convention week a pleasant and profitable one for the city as well as the visitors.

WIVES SEARCH FOR HUSBANDS

Two Duluth Women Ask the Aid of the Police.

Two Duluth women yesterday sought aid from the police in their search for missing husbands. The men disappeared this week giving various excuses and have not showed up since.

Mrs. Betty Smith of 533½ Garfield avenue south this morning asked that the police hunt up her husband, Matt Smith, who left home Wednesday to work on one of the boats, according to the story he told his wife, and failed to come back. Mr. Smith disappeared in a similar manner last year and was discovered on the Pacific coast. He returned last fall and while he has been working but little has been of sufficient assistance to make his wife anxious to secure his return. She has a family of five little children to support and is nearly destitute. Her husband is about 35 years of age.

The second woman is Mrs. Charles Campbell of 322 West First street, whose husband disappeared suddenly the early part of the week without giving any reason for his going, and has not appeared since.

PROSECUTE BY NEW LAW

Police Going After Junk Dealers Who Traffic With Minors.

Pawnbrokers Also Put Under Ban by Act of Legislature.

From now on the privileges of a hockshop are to be denied to the dead-broke of Duluth who are under 21 years of age. Also it is forbidden to the youth of the town to make their spending money by selling junk to the junk dealers who circulate about the city in search of old rags, bottles, iron or anything of any description, if the price is only low enough. The police have shut down on this form of traffic with an iron hand, and from now on any junk dealer, pawnbroker, second-hand dealer or other person who buys merchandise or junk from minors or accepts such merchandise as security will be vigorously prosecuted.

The last legislature passed a law providing that "it shall be unlawful for any junk dealer, pawnbroker or second-hand dealer to purchase, or to receive on deposit or pledge anything of value from any person, male or female, under the lawful age." The offense is made a gross misdemeanor, which provides for a maximum fine of $1,000 or a maximum sentence of one year in the county jail.

The first arrest was made this morning when Jacob Schneider, a Hebrew junk dealer, was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Chief C. H. Troyer, charging him with having bought a considerable quantity of copper wire from Louis Zoey, Walter Larson and James Underwood, three West end boys, for a monetary consideration of 50 cents. Schneider was arraigned in municipal court this morning and his examination was set for tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The offense, as a gross misdemeanor, will have to go to the grand jury for settlement.

This special arrest was caused by the attention of the police being attracted to the deal by a complaint that the wire in question had been stolen, but Chief Troyer says that the prosecution of junk dealers and pawnbrokers, as provided by the law, will be vigorous and as effective as the police can make it. In short, it will be decidedly unsafe for a pawnbroker or junk dealer to have any business relations with a minor in Duluth in future.

BIG CROWDS AT RECEPTIONS

Musical Programs Delight Many Guests at Bayha Store.

A most enjoyable spring reception was held yesterday afternoon at the Bayha store on West First street, the affair being the annual reception for which this firm has become noted. The entire six floors of the store were open to the guests, and during the afternoon and evening a large number of guests called.

During the hours most delightful programs of orchestra music by the Di Marco orchestra and by the Victor phonographs were given. The special feature was the playing of the new Melba $50,000 records, and the many enthusiasts of the city were out en masse to hear these latest and most wonderful records. Both programs were greatly enjoyed.

The store was simply decorated, and at this time, just after spring house cleaning, when every housewife in town is interested in some possible new piece of furniture, the exhibits in this line received special attention. The affair was even more successful than the previous receptions of this firm.

TALK OF SECRET TREATY RECEIVES NO CREDENCE.

St. Petersburg, May 17.—The Paris correspondent of the Russ, in a dispatch published today, announced that he had obtained information from an authentic source that the Franco-Japanese agreement, now in course of negotiation, will contain secret conditions applying to the eventuality of a European war, and binding Japan to place at the disposal of France 300,000 men, while the British will land a contingent of 100,000 to 150,000 men. Great Britain and France, it is added, not only guarantee the inviolability of Japanese territory, but agree to float several loans. The statements made are received with incredulity in diplomatic circles.

BLOCKED THE STREET

West End Store on Car Tracks Ties Up Traffic.

Passengers Claim That the Delay Was an Outrage.

Street car and team traffic was tied up on Superior street at Twenty-fourth avenue west for twenty-five minutes, about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon by George Williamson, a local house mover who moved a one story frame candy store building, owned by Mrs. Van, across the street at that time.

Williamson's action is claimed to be without proper authority, and vigorous protests were made by people who were held up by the obstruction on the tracks. It was inferred, from the situation, that Mr. Williamson thought he could get the building from its location on the northwest corner across the street between cars, but, as generally happens in such cases, his plans miscarried, the building got off the rollers, and a complete blockade ensued. Before the building was clear off the tracks there were a dozen cars lined up on the eastbound and the westbound tracks while some fifty or seventy-five passengers were fuming over the delay.

A score of complaints were lodged with the Street Railway company within a short time after the delay, the passengers complaining that the moving of buildings across the car tracks in the day time, so as to occasion a delay was an outrage and should be stopped. The company officials immediately lodged a complaint with the board of public works and the matter is being investigated by the city attorney's office.

It is understood that Williamson had a permit from the council to move a building, and another from the building inspector, but that he did not have a permit, as required by law, from the board of public works. It is claimed that the board of public works must agree to the removal of a building and designate the time when it shall be moved across a street and the probabilities are that Mr. Williamson is liable to prosecution.

The maximum penalty for the offense claimed is a fine of $50 or imprisonment in the county jail for a period of ninety days. A separate offense can be charged for each day any housemover violates the ordinance.

The twenty-five minute blockade yesterday afternoon came at one of the busiest times in the day for street car travel and the entire schedule on the East end, Lakeside and West Duluth lines was disarranged for some time afterward, great inconvenience resulting to the public.

EJECTORS WILL BE NECESSARY

Duluth Invention to be Used on Garfield Avenue Sewer.

The sewer ejector, invented by Assistant City Engineer Axel Wilson, which has been in use on lower Lake avenue for a year and is to be used on the big Park Point system, which is now pending, will also be used on the Garfield avenue sanitary sewer, if the plans of the engineering department are carried out. Estimates on this job weree ompleted by the city engineering department this morning, as requested by motion of the council some time ago, and this estimate will be submitted to the board of public works, which has been instructed to circulate a petition and to carry out the improvement this year if possible.

The proposed sanitary sewer is to extend six blocks, from Ole street to Ash street. The level nature of the ground will necessitate the installment of five ejectors, located in three pits along the corner of the sewer, mounted in lays of two in each pit to insure the proper working of one of them all the time. It is estimated that the sewer will cost in the neighborhood of $9,410.

The Duluth Street Railway company has about completed its work on lower Lake avenue. The "Y" which has been under construction at Morse street in order to permit the use of the big single-end cars on the line, has been finished, and the relaying of the tracks between the south end of the viaduct and Sutphin street is nearing completion. The rails along this portion of the street where P. McDonnel is engaged in laying a pavement of sandstone blocks, are to be set in concrete instead of on this as formerly.

The company will also install a "Y" instead of the present switch where the line on Lake avenue connects with the Superior street branches, so that cars going or coming from either direction can turn down the Lake avenue tracks.

RAPS POLICE OF KANSAS CITY

Governor Folk Determined to Have Thorough Cleaning Up.

Kansas City, May 17.—Governor Folk, who arrived here this morning before going into the meeting of the police board, outlined his plan of action in no uncertain language, saying: "The police department must be cleaned of every element of graft. Any officer on the force who owes allegiance to the Metropolitan Street Railway company or any other corporation before his duty to the public should be discharged. The Metropolitan Street railway and all other interests should be treated fairly, their property should be protected just as property of anyone else, no more and no less, but the idea of any police officer paid to serve the public being really in the service of a private corporation is abhorrent to every sense of rigat. All forms of gambling must be stamped out. Officers frequenting saloons while in uniform should have their uniforms taken away and, as private citizens, allowed to do as they please. The investigation will continue until any crookedness that may exist is uncovered and all evils cleaned out no matter how long it may take."

'Tis Now House Cleaning Season!

We take all that worry away and do the cleaning scientifically from attic to cellar. Estimates given on one piece or entire house. Our work is the best. Will go any place in city for work. Wall paper automatically cleaned. Carpets cleaned on the floor. All dust removed and colors brightened. Fine Oriental rugs our specialty.

TO DISCUSS PARK BONDS

Chairmen of Council Committees Call Meeting Monday Afternoon.

Public Spirited Citizens Invited to Take Part in Discussion.

Chairmen McEwen and Foubister of the finance committee and the harbors, parks and roads committee of the city council, have called a meeting of the two committees, the park board, the mayor and any other public spirited citizens who may be interested in the subject, to be held in the council chamber Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock to discuss the mayor's project of a $50,000 bond issue for the purpose of enlarging Duluth's park system.

The promoters of the project feel assured that they will be able to make a good showing at this meeting, and the proposition has met with such favor wherever talked of, that they feel that the committees are very likely to submit a favorable report on the matter to the council at the meeting Monday night.

With the matter of the bond issue the question of the chances for an advantageous sale of the bonds if issued, comes up. While an aggregate of $4,389,250 of municipal bonds were put on the market last month without buyers being found and the total sales amounted to but $19,351,430, the general sentiment seems to be that the market is steadily improving and while money seems to be in about the same condition in New York as during the winter, it is more plentiful throughout the West. The market during the last four weeks is said to have shown a steady trend upward.

This would appear very favorable for the disposal of the park bonds should such an issue be decided upon.

Hodenpyl Walbridge & Co. wired this week for $100,000 of the $345,000 issue of water and light bonds which they purchased and they were forwarded to them May 15 by City Treasurer Voss. The next installment must be taken, according to the terms of the contract, by July 15, and the last $100,000 will be taken on Aug. 15. The sum of $45,000 was taken when the bonds were purchased.

HAS RIGHTS OF RAILROADS

Supreme Court Renders Important Rapid Transit Decision.

Interurban Lines May Come Under Control of Commission.

St. Paul, May 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Under a decision filed by the supreme court today, the interurban lines of the Twin City Rapid Transit company are defined as common carriers, with the right of eminent domain, and further are not subject to the franchise powers of incorporated villages and cities.

By the ruling of the court, the Minneapolis & St. Paul Suburban Railway company is authorized to condemn a right-of-way through the villages of Excelsior and Tonka, and is not to be hampered by the lack of a franchise from these two towns, which it had been refused. In this respect it enjoys practically the same rigths as the steam roads, which the lower court interpreting the revised code, claimed it did not have.

The case came from the Hennepin district court, where the lower court denied its right of eminent domain in the village named and the case was carried to the supreme court by the railway company. Its decision as handed down today is a complete reversal of the findings of the Hennepin district court.

The supreme court's opinion, as given today, was conveyed to the railroad and warehouse commission. Judge Mills, after a casual reading, gave it as his opinion, that it brought interurban railways under the commission's jurisdiction. "It clearly leaves these roads without jurisdiction, as far as incorporated villages and cities are concerned, and there must be some control," said he. "It looks very much to me as if it was now up to us to look after these lines. We have an opinion from the state legal department to the contrary, but this decision completely reverses it."

ON THE CAR.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: A short woman, inclined to stoutness, boarded a Euclid avenue car. The car was already filled. The woman moved up the aisle as far as she could go. Just as she reached there the motorman sprinted around the corner of East Ninth. The stout woman at once began looking for her balance. She hastily retreated a step or two and then steadied herself by placing a chubby hand squarely across the face of a sitting youth. The woman was mad. She looked at the youth with an expression that seemed to say, "You're always getting that face in the way!" Then she resumed her earlier stamping ground and jitting her umbrella tried to hook the handle into one of the car straps. The man in front of her already had hold of the strap and she only succeeded in hooking his cuff. The man was busy reading and didn't notice the umbrella handle. A good many of the passengers noticed it, however, and almost breathlessly awaited the denouement. It came when the motorman suddenly started up the car at East Fourteenth. The stout woman staggered back, clinging to the umbrella. The man clung to the strap. The umbrella handle slipped from the cuff and caught on the coat sleeve, turning it inside out as far as the elbow. Then the handle let go and the stout woman at once sat down on a thin man, who got up and gave her his seat.

DID JOHNNY WIN?

Boston Herald: A little boy whose interest in religion had waned somewhat was met on the street one day by his pastor.

"Johnny, why haven't I seen you at church lately?" asked the minister.

"I—I don't like to go now. You swear too much in the pulpit."

"Why, Johnny," gasped the surprised churchman, "you are mistaken. I never swear."

"Oh, yes, you do," persisted the lad.

"Well, my young friend, suppose we put it to the test. Now, you come to church next Sunday, and if you hear me swear, I'll give you an apple pie; and if you don't hear me, you are to give me one and come to church regularly afterwards."

To this Johnny agreed.

When the next Lord's day came Johnny was on hand, way down in front. The sermon was about half through, and the good clergyman had committed no offense until, unsuspectingly, he uttered the words, "And it is by God we live, and by God we die," whereupon, Johnny, jumping to his feet, cried out, "There's where you lose your apple pie!"

ANOTHER BIG DAY IN THE WHEAT MARKET

Prices Go Up on Report of the Modern Miller.

Close is Higher—Flax Has a Decline in Duluth.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 17.—Wheat had another big advance in the American markets today. The opening prices were off and it was not until the middle of the session that the bulge came. This came on the report of the Modern Miller, which was very bullish. The market went off a little after the advance, however, but closed at higher prices. Chicago and New York showed the biggest advance. Liverpool closed 1¾d to 1¾d higher, Antwerp 1¼c to 3⅜c higher, Budapest 1½c higher and Berlin 2⅜c higher.

The Modern Miller says:

"The winter wheat crop in most states is infested with field pests. East of the Mississippi river little damage is indicated by insects and crop prospects are satisfactory, with improved conditions generally reported west of the river. The area of damaged wheat by the green bug is enlarging, extending as far North as Nebraska. In Central and Southern Kansas and Missouri the loss is serious and in the southern counties of Kansas the loss is as heavy as in Texas and Oklahoma. Damage by frost is also noted. Warm weather is urgently needed."

The May option closed 1⅞c higher in Duluth, 2⅝c in Chicago, 1¾c in Minneapolis, 2⅝c in New York and ¾c in Winnipeg. The July option closed 1⅝c higher in Duluth, 1⅞c in Chicago, 2c in Minneapolis, 2⅜c in New York, 1⅝c in St. Louis, 1c in Kansas City and ¾c in Winnipeg. The September option closed 1¾c higher in Duluth and Chicago, 2¼c in Minneapolis, 2⅜c in New York, 1⅝c in St. Louis and 1¼c in Kansas City.

Daily corn closed ¾-⅞c higher in Chicago and was 7d to 1d higher in Liverpool. July oats closed 2⅛c higher in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 77 against 16 last year, and at Minneapolis 316 against 94 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 393 against 110 last year. Chicago received 38 against 5 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 695,000 bus., last year 585,000 bus. Shipments, 321,000 bus, last year, 130,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 248,000 bus.

Argentine shipments of wheat were 5,696,000 bus. against 3,088,000 bus last year and 3,312,000 bus a year ago.

Primary receipts of wheat were 566,000 bus., last year 357,000 bus. Shipments 696,000 bus, last year 180,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 186,000 bus.

Wheat was very active in the Duluth market. The tone was easier during the earlier part of the session and until the bullish Miller report came out. May wheat opened late and ⅝c lower at $1.00⅜, advanced to $1.03¾ and closed at $1.03, a gain of 1⅞c over yesterday. July wheat opened 1½c lower at $1.00⅛, advanced to $1.00⅝ by 9:44, declined to $1.00¼ by 10:04, reacted to $1.00⅝ by 10:10, went off to $1.00⅜ by 10:11, reacted to $1.00⅝ by 10:32, went off to $1.00¼ by 10:46, rallied to $1.00⅝ by 10:52, went off to $1.00⅜ by 10:56, rallied to $1.00⅝ by 11:37, went off to $1.01⅛ by 11:45 and by 12:26 had soared to $1.04, went off to $1.03⅞ by 12:29, reacted to $1.04⅜ by 12:50 and closed at $1.03½, a gain of 1⅝c over yesterday.

September wheat opened 1½c lower at $1.00¾, advanced to $1.02, went off to $1.01⅞, rallied to $1.02⅝, went off to $1.01⅝, rallied to $1.04, declined to $1.03⅜, rallied to $1.04⅝ and closed at $1.03½, a gain of 1⅜c over yesterday.

Durum wheat closed ⅜c higher for No. 1, and cash spring wheat was selling at the July price for No. 1 northern.

It is estimated that the stock of wheat in store at Duluth will increase 200,000 bus this week.

Flax was quiet in the Duluth market and prices went off. Argentine shipments of flax were 720,000 bus., against 744,000 bus., last week and 368,000 bus., a year ago. May flax opened unchanged at $1.25¼, declined to $1.24½, rallied to $1.24⅝ and closed at $1.24½, a loss of 1c from yesterday. July flax opened ¼c lower at $1.26⅛, declined to $1.25⅝, rallied to $1.26 and closed at $1.25⅝, a loss of 1c from yesterday. October flax opened ¼c lower at $1.25⅜, advanced to $1.26, declined to $1.25⅝ and closed at that price, a loss of ½c from yesterday.

It is estimated that the stock of flax in store at Duluth will decrease 100,000 bus. this week.

Oats closed ⅜c higher, rye 2c higher and barley unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

Wheat—No. 1 hard, on track, $1.04½. To arrive, No. 1 northern, $1.03½; No. 2 northern, $1.02, on track, No. 1 northern, $1.03½; No. 2 northern, $1.02. May, $1.03; July, $1.00¾. September, $1.01⅝. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Goes Above Dollar and Then Drops Under Selling Flood.

Chicago, May 17.—Heavy profit taking caused a weak opening for wheat in the local market today, initial quotations ranging from ½c to 2c below final figures of the previous session. A sharp upturn, however, quickly followed which carried prices on the September and December deliveries up over the dollar mark. September advancing to $1.01 and December to $1.01½c. Again the market weakened under the flood of selling orders and prices dropped back about 2c. Whether conditions in the Canadian Northwest were again favorable to seeding of spring wheat, temperatures today ranging between 30 and 40 degs. This gave considerable encouragement to the bears. The bulls, on the other hand, were strengthened in their belief that higher prices by an advance of over 1d at Liverpool. July opened ½c to 2c lower at 96⅞c to 98c sold up to 99⅝c and then reacted to 98c. September opened 1½c to 2c lower at 97⅜c to 99c rallied to $1.01 and then broke again to 99½c. December opened 1c to 2c lower at 92c to $1, sold at 93¾c, then up to $1.01⅜ and back again to 99¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 438 cars against 505 cars last week and 115 a year ago.

The market advanced sensationally later, July bounding to $1.02⅝ and closing 1⅝c over yesterday at $1.00¾c. September to $1.03¾ and closing $1.04 up at $1.01¾, and December to $1.03⅜ (a new higher record, and closing with a net gain of 1⅜c at $1.02¾.

The corn market opened weak in sympathy with the break in wheat, but quickly rallied and became strong. Much of the strength was due to the small local receipts, arrivals today being only 65 cars 3 of which were of contract grade. July opened ½c to ⅝c lower at 52⅝c to 52⅝c and advanced to 53¼c.

The corn market continued strong and July after touching 54⅛c closed 5⅜@⅝c up at 53¾@⅞c.

There was an active general demand for oats and the market showed considerable strength. Commission houses led in the buying movement. July opened unchanged to ⅛c higher at 40⅛c to 40⅜c and sold up to 45c. Local receipts were 115 cars.

Trading in provisions was quiet and the market was rather quiet. Price hogs were again the dominating influence. July pork opened 5c lower at $18.55 and sold off to $16.45. Lard was down 2½c at $9.15. Ribs were unchanged to 2½c lower at $8.82½ to $8.85.

Broomhall, Liverpool, May 17.—On wheat: "Was strong at the opening, with values 1½d to 1⅝d higher, and further advance during the early trading, prices gaining an additional ⅛d to ¼d. Support was the result of heavy covering by shorts, due to a belief of manipulation at Chicago. Later the market showed some reaction, prices losing ¼d to ⅝d of the advance on reports of cooler weather in Roumania, more favorable Russian crop advises, and the unexpectedly heavy heavy weekly shipments from Argentina. The market was extremely nervous, with the undertone steady at midday."

Logan & Bryan, Chicago, to Paine, Webber & Co.: Another great day was added to the operations in wheat. Because the Liverpool cable did not follow our advance after yesterday, as the trade expected and because the Minneapolis curb was off 1½c before our opening, there was some good drive at prices on first trades. The early selling movement of 2 cents from the close yesterday was soon recovered. The outside demand is driving this wheat market. A range of from 5 to 7 cents is becoming a very common thing in this wheat market. All months made new high records today. At the dollar market for September there was heavy realizing. The volume of fresh buying, however, was sufficient to absorb everything and drive prices higher.

The Modern Miller, which has made light of the crop damage in the Southwest heretofore, came out today saying that in Central Kansas and Missouri damage is serious, that southern counties of Kansas are as badly damaged as Texas and Oklahoma, and that there is injury to jointed wheat from freezing also. The The secretary of the Missouri agricultural bureau confirms the worst reports of bugs in that state. California authorities wire that six or seven million bushels of wheat will be imported there for milking. All foreign markets strong and higher. We believe there is enough realizing on every swell to make the market safe for buyers on breaks.

Minneapolis Flour.

Minneapolis, May 17.—The flour market is strong. Practically no demand from any source. The action of the wheat market shutting out all buyers, there is a little han dto mouth buying by those who are running very light on stocks. AN UNPARDONABLE SIN.

New York Herald: An old negro preacher in Southern Georgia had been given a fine, fat possum by some of his admirers, and was keeping it in a barrel, feeding it heavily to still further increase its weight. He had decided to have it killed the next day, when, to his rage, it was stolen in the night.

Shortly afterward a revival meeting was being held, and among those who went up to the mourners' bench was a certain very black Jim, and his grief seemed inconsolable.

"Dat's all right, mah brudder!" the o'd man shouted. "Don' matter whut yo' done, the good Lawd gwine fergib you!"

"But Ah's been powerful mean," Jim declared, weeping.

"Is yo' stole chickens?" the old man demanded.

"Is yo' stole chickens?" the old man demanded.

"O, wuss dan dat!"

"Good Lawd; He'p dis po' nigger!" the old preacher entreated. "Is yo' used a razor?"

"Wuss dan dat!"

"Is yo'—yo' ain't done killed nobody?"

"Wuss dan dat!"

"Den hyah- whar we tangle!" the old man shouted, throwing aside his coat. "De good Lawd kin forgive yo' ef He wants ter, but Ah's gwine skin yo' alive! Yo's de varmint dat stole mah 'possum!"

TIP FOR LIBRARY.

Chicago Post: Are the little Lagrangers "goops?" That is the question which has suddenly arisen in the western suburb on account of a sign which the librarian, Miss Louise Dewitt, has been seen making, and which she says is to be hung in a prominent place in the building.

It is not a very large sign, but the legend stands out in big black letters, "Are you a goop?" The little Lagrangers have a burning desire to know just what a "goop" is, but this gingle above the question gives a partial explanation:

The goops, they wet their fingers
To turn the leaves of books,
And then they crease the corners down,
And think that no one looks.
They print the marks of dirty hands,
Of "lollpop" and gum,
On picture book and fairy book
As often as they come.
ARE YOU A GOOP?

"The sign is not entirely original, for 'goops' have been held up as examples of all that shouldn't be for a number of years," said Miss Dewitt. "I am glad to say there are not many 'goops' in Lagrange, but there are just a few, and the sign may serve as a warning."

DECLINES IN STOCKS

Light Selling Orders Made No Impression on Market.

New York, May 17.—The opening prices of stocks moved sluggishly from last night's level. Small gains and losses were equally divided, and there were only scanty transactions recorded. Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific and American Smelting rose ¾, United Railway Investment fell 1 and Chesapeake & Ohio, Interborough Metropolitan, Western Union and National Lead ¾.

Light selling orders made hardly an impression on prices and the bulls were encouraged to bid up their favorites. Higher prices brought a return of the recent stagnation, but there were no indications of weakness.

Stocks ran off after prices had mounted to a higher level. The movement was very sluggish and soon was checked. Chicago & Alton fell 3, Wheeling & Lake Erie first preferred and Northwestern, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Colorado Fuel and American Smelting preferred 1 each. Iowa Central rose 1. Bonds were heavy.

Dealings became smaller and fluctuations more restricted in the midday period. Comparative prices showed little variation from yesterday's closing with the undertone yielding. St. Paul preferred gave way 2 points and Northwestern 1½.

A jump in Canadian Pacific to $1.75 had scarcely time to exert a strengthening effect on the market before a drop in Atchison began to make itself felt. Neither stock had enough influence to cause any notable price changes in the general list. Atchison declined 1⅜c and American Locomotive, General Electric, Pressed Steel Car and Sloss Sheffield 1. Iowa Central preferred was bought more freely than for a long time and roe 1¾.

The market closed steady and very dull. Stocks weakened more decidedly with the continued rise in wheat. General Electric fell 1¼ and Reading, Baltimore & Ohio and Chesapeake & Ohio 1 each, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie 3, Twin City Rapid Transit, 1⅝. There were fractional recoveries after these declines were made.

The Cotton Market.

New York May 17.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 2 points to a decline of 2 points in keeping with the English market which was relatively firm on the near positions. The weather map made a favorable showing and the forecast was for clear and warmer weather today, but there was a good demand on private crop damage reports received from the South and, while somewhat irregular, prices ruled steady. Spot interests and houses with southern and western connections were buying, while the chief sellers appeared to be yesterday's longs taking profits. Prices worked up to a net advance of 3 to 7 points during the early session, but later reacted under realizing and during the middle of the morning were about 1 to 3 points higher.

NEWS FROM WEST DULUTH

IMPORTANT MATTERS

Are Due to Come Up at Commercial Club Meeting.

Street Extensions, Police Force and the Cow Nuisance.

At the meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club, this evening, the committee appointed last Friday night to look over the ground with a view to making recommendations for the extension of Ramsey street, from Central avenue to Grand avenue, or Fifty-eighth avenue west, will report on the most feasible plan for securing the desired improvement, and it is expected a discussion will ensue, which will probably take up most of the time of the meeting.

The changing of the names of the streets through which the cars now run to enter Duluth will probably come up tonight. The matter was up at the meeting last week, but was not given much attention, on account of the press of other business. Those in favor of changing the names of the streets to Superior street are anxious to put the matter through, and they will endeavor to enlist the Coramercial club with them. The property owners on the streets in question will be consulted, and should they show marked opposition, the matter will probably be dropped, as there is no desire to make the change unless the residents on the streets affected agree.

More effective measures for dealing with the cow nuisance, the increasing of the police force, and several other matters of public interest are expected to come up, and from present indications the meeting will be a busy one.

COMPLETE SUCCESS.

Home Talent Minstrel Show Pleases a Large Audience.

Good singing, catchy music, laughproducing jokes and graceful dancing marked the performance at Great Eastern hall, last evening, when the Imperial Minstrels, a local talent organization, delighted as large a crowd as has ever attended a similar entertainment in West Duluth. The effects of careful drilling were noticeable in the performance, for every part of the program went through without a hitch. Last evening's performance was for the benefit of St. James' church, and it was a complete financial success, for more than 100 people were turned away on account of lack of room to accommodate them in the hall.

The first part consisted of a song program, interspersed with fun by the end men, Ed Holland, Nell Buckley, Thomas Doyle, Jr., Lou Silger, Lee Roe and Alex Bethune. The end songs by the first four named were well rendered and received with enthusiasm. Lou Carey made a pleasing impression with her character song, and Edith Cashin sang "Arrah Wanna" with a dash and spirit which made it most effective. Ella M. Baker also pleased with her ballad. The children, C. V. Lauermann, Chestley and Leona Baker, rendered their selections well, and John Konecny and Ollie Dignus, tenors, gave two pretty ballads. One of the most effective numbers on the program was the Song of the Sea, "The Skipper," by W. W. D'Aoust. Mr. D'Aoust has an excellent bass voice, and his rendition of the difficult selection added merit to the entire performance. In the olio, John A. Murphy, Miss Effie Brotherton, Leona and Chestley Baker, the Toyles, Sr. and Jr., Nell Buckley and Miss Emma Messier and Ray W. Abbott took part.

Ray W. Abbott managed the performance, and Miss Alma Brotherton was musical director. The complete success which attended the performance reflects credit on both, and those who took part are being warmly commended by their friends. This evening the performance will be repeated for the benefit of the Irving School Alumni association, and it is expected another large crowd will witness it.

BIDS TOO HIGH.

Ramsey Street Dock Project May be Abandoned.

The old and much discussed Ramsey street dock, the bugbear of the council for the last two years, ex-Alderman Barnes' favorite project, which was thought to have been disposed of, may fall through. The bids for the work were opened at the meeting of the board of public works this morning, and the lowest was by Adam McAdams who figured that he could do the job for $3,449, including docks and approaches.

The amount available in the permanent improvement fund is only $3,200, leaving a margin of $249 which may cause the abandoning of the project.

Whether tax certificates can be issued to make up this amount or not is a matter of discussion, and the construction of the dock will depend upon this. Some time ago the engineers established the fact that a big amount of dredging would have to done to make the proposed dock approachable by boats of any size and this hitch in the matter may be used to secure its abandonment.

DIED VERY SUDDENLY.

Dr. Thomas, Government Meat Inspector, Passes Away.

Dr. Reginald Thomas, meat inspector in Duluth for the United States government, died this morning at the Duluth hospital, where he was taken last evening. Death was due to paralysis, he having been stricken while at the Elliott & Co. plant at Thirty-seventh avenue west about 5 o'clock last evening. After being taken to the hospital he sank rapidly, and all efforts to save his life were unavailing.

Dr. Thomas came to Duluth last October from Sioux City Iowa. He was an accomplished veterinary surgeon and had practiced in Sioux City for some years before coming to Duluth. He was 41 years of age and is survived by a wife and three daughters, living at 519 North Lake avenue. His parents live in Iowa. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made, but the remains will probably be shipped to the former home of the deceased for interment.

Cleaning the Streets.

Taking advantage of the fine weather, the board of public works put a force of men at work in West Duluth this morning, cleaning the streets. Central avenue is first being given attention and the cleaning up of the other streets will be taken up in turn. The removal of the accumulation of winter refuse will improve the appearance of the town in a marked degree and West Duluth residents are taking up the good work by cleaning their back yards.

SCHMITZ GIVES PLEDGE IN WRITING TO HEED ALL DEMANDS OF COMMITTEE

Seven Leading Business Men Virtually Rule San Francisco.

Mayor Still Nominal Head But Bound by Full Compact.

Ruef Tells Story of Traction Boodle by Big Capitalists.

San Francisco, May 18.—Notwithstanding the denial of Mayor Schmitz that he has given the government of the city over to the committee of seven, it is now generally conceded that the administration of municipal affairs is to some extent at least in its hands. In a written agreement, the mayor has bound himself, it is said, to carry out any request that this committee, made up of representatives of the five leading commercial organizations, may make of him.

The committee has begun an investigation into the conduct of the police department and will gradually extend the scope of its actions to the works board, street department and other branches of the municipal government. Its purpose is to thoroughly inquire into the conditions that exist in various branches of the city government and make such changes in personnel and methods as shall be judged necessary.

"We hold Mayor Schmitz's written promise to carry out the wishes and instructions of the committee in administering the affairs of the city," said F. W. Van Sicklen, a member of the committee. "The committee's agreement with Mayor Schmitz is short, barely embracing ten lines of writing, but it contains his sweeping promise to act absolutely and completely as the committe may direct. Mayor Schmitz has not resigned. All reports to the contrary are erroneous. The only writing between him and the committee is this ten-line agreement. If we demand the removal of the chief of police, of any commissioner, or any official connected with the city government, he must remove those whom we designate or go back on his written promise. The only hold we have on him is his promise. If he disregards that we can do nothing, but I believe he will do anything the committee asks. I believe that he is not only willing, but anxious to do what we want."

In a statement to the Evening Post, Mayor Schmitz said: "The statement that I have handed the reins of government to any person or committee is an Presbyterian Leader Declines Temperance Committee Chairmanship.

Heated Opposition to the Report Certain to Come Up Later.

Columbus, May 18.—The first indication in the Presbyterian general assembly of the smouldering but threatening antipathy toward the temperance report came today when Dr. David Wills, Jr., of Oswego, N. Y., appointed yesterday by Dr. William H. Roberts, moderator, as chairman of the temperance committee, handed in his resignation with an absolute refusal to serve. He gave as his reason that he did not care to be at the head of a committee that would be the bone of contention and target for the shafts of those opposed to the report.

Later, however, Dr. Wills said he resigned because of reasons that he did not care to discuss. "They were not because of the merits of the case," he declared. He admitted, however, that he did not come here to quarrel.

Dr. Roberts will appoint another chairman, but it is rumored that he will have a hard time finding some one who will remain a fixture in this place because of the opposition and the movement said to be on foot to shelve the report.

The committee on temperance is as follows: Reverends W. W. Cole, John M. Davies, R. Lorenzo Clark, E. B. Clarkson, Charles K. Smoyer, H. R. Stark, Duncan C. Milner, J. C. Arnett.

ENDEAVOR SPEAKERS

Arrangements Completed for Great Convention at Seattle.

Noted Christian Workers From All Parts of World on List.

Boston, May 18.—Announcement was made at Christian Endeavor headquarters in this city today of the program for the twenty-third international Christian Endeavor convention to be held at Seattle, Wash., July 10-15. Rev. Francis E. Clark, president and founder of the organization, expects to preside.

Routine business will be first disposed of at a meeting at the Hotel Lincoln Wednesday afternoon, July 10, including the election of officers, after which there will be the annual meeting of the board of trustees. The greetings of the state will be extended by Governor Albert E. Mead of Washington, while the city's hospitality will be offered by Mayor William H. Moore of Seattle. Rev. John Pollock, president of the European Christian Endeavor union and pastor of St. Enoch's Presbyterian church, Belfast, Ireland, will respond for the delegates. These exercises will take place early in the evening in the Auditorium, after which will come General Secretary Shaw's inauguration and address and the annual address of President Clark.

Among the prominent speakers provided for are George Nicholls, M. P., London, Eng.; Rev. Dr. R. G. Bannen, president of the Pennsylvania Christian Endeavor union; Rev. W. H. Barraclough, New Westminster, B. C.; the Rev. Dr. E. R. Dille, Oakland, Cal.; William Phillips Ball, president of the American Bible league, New York; Rev. Howard B. Grose, New York; Von Ogden Vogt, secretary of the World's Christian Endeavor union; Rev. George M. Ward, president of Wells college, Aurora, N. Y., Rev. Dr. W. I. Chamberlain, former president

CLUBMAN IN BAD AFFRAY

Rich New York-Washington Man Shoots Down a Driver.

Bullet Fired During Quarrel in Arlington Hotel Corridor.

Washington, May 18.—Caston C. Philip of New York and Washington, a prominent and wealthy clubman, early today shot dangerously Frank B. Mockabee, a night carriage driver, with whom he had been spending the night.

Philip and Mockabee reached the Arlington hotel at an early hour in Philip's automobile. The chauffeur says that the two men were quarreling on the way over a commission Mockabee alleged to be due him, presumably for his services as a guide.

Philip, who apparently had been drinking, entered the hotel, and some time later Mockabee also entered and started for Philip's room, on the fifth floor, and there an altercation occurred in the corridors. A hall boy summoned one of the clerks, who found Mockabee on the floor with Philip leaning over him, revolver in hand.

Mockabee was heard to say, "Oh, you have shot me." The clerk opened Mockabee's coat and found that a bullet had penetrated his left breast, below the heart. He then took from Philip the revolver which the latter was handling carelessly. Philip was arrested and taken to police headquarters.

Philip has been living in Washington, except for seasons in New York, for many years, and has prominent connections here. His brother is Capt. J. Van Ness Philip, formerly of the Fourth Immune regiment, during the Spanish war, and for a time assistant to the chief of the bureau of insular affairs.

RIOTS IN PERSIAN TOWNS LED BY REFORM PRIESTS.

KAISER CONFERS ORDER ON HARVARD PROFESSOR.

Berlin, May 18.—Emperor William has conferred the crown order of the second class on Dr. Francis Greenwood Peabody, professor of Christian morals at Harvard university, who was selected by the University of Berlin as the first professor from Harvard in the international exchange of professors, which began in 1905.

YALE EXPECTS HARVARD TO WIN

Dual Track Meeting and Victory Conceded to Crimson Athletes.

New York, May 18.—Better track and atmospheric conditions for the dual games between Yale and Harvard universities, this afternoon, could not be wished for than prevailed this morning, and no change seemed likely. This is the fifteenth meet between the Blue and the Crimson, and this year the former is willing to concede that, on paper, there is every reason to believe that Harvard will win by about 50 points to 45. Yale's team as a whole has been backward in development, and half of its best men have been unfortunate. Could Yale win this year it would clinch possession of the cup, for which it has four wins against Harvard's three, a total of five being needed for possession. The first cup was offered in 1892, when the dual games were being played, and Harvard won it in 1900, with five wins. The games today will give the Yale men a good idea of their material for the intercollegiate games, and it is felt with warmer weather some of the men, especially the sprinters, will develop faster and the season will be rounded out well at Philadelphia. There are thirteen events.

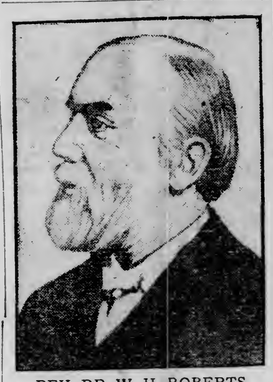
THE BOOM OF GOVERNOR JOHNSON FOR PRESIDENT CONTINUES TO SPREAD



REV. DR. W. H. ROBERTS
Of Philadelphia, the New Moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly.

His Name on Tongue of All Politicians at Washington.

Senator Pettus Says the Democrats Need a Vote Getter

And That Johnson Has Established Himself as Such.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The boom for Governor Johnson for the presidential nomination on the Democratic ticket, which was in reality started by Bird S. Coler of New York, at a recent banquet commemorative of the birthday of Thomas Jefferson, held at Minneapolis, has spread mightily, and the name of Johnson is now a very potent possibility, and is upon almost every one's tongue in Washington who is watching the trend of political events.

To enter a little into the history of the boom of Governor Johnson, it first was recognized from Washington and discovered by Congressman John Wesley Gaines of Nashville, Tenn. John Wesley Gaines is a good news man. He is a Bryan man, lock, stock and barrel, but he takes in the gossip in the hotel lobbies, political or otherwise, and retails the same to the first comer. Mr. Gaines said that he is a Bryan man first, last and all the time, but in the event that the next Democratic national convention did not nominate Mr. Bryan, he would not be inclinde to oppose the nomination of Governor Johnson of Minnesota to head the ticket. Representative Gaines confidentially believes that William Jennings Bryan will be the nominee, in which event it would not be good policy to even attempt to nominate Governor Johnson from a nearby state as second man on the ticket.

There are few Democrats of national consequence in Washington, but those who are here have heard of the boom which has been started to put Governor Johnson on the Democratic ticket which will be presented to the electors of the county in 1908. Among those who are now in Washington of recognized national prominence is Senator Morgan of

PRISON FOR GRAFTERS

English Town Board Members Sentenced for Accepting Bribes.

Judge Dwells Severely on Growth of Evil in Country.

London, May 18.—With a single exception all of the members of the Westham board of guardians and the workhouse and infirmary officials, whose trial began at the central criminal court on April 24 on the charge of receiving bribes, were found guilty yesterday and sentenced to two years.

In summing up, Justice Jelf characterized the practices disclosed in the evidence as being a curse to the country. He added that he was afraid it was a "growing curse" and that the people were losing their hold on all that was best in the civil life of the country.

The sums involved were comparatively small. A doctor for instance, paid $500 for a hospital appointment.

CHALLENGE BY DEFENSE IN HAYWOOD TRIAL CUTS STATE JURYMAN OFF LIST

Millionaire Widow of the Traction Magnate, Who Has Secured a Divorce From Wilson Mizner.

Governor Gooding Excoriated for the Orchard Interview.

Senator Borah Defends Chief Executive and State Papers.

Boise, May 18.—With the opening of court this morning the attorneys continued their drawn task of securing a jury to try William D. Haywood for complicity in the murder of Former Governor Steunenberg. There were twelve men as usual in the box when today's proceedings began and only five of the twenty peremptory challenges had been exercised—three by the prosecution and two by the defense.

Attorney Richardson took up the examination of Isaac Bedell, who was called yesterday to fill a gap made by

TOLSTOI'S SON FREED

Count Leo's Publication of Father's Latest Pamphlet Excused.

Political Moves in Alleged Plot Against Life of Czar.

St. Petersburg, May 18.—Count Leo Leonvich Tolstoi, son of the famous author, who was arrested in February last, charged with high treason in publishing his father's latest political phamplet, has been acquitted. The court decided that the count had no criminal intent in republishing the pamphlet, which was printed abroad, but ordered the Russian edition to be burned and the plates destroyed.

The details of the conspiracy against the life of Emperor Nicholas are being discussed earnestly in the lobbies of the lower house of parliament. The Constitutional Democrats have decided to utilize the plot to remove the unfavorable impression made on the emperor and the ministry by the failure of the lower house to condemn terrorism.

As soon as the expected official note on the subject of the conspiracy appears President Golovin will announce the abhorrence of the members of the house as loyal subjects of his majesty at this attempt at regicide which announcement will be received by the Constitutional Democrats, Poles, and other Center parties with applause. The Social Democrats plan to withdraw from the hall during the demonstration.

Among the persons arrested in connection with the plot is a singer who lately was enrolled in the imperial choir and two Maximalists who have been recognized by the police and participants in several recent robberies. It is believed that they furnished the money needed by the conspirators.

The failure of the government to issue a statement of all facts, coupled with the ambiguous attitude of certain high officials, has served to increase the confusion of the public and give rise to a persistent expression of the theory that the government has to deal with a reactionary plot against the emperor which contemplated the proclamation of a regency or dictatorship.

SHORTAGE BY COLLECTOR.

Graft Among Waterworks Officials Caused Dubuque Youth to Steal.

Dubuque, Iowa, May 18.—A fresh sensation in the waterworks scandal came to light yesterday, when it was announced that Parson Berg, son of Former Mayor Berg, had confessed to a shortage of $200. Young Berg had been a collector for the old trustees and is alleged to have given as a reason for taking the money that he saw others doing the same thing. Berg is about 20 years old and is well known, moving in a prominent younger society set.

News has been received that Frank Greutzmacher, the Dubuque sailor who was supposed to be dying and whose fiancee left here in a race with death to marry her lover before he died, is still in the hospital at Portland, Or., but that he is on the road to recovery and will soon be discharged.

GASOLINE EXPLOSION BURNS ST. PAUL COUPLE.

St. Paul, May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—As a result of an explosion of gasoline at the home of Gustave Olson, Williams and Olive streets, today, Mrs. Olson, aged 45, was so badly burned that she will not recover and her husband, aged 51, received burns which will require months of treatment to cure.

ASKS NORWEGIANS TO PURGE SENATE

Congressman Deplores Liberal Representation of Private Interests.

Chicago, May 18.—In a stirring speech at the banquet in honor of Hjalmer Christian Hague, Norway's minister to the United States, at the Tavern, 165 Washington street, Thursday night, Congressman John M. Nelson of Wisconsin attacked the personnel of the United States senate and called upon the Norwegian citizens of this country to fight for the election of cleaner men to that body.

"I was appalled," said Congressman Nelson in the course of his speech, "during my recent stay in Washington by the number of men in the United States senate who are there to represent private interests.

"I attended sessions of the senate and heard senators supposedly high in the public service making speeches in favor of measures that I knew to be derogatory to the public good. Amazed by the portent of these addresses as they were being delivered, I would turn to the man on my left or right and ask him what it meant.

"'Why, don't you know?' would be the inevitable reply; 'that senator represents the shipbuilding interests,' or 'that fellow is a henchman for the railroads.'"

The banquet to Minister Hague, which was attended by 200 Chicago Norwegian-Americans, was the most notable affair of its kind ever held by the Chicago society of the Norwegian National league.

In addition to Congressman Nelson, the other speakers were: Abraham Abrahamsen, president of the league; Andrew Anderson, Consul F. H. Gade, Birger Osland, Andrew Hummeland, and Minister Hague, who made a decidedly happy response to the speeches and cheers of welcome which greeted him.

Senator Says "Polite Answer" to Chairman Brown is Difficult.

Accuses Party Leader of "Rank, Dictatorial, Offensive Bossism."

Washington, May 18.—Senator Foraker of Ohio today issued a spirited rejoinder to the statement made public in Columbus, Ohio, yesterday, by Chairman Brown of the Republican state central committee, embodying the views of himself and Governor Harris and other state officials, declaring Secretary Taft Ohio's choice as the party candidate for the presidency.

The senator says it is "difficult to make a polite answer" to a part of Chairman Brown's statement, declaring that "for rank, dictatorial and offensive bossism, it far exceeds anything I can recall."

The senator gave defiant notice that he not only resented Chairman Brown's dictation, but that his choice for the presidency would be named by the next convention of Ohio Republicas and that he would abide by that choice.

DENY CHARGES IN MRS. EDDY SUIT

Original Ten Defendants Make Answer to "Next Friends."

Concord, N. H., May 18.—Attorney General Edwin Eastman, Samuel J. Elder and William A. Morse, counsel for the original ten defendants in the suit in equity brought by "next friends" to secure an accounting of the property of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, today made answer in the superior court to the supplemental bill filed by the plaintiffs. They deny that they induced Mrs. Eddy to transfer her property under a trust deed to Henry M. Baker, Fornald or that the three trustees are the agents of attorneys for the defendants. They severally deny that there is any combination whatever to surround and seclude Mrs. Eddy or to take charge, possession and control of her property, and they deny that there is any reason to believe that any money or property of Mrs. Eddy has been misappropriated.

ARE CHARGED WITH ADULTERY

Archie Belanger and Mrs. Susana Fink Are Arrested.

On a warrant, sworn out by Martin Fink, husband of the woman in the case, Archie Belanger and Mrs. Susanna Fink were arrested in Belanger's room, at 320 Lake avenue south, at 9:30 last evening, and locked up on a statutory charge. Both the men in the case are employed as blacksmiths at the Clyde Iron Works. Fink claims that Belanger has at different times during the last six months, had improper relations with his wife, though the warrant was not sworn out until last evening, just before the arrest was made.

The couple were arraigned in municipal court this morning. "The bail for this offense ought to be about fifteen million," said Judge Cutting, "but I will make it fifteen hundred." The examination of the parties was set for Monday morning. They were unable to secure any one to go bail for them today, and were committed to the county jail.

Walker's copper letter in Saturday's Boston Commercial says:

"Copper continues quiet at unchanged prices. Lake is offered at 25½ cents to 26 cents, and electrolytic at 25¼ cents per pound. Consumers are still waiting; but they are showing more interest in the market every day, and it is a fact generally recognized that a very large amount of copper must be bought or contracted for in the immediate future. Available supplies are so exceedingly small that a break or decline in prices is as near an impossibility as anything in trade can be. The consumption demand is easily large enough to absorb every pound of copper that will be ready for delivery during June, July and August. Producers will have no difficulty in selling at the current level of prices all the coppers they can send to market.

"Europe has been getting along, during the past three or four months, with surprisingly small amount of new copper. It is supposed that consumers there have been using up the copper reshipped from China and the remainder of the supplies which they bought last year at lower prices and that they are now in a position where they must buy more heavily or close down their factories and mills. The prospect is good therefore, that there will be liberal foreign buying throughout the remainder of the present year.

"The future of the copper market is dependent wholly upon the general business situation. There will be an increase in production this year, but for that matter, there has been an increase every year since copper sold at 9 cents. This year's increase will be no larger in comparison than the natural growth of consumption. The general business situation so far shows practically no indication of weakness. The price of pig iron is advancing and steel rails are being purchased for delivery as far ahead as next year. There is a good demand for structural materials, and the tone in approximately all lines of business is about all that could be desired. It may reasonably be expected that industrial development along electrical lines will be relatively more rapid than elsewhere, and, therefore, it is safe to depend upon continued strength in the copper market while general business conditios continue as favorable as they now appear."

Two hours later, the president started out for a long walk among the pines. Her plans for this afternoon include a horseback ride.

WEST DULUTH

IGNITED BY MATCHES

Child's Dress Caught Fire and Serious Burns Result.

Mother Extinguished the Flames and Girl Will Recover.

As a result of playing with matches, little Margaret Kuchenbecker, the 4-year-old daughter of E. Kuchenbecker of 107 Sixty-third avenue west, was severely burned Thursday afternoon, and was extremely fortunate to escape without fatal injuries. The child was playing near the house and had secured some matches without the knowledge of her mother. She lit one and it ignited her dress, enveloping her in flames almost immediately.

The child ran screaming toward the house and Mrs. Kuchenbecker heard her. She took in the situation at a glance and managed to extinguish the flames, but not until the little girl was severely burned about the upper part of the body. Medical aid was summoned and every effort made to relieve the agony of the little one. She will recover.

COMMERCIAL CLUB.

Sentiment of Body Favors More Parks for Duluth.

When the park board meets next Monday afternoon to consider the further beautifying of Duluth, it will be waited upon by a committee from the West Duluth Commercial club, which will urge upon the members of the board the necessity of increasing the park facilities of the city, especially the western part. A committee recently appointed by the club has located several small tracts of land, which would make excellent breathing spots if properly improved. If the park board decides to acquire more land for parks, they will probably be recommended for purchase.

The discussion over the park question was quite lengthy. The finances of the park board were gone into thoroughly and the difficulty, which would attend the raising of more funds and further improving of parks. Finally a resolution was passed expressing the sentiment of the club as favoring the increasing of the park territory of the city and the improving of the present parks, even though the bonding of the city for $50,000 or more for the improvement would be necessary. The former park committee of the club was increased by twelve members to wait on the mayor.

The stray animal nuisance was taken up and discussed, several of the members recounting unpleasant experiences with animals running at large, especially cows. A resolution was adopted calling the attention of the city council to the nuisance and suggesting that the charter be so amended that any person could take a cow or other animal to the pound, if it was found running at large, and claim a reward.

The committee on the extension of Ramsey stret was not ready to report, and the matter was laid over for future meeting. Resolutions of condolence were adopted on the death of Julius Reinke, who was a member of the club.

WAGON ON TRACK.

Drunk Sleeps Peacefully in Dangerous Situation.

Jack Norlin and Conrad Carlson, two employes of a contractor near Proctorknott, came to West Duluth yesterday and filled up on the stuff that makes the ordinary man forget all sorrows and cares. They continued their filling operations until late at night, when Norlin decided to make a start for home. He secured the team and prepared to go, but Carlson was averse to leaving while there was any more to drink in town, so Norlin drove off alone.

The gentle rumbling of the wagon over the stones lulled him to sleep by the team had reached the D. M. & N. tracks where the road to Proctorknott crosses them. Norlin had fallen back into the bottom of the wagon and the team, left to their own resources, stopped still on the track. Oblivious to his danger Norlin slept on, and by the sheerest of good luck, the engineer of an ore train, which approached noticed the team and stopped the train. The police were notified and they took the team to a barn and locked Norlin up. By coincidence, Carlson was also picked up in a badly intoxicated condition, and both were sent to municipal court today on common drunk charges.

WALSH IS APPOINTED

Will be in Charge of New State Labor Bureau.

Is Well Known Tugman and Prominent Labor Leader.

James Walsh, prominent in Duluth labor circles, will be in charge of the state labor bureau, which will soon be established in this city. A telephone message was received by The Herald from the governor's office at noon today, announcing that the appointment had been made.

Several candidates have been in the field for the appointment for the past two or three weeks and for a time it looked as though anyone of them was liable to get the job. Patrick Haley, who has been in charge of the city employment bureau for several years, was one of the prominent candidates, while Gordon O'Neil, a member of the Longshoremen's union, was also among the number which included half a dozen in all.

Mr. Walsh is a well known tugman, who has been working at the Head of the Lakes for many years. He is a member and official of the Licensed Tugmen's Protective association and at the meeting of Duluth Trades assembly a week ago, was unanimously endorsed by that body for the labor commissioner appointment.

The appointment of the labor commissioner, it is said, was left almost entirely with State Labor Commissioner Williams of Minneapolis. Mr. Williams was in Duluth last week and held several conferences with prominent labor leaders of the city. Owing to the fact that Mr. Walsh received the unanimous endorsement of the central labor body of the city, Mr. Williams considered him to be the choice of the workingmen here and gave him the appointment.

Politics has been kept out of the appointment entirely and it was made on the basis that as the position had been created by organized labor, the appointment should go to a member of organized labor. Although there was a warm scramble for the job, there was very little wire-pulling.

Mr. Walsh is considered by all who know him, whether they are union labor men or not, as a man who will serve the people and the state in the best possible manner.

A certain standard of strength, purity and wholesomeness has been set for Hunt's Perfect Baking Powder, and it is always up to standard.

TO ASSIST THE JUVENILE COURT

Judge Ensign Launches Movement for a Probation Society.

Prospects are bright for the formation of a Probation society in Duluth, similar to those in Philadelphia, Chicago and Denver. The Men's League of the First M. E. church are to be the prime movers in forming the organization of volunteer workers, and at their meeting last evening, after a very effective talk by Judge Ensign upon "The Juvenile Court, its Work Here and Elsewhere," they selected Rev. M. S. Rice, Rev. Harry W. Knowles and Rev. W. L. Smithies as a committee to call a meeting of the parents of Duluth, when Judge Ensign is to talk again on the subject, and at which the formation of the society will, if possible, be accomplished.

An account of the work of these probation societies occupied a goodly portion of Judge Ensign's address last evening. In Philadelphia, he said, 156 volunteers enlisted from the business men and women of the city are working as members of one of these societies to assist the juvenile court in its effort to make good citizens out of erring children. The good which such organizations are accomplishing throughout the country is almost inestimable, said the judge, and he earnestly recommended the organization of such a society here.

The history of the juvenile court, from its inception to its present day development; Judge Lindsey's great work in Denver, and the work which has been carried on by the courts throughout the country, were told by the judge in a most effective manner. His description of the work of the court here was very interesting. It is expected that the committee will arrange for the meeting within the next four weeks.

MORRISON'S

MODERN TAILORING HOUSE,

No. 6 Lake Avenue South.

Duluth, Minn., May 18, 1907.

Dear Sir: The subject matter of this letter—as well as those which will follow—is custom made clothes in general, and "Morrison" clothes in particular. I will tell you from time to time of the different kinds of cloth, linings, trimmings, etc., which go to make a fashionable suit for the modern up-to-date man. I shall probably tell you something of the struggle for supremacy in the tailoring business here as well as introduce some of the side lights which bear on the production of the better grade of made-to-order clothes in Duluth and elsewhere.

The principal theme, of course, will be the "Morrison Suit," and the object—a wider recognition of the merits of my production. Meantime, I wish to tell you who are not already acquainted with Morrison's modern tailoring house that I have here in Duluth one first-class cutter, three first-class coat makers, also good vest and pants makers. A large stock of fine woolens—new ones all the time—and for styles—the entire range of the best American and European designers. My guarantee as to fit is—YOU CAN'T HAVE IT UNTIL IT DOES FIT. Come in and leave your measure as soon as you can, or write or telephone for samples.

Yours truly,

a peremptory challenge. Bedell had already been passed by the state. Bedell was objectionable to the defense, which was then called upon to exercise its third peremptory challenge. Walter Shaw at No. 4 was excused.

In the course of his denunciation yesterday afternoon of the publication of the Orchard interview, Attorney Richardson for the defense said: "The governor of this state, who has done things which have been questioned throughout the United States, if not the civilized world, having the supreme charge of the penitentiary of this state and his appointee, Warden Whitney, who has been at all times his subservient and agreeable advisor and assistant in all that he has done, took the Associated Press representatives and that particular portion of the newspaper fraternity who are reporting this case agreeably and colorably upon the side of the prosecution, to the penitentiary yesterday to interview Harry Orchard.

"It is as patent as the fact that I stand here that it was done for the express purpose of influencing the jurymen, for the purpose of rehabilitating Mr. Orchard, for the purpose of giving him credibility in the eyes of this jury and the eyes of the world, and it was a dastardly outrage upon this defense."

Richardson drew attention to the statement of Governor Gooding, that no promises had been made to Orchard, and said: "If it has not been entirely patent to the whole civilized world that the governor of this state never intended that we should have a fair trial for these defendants here, it is patent at this time."

C. S. Darrow, who followed Richardson, said in part: "Of course there can be but one purpose in this joint reception of the governor and his friends for Orchard, and that was to influence this case at this time. It seems to me that this effort to give Orchard credence must have come directly from the disclosures made by the examination of various jurors as to what they thought of Orchard and his confession, and that in view of this, they have permitted the newspaper men to see him and give out a lot of stuff which, upon its face, was manufactured, a lot of maudlin idiocy—a man telling about books on religious subjects he has been reading, in the face of his whole attitude of mind for his whole life, and the governor coming in and stating something that must appear to every intelligent man as being absolutely untrue, that this man deliberately placed his neck in the halter without any hope of reward, and scattering that broadcast when we have got twelve men in the box and fifty examined."

Senator Borah said that he declined to submit to the proposition that the newspapers had interviewed Orchard for the purpose of influencing the jury. He said they could not control the newspaper situation. He would not ask the defense to publish their articles to suit the prosecution and he was not going to undertake to control the situation. He instanced the fair attitude of the Idaho Statesmen, the newspaper at Boise, in declining to publish the Chicago story dealing with the allegation that Charles H. Moyer had once been in the Joliet penitentiary, and contended that the local papers had been fair. He said that if he could have had his way he would have long ago put Orchard on exhibition, for he knew that the minute it was done this precise condition of affairs would arise.

He, too, contended that if the Orchard interview reflected upon either side it was upon the prosecution. He declared that he would not believe that Governor Gooding would do anything to disqualify them from getting a jury.

After argument, the court ruled that the state had the right to ten challenges, under the law passed after the assassination of ex-Governor Steunenberg.

The fifth peremptory challenge, representing a total of three by the defense and two by the state, was made late yesterday afternoon, and at adjournment an effort to fill the place made vacant was in progress. United, there are fifteen more challenges to be exhausted, and of the special venire of 100, only fourteen remain.

THE BOOM OF GRAPEFRUIT.

Boston Transcript: The popularity of grapefruit is a sign of the times that invites consideration. Three times a day in some households does it appear at table, so complete is its vogue, and no one is ever heard to say he is weary of it. Grapefruit holds its own, now that it has really come into its own, as not all fruits can. For besides the fine flavor of it, it has certain properties, it is said, that make it healthful, and that is a combination always desirable. So it is good to be told, having reached this stage in contemplating its place with us, that down in Florida the grapefruit orchards increase yearly in size and in number, and that nowadays for every orange tree set out grapefruit trees are planted. For this news assures us that future demands for the fruit will be as fully met as are those of the present.

ON THE IRON RANGES

DIAMOND DRILLING

On the Vermilion Range That Failed to Show Up Ore.

Shafts Sunk in Same Places and Large Ore Bodies Found.

Tower, Minn., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—In a recent article on the Vermilion iron range, reference was made to a certain geological report which claimed that there was a very large amount of money spent in diamond drilling on the range without result. It has already been shown that 90 per cent of the drill work done on the range was done in the Soudan and Lee hills. While reports have always been that this drill work was without results, steel developments of late have shown up vast bodies of ore in the very places where the most drilling was done. In some of these places ore has been found where drill holes were put down north, south, east and west with the same result—"not a drill found nothing." This fact has been proven, both at Soudan and Ely. At the latter place every mine that is now shipping ore was at some time in its history condemned by diamond drilling. The first victim was the Chandler, which was so condemned and about to be abandoned by the lessees, when Capt. Sellwood, the well known iron man of Duluth, advised the sinking of a shaft, which was done, with the result that they showed up the great Chandler mine. This mine is known as the greatest paying iron mine in the Lake Superior district, having paid to its stockholders over $1,000,000 per annum for the past eighteen years, besides paying to its fee owners about $2,000,000 per annum.

The next two properties to be condemned by the diamond drills were the Pioneer and Zenith mines, adjoining the Chandler. The main body of the ore in the Pioneer mine was capped with over 80 feet of jasper. After it was condemned with drills, a shaft was sunk, and a body of ore shown up which is considered by mining men to be the most valuable iron mine in the United States.

Up to the time of the Hill ore deal with the United States Steel company, the royalty paid on the Pioneer mine was the highest of any mine in Minnesota and probably in the Lake Superior district. The fee owners receive a stipulated amount per ton and a percentage of the selling price of the ore, which amount in all is close to $1 per ton. The fee owners of this property are Messrs. Whiteside, Pattison and Conan.

Proof of the fact that the main ore bodies, as a general thing, lie very deep on the Vermilion range, and cannot be properly determined with drills, is best shown by the result of shaft sinking and drifting at the Zenith mine. At about 360 feet this mine had only begun to ore a few feet wide and the full width and depth still undetermined.

The next victim of the diamond drill was old "26," now the Savoy mine. This property was drilled, condemned and the lease forfeited to the fee owner and advertised far and wide as being "no good," and the owners of the property were laughed at when they undertook to sink a shaft. Had it not been for the fact that the fee owners, Messrs. Brown and Miller, were financially able to sink a shaft and show up the ore, the property would have probably been sold for a few dollars per acre, as has been done in similar cases.

The question is often asked among the fee owners: "Are these diamond drill reports always correct? Are the true facts always correctly reported to the owners of the land?" These questions have been asked oftener since the Savoy mine was opened than ever before, for it is a well-known fact that one of the fee owners of the Savoy mine, took Capt. Ball, whose company put down the diamond drilling of this property, down in the mine and showed him where the diamond drill hole had penetrated the ore body. It is reported that since that time another of the drill holes was found in the ore body. Of course, it may be that these drill holes were put down by the Indians or some prehistoric race in early times.

The next property to be condemned was the Sibley, which lies between the Zenith and the Savoy. It was diamond drilled with the same result, and a mine was shown up by drifting from the Savoy into the ore body; later a shaft was sunk and it is now on the shipping list with the other mines.

The most unlucky of all the group was "25," now known as the Silverman mine. This property was explored and condemned five different times and by five different companies by diamond drilling, and like the Sibley, the ore was found by running a drift to the property from the Savoy.

The last victim in this group was the famous Section "30,"—explored by diamond drilling and the option forfeited by two different parties—Clergue and Leonard. Then the knowing fellows who can always look down in the ground, any distance began to say, "I told you so. We know from geological conditions that it was impossible for ore to exist there," etc. However, men possessed of the necessary capital, that knew the history of diamond drilling on the range, secured the property, sank a shaft and found a mine of the finest quality of ore ever seen in any mine in the Lake Superior district. They only met with the usual result, that is, that everywhere a shaft has been sunk, a mine was found.

Witnesses of the accident claim that the owner of the auto was so indifferent about the accident that he did not even stop his machine to see how badly the man was injured. It is also said that the same auto driver was the cause of another team taking to the ditch.

ACTION UP TO THE PRESIDENT

Must Decide Question of Bringing Criminal Suits Against Harriman.

Washington, May 18.—The questions of bringing criminal prosecutions against E. H. Harriman and suits to dissolve the railroad combinations he has effected, must be decided by President Roosevelt. This is a matter in which no subordinate will meddle. The president must figure out his own deductions and assume full responsibility for the consequences.

The interstate commission is divided into factions. One believes that successful suits can be maintained to break the Harriman combinations under the Sherman anti-trust act, which might permit the subsequent criminal prosecution of Mr. Harriman. The other is convinced that legal proceedings for the dissolution of the combinations would prove an ignoble failure.

Three members of the commission are said to be convinced that the combinations arranged by Mr. Harriman do not constitute violations of the Sherman law. They base their belief on the opinions handed down by the United States supreme court in the Northern Securities case. Some of the dissenting justices declare that if the stock necessary to effect the consolidation of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific railroads had been purchased in the open market the decision might have been otherwise. They broadly intimated that the dissolution of the Northern Securities company was ordered because of a conspiracy to secretly buy the stock needed to obtain control, instead of securing it in the open market.

The other four commissioners are said to radically differ from their associates. They insist that, without reference to the Northern Securities case, successful suits can be brought under the Sherman acts. It is admittedly necessary to win suits against the combination on the restraint of trade feature of the Harriman transactions in order to procure the evidence with which to institute criminal proceedings against the chief factors in them.

The interstate commerce commission undoubtedly will bring in for consideration by the president and attorney general at least two sets of conclusions and recommendations. There may be seven sets of views.

In the meantime the president is taking a copy of the conclusions reached by Attorneys F. B. Kellogg and C. A. Severance down to his country place of Pine Knot, and will carefully read and digest this important document. He will then be in a position to make some suggestions on his own account.

CORTELYOU IS FRIEND OF ROOSEVELT POLICY.

Washington, May 18.—George B. Cortelyou, secretary of the treasury, is not disloyal to President Roosevelt, as indicated in yesterday's dispatches. He is not working in secret to undermine the Taft presidential boom by the use of federal patronage, and he is not posing as the friend of President Roosevelt, and at the same time trying to secure the nomination as a reactionary candidate with the backing of the trust interests.

These statements are made on the highest authority. There is complete understanding between President Roosevelt and Secretary Cortelyou, and perfect harmony between the two men.

Secretary Cortelyou is not an avowed candidate, but if Taft should fail to make the race it would not surprise anyone if President Roosevelt should use his influence to bring about the nomination of Secretary Cortelyou. His nomination would not be brought about by the reactionaries, but if Cortelyou should receive it, the honor will come to him with the good will of the administration.

BIG CELEBRATION WAS REMARKABLE SUCCESS

Two Thousand Norwegians Observe Independence Day at Armory.

Speeches by Congressman Bede, B. B. Haugan, and Mayor Cullum.

Yesterday, Norway's Independence day, was a happy one for Duluth Norwegians. It was celebrated locally in a manner calculated to arouse the greatest patriotism and enthusiasm, and to show the loyalty and love of natives of the Northern country for both Norway and America.

It is estimated that about 2,000 persons took part in the observance of the day at the Armory last evening. The balcony and main floor of the big building were filled almost to capacity. Seats were so arranged as to give the greatest possible amount of room, and at the same time seat the greatest possible number of people. There were seats enough for the crowd, but none to spare.

Patriotic speeches, several songs and selections by the orchestra, and a grand ball, constituted the program of entertainment. This program was an exceptionally fine one all the way through, and resulted in what was probably the most successful celebration of the kind ever held in the city. The audience was not slow in showing its appreciation of the various features of entertainment, and grew wildly enthusiastic during the patriotic addresses. The speakers pointed out that no man from another country could be expected to be the best kind of a citizen if he did not love his native land, despite his allegiance to the country he had elected to live in, and this sentiment was roundly applauded.

Flags of Two Countries.

In appearance the hall was enough to inspire the patriotism of Norwegians and Americans alike, as soon as one entered it, and before the speeches began. American flags and flags of Norway were artistically hung at the far end of the hall, over the speakers' platform. National colors were much in evidence, and the general effect was pretty and striking. The committee on arrangements is deserving of compliments for the manner of decoration, as well as for the general success of the affair. Incidentally it might be mentioned that on this committee of arrangements were: H. B. Knudsen, A. Augvik, O. Goodin, Christ Frank, N. J. Howe, G. M. Mobroten, Walter Eng, L. J. Nordheim, John Nelson and Theodore Jacobson.

The program was pulled off under the auspices of Fram lodge No. 5, and Nortun lodge No. 16, Sons of Norway. On the stage sat H. B. Knudsen, chairman; Congressman J. Adam Bede, Mayor M. B. Cullum and B. B. Haugan, with Flaaten's orchestra in front of the platform, and the Normanna Singing society in a position to the side where they could readily mount the stage.

H. B. Knudsen as Chairman.

The selection of Mr. Knudsen as chairman was a most happy one. He has a habit of saying just the right thing at the right time at an affair of this kind, and able to fill the place to the satisfaction of every body concerned. His introductions of the speakers were not too long and not too short. Natural wit cropped out now and then, and the speaker following one of these introductions, was sure to find the audience in a good humor and appreciative frame of mind.

Mr. Knudsen himself did not speak at any great length in opening the meeting. He expressed his pleasure at the honor of presiding over such a meeting. He told how proud he was of Norway, the land of his birth, and followed this up by speaking of the pride he felt in America, and the city of Duluth. Loud applause greeted his remarks in this respect.

Mayor Cullum Speaks.

Mayor Cullum expressed his pleasure at being present, and said it struck him as peculiar to deliver an address of welcome to Saxon-Americans. He spoke of the great and good work natives of Norway have been able to accomplish in this country, and dwelt upon the fact that they were among the leaders in American development and progress. He lauded the Norwegians for their page in music and poetry, and told how glad the American people are to welcome them as citizens of this country.

Spoke in Norwegian.

"The Seventeenth of May" was the subject of Mr. Haugan's address. He spoke in Norwegian. With all its intense patriotism, the speech was filled with brilliant witticisms, and the audience was kept alternately applauding the serious remarks and laughing at the witty ones. Mr. Haugan makes a good appearance on the platform, and has a fine delivery.

Mr. Knudsen's remarks introducing Congressman Bede were particularly interesting. The chairman characterized Mr. Bede as being one of the most able men in the state of Minnesota, and told how the Pine City man had broken an engagement to speak in New York in order that he might be in his home district to assist the Sons of Norway in the celebration of their Independence day.

Congressman Bede made light of traveling 2,000 miles to be able to be at the meeting, and said he was glad the opportunity had presented itself for him to speak, for it gave him an excuse to get away from the East and back among his own people again. He took a friendly dig at Mr. Haugan by telling how they had accompanied each other on a speech-making tour during a political campaign for a week one time, and how Mr. Haugan had kept the others awake nights by snoring in his own language.

Norwegian Colors Translated.

"The American colors are only Norwegian colors translated by the Goddess of Liberty," said the speaker. "It is safe to say that a man who will not be good to his mother will not be good to his wife, and on the same principle a Norwegian who does not love his native country would not make a good American citizen. Those who love the home soil are strong in their love for the new land. The stronger their love for Norway the better citizens they are of America. As the Irishman said, 'It's a weak man that does not love his native land, whether he was born there or not. I am not a Norwegian, but I have been mistaken for a native of the Scandinavian peninsula. I remember one time I was asked to address a Swedish audience. The chairman asked me if I could speak the Swedish tongue. I said I couldn't speak it, but I could look it, and so I got along all right.

"The Scandinavian people have played an important part in building up different contries of the world. They began with the Scandinavian peninsula, and after making a good job of it, they transferred their attention to the British Isles. Today there are hundreds of Scandinavian names to be found high in the list of prominent men in England. The same is true of America. The Scandinavians have done a lot toward putting this country to the front and making her what she is. I am glad to see there are so many of you here tonight, particularly among the younger people, who understood Mr. Haugan's remarks in Norwegian. It is a fine thing that the children should be taught Norwegian as well as English. It helps to preserve in them a love for the mother country.

We Are All Foreigners.

"When you come right down to it, all Americans are foreigners. It is only a question of how long they were in getting over here. Some took a long time and some a short time. Why, America was discovered by a foreigner in the first place. Everybody in the country is descended from foreign parentage, except the Indians. The pick of the European population of all countries was combined into American citizenship, which is the best in the world. The farther back an American can trace the residence of his ancestors in this country, the greater is the mixture of blood in his veins. Some of us are all nationalities in one, and have all kinds of blood except negro in our veins.

"America is not so much a country as it is an idea, and not so much a place as a purpose. America is today the greatest of nations, and stands out as an example for all the world to follow, and this example is being followed, too. One can scarcely name a single country that has not profited in some way by the example set by America. Our influence is felt around the world, and our freedom is being copied by countries all over the globe. I have noticed that snowdrifts are essentials of good government. Where there are the biggest snowdrifts one finds the best governments and the most progressive people. Its all in the climate. That's why Norway and Minnesota amount to so much. Down in Cuba they are a nice set of people, but they are handicapped by not having any snowdrifts, and so they cannot be expected to have a good government, or be very progressive. It is the same in Central America, where a friend of mine, trying a house for sale, advertised that it was located on a slight elevation, so that the occupants might get up before breakfast and watch the revolutions go passing by.

"It's going to take ten or fifteen years to dig the Panama canal because of the climate. I am told that during the last two years they have dug up as much earth on the Minnesota iron ranges as it will be necessary to remove in digging the canal. Some more proof of the benefits of the right sort of climate, you see. Its climate gives Norway an advantage over other nations of the earth.

"We wouldn't have had America but for the European countries. America is the outgrowth of civilization of Europe. American freedom was not born in America. It was born hundreds of years ago on the other side of the Atlantic, in the crusades for all that was good and right. The freedom idea started across the Atlantic and was transplanted to America. The people themselves are responsible for the freedom existing here, and they are also responsible for any evils which may exist in the government. If something wrong is found at Washington, you may depend upon it that there is something wrong at home. Political bossism is caused usually by the fact that the people are too lazy to get out and vote. Twenty-five per cent of the voters will not go to the polls unless urged to physically or financially."

The Musical Program.

Following were the musical numbers on the program: Overture, "America," Flaaten's orchestra; "Naar Fjordene Blaaner," Normanna male chorus; "Hilsen fra Norge," Flaaten's orchestra; "Hjemover fra Langreis," Normanna chorus; temple dance from Olaf Trygvason, orchestra; Norwegian folk melodies, orchestra; "America," orchestra, Normanna chorus and audience. E. O. Hesdal gave a recitation, "Peer Gynt." The chorus did remarkably well, and was recalled for a number of encores, while Flaaten's orchestra was up to its usual standard. Mr. Hesdal's recitation was given effectively.

The dance was a big success. The floor committee consisted of H. B. Knudsen, Andrew Augvik, N. J. Howe and Walter Eng.

BANQUET IS ENJOYED

Twentieth Anniversary of Unitarian Church is Celebrated.

Former Members and Friends Send Their Congratulations.

The twentieth anniversary of the founding of the local Unitarian church was observed last evening by a banquet held in the church parlors and at which 100 members of the congregation were guests. The event was a most delightful one. The tables were prettily decorated in flowers and candles, and supper was served at 6:30 o'clock, followed by an interesting program of toasts and the reading of letters from former members and friends of the church.

F. H. Barnard presided as toastmaster in a most happy manner and the responses were timely and interesting. Letters of congratulation and greeting were read from Dr. Samuel A. Eliot, president of the American Unitarian association of Boston; from Rev. F. C. Southworth, president of the Meadville Theological school and pastor of the local church for five years; from Judge C. R. Lewis of St. Paul, G. A. Leland of Chicago, Miss Lucinda Washburn, F. W. Fitzpatrick of Washington, D. C., Mrs. L. A. Wentworth of Portland, Or., all members of the local church; and also from Rev. Harry White, a former pastor, and from Rev. S. M. Crothers of Cambridge, and Rev. R. W. Boynton, pastor of Unity church of St. Paul, both of whom have spoken in the local pulpit upon various occasions.

Mrs. Alfred Jaques responded to the first toast speaking of the history of the church. "The Church Treasury" was the subject of the next toast by A. L. Agath. Mrs. J. A. Keyes responded to the toast "The Women's Alliance." Victor Stearns spoke on "The New Building" and J. C. H. Engel has as the subject of his toast "The New Comers." The pastor of the church, Rev. Kirby S. Miller, spoke of "The Forward Work." The last speaker of the evening was Dr. Speiser who spoke informally.

MILLION A DAY FOR DRINKS

New York Sun: There is hardly any other sentence that is repeated so often in the United States as "Have a drink with me," unless it is the remark of the other fellow to the bartender, "Fill 'em up again."

New York spends a million dollars a day for drinks. The annual consumption of drinks in the United States amounts to $1,400,000,000. If all the beer drunk in the United States since 1876 were brought together it would fill a canal from New York to Denver—twenty feet wide, ten feet deep and 1,938 miles long.

The nation's drink bill is one-third more than the public debt, twice as much as the capital stock in the banks, a little less than the capitalization of the trusts, one-half the value of our domestic animals, more than one-half the value of all our farm products, one-third more than our total imported merchandise and one-twelfth more than our total exports.

If each individual in this country, regardless of age or sex, had drunk his share of liquor in 1875 he would have consumed about eight gallons; but now the proportion is a little more than twenty gallons. The increase is attributed to the influx of foreign immigrants who drink much beer.

It is estimated that three-fourths of the population are total abstainers, which would make every fourth person who does drink consumed on an average $70 worth of liquor each year. If people who drink should abstain for a year and provide a fund from the savings it would start every illiterate child in the United States on the way to a college education, and if the drinkers of the world were to endure their thirst for eighteen months their savings would buy every ounce of gold in existence.

The use of wines and spirits are on the decrease in the United States, while beer is becoming more popular. There are fewer retail liquor dealers now than there were a year ago, while the number of places where beer is sold is increasing rapidly.

As many railroad accidents were in times past accounted for by employes being drunk, $90,000 of the 1,200,000 railroad men now on duty in the United States are under orders neither to drink nor to enter a place where liquor is sold. The penalty is dismissal from service. In Canada if a locomotive engineer or a train conductor is found drunk while on duty, he is liable to ten years' imprisonment.

Southern states are more aggressive at this time than those of any other part of the country in attempting to curb drunkenness by law. Kentucky, whose very name brings up thoughts of mint juleps, has 119 counties, and of these ninety-six are without saloons. In all Kentucky there are but five counties where liquor may be sold all over the county.

In the matter of local option elections Illinois leads all other states with a record of 70 communities which have voted the saloon out. Mississippi and Texas are more than three-fourths dry by virtue of local option laws. Texas prohibits screens in drinking places, and Indiana requires saloons to keep lights burning all night with window shades open.

Tennessee, another great whisky producing state, has had an anti-saloon movement, with the result that there are but nine towns in the entire Commonwealth where saloons are permitted. Every candidate for a state office in Tennessee, Democrat or Republican, is a temperance reformer. Senator Carmack, a Democratic leader, has pledged himself to a movement to drive every saloon from the state.

Californians say that a great temperance lesson was taught by the San Francisco earthquake. San Francisco consumed much liquor and was known as a wide open town. When the earthquake occurred, the saloons were closed and long kept closed.

North Carolina has also taken advantage of the local option law. Greensboro, with more than 30,000 population, is as dry as a bone. South Carolina has the state despensary system.

Indiana, a state in which ten years ago much influence was exerted by the distillers and brewers, is now trying to keep the legislature from going too far in enacting laws which cannot be enforced, thus weakening the whole temperance movement.

In that state the Moore law permits the citizens of any geographical division in county, township, city or ward to abolish saloons by a petition signed by a majority of its citizens.

Maine is technically a prohibition state, where the sale of intoxicants is an outlaw business. The New York liquor laws are strict on the books, but elastic in enforcement. In Chicago, a city made up largely of foreign born citizens and sons of foreigners, the movement toward local restriction of the liquor traffic is slow.

Ohio has progressed from a simple precinct local option law to a regulation which will permit the citizens of any prescribed district in the city to prohibit saloons within that territory, the only requirement being that a majority of the citizens sign a petition against them.

Nebraska has a law providing for "the examination of dipsomaniacs, inebriates and persons addicted to the excessive use of morphine, cocaine or other narcotic drugs; for the detention, care and treatment of such persons, and for their parole."

The only home for drunkards' wives ever established in the United States, and possibly in the world, is at Des Moines, Iowa. This was made possible by the will of the late James Callahan, who left $20,000 for the purpose of building it.

In those communities where the percentage of foreign born population is largest there is the least effort toward legal restriction of the liquor traffic, which fact is taken to indicate that pure blooded Americans have set their faces against the vice of drunkenness. The Southern states received but 4 per cent of the immigrants which came into the country last year, and they are leading the crusade against the saloon.

An effort is being made to secure the enactment of a law which will prohibit the shipment of liquor into a prohibition territory by applying interstate commerce provisions. The legislatures of forty states are now in session, and it is probable that all of them will consider the liquor question in one form or another. Thirty millions of our people, more than one-third of our population, already live under prohibition law.

PICKING CORN BY MACHINERY.

Popular Mechanics: It is only within the last few years that anything practical in the way of machines for picking corn have been produced. Now there are several successful machines on the market.

One picker has the guide chains with the usual prongs for straightening up the stalks. The chains form a stalk passage extending rearward through the machine. A rapidly moving chain provided with fingers is located at one side and between the guide chains in such a position that as the machine passes over the row the fingers engage the ears on the stalks and snap them off. By means of a deflector the ears are directed to a receptacle, from which they are carried to the husking rollers and thence to the wagon. The tops of the cornstalks are cut off, and by means of a conveyer this and other trash is carried to the rear and dropped on the ground.

The great objection to all modern corn pickers is that the stalks are assumed to be valueless and are practically destroyed; while every economical farmer nowadays secures his fodder with as much care as he gives his hay, knowing that it is equally nutritious.

SHAVE OFF MORE ROCK

Council Will Appropriate Money to Cut Away Cliff.

Stone Will be Used to Protect St. Croix Avenue.

That the council will appropriate $3,000 as recommended by the city engineer for the reduction of the point of rocks and the protection of St. Croix avenue now seems very probable. Yesterday afternoon the committee on streets, alleys and sidewalks, the city engineer, Alderman Shartel of the Fourth ward and Alderman Kennedy from the Sixth went over the ground in question and while they gave no definite intimation as to what they would do, it is expected that they will present a favorable report to the council Monday evening.

One very dangerous place in the point of rocks was pointed out to the aldermen by Mr. McGilvray and they agreed that it looked very much as if a portion of the much discussed "beetling crag" might tumble off at any moment. This is located far enough up on the cliff face to cause it to fall on the street car tracks in case it did break loose.

After inspecting the point of rocks the committee took a trip down St. Croix avenue to examine the situation there. The place where it is proposed to place rocks is at the foot of Morse street, at which point the lake has encroached so far upon the eighty-foot street as to wash clear over on to the property on the west side, and just south the ice house, where only about thirty-five feet of the eighty-foot street remains. St. Croix avenue is largely built up of refuse and other loose material which was dumped there while it was being used as a dumping ground, and the waves make very rapid inroads on this class of material. The scheme proposed is to riprap the shore with the big rocks from the point of rocks, transporting them to the scene of action by street cars.

The extreme timeliness of the fall of the big rock from the point this week, coming as it did just after the motion of Aldermen Shartel and Burgess to have the rock cut down and taken to Park Point was laid over in the council, has given rise to considerable joking, and several of the friends of the two aldermen have jokingly intimated that there are suspicious circumstances connected with it.

SUPERIOR NEWS

ON TRACK OF HUSBAND.

Mrs. Mary Larson Located Him With Another Woman.

Mrs. Mary Larson, in the role of Sherlock Holmes, got herself into trouble last evening when she tried to locate the whereabouts of her missing husband. She was in municipal court this morning, charged with assault and battery and was given a fine of $1 and costs by Judge Parker.

It seems that Mrs. Larson, prior to her Sherlock Holmes adventure, had been suffering from an illness for the past wek and was just recovering yesterday. Her husband had been missing for a couple of nights.

She resolved to find out for herself where he was and attired in some strange garments found about her home, went to the place where she expected her husband could be found. She remained in the darkness outside for some time until her husband and another woman came out of the house together. The woman was Angeline Ives.

Mrs. Larson was so angered at the sight of her husband with the woman that she rushed up to the couple and began using her fists on Angeline. The interruption of te police was the only thing that saved the woman.

In court this morning the "brain storm" plea was used by Mrs. Larson, who maintained that she did not know what she was doing when she made the attack upon Miss Ives. Her illness, it was claimed, had so affected her that she was insane for the time being.

Just Hill was arraigned in police court this morning upon a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. He demanded an examination and his case was set for Monday morning. His bail was set at $500, and as he did not have the required amount he was placed in jail.

The complaining witness was Andrew Demo, who said that Hill had cut him over the face with a long knife. The two had been drinking and the quarrel was the result of a dispute.

SHARES IN BANK SOLD.

H. F. Foller Disposes of His Interests in Union Institution.

H. F. Foller has sold his interest in the Union Commercial & Savings bank to a party of Superior and outside capitalists, including Sam Olsen, L. H. Larsen and others. He owned a controlling interest in the bank. The business will probably be conducted by the same officials. It is likely that the new owners of the bank will enlarge the capital.

WILL ACT ON PLANS.

City Clerk Receives Those for City Lighting Plant.

The plans and specifications and costs of the proposed municipal lighting plant for Superior were received today by City Clerk Patterson from Owen Ford, the St. Louis engineer engaged to make them.

The city council will act upon the plans at the meeting Tuesday evening and it is generally believed the bids for the improvement will be ordered advertised for.

NORSEMEN EXTOLLED.

Part Played in Building Northwest Praised by Speakers.

"The progress made by our great Northwest, its wonderful development, record breaking in the point of time, and unprecedented in history, is largely due to the Norwegian immigrants who have come to our shores and, by the labor of their hands, have helped build up the great unoccupied West to its present stage of development." These were the words of Mayor Linley of Superior in his address delivered at the celebration held by the Norwegians of Superior in Maryland hall last evening, and it was the keynote of the speakers' talk during the evening.

The sturdy Norsman and the great good he has done in his adopted country were fully as highly extolled as was the mother country, whose freedom was being celebrated. B. B. Haugen of Minneapolis, however, brought pangs of homesickness to more than one of the native Norwegians gathered in the hall, by his vivid description and loyal prise of the fatherland.

An excellent musical program was rendered consisting of airs and songs and the program was concluded by the serving of refreshments and dancing.

AMUSING FARCE.

Ericsson School Graduates Give Highly Entertaining Program.

"Fun in a Photograph Gallery" was the title of a one act farce staged by the Ericsson school eighth grade students at their graduating exercises, which were held last evening and the little piece made a decided hit. Curtain calls were numerous and the stars were applauded again and again. A physical culture drill, recitations and a number of musical numbers completed one of the most entertaining school programs which has been given in Superior for some time.

FINE PROGRAM.

Members of Normal Choral Club Make Hit in Musical.

The first musicale of the Superior Normal Choral club was one of the sensations of the season musically in Superior. The affair, which took place last night, brought a crowd which completely filled the assembly hall of the school, and the work of the young women in the club was warmly applauded by the audience. Fifty-one members of the club under the direction of the school, rendered the cantata. The singers were gowned in white and were grouped effectively on the platform. Misses Marie Davudson and Florence Fiedler, sopranos and Miss Gladys George, contralto, were the soloists. A violin solo by Miss Pauline McElroy, a vocal selection by Miss Hazel Harris and a piano number by Miss Ruth Rogers completed the program. It is expected that the musicale will be made an annual affair.

WANTS DIVORCE FROM WIFE SERVING LIFE TERM

Albert Williams Would be Free From Murderous Spouse.

Thought He Could Marry Again Without Legal Separation.

Albert Williams, formerly of Brainerd, has begun divorce proceedings in the district court of this county against Myra Jane Williams, who was sent to the state penitentiary in 1903, to serve a life sentence for the murder of her two-and-one-half-year old child. Mr. Williams bases his petition on the fact that his wife has been indicted for and convicted for felony, which under the laws of this state is held to be ample ground for divorce.

In his complaint, filed today by W. D. Edson of this city, Williams says he is 31 and his wife is 26 years old, and that they were married in Morris, Minn., March 4, 1901.

The crime which Mrs. Williams committed was of a shocking nature, and her trial and confession attracted widespread interest. Her confession showed that after a night of debauchery with two men, she threw her child in the Mississippi river, where it drowned. The mother then went back to Brainerd and reported that the child had been stolen.

She was indicted for murder in the first degree, and was subsequently convicted, given a life sentence in December, 1903. Mrs. Williams confessed to the county attorney of Crow Wing county before sentence was imposed. She is still alive in the penitentiary.

The circumstances surrounding Williams' application for a divorce are somewhat peculiar.

He came to Duluth with a woman some days ago and visited the office of the clerk of court for the purpose of getting a marriage license. Being questioned concerning his previous marriage and whether he had a divorce, Williams admitted that his wife is still living and that he had no divorce, but said he supposed her conviction of felony freed him. It was explained by the court officers that it would be necessary for him to get a divorce and then wait six months before another license could be legally issued and his second marriage take place in Minnesota.

Although he appeared to be disappointed at the state of affairs he found himself in, Williams was determined to be remarried, and he begun the action for a divorce to remove the bar to his second union.

The affair is being investigated.

Sulphide Vein

75% of the World's Copper comes from Sulphide ore. 90 per cent of the abandoned copper mines are abandoned for the lack of it. Other ores, though worth millions, give value to the mines containing them only to the extent of ore actually in sight. Authorities say the Sulphide Strike is, almost invariably, the crown of a deposit, assured for considerable depth—especially in the proven district of Bonanza Belt.

MAHONEY IS CAUGHT

Suspect of Burnett Station Murder Held at Minneapolis.

Is Said to Have Admitted Identity to Officers.

A long distance telephone message to Chief Troyer from Minneapolis this afternoon stated that Dan Mahoney, the man wanted for the murder of the Mitchell boy at Burnett station on the Missabe road last fall, was arrested there this afternoon about 3 o'clock.

According to the telephone message Mahoney admits his identity.

Mahoney was arrested shortly after the murder but was later released for lack of evidence. A few hours after he had been let go the police secured further evidence, which they claim connects him with the crime, and since that time police officers all over the country have been searching for him, stimulated by the hope of a big reward.

Several suspects have been arrested, the latest having been caught in New Orleans, but they have all been let go, proving to be the wrong man.

The police think, however, that no mistake has been made this time.

Mr. Washburn spent the greater part of his time in the Southwest, but during the last few weeks he has been in Asheville, N. C.

MYERS IS WILLING.

Writes That He Will Meet Milton at Any Time.

A friend of Frank Myers, the champion lightweight wrestler of the Northwest, received a letter from him today, in which he expresses surprise over the doubts as to his sincerity in arranging a match with George Milton, the local featherweight. Myers says that since leaving Duluth he hasn't heard a word from anybody in direct charge of the match, nor from George Milton's manager. He says that if they arrange a date and there is any prospect of a good purse in sight for the victor, he will come to Duluth on a day's notice.

Myers says that nothing has been said to him about appearance money, or he would gladly have put up $25 with any responsible party in Duluth to bind the match, and is willing to do so now, just as soon as it can be arranged. All he wants is the date and the assurance that there will be no back-down on the Duluth side, and he will be on hand.

G. N. Gilman, Milton's manager, has been informed of Myers' letter, and he has written the Minneapolis man. Milton is as ready and willing as Myers, and there is expected to be no hitch in the signing of the articles. It is probable the match will be pulled off at the Metropolitan opera house, which will be dark after next week, and will thus be available for the wrestlers.

Arrangements were made today for a match between Milton and Clarence McClellan at Great Eastern hall in West Duluth some night next week, very probably Friday evening.

RELIEVES MANY CASES

Prescription for Rheumatism and Kidney Troubles.

Get the Ingredients From the Drug Store and Mix Them Yourself.

A large Eastern publication tells its readers of a number of simple and safe prescriptions that can be made at home. The following however, for the cure of rheumatism and kidney and bladder troubles receives the greatest praise, viz., Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaprilla three ounces. These simple vegetable ingredients can be obtained at any good prescription pharmacy at little cost and are mixed by shaking well in a bottle.

The dose for adults is a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime, drinking a full tumblerful of water after each dose. It is further stated that this prescription is a positive remedy for kidney trouble and lame back weak bladder and urinary difficulties, especially of the elderly people, and one of the best things to be used in rheumatic afflictions relieving the aches and pains and reducing swellings in just a short while.

A well known druggist states that the Compound Kargon in it does the work. It is the drug which acts directly upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys; cleanses the spongelike organs and gives them power to sift and strain the poisonous waste matter and uric acid of rheumatism.

Cut this out and hand to some sufferer which would certainly be an act of humanity.

SCHMITZ GIVES PLEDGE

unqualified falsehood. I called the committee of fifty together some time ago in order that I might take advantage of the wisdom and advice of the best citizens of the city in a financial and industrial crisis. This committee of fifty selected sub-committees in order that the important work might be systematized and carried out, and one of the committees is the so called committee of seven. I have not resigned or yielded my prerogative to anybody, and any statement to the contrary is a malicious falsehood. There is no reason why I should pass over the reins of government to other people. As for Ruef's charges I will say he has never paid me any bribe money and he knows it. If he says he paid bribe money to me he simply lies. I only know that he has made such charges from what I am told and from newspaper reports."

Abraham Ruef, in his second appearance before the grand jury yesterday, testified regarding the Parkside Traction company deal under which the directorate of the corporation paid Ruef $30,000 to secure a franchise to enhance enormously the value of the lots composing the Parkside real estate tract. The information in the possession of the prosecution is that of this sum, $1,000 was to be paid to each of the eighteen supervisors for voting the franchise, and the remainder, $12,000, was to be shared evenly by Ruef and Schmitz. Among the directors and stockholders of the Parkside Traction company were W. H. Crocker, one of the foremost capitalists of San Francisco; Charles E. Green, manager of the vast Crocker estate, and an official of the Crocker-Woolworth bank; C. H. Umbren, a wealthy real estate man; Douglas Watson, real estate man; F. W. Tillman, wholesale grocer; Wellington Grege, an officer of the Crocker-Woolworth bank, and Joseph Green, capitalist, who was president. It is said that the matter was finally postponed indefinitely, but Ruef kept the $30,000.

Ruef, asked when he emerged from the grand jury chamber last night: "Have you made any arrangements to return to the men and corporations against whom you will testify in court the various sums of money paid by them to you for corruption purposes, or as 'fees?'" replied: "I will have a statement to make in that regard a little later. When I stated in Judge Dunne's court, on Monday, that it was my purpose to henceforth lead a life of rectitude, and to atone, in so far as I could for whatever wrong I had done in the past, I meant what I said. There was no opportunity, then, nor was that the best occasion to enter into details. But I shall presently prepare a statement covering your question."

The gas deal, comprising the charge by the prosecution that the board of supervisors was bribed by the San Francisco Gas & Electric company to fix the gas rate for 1906 at 85, instead of 75 cents, was gone into in the early part of the afternoon, among the witnesses being President W. Bourne and Director Cyrus Pierce.

At the conclusion of the session, District Attorney Langdon and Assistant District Attorney Heney refused to make any statement whatever, and Langdon intimated that an especially binding pledge had been taken by prosecutors and jurors to maintain secrecy. Every witness is being bound in promise to keep silence, though no legal penalty is provided for divulgence of his own testimony. The grand jury adjourned until Monday at 2 p. m.

District Attorney Langdon denied that the prosecution had entered into any arrangements, tentative or otherwise, for the virtual retirement of the mayor and the turning over of the reins of government to a committee of several representatives of commercial organizations.

BLOCKADE IS BROKEN

Steamer America Will Go to Port Arthur Sunday.

Officials Confident That Boat Will Make the Passage.

At last passengers, many of whom have been waiting in Duluth for over a month, are going to have a chance to make the trip to Port Arthur and according to the officials of the Booth line they stand a very good show of getting to their destination although there is still a chance that the ice may block the entrance to Thunder Bay.

The steamer America will take passengers tomorrow for Port Arthur as well as north shore and Isle Royale points. The Booth line officials received a message from Port Arthur last night which stated that the conditions were such that the boat could probably make the harbor without much difficulty and consequently the attempt will be made by the America tomorrow.

Passengers will be taken on the America with the understanding that if a passage cannot be made into Thunder Bay and Port Arthur the Booth line will bring them back to Duluth free of charge. But the officials are quite confident that the steamer will get to Port Arthur with her passengers.

The steamer Easton left this morning for south shore points a day late having been delayed the first of the week by the northeaster. Yesterday afternoon the America departed for north shore points to Grand Portage and will return this evening. Her trip to Port Arthur will be begun at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning when she will leave the Booth dock at the foot of Lake avenue.

The ice at Port Arthur has been very embarrassing and has hurt business seriously. A large quantity of freight has been lying at the freight houses in Duluth for shipment to Port Arthur for some time and the merchants at the Canadian Head of the Lakes have been badly handicapped.

The statistics for three years are as follows:

The total rail shipments from Lake Erie ports to furnaces during the winter season (Dec. 1 to May 1) aggregated 4,275,467 tons.

Adding these winter shipments to 25,234,302 tons, the amount shipped to furnaces during the navigation season of 1906, gives 30,099,769 tons, as the entire consumption of ore from Lake Erie ports during the year ended May 1, 1907, as against 28,984,358 tons for the year ended May 1, 1906, 29,057,070 for the year ended May 1, 1905.

Sinclair Comes From Chicago---Excelsior Goes to Detroit.

The tug Sinclair arrived in the Duluth harbor this morning from Chicago and has taken her place in the Union Towing company's fleet at the Head of the Lakes. The tug Excelsior will leave this evening for Detroit, to be used at that point, the Sinclair having been brought here to take the place of the Excelsior.

The Sinclair will be a valuable addition to the local fleet of tugs, especially during the spring and fall months, when navigation about the harbor is made difficult by the ice. She is an all-steel tug, and will be able to buck the ice as well as any at the Head of the Lakes.

The Union Towing company has now four steel tugs, the Carrington, Record, America and Sinclair. The Record, which was damaged by the ice early in the season, has been repaired and will go into commission either tonight or tomorrow.

Farr Elected President.

Detroit, May 18.—The directors of the Detroit Shipbuilding company yesterday elected Morton E. Farr as president to succeed the late William G. McMillan. Mr. Farr also retains the position of treasurer. Philip K. McMillan was elected vice president and director.

Nearly Ready for Launching.

The new Pittsburg Steamship company's steamer Baker is nearly completed at the Superior shipyards and will be launched some time next month. The Baker is a 600-foot freighter and her construction was begun early last winter. Work on the other boats at the shipyard is progressing satisfactorily. The steamer Ionic of the Northern Navigation company, which has been undergoing repairs will be ready to go into commission again soon.

Equipped With Motor Boats.

The fleet of the Western Transit company of Tonawanda ,including the steamers Rogers, De Graff, Weston, Mills and Kerr are to be equipped with motor boats for use in cases of emergency, and for the use of the officers in getting about the harbors, according to information which has been received with motor boats, and their use will probably be generally adopted soon.

Saxona Off Beach.

Sault Ste. Marie, May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer Saxona, which stranded at the entrance to the canal yesterday, was released today. The steamer is leaking a good deal, but its pumps will keep the water down until the steamer reaches its destination.

WIRELESS TO BUFFALO

Report Says Duluth Will Soon Have Air Connections.

System Will be Generally Used on Lake Boats.

An article in a Detroit paper contains the information that Duluth is to be connected with Buffalo by wireless telegraphy in the near future. This information will be of special interest to the vessel owners and agents at Duluth who have been watching for the development of the wireless system on the lakes for some time.

The system to be used will be Clark's wireless which is said to be already established between Buffalo and Detroit and is in working order. The new stations will be established as quickly as the equipment can be manufactured and it is confidently expected that the several lake cities mentioned will have the wireless service within the next sixty days.

Many marine men on the Great Lakes confidently expect that the wireless telegraph will soon be generally used on practically all boats on the lakes. Already the passenger boats of the Detroit & Cleveland line have been equipped with the service and it has been found to be most satisfactory and will be a great convenience for the passengers.

So far none of the freight boats have received the wireless apparatus and it may be some time before it is generally adopted by any but the passenger lines but eventually all transportation companies will probably equip their boats with the wireless system for the sake of safety if for nothing else.

Lieut. Wilson, in charge of the Chicago hydrographic office and principal of the Chicago nautical school, has been giving instruction at his school in wireless telegraphy for the past year.

Cargoes Offered Freely.

Cleveland, May 18.—Ore and coal cargoes are offered freely and the supply of tonnage is not equal to the demand. There is a better inquiry for boats in the lumber trade.

Net Gain in Duluth in the Use of ELECTRICITY

Both Phones 295 — 40% — Both Phones 295

The net business contracted for by the undersigned company between January 1st and April 6th, 1907, is over 40 per cent in excess of the net business contracted for during the corresponding period last year. And last year showed a large increase. Could there be any more convincing proof of the preferences of this community in the matter of the best light and power?

ELECTRIC LIGHT BECOMING UNIVERSAL

The sharp reductions in rate recently made have been largely responsible for this increased demand for electric light and power. People have come to realize everywhere the economy as well as the desirability. The well-to-do classes have always preferred electric light. Now the cost is within reach of every household—however modest its income. Wire your house this spring. For particulars call either 'phone, 295.

One of the features of the convention will be the presentation of Handel's oratorio of the "Messiah" in the Auditorium Saturday evening, July 13, by a chorus of 1,500 voices and an orchestra of 150 pieces.

Nearly every state will be represented by some speaker, and there will be numerous special meetings, so that from the sun-rise praise services to the closing session well into the evening, there will be one constant round of activity.

THE BOOM OF GOVERNOR JOHNSON

Alabama, who is at his home and cannot be seen. Senator Pettis, his colleague, is not inclined to discuss presidential possibilities, except in so much as he said to your correspondent that he thought Bryan the most available candidate the Democrats could nominate. "Johnson," said the venerable Alabama senator, "is a man whom I have not met personally. I know him only by the reputation he has made. He has established himself as a vote getter, and that is what the Democrats need at this time."

Senators Overman and Frazer, who are also in Washington, did not care to be quoted upon any phase of the situation.

The proposition, so far as can be learned in Washington today, is to the effect that Governor Johnson of Minnesota is one of the several big men being considered for the nomination by the Democrats in the event Mr. Bryan fails of nomination or declines to permit his name to go before the convention. It has been quietly given out here that W. J. Bryan is most favorably disposed toward Governor Johnson and that such strength as he may be able to control, which, by the way, is very considerable, will be thrown to the support of the Minnesota governor. It is notable that in every instance the slate makers couple Governor Johnson's name with every possible combination that has yet been brought out. It is also hinted here that the dark horse that "Marse" Watterson has alluded to is none other than John A. Johnson. They met here three years ago and at once became fast friends. Editor Watterson has "leaked" as to the identity of his dark horse to the extent as to state that his candidate is now a governor of a Western state and at the time he last saw him wore a mustache. Governor Johnson formerly wore a mustache and had that hirsute adornment when he became acquainted with "Marse" Watterson. Minnesota people here are guessing that Watterson has an eye on Governor Johnson for first place.

Ex-Senator Manderson of Nebraska arrived in Washington yesterday and in discussing candidates had this to says regarding William Jennings Bryan: "On the Democratic side the nomination of Col. Bryan seems in the nature of a foregone conclusion. Toward him as a man and friend I have nothing but the best feeling and most profound respect. His personal record is untarnished and he is always captivating as a speaker and writer. But, admitting his good qualities, the fact remains that he has a faculty for blundering that makes a great many afraid to trust him, and his peculiar notions of government, in the opinion of thousands, render him too unsafe to be intrusted with the greatest office in the nation. I do not regard Col. Bryan as one whit stronger than he was in 1900, and do not think it at all probable that he could poll more votes in 1908 than he did then."

REFUSES TO ENTER FIGHT

Crow, James H. Tate, D. M. Gandler; Elders George W. Stone, Charles Dunlop, S. N. Scott, George Clelland, R. C. M. Cunnyham, F. Dresser, D. G. Junkin, John Adams, Henry C. Stuckey, James A. Lawrence, O. M. Scott.

William R. Belknap, chairman of the finance committee, for reasons not stated, has also resigned.

The report of the committee on interstate temperance will probably be made next Friday, but the discussion of the temperance question will be lively up to that time. There is strong opposition to the anti-saloon league, many commissioners declaring that they will not vote to continue its work.

Wheyne Wheeler, superintendent of the anti-saloon league is urging his friends among the commissioners to stand by the league.

NEW COUNSEL FOR THAW.

Littleton May Have Charge of the Case Next Fall.

New York, May 18.—Prior to the scond trial of Harry K. Thaw, which is likely to take place before Justice Greenbaum in the criminal branch of the supreme court next September, there will be an entire rearrangement of counsel, Martin W. Littleton, former borough president of Brooklyn, probably will have charge of the case.

It became known yesterday that Mr. Littleton had two long interviews with Thaw in the Tombs a couple of weeks ago, and that Daniel O'Reilly and A. Russell Peabody are anxious that Littleton should become the leading counsel.

The connection of Mr. Delmas with the case ceased the morning after the verdict was rendered.

John B. Gleason has also been paid and is out for good. Daniel O' Reilly has been appointed Thaw's attorney of record, and Mrs. Peabody will be retained. The status of his partner, Clifford W. Hartridge, is in some doubt. Thaw's friend of the clubs will have little prominence in the second trial, of that there is no question. He was not taken into the prisoner's confidence in the negotiations with Mr. Littleton.

There have been persistent rumors that Thaw was greatly dissatisfied with a bill of expenses amounting to $75,000, which, it is said, included extravagant amounts for backing theatrical productions designed to create public sentiment for Thaw and for "influencing favorable reports in the press." This is only one of the many rumors, which have been afloat since the verdict, regarding the financial settlements with the attorneys.

"I will not discuss those rumors one way or the other," said Mr. Hartridge as to a reporter, who saw him at his home last night. "I have nothing whatever to say concerning them."

It is understood that if the "silver-tongued orator at Brooklyn," who is now a resident of New York, takes charge of the Thaw defense, his retaining fee will no smaller than that given to Mr. Delmas, $50,000.

UNION LABOR NEWS

CONVENTION BEST EVER

That of State Federation Next Month to Break Records.

Much Interest Being Shown by St. Cloud Citizens.

The annual convention of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, which will convene at St. Cloud on June 10, promises to be the largest and greatest ever held. The citizens of the convention city are already showing much interest and will undoubtedly put up an excellent form of entertainment for the delegates during the sessions of the convention.

Secretary W. E. McEwen of the state federation received a letter from the chairman of the committee on arrangements at St. Cloud, in which the program for the convention was announced and everything said to be in readiness for the big meeting.

On the first day of the convention there will be a grand parade through the principal streets of the city, consisting of seventeen unions of St. Cloud, and the federation officials and delegates. The first evening there will be exercises at Davidson's opera house and speeches by prominent men of the state will be given. Governor Johnson has been asked to address the meeting but it is not yet known whether or not he will accept. On the second evening there will be a local talent entertainment.

The Duluth union labor organizations are taking considerable interest in the convention, and a large number of unions have already elected delegates to the big meeting. The following delegates have so far been announced as the choice of the unions:

Trades and Labor Assembly—W. J. Hunt, Earnest Peters, Martin Olmen, Andrew E. Barr, Alexander Kennedy.

Carpenters and Joiners, No. 361—Edward Lowe, J. H. Baker, J. R. Fencil, Charles McKinnon and J. G. Mork.

Dock and Ship Carpenters—Peter Marandow, Phil Proulx, John Nolan, Robert Hood and Lewis Feyling.

Electrical Workers—Frank Fisher and George Schuler.

Machinists' Union, No. 274—William S. Granger.

Switchmen's Union, No. 28—D. J. Dillon.

Cigarmakers' Union, No. 294—Charles Grimes and Joseph Shartel.

Butchers' Union, No. 12—Moses Tierney and C. B. Uncapher.

Steamfitters' Union, No. 426—Charles Potter.

WILSON IS CHOSEN.

Will Represent Printers at National Convention Next August.

After a warm contest at their meeting this week the members of the Duluth Typographical union elected Herbert N. Wilson to represent their organization at the international convention which will be held next August at Hot Springs, Ark.

H. N. WILSON.

Augustine Murphy was the other candidate, and the voting was close, Mr. Wilson is president of the local union and Mr. Murphy is secretary.

Last year the union was represented by Mr. Murphy at the convention which was held at Colorado Springs.

FORMAL SUMMER OPENING.

Of Labor Pavilion Will be Held on Decoration Day.

At the meeting of the board of pavilion directors held last evening at Kalamazo hall, the plans for the formal summer opening of the labor pavilion at Fairmont park on Decoration day were completed. A dance will be given in the afternoon and evening, and special opening exercises are being arranged.

The pavilion board now has the labor pavilion practically paid for and it will soon be a money making institution if the patronage this summer is as good as expected. Only the payments on the land purchased at Fairmont Park now remain, and the members of the board expect to be able to meet these when they are due.

MAY CAUSE BIG STRIKE

The Sheet Metal Workers' Trouble May Precipitate General Struggle.

Union Members Issue Statement, Giving Their Side of It.

One union of the building trades is still on strike, and Duluth is not yet wholly out of danger of sustaining a long delay in building operations, as there is a possibility that a general strike may be again precipitated. The contractors have so far refused to sign the new scale of the sheet metal workers, agreed upon by the conference committee last week, and the men have not yet gone back to work.

Although they were represented at the peace conference by one of their own members, the boss sheet metal workers have so far refused to ratify the agreement, and have refused to sign the new scale. The agreement was a compromise, the unions conceding half of their demand. It has been ratified by the unions, and the members are anxious to go back to work.

An effort is being made to have the Builders' Exchange instruct the boss tinners to live up to the agreement, and the trouble may be settled in this way and the danger of a general strike would be averted. The union of sheet metal workers has the power to call out all the other unions of the building trades in the Structural Alliance, and will probably do so unless the boss tinners come to time.

In order that the public may better understand why the sheet metal workers are still out, the unions have issued a statement, giving a history of the conference and its dealings with the sheet metal workers. The statement is as follows:

"To the editor of The Herald: I desire a little space in your paper in order to present to those interested the facts as they exist in reference to the dispute between the Sheet Metal Workers' union, No. 32, and the master sheet metal workers. It is generally known that a committee of experts was named to bring about a settlement of the strike after the first week of the struggle.

"This committee consisted of one member from each trade involved, and a like number from the ranks of the contractors. The committee met at the rooms of the Builders' Exchange, and Bishop McGolrick presided. Arthur Moore represented the local union of sheet metal workers, and Mr. McMartin represented the master sheet metal workers. Mr. Hallihan, while representing the master roofers, is also a master sheet metal worker, and took an active part with Mr. McMartin in reference to the sheet metal workers' agreement.

"It was agreed upon by the committee that the new scale should be 47½ cents an hour, instead of 50 cents, and that there should be one helper for every two journeymen, the helpers to be allowed to work eight and one-half hours. Journeymen were to be permitted to work overtime during the months of September, October and November for straight time on shop work, and there were a few other changes in the agreement.

"When the conference committee adjourned on May 8, everything was settled as far as the carpenters, builders' laborers, roofers and sheet metal workers were concerned, and all that the agreement needed was the signatures of both parties. The union at once signed the agreement, which it was obliged to do or go back on its word of honor. The master sheet metal workers have refused to sign, and some of them now claim that their representatives did not have full power to settle the differences, and others claim that only the wage question was settled.

"If their representatives did not have full power to settle the differences, why did they not say so at the time, or the next day, when the same conference met, and the minutes of the previous session were read? Why did they not object to the approval of the minutes? If the conference committee did not have full power to settle the dispute, why did the carpenters and building laborers' and their employers consider everything settled and return to work? What was the object of the conference unless the members had full power to arrange a settlement? Why do not the master sheet metal workers be men and come out and admit that they have repudiated the agreement, instead of trying to avoid signing it by making flimsy excuses?

"These are some of the questions we union men would like to have answered. Suppose that the parties were reversed, and the union had refused to consider the settlement as final, what would the public say? It would be pointed out as another instance of the unreliability of agreements made by trades unions being kept. We are willing to let the public decide which is right this time. Yours for a square deal.

"M. J. HARNEY."

FOUND WORK FOR MANY.

Employment Bureau Was Busy During First Half of May.

For the first half of the month of May, the Duluth Free Employment bureau did an exceptionally good business, and a total of 658 men were supplied with positions. This is probably the last month during which the city employment bureau will be in existence, as it will be discontinued as soon as the state bureau is established here.

Of the total number of men who were furnished with jobs by the free employment bureau so far this month, 258 gave their residence as Duluth, 241 stated that they resided in some other part of Minnesota, and the remainder came from points outside the state.

Most of the men were hired by the railroads for construction work, the Northern Pacific taking the majority of them for work in the western part of Minnesota. A large number of men were engaged for work right here in Duluth, and also some county work is being done.

If there is one member of the human system that will pay you back in full measure for all the injury you do to it, it is the teeth. Neglect is no worse than experimenting with worthless Dentifrices. Both will hasten the day of bitter regret.

Stand by SOZODONT and your teeth will stand by you.

MANY UNIONS AFFILIATE.

Revival in Labor Movement is General All Over State.

Seven additional unions have affiliated with the Minnesota State Federation of Labor during the past week. They are the railroad shopmen of Proctor, the machinists of Proctor, Red Wing brewery workers, Brainerd moulders, St. Cloud bricklayers, Winona boilermakers and St. Paul bartenders.

The affiliation movement is stronger at this time than ever before, and already the record for number of new unions affiliated has been broken. Forty-seven have already joined the federation this year, while the number last year was thirty-five.

All over the state there seems to be a general revival in the labor movement which is sperading rapidly in the small towns as well as the larger cities. One local union in Minneapolis, the inside electrical workers, reported twenty-two members three months ago, and now report a membership of fifty. The increase in the labor movement is about the same all over the state.

Install Unions Next Week.

The new charter and supplies for the recently organized Garment Workers' union have arrived and Organizer McEwen will install the organization next Wednesday evening. On Tuesday evening he will install the union of hoisting engineers whose supplies have also arrived.

Commission as Organizer.

W. E. McEwen of this city has just received his commission as organizer for the American Federation of Labor for the Minnesota district for the coming fiscal year. This is the twelfth commission of the same kind which Mr. Ewen has received from President Gompers. Each commission is for one year.

Hibbing Clerks to Reorganize.

Patterning after the clerks of Virginia the clerks of Hibbing are about to reorganize their union, and a request has recently been received by Organizer McEwen to go to Hibbing for the purpose of rounding up the members. The carpenters of that city are also talking of reorganizing their union. Fred Brennan, business agent of the Range Steam Shovelers' association, has been appointed to take charge of the organization work at Hibbing.

Bartenders May Organize.

A movement is being started in Duluth to organize a Bartenders' union, and a preliminary meeting of those eligible will probably be held in a few days. There is a question which must be decided, however, before the union can be organized. It is whether or not the men who work in first class saloons and are known as mixers shall have a separate union from those who work in second or third class saloons.

Want Organizer at Mankato.

The state federation has been doing organizing work in Winona during the past month, and now a request has been received from Mankato that a representative be sent there for the same purpose. The secretary of the state federation will refer the matter to the next regular meeting of the central council at St. Paul.

MRS. YERKES WINS DIVORCE

Widow of Multi-Millionaire Freed From Her Young Husband.

New York, May 18.—Justice Dowling in the supreme court yesterday granted an interlocutory decree of divorce to Mary Adelaide Mizner, formerly Mrs. Charles T. Yerkes, from Wilson Mizner, on the confirmation of the report of Louis B. Hasbrouck, who was appointed referee to hear the testimony. Mizner was a California promoter and is several years younger than his late wife.

The report of the referee is sealed and the decree simply states that it is granted by reason of the defendant's adultery. By the terms of the decree, Mrs. Mizner is permitted to resume her former name of Mary Adelaide Yerkes, and she may remarry as if the defendant in the case were dead. Mrs. Yerkes inherited most of the millions of her dead husband.

MRS. EDDY'S ASSESSMENT IN CONCORD INCREASED.

Concord, N. H., May 18.—Taking it for granted that the bond of $500,000 filed by the three trustees to whom Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, founder and leader of the Christian Science denomination, recently made over her property, reported, as required by law, twice the value of her taxable property, the Concord assessors this year have assessed Mrs. Eddy's property at $269,850. Last year she was assessed for $54,850.

DEATHS DUE TO STRIKES

One Man Killed in Evansville and One in Hoboken.

Car Derailed in Fight—Detective Shoots Down Bystander.

Evansville, Ind., May 18.—After a day of rioting and accident, the second day of the street car strike in this city ended with one man dead, six persons injured and all street car traffic completely suspended. Late last night Mayor Boehne called a special meeting of the board of safety and ordered 200 special policemen sworn in.

In the afternoon a street car manned by a non-union crew, going at full speed, jumped a curve at Eighth and Walnut streets and crashed into a two-story office building, partially destroyed the building, killing James Cater of Central City, Ky., a strike sympathizer, and injuring four others, including a baby 18 months old. The street car company makes the claim that a strike sympathizer boarded the car and after knocking down the motorman and conductor threw on the power to the limit, causing the derailment of the car.

Mayor Boehne is still making efforts to have the difficulty settled by arbitration. The street car company has so far refused to arbitrate, but the union men have agreed to the mayor's plans.

New York, May 18.—A fatal shooting and a desperate attempt to lynch the man who fired the shot, marked the strike of longshoremen in Hoboken yesterday. The man who lost his life, an innocent by-stander, Harry Marshall, was struck by a bullet fired by Benjamin Vincent, a private detective, employed on one of the docks, at a crowd of strikers with whom he had quarreled and who were pursuing him.

The trouble that resulted in the shooting began as Vincent entered a saloon near the docks and asked for a drink. As the bartender passed the bottle to him one of the striking longshoremen in the saloon shouted: "Don't give it to him. He is a scab." Vincent denied the implication, but the bartender withdrew the bottle and refused to serve him.

Just what happened then is not known, but a moment later Vincent dashed into the street, revolver in hand, and a crowd of strikers at his heels. As he reached the street he turned and fired at his pursuers. Marshall was standing on the sidewalk and the second bullet from Vincent's revolver struck him in the head and killed him instantly.

When Marshall dropped to the sidewalk the strikers started toward Vincent with cries of "lynch him, lynch him." Vincent turned and ran down the street with the revolver still clutched in his hand and the angry mob only a few feet behind him. When a policeman barred his way the fugitive swung his revolver up as if about to fire, but the bluecoat was too quick for him and sent him rolling in the street with a bullet in his leg. When the furious pursuers dashed up and demanded that the man be turned over to them, the policeman held him back until several other officers arrived and assisted in taking the prisoner to a police station.

THOSE WHO HAVE PASSED BEYOND

Berlin, May 18.—Prince Charles of Hohenlohe-Langenburg, eldest son of Prince Ernest, died at Hazelburg, yesterday. Immediately after his father's death in 1860, he renounced all rights and the large family estate so as to be able to marry Marie Grathwohl, a beautiful girl of the people. His rights passed to his brother, Prince Hermann, now viceroy of Alsace-Lorraine. The marriage of Prince Charles was solemnized in 1861. The couple lived in the greatest happiness for forty years, the wife dying in 1901. The king of Wurtemburg enobled her in 1890, conferring on her the title of baroness von Brom. Prince Charles was born in 1829. He was a major in the Wurtemburg army and a knight of the order of St. John.

Norfolk, Conn., May 18.—Prof. Gustave A. Stockel, the first head of the department of music at Yale university and the second oldest professor emeritus of that institution, died yesterday, aged 88.

Washington, May 18.—Ebenezer Ellis, aged 60, librarian of the United States fish commission, was found dead in bed at his home yesterday. Death is supposed to have been due to heart failure. He was appointed to the fish commission from Michigan in 1890.

Philadelphia, May 18.—Henry Whelen, Jr., society man and banker, died at his home at Devon, a suburb, last night from pneumonia. He was 58 years old and was the father of Mrs. Robert Goelet of New York.

FEEDING FOR HEALTH.

Directions by a Food Expert.

A complete change in food makes a complete change in the body. Therefore if you are ailing in any way, the surest road back to health is to change your diet. Try the following breakfast for ten days and mark the result.

Two soft boiled eggs. (If you have a weak stomach, boil the eggs as follows: Put two eggs into a pint tin cup of boiling water, cover and set off the stove. Take out in nine minutes; the whites will be the consistency of cream and partly digested. Don't change the directions in any particular.) some fruit, cooked or raw, cooked preferred, a slice of toast, a little butter, four heaping teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts with some cream, a cup of properly boiled Postum Food Coffee.

The Grape-Nuts breakast food is fully and scientifically cooked at the factory, and both that and the Postum have the diastase (that which digests the starchy part) developed in the manufacture. Both the food and the coffee, therefore, are predigested and assist, in a natural way, to digest the balance of the food. Lunch at noon the same.

For dinner in the evening use meat and one or two vegetables. Leave out the fancy deserts. Never over-eat. Better a little less than too much.

If you can use health as a means to gain success in business or in a profession it is well worth the time and attention required to arrange your diet to accomplish the result. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

TRADE GETS NEW POWER

The Seasonable Weather Causes Improvement in Retail Lines.

Ore Business Behind Last Year But Steel is Very Strong.

New York, May 18.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: "Improvement in retail trade followed the advent of seasonable weather at many points, and payments were more prompt as spring merchandise was distributed, but conditions are still irregular. Sensational advances in prices of farm products, especially wheat, followed reports of extensive damage to the crops, but frequent reactions emphasized the speculative nature of the rise in quotations and tended to restore confidence. Wholesale trade in fall goods is brisk from all points except where the crops have been seriously injured, and the net result of this forward business makes the outlook for the future fairly satisfactory. Manufacturing plants are kept busy, a further increase in the rate of pig iron production failing to keep pace with consumption and more imports were arranged. Freight movement is almost prompt, the supply of rolling stock more nearly equalling requirements, and there are fewer complaints of delays.

"Higher prices for pipe supplied the only change of importance in the iron and steel industry, the leading producer advancing quotations $4 per ton on most sizes. Several new contracts were placed, aggregations about 300 miles of six inch to eighteen inch pipe. Another feature of the week was the business in rails, covering the entire capacity of some mills up to the end of 1908. There was also a large tonnage of structural shapes, chiefly for building at the West, although bridge work continues to take much steel. Cold weather has made it difficult to handle ore, and in addition to the delay to boats by storms the movement has suffered because of car shortage at lake ports. Hence, the actual deliveries have fallen behind last year thus far, despite a greater and more urgent demand. Coke output and movement has attained such exceptional dimensions that prices are easier.

"Quiet conditions in primary markets for dry goods are largely due to the fact that manufacturers of cottons are sold so far ahead that the can not accept the attractive offers constantly made for early delivery. There is more disposition to provide for needs in the autumn, producers accepting contracts for remote delivery, and the market is not handicapped by accumulations at the mills. To this strong statistical position may be attributed the apparent indifference of the industry to the sharp rise in the price of raw material. Apathy in the exports division is partly due to high prices, but more to large stocks at Shanghai. Duplicate demand for woolens is still moderate, although enough business has been transacted in certain lines to assure a successful season and full operation of machinery, but there is still much uncertainty in the dress goods division, and many mills work only part time. Shipments of footwear from Boston are running slightly above the movement in the same week last year, but since Jan. 1 the aggregate is still below that of 1906 to date, although far surpassing previous years."

DEFEATED IN ADVANCE.

There is going to be another peace conference at The Hague shortly, when representatives of the civilized nations of the world will get together and solemnly talk about the day when swords shall be turned into plowshares and spears into pruning hooks; of the day when the world shall no more know the horrors of war, with its wanton destruction of human life and property, often for the most ignoble ends.

War has been waged to gratify the whims of woman; to please the fancy of mad kings; to satisfy the ambition of ruthless individuals; to satiate the cravings of bigotry; to settle religious differences that were not worthy of a single drop of human blood.

War has devastated peaceful and prosperous lands, drenching them with human blood, that rulers might give firmness to their tottering thrones. It has made widows and orphans and engulfed the world in misery that tyrants might win the smiles of courtesans. It has drained the youth and strength of nations because men differed on infinitesimal points of religious dogma.

Yet, though all nations that are classed as civilized are entering into the discussions at The Hague, the one vital subject that looks toward peace and toward replacing the exhausting and impoverishing maintenance of armies and navies by the upbuilding influences of governments devoted solely to bettering the condition of their people, will not be discussed.

Germany has flatly refused to discuss any proposal for disarmament, or even for the limitation of armament, and as one strong nation can block serious proposals along this line, the conference will talk about pretty nearly everything except the one thing it ought to be talking about.

It makes the peace conference look rather foolish, and in a large measure makes its results negligible in advance, but there appears to be no remedy for it. Disarmament will never come unless all nations agree upon it. No strong nation, looking for expansion and for extensions of its commerce, is going to lay down its arms while another retains its implements of warfare. If Germany refuses to go into the plowshare and pruning hook business, England and France will feel that they dare not do it themselves, even if they wish to, which is very doubtful indeed.

Some day universal peace will shed its benevolent and lifegiving influence over the earth. Navies will rot at their docks, cannon will rust upon unused forts, factories for making guns will be dismantled or turned to useful pursuits, and the ingenuity, intelligence and intellect now devoted to the uses of war will be turned to the noble use of making the lot of mankind better.

But it will not happen as the result of a peace conference where it is forbidden to even mention the proposal to disarm.

ASKS SYMPATHY, NOT PREACHING.

"Everybody preaches to me, but no one sympathizes. Just because I was naughty one time, the policemen come after me every time anything happens in this neighborhood." And Little Laura Viola Smith, aged 12 years, a veritable "victim of circumstances," tossed her head defiantly though she had hard work to restrain the tears as she sat in the Battle Creek police station charged with beating a small boy over the head with a poker.

A veritable little Ishmaelite is Laura, with no respect for others' property, especially if it be horse-flesh. Twice has she been arrested for stealing the steeds of citizens in order to enjoy wild gallops in the country and numerous other lawless acts are laid to her by the neighbors of her widowed invalid mother. Like "Old Dog Tray" of the once-popular rhyme, she has been given a bad name and no one will believe that there is any good in her.

Yet, the child is declared to be preternaturally bright by all who know her and, though many honest women predict for her a bad end, still these same prophets of evil confess that her misdeeds are due as much to her impish prankishness and her lack of proper care from her sick mother as to any innate evil in the nature of the girl. But certain is it that these neighbors and the police are doing all that lies in their power to send her down the path of disgrace and ultimate infamy.

What a sermon little Laura preaches all unconsciously in her defiant plaint! And how many children just like her find that "everybody preaches but no one sympathizes" and, because they have been naughty at times, they are treated like so many Ishmaelites with "every man's hand against them and their hand against every man!" Poor little waifs, most of them needing only care and sympathy to make them good and bright and true, and possessed just as truly of souls as the best of all of the boys and girls of their home town. Children whom the world gives a bad name and whom no one ever wants to help onward and upward to honorable manhood and womanhood.

Who knows but that little Laura Viola Smith, if she were given a good home with less preaching and more sympathy, would not develop into a woman of the highest principles? Why should neighbors and police seek to drive her downward? Why not help her with the sympathy for which she yearns? And why, too, not extend Christian helping hands to other Laura Viola Smiths who may be found in every city and town in this broad land of ours?

These are questions that little Laura's indignant plea asks all unwittingly but which are nevertheless a terrible arraignment of our modern Christian social ways. Certainly the giving of less preaching and more sympathy to her and to such as she is well worth the trial, for it may save the commonwealth much expense and redeem the souls of the little ones otherwise destined to become pariahs and outcasts.

SHAME!

There are worse things than being a burglar or a robber, and a case the Chicago papers are reporting just now proves it.

One day a citizen of Chicago, who doubtless passes himself off as an honest and substantial citizen, was in his office when a holdup man entered and presented a revolver and, after the ancient custom of the craft, bade him stand and deliver. The man stood, and delivered according to his ability, meanwhile upbraiding the hold-up man for the business in which he was engaged, and inquiring why he did not seek an honest livelihood as other men did.

The robber said he had been unable to find work.

The man that was being robbed said he would give him a chance to go to work and earn an honest living.

The robber thereupon, with tears of gratitude in his eyes, threw down his revolver, thereby renouncing the life of crime upon which he had just entered.

The honest and substantial citizen, taking advantage of the fact that the robber was then unarmed, grasped him, beat him severely, called a policeman, and had him arrested. Now he swears that he is going to insist that the full penalty of the law be inflicted upon the man who had robbed him, and as the evidence is ample, probably he will be able to carry out his threat.

Now what do you think of this honest and substantial citizen? If you had to make your choice, would you rather be guilty of his shameful deceit, or of a highway robbery? Fortunately, you do not have to make your choice, and perhaps you had better not even in an experimental way, for neither character is pleasant to contemplate.

The robber, it developed, has a wife and baby and had been out of work for some time. After vainly seeking it, he turned in desparation to the expedient of highway robbery. His empty pockets and his hungry wife and baby did not warrant him in becoming a criminal, though such painful circumstances have turned many a man to crime. But he is probably not a criminal by nature, and is certainly not entitled to the degree of punishment that he would be if highway robbery were his chosen profession.

If the honest and substantial citizen has his way, and the robber goes to the penitentiary, leaving his wife and child to face the storms of poverty alone, he is not going to have a very pleasant outlook upon the world, and the chances are that when he gets out he will have a grudge against society, and seek to take it out by a life of crime.

Yet work was all he wanted, the chance to earn bread for his family by honest labor, and when he was offered it he quickly abandoned his criminal intent and let his intended victim victimize him by a shameful deceit.

It's a queer world.

HOMESEEKERS' RATES.

The announcement in the local columns of The Herald last night that the Northwestern railroads had decided to give cheap rates for homeseekers in the Northwestern states, as usual, in spite of their previous determination to do nothing of the sort, proves The Herald's prophecy that the railroads are not so silly as to injure themselves to show their spite because of legislative reductions of passenger rates.

With the Southwestern roads using every possible effort to draw settlers, it would have been the height of folly for the railroads of the Northwest to cease their work along this line.

The rates are different, those to Minnesota and part of the Dakotas being one fare and a third for the round trip, and those to Montana and Washington being one fare plus $2 for the round trip. Perhaps this is the slap at Minnesota that the railroads have decided to content themselves with, but since the regular rates will be lower in Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota than in the Western states, the difference in the mileage rate will help offset the discrimination in the special rates.

Perhaps the example of the Southwestern roads may spur the roads of the Northwest to a more aggressive campaign for settlers than they have ever made before, which would result to the advantage of the Northwest, and hence to the railroads themselves.

HEART DISEASE.

One of the greatest dreads that afflict mankind is the fear of sudden death from what is commonly known as "heart disease," though the term covers a multitude of ills. There are few of the ills to which flesh is heir that cause more unnecessary worry than this class of ailments, yet men often live for many years with particularly aggravated cases of heart disease.

A case in point is that of A. Carson Warren, known far and wide as "the man with the musical heart." With his heart beats giving forth sounds like the low strains of a harmonica, indicating a very serious condition, Warren lived for twenty-five years, in fear of sudden death, and finally died of pneumonia recently after an illness of three days.

One reason for the widespread fear of this trouble is that in nearly every case of sudden and unexplained death, the cause is given out as "heart failure," though acute indigestion, apoplexy or some other condition may have been the cause of death.

Excessive smoking, eating or drinking may give rise to symptoms that the layman immediately diagnoses as heart disease, and only a visit to a competent physician will relieve his anxiety. There he will gain the knowledge that even if the symptoms with which he is afflicted do come from the heart, they are functional disturbances, not organic, and he can cure them promptly by right living.

Indigestion creates a series of sensations simulating heart trouble very closely, and many a man with a trifling case of dyspepsia has worried himself sick through his fear that his "heart is affected." Of course a physician should be visited in case of doubt, and an examination made by him, but in nine cases out of ten the patient will be told that his alarming symptoms will disappear if he pays a little more attention to his habits of living.

He will be told what he already knew, that he should chew his food thoroughly and not bolt it, that he should leave stimulants alone or use them in moderation, and that he should not permit his devotion to tobacco to run away with him. He will be told, doubtless, that he is not getting outdoor exercise enough, that instead of taking a car every time he should walk more, that he should get out and fish or hunt, that he should give himself some systematic exercise, and that he should cultivate the fresh air and give himself plenty of sleep.

People that live rightly, that eat what they desire until they find that it disagrees with them and then drop it, that sleep regularly and take their meals at regular hours, that devote a proper time to their eating and do not shovel their food in as though they were eating against time, that keep their blood in circulation and their pores open by healthful, invigorating exercise, that put in as much time as possible in the open air and that have plenty of fresh air in their living and sleeping rooms, are not bothered with disagreeable and alarming symptoms that keep them running to the doctor half the time.

HONESTY AND BUSINESS SUCCESS.

If anybody tries to tell you that the old rule that "honesty is the best policy" doesn't apply any longer, and that modern business methods have repealed it, don't you believe it.

It is true that appearances sometimes seem to prove it, and that some dishonest men have temporary successes, but if you will observe closely enough you will discover that they are only temporary. When they get caught at it their power to draw business is gone. The standard of business integrity is rising every day, because methods are frowned upon now that passed current as "good business" only a few years ago.

There are people that consider it "smart" to be cunningly dishonest; not dishonest enough to break the law or to become involved with a grand jury and a court proceeding, but just dishonest enough to "skin" the other fellow and to get something to which they are not entitled.

Would you hire such an individual if you were in business? Would you think much of the business judgment of a man who would? Wouldn't you be thinking all the time that if that employe would cheat a customer he would as quickly filch your money out of the cash drawer if he thought you wouldn't find it out?

A magazine tells a story that points the moral. Forty years ago a young attorney was struggling along in a little Ohio town, just starting in, and with business coming very slowly indeed. His first case was for a farmer whose cow had been killed by the Pennsylvania railroad, and who wanted to recover $75 damages. He won his case and got a judgment for the full amount. When he collected the money the farmer chuckled gleefully, said the young lawyer was all right for being clever enough to beat a railroad, and added that the cow was really only worth $40.

Instead of being pleased with the flattery, the lawyer demanded that the farmer return $35, and when he demurred, threatened to prosecute him for perjury. The farmer grudgingly returned $35 to the attorney, who sent it back to the railroad company with an explanation.

Those that believe it to be cunning to steal without violating law would call this young man "soft." The railroad people didn't. A week later he received a letter from the office of the president of the road, enclosing the card of the president and a check for $100, with the request that he consider himself retained to look after the road's interests in his county. The railroad officers were acute business people, and they knew their interests were safe with him because he was honest.

It wasn't very many years before that honest young attorney was in complete charge of the legal affairs of the railroad west of Pittsburg.

Is there any lesson in that story for you?

TWIN EVILS.

Twin evils in the workaday world are oversensitiveness and indifference, and it is hard to say which is the worse not only as regards the worker but also as concerns the employer. Both result equally in poor work—the one because the employe's nerves are all unstrung from superfeeling and the other because lack of interest prevents just service.

Simply because an employer finds fault with something that has been done in a manner that does not suit him, the oversensitive person imagines that his efforts are not appreciated. Such an one either goes into a "fit of the sulks" or broods downheartedly over what has probably passed from the mind of the superior almost as soon as it has been uttered and was never meant to be anything but a corrective intended for good.

Of course, there may be occasions where the criticisms of the employer may be unjust. He may have an attack of dyspepsia or the course of business may be going wrong or he may have some worries of which the employes cannot know. In such an event, the employe may be justified in feeling the wrong done. But the chances in the majority of cases are that the "boss" has reason for his complaint and, even if he has not, doubtless he considers himself privileged by his very position to find fault occasionally.

The only remedy for oversensitiveness is the careful cultivation of invariable cheerfulness coupled with the resolution to do one's best at all times. Even if there be carping criticism, the object of it should train himself or herself not to show resentment but rather to so labor as to turn the injustice into praise for work well done, remembering ever that fault-finding is usually a bad habit that has no real meaning.

Duluth's baseball club has made a creditable beginning, and here's luck to it for the season.

Wisconsin just missed the Rhode Island class by selecting a United States senator after a long deadlock, and the choice looks like a good one, too.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"I sincerely hope the 'See America First' movement will be productive of good results," said C. A. Taylor of San Antonio, Texas, at the St. Louis. "America has more interesting sights than any other country in the world, and I for one would be ashamed to be able to talk intelligently of all the noted beauty spots in the old world and then have to plead ignorance of what was worth seeing in my own land. And in America, I include Mexico.

"Mexico isn't as well known in the United States as it should be. As a spot for the tourist to spend a few weeks it will stand on a par with the most noted places in the world. It is a safe bet that there are towns of 10,000 inhabitants in the United States, and some of them bigger, where it would be impossible to find one man who ever in his life even heard the name of Lake Chapala, while every other village schoolmaster in America could write a treatise on any one of half a dozen little lakes, insignificant in size and not unusually beautiful, that are to be found across the Atlantic. Every farmer and schoolboy has heard of Europe's pretty lakes, but not two men in a city full of professors would be able to say if this fairy lake is in Mexico or the Philippine islands.

"At least the sportsmen of the United States should know of the lake, for it is a hunter's paradise. Lying between the lake and the town of Ocotlan are extensive flats that are overflowed at high water, and during the winter months these swamps are a favorite resort for myriads of geese, ducks of all kinds and sizes, swans, and, in fact, every variety of game bird that likes mud and water. The easiness with which they may be shot is shown by the market quotations for the birds in town. A shell for a breech-loading gun is worth two mallards. The birds are hardly ever disturbed to any extent, for the natives merely kill enough for their own use, and hunters who ar there for the sport alone are hardly ever seen.

"The real name of the lake is Chapala. It is 5,000 feet above the sea, its altitude counteracting the effect of the summer. It is surmounted by mountains, and it is quite the most beautiful spot I ever visited. The lake is seventy miles long, and covers 10,000 square miles of water."

SAID IN FUN.

Baltimore American: "That musician is very particular, isn't he?"

"Oh, dear me, dreadfully so. Why, he won't play a fine lullaby on anything else but a baby grand piano."

Chicago Tribune: "It isn't hard to understand why some jokes tickle," spoke up Uncle Allen Sparks. "It's because of their whiskers."

Cleveland Plaindealer: Miss Elderleigh—Jane Jones is a mean, spiteful old cat.

Miss Youngster—What's the matter?

Miss Elderleigh—I told her that my family came over in the Mayflower and she asked me if I was seasick.

Chicago Record-Herald: "I suppose you regard marriage as a failure."

"No," replied the lady who had secured three divorces. "I've succeeded in getting a fair bunch of alimony each time."

Yonkers Statesman: Redd—I see monkeys are remarkably keen of sight but deficient in the sense of smell.

Greene—That's the reason we see so many of 'em in automobiles, I suppose?

Chicago Tribune: "Why do you look at me like that, you great, awkward bear?"

"Oh, Miss Pimmle, I—I protest I'm not a—a bear."

"Well, why aren't you?"

Baltimore American: "That seemed such a queer marriage of Robinson's. How did he come to select his bride?"

"He found they had kept the same cook in the family for twelve years."

Philadelphia Ledger: The promoter had sold town lots that proved to be on the top of a lofty and barren mountain.

"Did you not claim," said an indignant investor, "that there was a city there?"

"Go easy," replied the promoter, "don't get excited. We all build castles in the air, you know."

June Is Coming.

June is coming with her laughter and her blithe, blue eyes,
With a glory that shall dazzle where her pathway lies,
Coming over wide, green oceans, urged by every breeze—
Wind swept oceans that shall later turn to golden seas;
June is coming with her laughter and her lack of care,
With her sweet lips cherry-stained,
With her gladdest wishes gained,
Garbed in gauzes and with roses fastened in her hair.

THE WEATHER.

Three successive spring days, bright, warm, charming and full of agreeable qualities, have finished a week that began with the worst possible conditions, including a northeaster and a snowstorm. This morning the air was fine, the sky was blemished only by light and fleecy clouds, and the sun was warm, though a north wind made it a trifle cooler than it was yesterday. The lowest temperature last night was 32 degs., and yesterday's highest was 66 degs. The weather man expects it to remain pleasant tonight and tomorrow, though it will be a little cooler tonight.

A year ago today it was warm and bright, and a year ago tomorrow it was cloudy and cool.

The sun rose this morning at 4:28 and sets tonight at 7:30, making 15 hours and 12 minutes of sunlight. Tomorrow the sun will rise at 4:27 and set at 7:41.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Pressure conditions have not changed materially since Friday morning. Disturbances central over Lake Superior, Oregon and Kansas caused some rain during Friday or last night in Montana, Manitoba, South Dakota, Nebraska and the lake region. Freezing weather occurred last night in Western Canada and North Dakota, elsewhere mild temperatures ruled. The outlook favors a continuance of pleasant weather in this section tonight and Sunday."

As Slow Our Ship.

As slow our ship her foamy track
Against the wind was cleaving,
Her trembling pennant still looked back
To that dear isle 'twas leaving.
So loath we part from all we love,
From all the links that bind us;
So turn our hearts, as on we rove,
To those we've left behind us!

When round the bowl of vanished years
We talk with joyous seeming—
With smiles that might as well be tears,
So fain, so sad their beaming;
While memory brings us back again
Each early tie that twined us,
O sweet the cup that circles then
To those we've left behind us!

And when in other climes we meet
Some isle or vale enchanting,
Where all looks flowery, wild and sweet,
And naught but love is wanting,
We think how great had been our bliss
If Heaven had but assigned us
To live and die in scenes like this,
With some we've left behind us!

As travelers oft look back at eve
When eastward darkly going,
To gaze upon that light they leave
Still faint behind them glowing—
So, when the close of pleasure's day
To gloom hath near consigned us,
We turn to catch one fading ray
Of joy that's left behind us.

Top, Bottom and Middle.

Wall Street Journal: There are 85,720,000 people living in the United States.

Of thesee there are, perhaps, 5,000,000 criminal or vicious, or "submerged" persons at the bottom who are more or less dangerous to the social order.

There are also at the top, perhaps, 5,000 criminal, vicious, law-defying rich, who are dangerous to public liberty and order.

This leaves 80,715,000 persons between these two classes, and upon these the safety of the republic rests. Recent events have demonstrated that in the main, the hearts and minds of these are right and sane, and that while uncompromising in their hostility to both the criminal rich and the criminal poor, they may be depended upon for a wholesome conservatism that will protect the fundamental principles of individual liberty and the rights of property.

All That Should Be Asked.

Chicago Evening Post: Haywood and Moyer will be tried fairly, to be punished if guilty and to be set free if not guilty. The man who asks more or less is not only an undesirable citizen, he is a dangerous citizen.

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

Why So Much Profanity?

Profanity is not one of the deadliest of sins. The habit may co-exist with the possession of stirling virtues. Some celebrated cases are on record of commanders, statesmen, authors, who were addicted more or less to the habit; but who nevertheless lived, on the whole, worthy lives and left in some cases a record of very creditable service of humanity. But these men, good and great as they might have been were that, in spite of this decided blemish on their characters. Certainly, the habitual use of ignoble expletives is not the mark of a gentleman; and taking the name of the Lord our God in vain is a direct disobedience of the divine commandments.

Whether the swearing habit is on the increase may not be easy to tell; but that there is a vast deal of it, those who go about the world even a little can testify. There are business offices in which the conversation between employes and even between managers is interlarded with oaths. On railroads and in hotel lobbies the listener's ears are often assailed by profane language and when large bodies of average men are brought together in close association for a longer or shorter time, the amount of profanity is often startling. That is one of the terrible incidental results of war. Boys and young men who would not swear at home, when away from the restraint of the family life and when undeterred by the presence of women, quickly catch the contagion of their surroundings and speedily acquire the habit, the chains of which it is fearfully hard to break. Somehow whenever the savage nature in man comes to the front through any provocation or through some unusual combination of circumstances, the violations of the Third Commandment multiply with astonishing rapidity.

Well, what can we do about it? Some of us can swear off before we begin. Many a man in mature life today would give his right hand if he had not, when a boy, yielded to this pernicious temptation. All the more reason, then, why the young should be taught not only the heinousness, but the foolishness of profanity.

It ought to be understood that a good many men swear because of absolute vacancy of mind, a paucity of ideas. They cannot carry on a steady, worth-while conversation and so they resort to "swear words." Maybe they think the gaps in their knowledge will be filled up thereby; but they don't deceive any except the most witless of their companions. A man who will swear simply because he has nothing else to say on a given subject, does not by this trick cover up his mental incapacity.

And don't my youthful friend, get the idea that it is a mark of growing manliness to be able to roll out the oaths. Facility in this form of expression can be easily acquired by any weak-minded boy; but it doesn't mark him as a man any more than it does to swagger around with a cigarette between one's teeth. I wish every lad who is tempted to profanity would go out into a vacant lot behind some barn and there test himself to see whether he really dare take the name of God in vain, when there is none by him to hear save God himself. If the motive for swearing has been to be heard of men or rather of boys, so that "the fellows" will think you are smart—and this is often the motive with the beginner—let him try this experiment and I believe it will at least sober and perhaps cure him.

No, there is no decent excuse for profanity. It ought to be banished from circles of so-called respectable men. It ought to be tabooed by every worthy institution in society. It ought to be altogether eliminated from our schools and colleges. It ought to be shunned by every gentleman as he would shun a viper.

SISTER OF MERCY WILL SUE PRIEST OF CHURCH

Strange Case Due to Come Up in Federal Court.

There is a romance and charm inseparable to most minds about the figure of a Sister of Mercy that makes almost incredible the connection of this representative of charity with the wrangling of a court of the law. For this reason the case to be brought at the July term of the United States court in this city by Sister Margaret, superioress of St. Augustine Hospital of Minocqua, Wis., against Father Hogan of Virginia, Minn., a priest of the Roman Catholic church, and also against the chief of police of Virginia for damages of $20,000 from each, is most startling to the vast majority of people. A Sister of Charity, the plaintiff, and a priest of the church the defendant in a suit for damages, is almost unheard of. Sister Margaret was in the city this week on business in regard to her case, which will come up for trial the second week of July. No small amount of interest has already been aroused in the case.

Sister Margaret had visited the ranges at various time soliciting funds for the support of the hospital, of which she is superioress, and upon a visit to Virginia last fall, so she alleges, she was unlawfully imprisoned at the instigation of Father Hogan. For the damage to her reputation among the people of the ranges and for mental distress the suit for damages will be brought.

"It's an awful thing," said Sister Margaret this week in speaking of the case, "that the work of our institution should be brought into such repute as this action could not help but bring. I am sure that the case will reach Rome before it is finished. A hospital like ours, maintained for the sick and suffering and poor and needy, is under an expense that must be met in large part by free will offerings. I brought the work to the notice of many people on the range who had no system or plan of giving, and it was a matter of free will after that whether they gave or not. Many were glad of the opportunity to give to a noble work. This is not the first time that a sister has received such treatment, but in the other case she was timid and afraid, and the matter dropped.

The case is such an unusual one that it will be watched with more than ordinary interest.

SISTER MARGARET,
Superioress of St. Augustine Hospital of Minocqua.

THE FIRST MAN TO FLY.

Kansas City Journal: At the Aero club the other night one of the members said that the first man to fly was neither Daedulus nor Icarus, but, according to the ancient Teutonic legend, Wieland, the smith. Wieland got into trouble with King Nidung of North Jutland, so the king ordered severed the Achilles tendons of both of Wieland's heels. Wi dehneinta dlutaoin land's heels. Wieland then built a flying cloak, for which his brother Egil provided the feathers. Wieland's faith was somewhat less than that of the usual inventor, since he forced Egil to make the first flight with the cloak. He purposely told him to fly against the wind, and to descend with the wind, which made it certain that he would be too smashed up when he landed to fly away with the coat. Egil had a terrible fall when he followed his brother's advice. Wieland, having made sure that the cloak worked all right, put it on and flew away, deserting his brother.

PERRY BELMONT, OF NEW YORK

By SAVOYARD.

(Copyright, 1907, by E. W. Newman.)

When August Belmont was chairman of the Democratic national committee that body had no headquarters and when Zachariah Chandler was chairman of the national Republican committee it had but one clerk. That is all changed. Politics in our country is a game that resembles war, in that organization is necessary to success, and money is requisite to organization. Hence it has become a saying with us that just as victory inclines to the side with the heaviest battalions in war between nations so victory comes to the side with the largest campaign fund in struggles between parties. And it follows that both political parties are busy before the conventions finding out who of the candidates can command the fullest camp chest.

Perry Belmont is convinced that the only way to better politics is to elevate the idea above the man, or the dollar, and to that end he is striving to secure legislation that will force publicity in the matter of contributions of money for political campaign purposes. He believes that the one way to improve conditions in our elections is to first improve conditions in party organizations. The way to do that is to nominate for office men for what they believe and for what they are—for the idea they stand for rather than the money they can command. He recognizes that political campaign funds are necessary, but he would make political ideas even more essential. He would have a party to appeal to the reason and the conscience rather than to the passion and the greed of the electorate. And where is the patriotic, honest man who has read and pondered the revelations touching th enational campaign of 1904 who is unwilling to aid Mr. Belmont in this endeavor? Mr. William J. Bryan has expressed his approval of it and nobody has openly opposed it. For some reason or other that it is not difficult to conjecture the animus of the Fifty-ninth congress refused to enact the legislation Mr. Belmont suggested.

Perry Belmont is the eldest son of August Belmont, who was so long prominent in politics, diplomacy, and finance. Born in Alcy, Alsace, in 1816, the son of a leading citizen of that province, who was a Republican, but not a terrorist, when the might yrevolution of 1789 burst upon Europe, and later, appointed to a political position of responsibility by Napoleon, then first consul, August Belmont received an excellent education, and when a very young man entered the banking house of the Rothschilds at Frankfort. So ready was he to master the science that ere he was twenty he was appointed as the head of the Rothschilds bank at Naples, Italy. At the ago of 21, he went to New York and there opened the house of August Belmont Co., which became the correspondent of the Rathschilds in the United States. Not lonfi after he began business he became an American citizen, joined the Democratic party, and was active in behalf of Polk and Dallas in the campaign of 1844.

There were two factions of the New York Democracy. At the head of one was Martin Van Buren, with Silas Wright and Samuel J. Tilden for lieuenants. These became the "Barn burners." The other faction was headed by William L. Marcy, then, and for years later, the best fitted man in the entire country for the office of president of the United States. eBlmont became a partisan of Marcy, and when the latter was appointed secretary of state he selected Belmont for minister to The Hague. While James Buchanan, minister to England; Pierre Soule, minister to Spain, and John Y. Mason, minister to France, were writing the Ostend manifesto, Belmont was entering into conventions with Holland that opened the Dutch East Indies to our trade and resulted in incalculable advantage to American commerce, that began to grow about that time. He also participated in the diplomatic congress of Paris and his discussion of the practice of privateering in time of war comcanded the attention and exorted the admiration of every European chancellery.

When Marcy ceased to be secretary of state, Belmont returned to America. He was now active in politics—not for office, but for ideas. He might have been governor or senator had his ambition been in that direction. Ho had gone to The Hague only with the view to serve the country in a diplomatic capacity, for which he was splendidly equipped. When Buchanan and Douglas parted company, Belmon followed the latter, and supported him in the Charleston convention to the end, and later was active in his behalf at Baltimore. No man in the country had a clearer vision of the situation when secession came than August Belmont. His letters and speeches of that period are models of strong, terse, convincing logic expressed in perfect English that any one born to that tongue might well envy. In the light of subsequent history they read like prophecy. No man at the North was a better friend of the South. Few men of the North saw the inevitable result as clearly as he. But his warning fell on deaf ears, and at Appomattox the South was crushed.

About 1862 the government sent Archbishop Hughes and Henry Ward Beecher to England to make public opinion for the North. At that time Lord Palmerston was prime minister. He was a Southern sympathizer. A typical beef-eating Englishman, he was to statesmanship what Tom Sayres was to pugilism. He hoped the South would win, and believed it would win. Two sentimentalists like Hughes and Beecher were only calculated to irritate such a man as Palmerston, but the cool heads at Washington requested August Belmont, a man of as much common sense as Palmerston himself, to talk the thing over with the British foreign office. He soon convinced them that the cause of the South was hopeless as long as the North was determined, and it was manifest to all that the North was determined. No man did more to prevent English interposition, and no other man did so much to place United States government loans with European bankers. Had he been secretary of the treasury the war would have cost about 40 per cent of what it did cost, so far as was shown in the national debt statement. There would have been no greenbacks.

Mr. Belmont supported McClellan in 1864, and Seymour in 1868. When Greeley was nominated, he resigned from the chairmanship of the national committee. He was a delegate to every national convention from 1860 to 1884, both inclusive. He died in 1890, after having been a leader of his party, and a conspicuous citizen of the United States for fifty years.

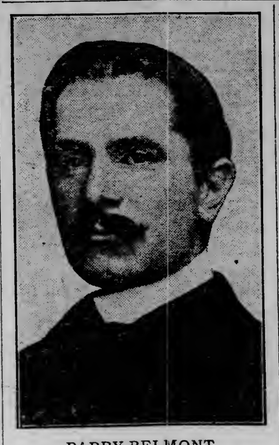
Edmund Perry, of Devonshire, Eng., was a direct descendant in the sixth generation from Sir William Wallace, hero of Scotland. He came to America in 1630 and settled in Massachusetts. A descendant of his, Christopher Ray Perry, a naval officer of the United States, was the father of five sons, all officers of the United States navy—Oliver Hazard, Raymond H. J., Matthew C., James Alexander, and Nathaniel Hazard. The history of our navy could not be written without copious narration as to at least two of these, the eldest, hero of Lake Erie, and the third son, Matthew C., the man who introduced Japan to civilization. The Rodgers family contributed as abundantly to the American navy as did the Perrys, and the two are of close-kin.



PARRY BELMONT.

Commodore Matthew C. Perry's wife was a sister of John Slidell, formerly United States senator from Louisiana, who, with James M. Mason of Virginia, was a Confederate commissioner to the courts of Europe. They were taken from the British merchantman Trent, during the war of 1861-1865, and but for the coolness and good sense of Abraham Lincoln, the episode would have been followed by war, when the United States had on hand all the war she could stand. August Belmont married a daughter of Matthew C. Perry, and of that union Perry Belmont was the eldest child.

Perry Belmont was born Dec. 28, 1851. He received his education at the best schools of both hemispheres—Harvard, the University of Berlin, and Columbia law school. He chose the law for a profession and upon his admission to the bar entered the office of the firm of which William M. Evarts was the head. His father and Charles O'Conor, the dean of the American bar, were intimate associates and personal and political friends; but O'Conor had practically retired from practice, and perhaps that is why young Belmont was not associated with him. "On form," as the race folks say, Evarts was our greatest lawyer. He appeared for Andy Johnson in the impeachment proceedings. He was chief counsel of the United States before the Geneva tribunal of international arbitration. He was senior counsel for Hayes before the electoral tribunal. He was successful in all. It was in the office of the firm headed by this great jurist, whose life ambition it was to be chief justice of the United supreme court that Perry Belmont was fitted for a public career.

In 1880 young Belmont was elected to congress from a Long Island district. It is the general impression that he was a Tammany man. That is an error. He first appeared in the national councils in 1881, upon the assembling of the Forty-Seventh congress. Keifer was speaker and the Republican majority very narrow. No one dreamed that Perry Belmont's name would be on every tongue before the first session was completed, but it was heralded from one end of the country to the other in the spring of 1882, when he had the temerity to enter the list against James G. Blaine, then the idol of the Republican party and one of the very powerful individuals in public affairs in the United States.

Mr. Blaine became secretary of state in 1881 against the advice of his friends and contrary to his personal inclinations. Nobody knew better than he that his place was in the forum rather than in the closet. He had had no training for the cabinet, least of all, the state departments, whose head is expected to write dispatches for the criticism of every foreign office of the Old world. In the senate or the house he was at home, ready for all comers—if not the ablest, certainly the most dashing and audacious debater of his day. But Blaine was uxorious; that accounts for his becoming the head of the cabinet. He could and would have managed Garfield anyhow, from the senate chamber as from the state department. In a little while Blaine fell in love with his new job, and doubtless had dreams of Richelieu, of Chatham, of Bismarck. Maybe he hoped to splinter a lance with that greater Blaine—Benjamin Disraeli.

Perry Belmont speaks, reads, and writes French like the most cultivated Parisian, and one day Samuel J. Randall said to him that a Frenchman was persistently after him about some claim or other in connection with Peru, and he asked Belmont to talk with the man in his own tongue and find out what it was. Belmont did have the interview, and that is the beginning of the story. Chile and Peru were just out of a war, in which Peru was disastrously defeated. It was a good time to administer on her affairs, and our government was sought to be made a collecting agent for some rather shady claims. Morton, Bliss & Co. were interested in it, and Mr. Blaine had written a letter the import of which was to force the collection. I wish I had the space to enter into the particulars, though it is a not very edifying chapter in our history.

Belmont was on the committee on foreign affairs. He cared nothing about the claim, but he cared much about the practice of making the United States a collecting agent for all sorts of scamps, and especially foreign scamps whose pretensions had been repudiated by their own state departments. Then, as now, in the matter of campaign funds, Belmont hoped to cure the disease and disregard the symptoms. He prepared a resolution of inquiry, but Mr. Kasson, another member of the committee, rose at the same time, was recognized, and offered a resolution practically identical with Belmont's. The investigation began, and the house committee on foreign affairs became the news center of the capital. Belmont had no disposition to assail Blaine, and no intention of doing so; but Mr. Blaine voted himself impugned and came down on the committee in characteristic Blainesque fashion. He was mad, and mad clear through. What was more, he was astonished, and resolved to sweep Perry Belmont off the political chess board.

The testimony of Mr. Blaine consumed many sittings of the committee, and Belmont's examination of him was just like Senator Morgan's examination of C. P. Huntington—Belmont was resolved to have an answer and Blaine was determined not to give an answer. There was a quibble about quotation marks. There was a question as to the integrity of our minister to Peru, and a great many other things; but Belmont clung with bulldog tenactiy to Blaine's letter of instruction, and Blaine persisted in an attitude of insolence that grew into insult. This policy had served him well in a former investigation, and he had little doubt that he would browbeat Belmont now. He was never so much mistaken in his life, and probably never so much astonished as when Belmont met his bluster with a resolute and aggressive emphasis that meant business of the most serious character. Kasson, a consummate diplomat, interposed and put an interpretation on Mr. Blaine's language that amounted to a retraction; Blaine assented and Belmont acquiesced. There would have been no trouble if Blaine had understood that Belmont was assailing a system and policy and was moved by no personal animosity.

The result of that inquiry was, or whether it resulted from it or other cause, the system was destroyed, and no longer does our government sell its recognition of this or that revolutionary in a South American state in consideration of the payments of this or that claim, honest or dishonest against the state.

The Forty-eighth congress was Democratic, and Mr. Belmont became chairman of the committee on foreign affairs. He carned this appointment by a speech he had made in the previous congress on the subject of South American affairs that was an exhaustive discussion of the entire question and a full and complete history of our relations with Peru, and that speech is now become our policy in that particular.

He was four times elected to congress from the Long Island district of New York, and served in that body until he was appointed minister to Spain, near the close of the first Cleveland administration. It is worthy of note that he was still at that post when Mr. Blaine cordially approved his course in certain negotiations with the Spanish foreign office. In congress Mr. Belmont was a very active member, and ceaseless in industry. The bills, reports and speeches emanating from him covered a wide range, and were devoted to numerous subjects. He was also frequently on the stump, and contributed copiously to the press on matters of public interest.

He was always a Democrat, and fixed in the principles of the party, but he refused to support Mr. Bryan in 1896, and became a leader in the Palmer and Buckner movement. Only a man born a Democrat, and a Democrat for what he believes, can tell what it costs to engage in a bolt of a regular ticket. The abuse that it brings is as nothing. It is the sorrow and the regret of a severed relation that oppresses. He supported Mr. Bryan in 1906.

But this paper has come to its allotted length. True to his lineage, Belmont served in the war against Spain, as did eight of his kindred, but he never ceased to distrust the Republican party and to hope for the return of the Democracy that he believes in to power. His present ambition is to lend his endeavor to the advancement of ideas rather than men in political affairs, and when that is accomplished enlightened progress will follow as the dawn the dark.

To Get More Strength from Your Food.

WHEN the Bowels are filled with undigested food we may be a great deal worse off than if we were half starved.

Because food that stays too long in the Bowels decays there, just as if it stayed too long in the open air.

Well, when food decays in the Bowels, through delayed and overdue action, what happens?

The millions of little Suction Pumps that line the Bowels and Intestines then draw Poison from the decayed Food, instead of the Nourishment they were intended to draw.

This Poison gets into the blood and, in time, spreads all over the body, unless the Cause of Constipation is promptly removed.

That cause of Constipation is Weak, or Lazy Bowel Muscles.

When your Bowel-Muscles grow flabby they need Exercise to strengthen them, not "Physic" to pamper them.

There's only one kind of Artificial Exercise for the Bowel-Muscles.

Its name is "CASCARETS," and its price is Ten Cents a box.

So, if you want the same natural action that a six mile walk in the country would give you, (without the weariness) take one Cascaret at a time, with intervals between, till you reach the exact condition you desire.

One Cascaret at a time will properly cleanse a foul Breath, or Coated Tongue.

Don't fail to carry the Vest Pocket Cascaret Box with you constantly.

All Druggists sell them—over ten million boxes a year.

Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC."

CITY MAY LEASE MAIN

No Legal Bar to Action by Water Department.

Several Contracts Are Awarded for Water and Gas Extensions.

City Attorney Bert Fesler has rendered an opinion to the board of water and light commissioners that there is nothing in the city charter to prevent the city from leasing the gas main of the Prindle Gas company in First alley between Mesaba avenue and Third avenue east, and the board has instructed the president to confer with the representatives of the gas company with a view of entering into a lease in accordance with the city attorney's opinion.

Mr. Fesler has suggested that the lease, if made, should contain a provision that it will not prevent the city in any way from acquiring the mains through condemnation proceedings later on if it is found necessary to take them for the benefit of the public. The suggestion is entirely in keeping with the views of the commissioners and the lease, if made, will probably contain a protective clause for the city along the line mentioned.

The necessity of acquiring another gas main through the business portion of the city was announced by the board of water and light commissioners several days ago, at which time the board recommended the acquisition of the Prindle Gas company's unused main in First alley, by condemnation proceedings. The gas company, however, made a counter proposition of leasing the main, and the matter was referred to the city attorney for his opinion as to the legality of such an arrangement.

Nine contracts for water and gas extensions were awarded by the board at its last meeting.

Fairbanks, Morse & Co. was awarded the contract for an extension in Regent street to cost $793, and another in Huron street to cost $438.

Engle & Runquist were awarded the contract for an extension in East Fourth street to cost $873 and another in East Sixth street to cost $1,399.

Pastoret & Lunz were awarded a contract for an extension in Olivo street to cost $243, one in West Fifth street to cost $379 and another in Tioga street to cost $1,079.

Thomas & McCoy were awarded the contract for an extension in East Third street to cost $348, and another in East Second street to cost $415.

MR. HILL'S INSTRUCTIONS.

Judge: It is distinctly forbidden among the railroads everywhere to haul dead bodies on freight trains. It was also as distinctly forbidden in the offices of the Great Northern to disturb James J. Hill after he had gone home for the day. An attempt to violate the former rule resulted in a flagrant violation of the latter.

Application was made by an undertaker in a North Dakota town for permission from the local agent of the Great Northern to ship a late lamented to St. Paul on an afternoon freight, the deceased having carclessly waited till after the passenger train had gone before cashing in.

"I can't do it," said the agent. "It's against the rules."

"Ask the division superintendent," urged the undertaker.

"I will, but it won't do any good," was the reply.

The agent was right, but the division superintendent asked the official next above him, and so on till the office of Mr. Hill was appealed to as a court of last resort.

Much against their inclinations, the office assistants referred the matter to the magnate, who was at that time (11 p. m.), at his home between the Twin Cities. Mr. Hill looked over the message and grimly affixed thereto the following indorsement over his signature:

"Hold corpse till you get a full car load."

ROCKEFELLER SHREWDNESS.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: Even in his early youth, Frank Rockefeller must have possessed a good share of that Rockefeller shrewdness that later made the Standard Oil company possible. The brother of the oil king told a story yesterday of boyhood craftiness, while joking about the reports that he had met serious financial loss in salted mines and other speculations.

"I see they have me 'broke' again," laughed the former Standard official. "Well, if I am, I won't always be, for I'm to have a $12 a month pension beginning in August. You can do lots of things on $12."

He referred to the pension that all Civil war veterans between the ages of 62 and 70 years are to receive, under a recent act of congress.

"I have always received the blanks that would give me $12 a month if I were to sign them," said Mr. Rockefeller, "but even if I am broke, I am going to wait until after my next birthday, the 10th of next August. You see the government records show me to be 64 years old, but the family Bible makes me out only 62. That's the reason I am going to wait until August before taking oath that I am 62."

When I wanted to go into the army my parents at first tried to keep me out of it and then told me to go ahead, for then thought I couldn't get in anyhow, as I was only 16. So I thought I would go The day I went down to enlist I wrote down eighteen and put it in my shoe. Prof. White, principal of the high school here then, was the recruiting officer. He had known me nearly all my life and when I came along and wanted to enlist he looked at me suspiciously. 'Are you 18?' he asked me. 'I'm over 18,' I told him, thinking of the eighteen in my shoe. He let it go at that and I went into the Seventh Ohio."

At that time it cured me of a bad attack of backache and lameness which made me stop work. I was unable to stoop and the pain was severe just over the kidneys and through the loins. Plasters and other remedies I used brought no radical benefit. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me so strongly that I decided to try them. SETTLER MISSING

Henry Hunke, Formerly of Duluth, Disappears From His Claim.

Brother Thinks He Was Murdered, Although He Was Despondent.

Spooner, Minn., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—A young man named Henry Hunke, who has been living on his claim on Rapid River, near Clementson postoffice, has disappeared and no trace has been found of his whereabouts. The people in the neighborhood have formed themselves into searching parties, and with a number of dogs have skirted the adjacent swamp and timber, but no clue has been found. Whether it is a case of self-destruction or foul play, is not known. His brother, William Hunke, who has a claim close by Henry's, believes it is murder and has notified Sheriff Bailey at Bemidji to come and investigate.

Henry Hunke has been a sufferer from tuberculosis for some time. He came here two years ago, and last January he took his final proof. Of late young Hunke has not been feeling as well as usual, and has been more or less despondent. A will, drawn by himself, was found on the table in his cabin.

He was cleaning up about the spindles, and contrary to the rules, reached under a spindle, which was in motion. MUST BUY THE LAND

If Homesteaders Have Settled on Swamp Land Through Mistake.

St. Paul, May 18.—Samuel G. Iverson, state auditor, says the state will do all it can to aid bona fide settlers in Itasca county, who settled on federal land two years ago, but who now find themselves on state swamp land. George H. Spear, attorney for the homesteaders, consulted with Mr. Iverson on the subject yesterday. Mr. Iverson said:

"If it is demonstrated that the homesteaders are actually on state swamp land though they thought it federal land they were homesteading, there is nothing to do under the law but for them to buy the land from the state. There is no method of which I know whereby the state can be authorized to give the land to the settlers. If there can be found to be any flaw in the original field notes by which the demonstration can be made that the settlers are on federal land, then their rights can be adjusted through the office of the governor."

MURDER IS SUSPECTED

By Finding of Remains of John Johnson in Gull Lake.

Disappeared From Tenstrike in February and Also Companion.

Bemidji, Minn., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—What may later prove to have been a cold blooded murder was uncarthed at Tenstrike Thursday, when the body of an unknown man was found in Gull lake about ten feet from the shore. The remains were later identified at those of John Johnson.

It developed that early in February John Johnson and another man, named Peter Matthison, hired out to William Fellows to cut timber, and they established their camp near the lake and batched it while doing the work. The men were busily engaged for five or six weeks cutting logs on the claim of William Fellows, two miles from town.

At the time of the disappearance of Johnson, Matthison also disappeared for two weeks, and when he returned for his clothes and money his story was a plausible one.

He said that he had been sick in the hospital for the past two weeks and that he and his partner were going to locate in the West. And that his partner had already gone. With this story he succeeded in arousing no suspicions and also was permitted to take with him his clothes as well as those of Johnson, and the balance of the money for work due both men was paid by Fellows to Matihison.

A short time after this he was again seen on the streets of Tenstrike, well dressed and in an intoxicated state. He stated to several parties here that he was intending to go West, and with this the incident closed with the Tenstrike people until the find yesterday.

LUMBER DEALERS UP AGAINST IT

Attorney General Refuses to Allow Incorporation as Desired.

St. Paul, Minn., May 18.—Julius A. Schmahl, secretary of state, has refused to file and record the articles of incorporation of the Minnesota Retail Lumber Dealers' association, and has been sustained by the attorney general's department. These articles were presented to the secretary of state for filing on March 12, and at that time were refused on the ground that the association appeared to be organized and conducted in restraint of the anti-trust laws. Mr. Schmahl admitted that this was not established, but referred the articles of incorporation to the attorney general to pass upon their legality.

George T. Simpson, assistant, replies that the articles are defective in that they do not give the names of the first board of directors, and that being defective in this particular, he does not find it necessary to pass on the point of restraint of trade, which Mr. Schmahl raises.

Those signing the articles of the Minnesota Retail Lumber Dealers' association are: George P. Thompson, H. L. Trimble, R. B. Clark, George H. Rogers, E. Hudson and Theo. S. McLaughlin.

One paragraph in the articles with which Mr. Schmahl finds fault is the following:

"We are pledged as members of this association to buy only from manufacturers and wholesalers who do not sell direct to consumers where there are retail lumber dealers, who carry stock reasonably commensurate with the demands of their communities, and we are pledged not to buy from lumber commission merchants, agents and brokers who sell to customers but do not carry stocks, nor from a manufacturer who sells to such lumber commission merchant, agent or broker."

TRAGEDY ON FARM

Hadleyville Girl Accidentally Killed While Scuffling With Brother.

Head Blown Off While Attempting to Seize a Loaded Rifle.

Hadleyville, Wis., May 18.—Another "didn't know it was loaded" tragedy occurred on a farm three miles beyond Hadleyville, in the direction of Eau Clair Thursday afternoon.

Jasper Jensen got out his rifle to shoot hawks and playfully teased his sister with being a girl and afraid of guns. She accepted the half challenge and wrestled with the boy for possession of the weapon. In the tussle the firearm was discharged, blowing off part of the girl's head. She died half an hour later, after suffering terrible agonies. Her brother became frantic over the accident and it is feared the shock will upset his reason.

An added element of pathos is found in the fact that the whole family had given up the day to rejoicing over the home coming of the father who had been in the hospital and just been discharged. To welcome her father home, Miss Jensen had stayed away from school. She was only 14 years old.

The authorities at Eau Claire were notified, but as it was purely an accident, will take no action.

PEACEMAKER MAY DIE.

Harry Andrews, Brakeman, Receives Serious Wounds in Eau Claire Saloon.

Eau Claire, Wis., May 18.—Harry Andrews was fatally injured in a cutting affray yesterday in the saloon of Pat Cunningham. Two railroad men named Riley and Lynch were scuffling in the saloon, when Andrews, a brakeman, entered. Stepping in between them, Andrews attempted to separate them.

Riley whipped out a long, sharp knife, with which he cut the left side of Andrews' head, severing the temporal artery.

Andrews fainted and it is not believed he can live. The doctors revived him with injections of strychnine so that he was able to tell his story. His assailant is in jail.

Martin Angwick of Chippewa Falls Succumbs to Heart Failure.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., May 18.—Martin Angwick, a well-known attorney and politician, was found hanging dead yesterday on a picket fence in front of a hospital. The cause of death was enlargement of the heart. Apparently he had been stricken while taking a walk and hurried to the hospital for aid. Nurses heard him shouting for help at 11 o'clock, but thought he was a drunken man. He was employed by the state treasury department in 1894-1896.

OFFICERS CONFIDENT

That They Have Woman Who Murdered Babe at Calumet.

Coroner Fisher Holds Postponed Inquest on the Remains.

Houghton, Mich., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Coroner Fisher today held an inquest over the remains of a babe found a short time ago near Calumet. The inquest was postponed from the time the body was found, until some clue to the identity of the murderer could be found. This was accomplished when Annie Slakovich was arrested this week by Under Sheriff Vivian at Quincy. According to the county officers and the Calumet authorities, Rudolph Simonson of Calumet, on the morning of Monday, May 6, saw a woman leave a bundle in Tamarack park, near Calumet. He investigated and found that the bundle contained the body of a new born female child. It was wrapped in an Austrian newspaper and an old skirt. Since that time the officers have been working on the case and suspicion pointed strongly to the Slakovich woman.

Simonson said that he did not know the woman and that she eluded him when he chased her. He would know her should he see her again, however, and she will probably face him at her preliminary examination.

At the time County Physician Jackson of Houghton said that the child lived after birth, but that it was impossible to tell whether it had been strangled or not, as was thought at the time. The woman was once located by the officers in Blue Jacket at the home of her brother-in-law, Louis Chinchen, but she eluded them. Afterwards she was apprehended in Houghton, but the authorities were uncertain and were forced to release her, after her story was told.

TO MAKE LAND

By Washing Down the Hillside at West Hancock Into Ravine.

Lake Linden, Mich., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—A decidedly novel enterprise is being conducted at Hancock by a company of local moneyed men. It is the creation of new real estate in the West Hancock addition by washing down the adjacent hills into ravines. The hydraulic system is used. Tests of the practicability of the unique scheme were made last year, and with such success that operations on an extensive scale were instituted this season. A considerable area of new land will have been created when the plans of the company are carried to completion, and will be platted and sold in small parcels to prospective builders.

Mining Company Brings Suit Against Man Who Violated Agreement.

Houghton, Mich., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—A special session of the Chippewa county circuit court is being held at Sault Ste Marie to hear the case of the Wheatkate Mining company vs. Ollie Mulari et. al. This is a suit brought against Mulari to restrain him from conducting a saloon on certain property in the village of South Range, Houghton county. After Circuit Judge A. T. Streeter had granted a temporary injunction against Mulari he granted a change of venue to the Chippewa county court. It seems that Mulari bought a piece of property formerly owned by the mining company and that one of the stipulations in the deed was that liquor should never be sold on the premises. This is not denied by the defense. It is claimed, however, that the company allows the sale of liquor on its property.

REDS BOW TO HORSE

Carlisle Girl Graduate Develops New Cult Among Indians.

Tribesmen Do Her Bidding in Strange Rites About Head.

Fort Berthold, N. D., May 18.—Under the leadership of Annie Enemyheart, a new religion, or rather a recrudescense of the old heathen practices, has sprung up among the Indians of the Fort Berthold reservation and is causing much excitement.

Annie Enemyheart is a graduate of the Carlisle Indian school, and by reason of her superior educational advantages has much influence with her tribe. Recently a horse belonging to the father of the woman died and she has succeeded in making the Indians believe that the spirit of God has entered into the dead body of the horse.

She caused the head of the horse to be cut off and dressed with bright pieces of calico. An altar was erected in the Elbow woods, close to the reservation, and on this the gally decorated horse's head has been placed and here the Indians assemble and go through their strange worship, which seems to be a modification of the older sun worship.

Already the missionaries are complaining that the new cult has made sad inroads upon their congregations and they are making strenuous efforts to regain their hold. They express fear that the influence of the woman will become so great that the Indians may cause trouble.

BULLET ENDED HER DISGRACE

Sad Story Behind Murder of Ermel Willard at Epping.

Epping, N. D., May 18.—It develops that Ermel Willard, 18, who was killed by her lover, Alfred Thorson, 36, Monday, and who, after the deed, committed suicide, had an illegitimate child born to her a week ago.

The story of the tragedy dates back two years. Thorson was then an ardent suitor for Miss Willard's hand. She did not return his affection, however, and when he became too importunate she left home and went to Minnesota. There she formed new acquaintances and entered into a romance which ended in deception and sorrow, and in time she was left alone.

Five months ago Thorson, who had remained behind when the girl went away, learned of her trouble and went to her. He persuaded her to return to her parents' home. Then he renewed his suit, but with no better success than before. The girl now loved another, and even her early admirer's willingness to remove her from the disgrace which she faced could not move her to marry him.

After many refusals on her part to become his wife, Thorson's love turned to hate. A week ago her baby was born, and Monday Thorsun went to the house and obtained admission to the room where the girl lay with the little one on her breast.

Two shots were fired and the family rushed in and found the tragedy accomplished.

LIQUORS BURNED.

Another Staggering Blow Dealt at Bismarck to Violators of New Law.

Bismarck, N. D., May 18.—Four drays of booze, seized some weeks ago by the state temperance commissioner and the chief of police of this city, were burned yesterday afternoon at the capital. Since the stuff was seized it has been stored in vaults at the capitol waiting for the order of justice court. Under the direction of Temperance Commissioner Murray and State Attorney A. T. Patterson, and with Justice Gilbert present, every box and cask was opened, tasted and held to be intoxicating liquor and the justice ordered it all destroyed under the new law.

MASON GETS $12,600,000.

Visit of Stork Would Take Away Only $600,000 From Smith's Heir.

Abedeen, S. D., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—There have been many stories concerning the amount of the fortune of the late James Henry Smith to which G. G. Mason of Aberdeen has fallen heir. It has been estimated all the way from $5,000,000 to $20,000,000, and most of the guesses were wrong.

It has been pretty well established, according to word received by friends of Mr. and Mrs. Mason in Aberdeen that the actual amount which Mr. Mason inherited is $12,600,000, so that the recently published statement that he has received $13,000,000 is approximately correct, a mere bagatelle like $400,000 making no difference to speak of.

The will further provides that in case the stork should visit Mrs. Smith, the only loss to Mr. Mason will be the odd $600,000.

Mrs. Mason will be in Aberdeen next Sunday and will remain here until her household goods are packed and shipped.

SURVEYORS WORKING NEAR EDGERLY, N. D.

Edgerley, N. D., May 18.—Much interest is being taken over the prospect of a north and south railroad, the proposed line to extend from Winnipeg to Galveston, Tex., and to be known as the Midland Continental. Fifteen men have their tents pitched southeast of here in the vicinity of Merricourt and are working this way on the survey, and will pass through here and thence north to and through Jamestown. G. P. Beach is in charge of the survey in this section and says construction work will begin from both ends next year.

Bismarck, N. D.—There is a report on the street that Attorney D. B. Townsend will take an appeal to the supreme court against the decision of Judge Pollock in the removal case against State's Attorney Patterson.

While engaged in athletic practice Friday, John Logan, aged 14 years, a student in the East Grand Forks schools, was struck on the head with a hammer and his skull fractured. His condition is serious.

Grafton, N. D.—Forest River has honored its oldest bridegroom. The village band serenaded Capt. James Carpenter, aged 82 years, and his bride, who is only half as old, and citizens displayed decorations almost as lavishly as on the Fourth of July.

WORK ON WATER SYSTEM

For Mining Locations on Copper Range Started by Contractor.

Houghton, Mich., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—James J. Byer, the well known Houghton contractor who built the new Keweenaw Central railroad and successfully carried out several others of the largest contracts in this district within the past couple of years, started work this week on a water system for the Copper Range Consolidated Mining company at Baltic on the south range. This system will supply Trimountain, Painesdale and Baltic, all mining locations of the Copper range.

TO INVITE SETTLERS.

Scheme to Settle Northern Michigan May Soon be in Effect.

Ishpeming, Mich., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Providing the legislature will approve of the project, and of this Lansing advices say there is small doubt, the matter of settling Northern Michigan will soon be put on a systematic basis. Following the plan adopted in Minnesota, it is supposed to create a state immigration board, the commissioner of which shall receive a salary of $2,000 per annum. Many hundreds of thousands of acres of government and state land are available for settlement in this state, and it is believed that a campaign of publicity would greatly stimulate immigration to this present enormous unimproved area. Since the creation of the Minnesota commission, the amount of land sold to settlers in that state has shown a remarkable increase.

MINNESOTA IN BRIEF

Henderson—At a special term of the district court, Herman Benning and Henry Kempf, the Winthrop arson suspects, were released, the former on $2,000 bail and the latter through habeas corpus proceedings.

Litchfield—The proposition to bond the district for $35,000 for the erection of a school building carried Thursday by 109 majority. The second proposition, to vote $40,000 bonds for repairing the present high school, and also the erection of a ward building on the South side, will be voted upon Monday next.

Mankato—The stockholders of the Mankato Citizens' Telephone company held a meeting and voted to increase the capital stock from $100,000 to $150,000, in order to make needed extensions into the country.

C. H. Crow of Smith's Mill, who some months ago took the examination for service as teacher in the Philippines, has received word of his appointment to a position at $1,000 a year, with transportation supplied. He left for Manila this week.

Anoka—Mayor Robert Akin's house, which was on fire one day this week, was robbed by a burglar Thursday night. Members of the family occupy rooms upstairs, and were not aroused by the night intruder. Mrs. Akin's pocketbook, containing about $10, was stolen, and the toy banks of the children were broken open and their small savings taken. A burglar entered the house of E. L. Reed, but was seen and frightened away.

Springfield—The postoffice department at Washington has notified Postmaster Schmelz that unless some of the roads leading out of Springfield are put into a passable condition, one of the most important of the town's rural delivery routes will be abandoned.

WOMAN CAUSES UGLY AFFRAY

Democratic National Secretary Involved in Cutting Scrape.

Washington, May 18.—Charles A. Edwards, secretary of the Democratic congressional committee, was arrested yesterday charged with assault with a dangerous weapon about midnight Wednesday on Alexander O. Garland, an attache of the Peruvian legation, in front of the fashionable DeSoto apartment house at Thirteenth street and Massachusetts avenue N. W.

Garland, accompanied by Mrs. Louise Scott, reached the apartment house shortly after midnight. Edwards had been near for some time, and the men became involved in an altercation which resulted in a fight in which it is charged that Edwards stabbed Garland. It was understood that Garland did not care to prosecute Edwards, but after an investigation by the police, the janitor of the apartment house entered a complaint.

Yesterday Edwards and Mrs. Scott met at the capitol and became involved in a controversy. Finally they were taken to the office of the capitol police where they were detained until the Metropolitan police authorities could be communicated with.

PRESBYTERIANS AND SUNDAY OBSERVANCE.

Columbus, Ohio, May 18.—The Presbyterian general assembly adopted, yesterday afternoon, resolutions looking to a thorough organization for the advancement of Sunday observance. A provision in the resolution submitted, urging Presbyterian families to give preference in buying to those merchants who close their shops on Sunday was stricken out, on the ground that it would, in effect, amount to a boycott.

The resolutions adopted recommended the appointment of a committee in each presbytery, to promote the movement for Sabbath observance; urge ministers to discourage funerals on the Sabbath; disapprove of sports and excursions on the day; urge the omission of Monday recitations in seminaries and colleges, so as to aid students in observing the Sabbath; favor a Saturday half holiday for all workers, and condemn Sunday newspapers. It was stated that there were upward of 6,000,000 persons now employed on the Sabbath in the United States.

WELLS ESTATE IN BIG CONTEST

Federal Government Sues for $500,000 Inheritance Tax.

Milwaukee, May 18.—Under instructions from the department of justice at Washington, United States District Attorney Butterfield has begun an action against the trustees and executors of the Daniel Wells estate to recover over $500,000, alleged to be due the government under the war revenue tax laws of 1898-1901.

The complaint filed by Mr. Butterfield, after reciting the fact of the death of Daniel Wells, in May, 1902, alleged that he left an estate of an estimated value of between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000; that, under the provisions of the inheritance tax law, there is due the government $443,466.96, which, with the accrued interest since that time, brings the total due up to about $535,000; and that the trustees of the estate are liable for this amount, but have constantly refused to pay the revenue tax.

OUR PIGMY ANCESTORS.

London Hospital: The armor of the knights of the middle ages is too small for their modern descendants. Hamilton Smith records that two Englishmen of average dimensions found no suit large enough to fit either of them in the great collection of Sir Samuel Meyrick. The head of the Oriental saber will not admit the English hand, nor the bracelet of the Kaffir warrior the English arm. The swords found in Roman tumuli have handles inconveniently small; and the great mediaeval two-handed sword is now supposed to have been used only for one or two blows at the first onset, and then exchanged for a smaller one. The statements made by Homer, Aristotle and Vitruvius represent six feet as a high standard for full-grown men, and the irrefutable evidence of the ancient doorways, bedsteads and tombs proves the average size of the race certainly not to have diminished in modern days.

MINISTER O'BRIEN GOES TO JAPAN AS EMBASSADOR.

Washington, May 18.—It was announced at the state department today that Thomas J. O'Brien, United States minister to Copenhagen, will become ambassador to Japan in September on the retirement of Luke E. Wright of Tennessee, who has given notice to the department that he wishes to leave the service at that time. A successor to Mr. O'Brien at Copenhagen has not yet been selected.

KING ALFONSO'S TALISMAN.

Tit-Bits: A very interesting story of King Alfonso is told by the Cri de Paris.

Some time previous to his journey to England, King Alfonso of Spain encountered an old gypsy woman, to whom he offered some duros, but which were haughtily refused.

"King," said the woman, "keep thy money. My race is older than thine. I am the last of the Almoravides, who ruled over Morocco and the south of Spain in the eleventh and twelfth centuries. It is I, on the contrary, who will present thee with a piece of gold." With this the gypsy offered the king a sequin bearing the effigy of Ishag, son of Tachefin, the last of the kings of the Almoravides. "Take good care of this talisman," she added; "it will guard thee against all dangers. There exists only one other sequin like it. I gave it to an exquisitely beautiful and highly respectable young lady when I fell into a ditch one day. I was badly wounded, and she dismounted and bound up my forehead with her handkerchief. Those who accompanied her addressed her as her highness. King, if ever thou shouldst marry, wed this young girl; she alone can make thee happy."

This legend is spoken about a good deal in Madrid, and it is asserted that the king was just showing the sequin to M. Loubet when the bomb was thrown at him on his last official visit to Paris. This talisman thus saved his life. The story also goes that when in London the king ascertained that the other golden sequin was in the possession of Princess Ena of Battenberg. As soon as he discovered this, he resolved to make her his bride, and that is why she reigns as Queen Victoria of Spain.

TO TOP FROM LOWLY START.

Broadway Magazine: When all has been said there is no city on earth where merit is so quickly recognized and rewarded as in New York. A boy enters the service of a railroad corporation, and at the age of 28 he is general manager of a great traction system. True, he has a distinguished lawyer and statesman for an uncle, but he starts at the bottom and his promotion is due to his own exertion. Such is the career of Oren Root. H. H. Vreeland a brakeman without "pull," raised himself in a short period to the presidency of the Metropolitan Railway company. Within two generations all the great spectacular fortunes of New York have been made from nothing. Reward of merit comes quickly in other fields. Charles E. Hughes, a comparatively obscure lawyer, is selected to conduct an important investigation, in which the whole country is interested. Without having previously held office, a very novice, he is made a governor.

THE SAHARA GROWING DRIER.

New York Sun: C. F. Gautier, a French explorer, is authority for the statement that the Sahara is continually becoming drier to such an extent that the oases are perceptibly drying up and will disappear altogether in a relatively short time. He quotes historical records and physical signs to show that springs were at one time much more plentiful than now, and that the extent of the patches where vegetation flourishes were much greater even fifty to 100 years ago. He believes that the disappearance of the water must be due to purely mechanical causes. He considers that it is due to the continual advance of the great sand masses to the north, thus forming an impermeable barrier against the watershed of the Atlas mountains.

RAILROADS

NEW ROAD PROJECTED

From Hudson Bay Straight to the Pacific Ocean.

To be Shortest Route From Liverpool to the Orient.

Winnipeg, Man., May 18.—A syndicate of New York and London capitalists has been organized for the purpose of building a railway between Fort Churchill, on Hudson's bay, and Port Simpson, on the Pacific coast. Such a road will shorten the route from Liverpol to Yokohama by 2, 768 miles. It will be 300 miles north of any other transcontinental line and will open one of the richest farming and mining countries in the world.

The Port Simpson & Eastern Railway company, which is to build the road, is capitalized at $100,000,000. David B. May, former special agent of the United States department of the interior in Alaska, is secretary. He spent sixteen years in the Northwest investigating the possibilities of a railroad, and it may be said that he is the founder of the new undertaking.

"I have always believed that the plan was feasible, but I had great trouble in convincing people that the northwestern country is warm and fertile," said Mr. May recently. "The country has been little explored and most people believe it to be cold and barren. It is just the opposite. The balmy chinook winds sweep across the level land and materially affect the climate. I have never seen such crops of wheat as are raised in the Northwest. The country is also wonderfully rich in minerals and there are millions of tons of fine asphalt.

"Our road will be 1,450 miles long. We expect to run trains from Port Simpson to Churchill in from thirty to thirty-five hours. We have already obtained terminal facilities at both places and in six days expect to have our surveyors at work. This road will supply an almost direct route from Liverpool to Yokohama. From Liverpool to Churchill the distance is 3,363 miles, and from Churchill to Port Simpson 1,450 miles, and from Port Simpson to Yokohama 4,445 miles. That will be our route, compared to the following of other transcontinental roads: Liverpool to New York 3,406 miles, New York to San Francisco 3,390 miles, and San Francisco to Yokohama 5,140 miles. It is thus seen that we save 2,768 miles of travel.

Hudson's bay is open to navigation seven months in the year, and not frozen over most of the time, as is generally believed. We have contracted for two steamers capable of carrying 25,000 tons, to run from Port Simpson to Yokohama, and have assurances from English capitalists that a line will be established from Liverpool to Churchill. The country this road expects to develop has 500,000 square miles of the best wheat land on the face of the earth. Forty bushels to the acre are taken off the farms. I have been all over the country on horseback and know every foot of it.

"Another advantage we have over other transcontinental lines is that the Rocky mountains in Canada are not so high as they are in the South. Where we cross the highest point is 2,400 feet, as compared to from 6,000 to 7,000 feet were other roads cross. The climate is equal to the climate of Maryland. It is 30 degs. warmer than in Winnipeg."

BROUGHTON PROMOTED.

Made General Traffic Manager of All Great Northern Lines.

St. Paul, May 18.—The announcement was made late yesterday that W. W. Broughton, formerly traffic manager, has been appointed general traffic manager of all lines of the Great Northern railway system. Fourth Vice President B. Campbell, whose resignation has just been accepted, formerly was in charge of traffic on the road.

W. P. Kenney, who has been assistant to the fourth vice president, has been made assistant general traffic manager.

WILL ANNIHILATE NAVIES.

Pearson's Weekly: A French scientist has advanced a new and startling theory to account for the mysterious blowign up of the Jena in Toulon Harbor. He thinks the catastrophe was due to stray electrical currents, such as are used in wireless telegraphy; and he offers to prove the possibility, at all events, of such an eventuality by exploding cases of powder from a distance by means of a wireless apparatus he has invented.

This opens up some speculations of a most startling nature. The Japanese, we know, have been experimenting with wireless currents for war purposes in the direction indicated. So have the Germans. And now it would appear that one Frenchman, at least, imagines he has solved the problem.

If he is right, then we are on the eve of a revolution in warfare, and more especially in naval warfare, such as may well stagger humanity. For what is the use of building monster battleships, worth $10,000,000 apiece, when they can be blown all to bits by a man operating miles away with an instrument no bigger than a hand camera?

Obviously a vessel of this type must carry aboard of her a goodly store of eplosives, and if these can be detonated through space by wireless telegraphy, she carries with her wherever she goes her own death warrant. All land magazines, too, will be eposed to the same invisible danger; a danger which it will be impossible to foresee, or to effectually guard against.

Nor will it be safe, in time of war, for a country to attempt even to manufacture explosives. In fact, it would almost seem as if such a discovery—and such a discovery is in the air, mind!—is going to make war impossible by annihilating the navies of the world, by destroying at the same time the world's stores of explosives, and by rendering it impracticable to replace either the one or the other.

TELLS THEM BY BEARDS

Barber Says Men of Vast Wealth Have Wiry Whiskers.

Thomas F. Ryan Hardest Man of Them All to Shave.

New York, May 18.—Joseph Bischoff, barber and hair cutter, in Wall street, who attends to the tonsorial wants of many of its most famous men, says that he can tell a multi-millionaire by the hair on his face—that men of vast wealth have wiry and stiff whiskers and are hard to shave. The average workingman has a soft, fuzzy growth of hair on the face, and can be scraped without effort.

Thomas F. Ryan is Bischoff's most famous patron, and the barber goes to the financier's house every morning at 8:30 o'clock sharp. He also shaves members of the Stillman, Woodward, Rockefeller and Vanderbilt families, and says that in all his experience he has yet to meet the millionaire who wakes up in the morning with a grouch. Bishchoff does most of his work at the homes of his rich patrons, and at his basement shop in Wall street during the day lesser lights of the financial district drop in for a shave, hair cut or shampoo.

"I get up every morning, including Sunday," he says, "at 6 o'clock. After shaving myself, dressing and partaking of a mild breakfast, I hustle over to the residence of James T. Woodward, in East Fifty-sixth street, and reach there at 6:45. I find Mr. Woodward, who is the president of the Hanover National bank, fully dressed, waiting for his morning shave. He greets me kindly and is vigorous and bright-eyed every morning.

"James Stillman, president of the National City bank, comes next and I am booked to be in his dressing room not later than 7:15. I also take care of his son, James A. Stillman. While I am shaving the senior Mr. Stimman, I often think of his cares, the enormous figures on his mind and of his great responsibility. Then I look for lines on his face—lines of worry—and I am happy to say that I can't find them.

"Then comes Mr. Ryan. I reach his home on Fifth avenue at 8:30 o'clock and let me say right now that I get there on the tick of the hour. Generally I find him out of bed waiting for me. Sometimes he is in his pajamas. He slips on a dressing robe and says: 'All right, Joseph; do this job as quickly as possible.'

"I rub the lather for five minutes, because Mr. Ryan has the strongest and stiffest hair of all men I have ever shaved. The hairs are like so many wire nails. His eyes twinkle from the start of the shave to the finish, and I often wonder if he forms big corporations in his brain while I am shaving him.

"Just think, during the time I lather Mr. Ryan's face his investments will have made him $100. The scraping process takes up time enough for another hundred, and the bay rum and hair combing completing the shave increases Mr. Ryan's fortune about $300. He is liberal. I never have named a charity or a needy person to him that he has not asked how much it will take to mend the situation. If I say $2 or $100 it is all the same. Mr. Ryan has his hand in his pocket and gives me the sum I name.

"I next call on Mr. Ryan's sons in Liberty street. They are Allan, Clendennin and John—all chips of the old block. Then I go to Wall street, and start the day's work in the shop.

"Among my callers are Vice President Vanderlip of the National City bank, and Alexander Orr. I cut the hair of a lot of millionaire babies. William G. Rockefeller's boys are among them."

PREPARING FOR ELKS' SHOW

T. P. Getz is Rehearsing Amateur Actors of Duluth.

T. P. "Tommy" Getz, the well known theatrical man, is in the city, hard at work mobilizing and rehearsing the amateur actors and actresses who are to take part in the annual Elks' show, which will be given under the direction of Mr. Getz.

Several pleasing entertainments given in the past by Duluth lodge, No. 133, B. P. O. E., have been carried out successfully under the management of Mr. Getz, and he himself is authority for the statement that this year's show will eclipse all the others.

The parts are being assigned, and the work of whipping the cast into shape is progressing nicely. Some of those Duluthians who have appeared in the Elks' shows before will be seen and heard in congenial roles, and there will be as well many new faces.

CURED TO STAY CURED

Take notice that every one who applies to our office for treatment will receive the same conscientious and skillful attention that has been extended to the thousands of our grateful patients in the past.

BLOOD POISON SKIN DISEASES, SORES, ULCERS, ECZEMA, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, ITCHING, BURNING and DISCOLORATIONS of the SKIN.

CURED, NEVER TO RETURN, ENTIRELY REMOVED FROM THE SYSTEM, NOT "LOCKED IN" TO AGAIN REAPPEAR.

Blood Poison is either specific or non-specific. If specific it has arisen from contagion (catching) or by the transfer of poison virus, and it is occasionally inherited from parents, in which case it often appears in the form of scrofula, eczema or similar affections.

In the treatment of all blood diseases the mistakes too often made by physicians and specialists are in giving medicines—so-called "blood purifiers," and in taking patent medicines that are really harmful because they stop the work of the excretory glands in throwing the poison to the surface, so that the outward signs will disappear for a while, and in so doing the poison in the system increases sometimes to the extent that it attacks the internal organs and becomes fatal. Don't allow the poison to be locked in your system. Have it eliminated, the components of the blood repaired, the tissues restored and your whole system cleansed so that you will always have pure flesh and blood and robust health.

NORFOLK'S POPULATION.

Brooklyn Eagle: A New Yorker who had attended the opening of the Jamestown exposition was strolling along City Hall avenue. He had become impressed with the fact that Norfolk is booming. On every hand large and substantial buildings greeted his eye.

"I wonder how many people there are in this burg?" he murmured to himself. Soon he came upon an aged darky. The New Yorker stopped him and said: "How many people live in Norfolk?"

The darky looked at the stranger a few moments and then replied thoughtfully, "Well, cap'n, dere's 'sposed to be 'bout 50,000 people hyeah, countin' de white folks."

COMPROMISING OF HARWOOD.

Harpers' Magazine: Young Harwood's cousin, Evelyn, had invited him down to her country place to stop over the holidays. He arrived just before dinner, to find that he had left his golf clubs behind him. It was most disheartening; but his cousin comforted him somewhat by promptly offering the use of her clubs.

The next day he started early for the links with Evelyn's husband, but in an hour he was back again.

"Were the clubs so bad?" she inquired; "couldn't you finish the game?"

He answered shortly that he had not cared to finish the game—of course there was nothing the matter with the clubs.

When Evelyn's husband came home for luncheon at noon she questioned him.

"What's wrong with Bob, Henry?" she asked; "didn't the game go smoothly?"

Her husband chuckled.

"It was your clubs," he explained. "I don't wonder he isn't happy. He was preparing to 'tee off' at the hole in front of the clubhouse, with a lot of girls on the veranda watching him. He picked up your bags of clubs to take out the 'driver,' but it was caught in some way, and he turned the bag upside down to shake it loose. The driver tumbled out then, and with it came your false fringe, your powder puff, your green veil, and that little ivory handglass you carry around. Do you wonder his feelings are somewhat bruised?"

SUPERIOR STREET DEAL FEATURE OF THE WEEK

City Realty Company Pays $100,000, or $2,000 Per Front Foot, for Merchants Hotel Property at Southwest Corner of Superior Street and Second Avenue West—Property Will Undergo Substantial Improvement.

The largest deal in local realty this week was announced yesterday when the City Realty company closed its negotiations with I. M. Thomas for the Merchants hotel property at the southwest corner of Superior street and Second avenue west, paying $2,000 a front foot of $100,000 for the property. That price, however, does not include the consideration paid to secure the unexpired lease on the property. The sale has been rumored several times during the past few weeks, but was not closed until yesterday. In fact, it is claimed that had there been a failure to secure the leases, which for a time seemed probable, the transaction would not have been completed. The deal is one of a great deal of importance, as it marks a top notch price in Superior street realty, and many of the local real estate men have expressed opinions that future sales along that thoroughfare will be affected, that is, the prices will be substantially higher that the property could have been purchased for a couple of years or even a year ago. The consideration in this instance is claimed to show the more desirable locations on Superior street are practically off the market and can only be purchased by the payment of a large price. The purchasing company is comprised of local real estate men, and was incorporated several weeks ago to take over the property. It is presumed that the corner is to undergo a very substantial improvement in the way of an office building, but the owners have not yet announced their plans. The Merchants hotel property was sold by William Meinhardt, the present lessee, to I. M. Thomas of Wilkesbarre, Pa., in 1898 for $43,500. In the nine years he has held the property Mr. Thomas has had an income of from 6 to 8 per cent and has disposed of his holding at a profit of $56,000. The sales, in both instances were made through the office of Stryker, Manley & Buck.

The local real estate brokers report a fairly active week in trades, although there have not been as many large transactions closed as in the preceding two weeks. Inquiry has been large, particularly during the past few days, with the advent of warmer weather. Quite a number of sales of residence properties are being closed up, the demand for improved realty being one of the features of the market. Another feature has been the movement of West Duluth property, more sales having occurred in that part of the city since the first of the month than during several months of last year.

Another large deal, which is understood to be practically closed and which is of great importance to the city because of the park project involved, is the purchase of about 400 acres of property on the lake shore, east of Lester river, and from the mouth of the river back into the country on both sides of the branches and between them by a Duluth citizen. It is probably one of the largest deals in acres that has been made in the eastern end of the city in years. It is further understood that the purchaser contemplates some vast improvements about the mouth of Lester river, also a fine country residence, but the transaction is chiefly of interest to the citizens for the reason that a proposition has been made to sell a large part of the acreage along the river to the city, for park purposes, at a very reasonable price, and at such times as the city can afford to buy the land. The matter has been gone into by the park board and Mayor Cullum, and the latter referred to the offer in his communication on parks to the city council last Monday evening. The Lester river property has long been desired by the park board and by the city, and it is probable that something will be done soon looking toward an acquisition of the land.

The transfer of a large tract of land in Everett Park addition, near Smithville, from A. A. Walfarsperger to H. W. Techentin for $7,009, was recorded this week. The description included lots 1 to 17 in block 1 of the addition mentioned.

A deed was recorded this week transferring to F. W. Parsons the Clyde Iron Works office and foundry building at the northeast corner of Lake avenue and Sutphin street, for $23,000. The property is described as lot 1 and the north half of lot 2, rearrangement of blocks 7 and 8, Industrial division. Last week the transfer of the Clyde Iron works property at the corner of Sutphin street and St. Croix avenue to the Duluth Corrugating & Roofing company, for $33,000, was recorded. These sales are said to include about all the property formerly owned by the iron works between Lake and St. Croix avenues.

C. O. Baldwin has bought from C. B. Tower for $4,000 a property on the west side of Central avenue, between Bristol and Gosnold streets, West Duluth.

J. E. Bowers has sold Frank Cusciotta a store property on the lower side of Superior street between Seventeenth and Eighteenth avenues west, for $4,200.

Sara Foubister has purchased from Robert Gilmour a residence property on the west side of Fifty-seventh avenue west, between Wadena and Cody streets. The consideration was $1,250.

E. F. Newton has sold W. H. Pease for $1,289 a lot on the lower side of Eighth street, between Lake avenue and First avenue east.

D. D. Mickey has purchased a residence property on the west side of Ninth avenue east, between Fourth and Fifth streets, from Mary Murray, for $2,600.

K. B. Martin has sold C. H. Fletcher for $5,000 a lot on the lower side of Second street, opposite the Duluth Central high school. The property is described as lot 6, East Second street.

Stryker, Manley & Buck have made the following sales this week: 613 West First street, from Edward S. Coe to Elizabeth M. Richardson, for $7,750; lot 386, block 41, Second division, from Elizabeth M. Richardson to the Wisconsin Central Railway company, for $5,250; 108-110 First avenue east, a two-story brick store building, from the estate of Eliza F. Phelps to Eastern parties, for $14,000.

It is understood that D. M. Philbin, who bought the old Sargent homestead on London road, in Lakeside, about a year ago, intends to make extensive improvements to the grounds this year and will tear down the house to replace it with a modern residence, to be ready for occupancy next year.

T. Pinsonnault has plans prepared by Architect J. J. Wangstein for a two story brick store building to be erected on the upper side of Superior street between Eleventh and Twelfth avenues west. The building will cost about $7,000.

Radcliffe & Price, the architects, have plans for a brick store and flat building to be erected in Eveleth for Frank Rabinovitz, to cost about $20,000. The contract for the construction has been awarded M. O. Haugner of Virginia. The same architects have plans for a fire hall at Virginia to cost about $8,000, without equipment.

A. W. Puck, the architect, has plans for a two story store and flat building to be erected for John Ferguson at Mt. Iron. It will cost about $10,000.

Mrs. Fred Hanson has procured plans for a frame dwelling to be erected at 1009 East Fifth street at a cost of about $4,000.

COMMISSIONER BINGHAM

Enraged at Pursuit of Mrs. Gould by His Officers.

New York, May 18.—Dismissal from the police department faces those men who, for months past, have been utilizing the detective bureau as a divorce evidence agency in the interest of Howard Gould against Mrs. Gould, who is preparing to sue the millionaire for a separation.

"There are some men in this department who would better retire from it damned soon," said Commissioner Bingham, yesterday. "If they don't I'll kick them out.

"It is a dirty business, and you have my assurance that it will be run down."

ROSE FROM A GRAVE.

Negro Crap Shooters Captured by Ruse of Police Chief.

Carmi, Ill., May 18.—In the eerie blackness of a rainy night a ghost rose slowly from behind a tombstone and, pointing an accusing finger at a dozen crap-shooters who were playing on an old grave, scared them so badly that seven of them are meditating over their sins in jail.

For two years a number of negroes who love to hear the click of the "bones," have been using the city cemetery for a gaming ground. With lanterns they sat around a marble covered grave and played their game. Early yesterday morning the game was running wide-open, when a shrouded figure rose slowly from a nearby tombstone.

The crap-shooters were so frightened that most of them were incapable of action. A few managed to run, and if they have stopped it is not because they did not get a good start. The ghost, who proved to be Chief of Police Lampp, pulled a revolver and arrested seven of the gamblers.

Stop a Minute!

And consider how much more pleasant it is to live in a house that is yours, than to live in a house that belongs to some one else, a house that is borrowed, a house that may be sold and taken from you at any time.

We are building several strictly modern houses in Lakeside to be sold for a small cash payment and the balance on monthly payments—JUST WHAT YOU WOULD PAY FOR RENT; or we will sell you a lot and build you a home on the same conditions. Can you afford to ignore this offer?

THE WHEAT TAKES A TUMBLE IN AMERICA

Declines of More Than Four Cents in Some Markets.

Flax is Quiet and Stronger in Duluth Market.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 18.—Wheat took a tumble of more than 4 cents today and all of the American markets showed big declines at the close. More favorable weather in the Northwest and in parts of Europe coupled with the week-end profit-taking put prices off. Duluth, Minneapolis and Chicago showed the heaviest declines. Liverpool closed unchanged to ½d higher, Paris ½c to ¾c higher, Berlin ¼c higher and Budapest 6c lower. The heavy decline in Budapest was due to good rains in the surrounding grain belt.

Broomhall estimates the world's shipments of wheat this week at 10,800,000 bus., of which quantity Europe will take about 9,000,000 bus.

The May option closed 4½c lower in Duluth, 4⅝c lower in Chicago, 3⅞c in Minneapolis, 2¼c in New York, which closes an hour earlier than Duluth on Saturdays, and 3¾c in Winnipeg. The July option closed 4½c lower in Duluth, 4⅛c in Chicago, 4⅜c in Minneapolis, 2¼c in New York, 4⅛-¼c in St. Louis, 3⅝-¾c in Kansas City and 3¼c in Winnipeg. The September option closed 4¼c lower in Duluth, 3⅞c in Chicago and St. Louis, 4⅛-¼c in Minneapolis, 2¾c in New York and 3⅝c in Kansas City.

July corn closed 1⅝c higher in Chicago and was unchanged in Liverpool. July oats closed ½c lower in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 92 against 30 last year, and at Minneapolis 256 against 122 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 348 against 152 last year. Chicago received 62 against 12 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 630,000 bus, last year 285,000 bus. Shipments 200,000 bus, last year 178,000 bus.

Primary receipts of wheat were 301,000 bus, last year 433,000 bus. Shipments 489,000 bus, last year 289,000 bus.

Wheat trading was rather quiet in the Duluth market during the short session today. May wheat opened 1¼c lower at $1.01½ bid and declined by the close to 98¾c, a loss of 4¼c from yesterday. July wheat opened 2c lower at $1.01¼, advanced to $1.02; by 2:40, declined to 99⅝c by 11:05, reacted to $1.00¼ by 11:06 and closed at 9c, a loss of 4½c from yesterday. September wheat opened 1¼c lower at $1.02, advanced to $1.02¾, declined to $1.00, rallied to $1.00⅛ and closed at 99¼c, a loss of 4¼c from yesterday.

Durum wheat closed 3½c lower and cash spring wheat was selling at the July price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was quiet and the closing prices were up. May flax opened ¾c higher at $1.25, and advanced to $1.25¾ and closed at $1.25, a gain of ¾c over yesterday. July flax opened ¼c higher at $1.26, advanced to $1.26¾, declined to $1.26¼, rallied to $1.26⅝ and closed at $1.26¾, a gain of ½c over yesterday. October flax opened unchanged at $1.25½, advanced to $1.26, declined to $1.25¾ and closed at $1.26⅛, a gain of ⅝c over yesterday.

Oats closed 1c higher, and rye ½c up.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Drops Two Cents on Week-End Liquidation and Bear News.

Chicago, May 18.—Week-end liquidation carried the price of wheat down about 2c per bus today compared with yesterday's closing quotations. Trading was again exceedingly active, but the market lacked the frenzied excitement that characterized the previous session. Conditions today were more favorable to the bears, weather in the Northwest being more moderate, and the Liverpool market steady, notwithstanding the sharp advance here yesterday. July opened ⅝c to 1⅜c lower at 98¾c to 99¼c and sold off to 98¼c. September opened 1¼c to 1⅝c lower at 95⅝c to $1, sold at $1.00⅛ and then reacted to 99½c. December, after opening ⅜c to 1⅜c lower at $1.00½ to $1.01⅝, dropped back to $1.00⅛. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 411 cars against 252 cars last week and 164 cars a year ago.

The market ruled heavy throughout the session, partly because Budapest reported rains where the most needed, but mostly because longs with profits preferred to avoid possible adverse eventualities. July closed 3⅝@⅜c under yesterday at 98⅛@⅜c and May at 94c.

The corn market was affected by the break in wheat, and showed losses in some cases of nearly 1c. Trading was of large proportions. July opened 1⅛@⅜c to ⅛@⅜c lower at 52¼c to 52½c, sold up to 53⅜c and then declined again to 53¼@⅜c. Local receipts were 116 cars, with nine of contract grade.

July corn closed easy ⅞c down at 52⅞@53c.

Oats opened rather weak because of the slump in wheat, but the market soon rallied and all of the initial loss was regained. Several leading commission houses were active bidders. July opened ⅛c higher to ⅝c lower at 46c to ⅜c and advanced to 47¼c. Local receipts were 144 cars.

Provisions were quiet and steady. July pork was 2½c higher at $16.72½. Lard was unchanged at $9.27½. Ribs also were unchanged at $9.

Close: Wheat, May, 94c; July, 99¼@⅜c. Corn, May, 53⅜c; July, 52⅞@53c. Oats, May, 46¼c; July, 46¼c. Pork, May, $16.35; July, $16.57½@16.60. Lard, May, $9.07½; July, $9.17½. Ribs, May, $8.82½; July, $8.92½. Rye, cash, 81c. Barley, cash, 74@84c. Timothy, clover and flax, nothing doing. Cash oats, No. 3, nothing doing; No. 3, 41c. Corn, No. 2 nothing doing; No. 3, 53¾c. New York Grain.

New York, May 18.—More favorable reports from the wheat growing centers gave a calmer tone to the opening of the local wheat market today. Early trading was active, but there was little excitement in the pit. Good weather in the West, reports of general rain in Hungary and Roumania and prospects for liberal world's shipments Monday prompted heavy profit-taking under which prices sold off 3c from yesterday's high point, July reaching $1.05. Closed weak—May, $1.03⅜; July, $1.04¼; September, $1.04⅝; December, $1.05⅝. Corn—May, 62c; July, 61¼c; September, 61¼c.

Minneapolis Flour.

Minneapolis, May 18.—The flour market is improving. Millers report a good improvement in the domestic demand and some fair sales are being made with prospects good for sales on any fair drop in the price of wheat. Buyers are more inclined to take on flour in fair quantities on any recession in prices with the poor prospect of a good wheat crop, which is bound to keep wheat prices at a high level during the summer. Shipments, 41,847 barrels; First patents, $5.60@5.15; second patents, $4.85@5.05; first clears, $3.80@3.85; second clears, $2.75@2.85.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago, on wheat: Our advices of yesterday suggesting profit-taking on long wheat and caution about buying on the swells, was timely, and we regard the decline in the market today as natural and a healthy one. The easier feeling for the Saturday's session is largely the result of very fine weather all over the Western and Northwestern sections. There has been more or less speculative buying on the very strong swells several times during the week and it is only natural that the trade and the country should wind up by holding off from the bull enthusiasm. The selling was almost entirely long wheat and mostly from people who had profits. Liverpool did not follow our advance of yesterday. Hungary and Roumania have some rains to relieve the situation. Northwest markets were weak on the fine weather. Late reports indicate that freezing has worked great injury to winter wheat in the Southwest. Numerous Nebraska points today report bugs very thick in wheat, and the state likely to fare the same as Kansas. Crop expert at Hutchinson, Kan., says that wheat is thin and yellow, as the result of drought and freezing. Commercial West concedes that no man can guess within 50,000,000 bushels of the spring wheat crop, that acreage Northwest states about 20 per cent short. Winnipeg messages tell of wheat which has been in the ground three or four weeks and land now plowed up to go into other crops. Believe liquidation has been general enough to put the market on a healthy position, and on this or any further decline would be prepared to buy wheat quickly for a strong upturn.

Broomhall, Liverpool, May 18.—Wheat was steady at the opening with values unchanged to ⅛ lower. During the morning prices further eased, the reports of generally heavy rains in Hungary and Roumania offsetting the effect of the strength in America yesterday. Reports from Southwest Russia were more favorable and this further stimulated selling for profits. Toward the close, however, this decline was recovered and prices showed unchanged from the previous close. This strength was attributed to shorts covering over the holiday.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 18.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 2@4 points on covering and continued demand from outside sources. There was enough realizing immediately following the call to cause a reaction of 4 to 5 points but the market quickly advanced to a new high level on active general demand encouraged by the bullish weekend figures, expectations of a bullish government report on June 4, and apprehension that the weather would again turn unsettled, although the map made a generally favorable showing. After selling up to a net advance of 8@21 points, prices eased off slightly during the middle of the morning but the undertone was very nervous. Liverpool was closed and remains closed until Tuesday morning.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS

Market Was Weak and Had Very Little Support.

Bank Statement Was Favorable But Its Effect Small.

New York, May 18.—The opening dealings in stocks were so very small as to cause a very sluggish movement in prices. The holiday in London detracted something from the dealings. None of the changes exceeded a half and the gains and losses within this range were intermingled.

Considerable pressure developed against the local tractions. The general list ignored this selling for a while and advanced slightly, but later showed sympathetic heaviness and receded materially below yesterday's closing. The declines of consequence were Interborough-Metropolitan 2⅝ and the preferred 2⅝, St. Paul 2, Northern Pacific and Chesapeake & Ohio 1½ each, Canadian Pacific, Brooklyn Rapid Transit and Wabash 1½ each, and Great Northern preferred, Missouri Pacific, Union Pacific, Smelting and Central Leather 1 each.

The market closed dull and irregular. The favorable bank statement caused some recoveries, but they were slight and fresh weakness developed in spots. Northern Pacific was forced down 3; St. Paul and Great Northern preferred 2½ each; Lackawanna, 2; Consolidated Gas and Great Northern certificates, 1½ each; Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie, 1½; and Louisville & Nashville and Corn Products preferred, 1 each. Pacific Coast sold at a decline of 3½ and General Electric reacted to 1¾ below last night.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Another dull day in stocks, and although the bank statement was favorable, it had little effect. Speculative interest is still centered in the grain market. There are continued reports of new bond issues and short-time notes by several large corporations, and this does anything but add to the strength of the situation. The market is likely to continue a professional one, with a sagging tendency, in the absence of developments expected to stimulate activity on the long side.

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was weak and with very little support. The break in the grain market had no effect and all day there was pressure. The bank statement was good, but caused no support or better feeling. The public seem to have absolutely no interest in the market and with the present outlook does not appear encouraging. A good many traders have sold out long stocks and stopped trading. We look for a period of dullness with little else than professional trading.

Bank Statement.

New York, May 18.—The statement of clearing house banks for the week shows that the banks hold $11,472,975 more than the legal reserve requirements. This is an increase of $2,886,450 as compared with last week. The statement follows: Loans, $1,124,808,700; decrease, $1,414,500; deposits, $1,146,160,500; increase, $1,681,800; circulation, $50,440,400; increase, $258,400; legal tenders, $72,937,500; increase, $331,500; specie, $256,160,200; increase, $2,575,900; reserve, $287,097,500; increase, $3,406,900; reserve required, $276,424,225; increase, $120,450; surplus, $11,472,675; increase, $2,886,450; ex-United States deposits, $19,386,025; increase, $2,985,825.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: "No public interest tells the whole story. Stocks are sagging of their own weight and we see nothing in sight to make a change for the better. We advise liquidating speculative lines and waiting until the market shows some tendency to move. There are several stocks that are selling too high in comparison with others. Copper Range is earning more than Mohawk and selling three points less. Sell Mohawk until the ratio changes. Butte should not sell any higher than Range.

Boston to Gay & Sturgis: There has been very persistent buying of North Butte during the past two or three weeks, and there has been repeated rumors about forthcoming developments calculated to put the stock twenty points higher. One house has taken at least 5,000 shares during the past ten days.

The directors will meet very shortly to take action on the quarterly dividend, but those best informed do not think there will be an increase from the regular $2 quarterly payment. The company is earning in excess of $500,000 net per month, and this rate of earnings, continued for a year, would be equal to $15 per share on the company's 400,000 shares, but Thomas F. Cole and his associates are known to be strongly in favor of the creation of a big surplus, and until North Butte gets this surplus it is not likely that dividends will be materially increased. The most important development in the affairs of this company is underground. We understand that on the 16th level of the Edith May, the mine has run into a very rich body of high grade ore—the most important that has been encountered of late in this property. The ore is stated to run as high as 12 per cent to 14 per cent copper.

There has been a disposition to regard the recently issued annual report unfavorably. It is true that a larger output had been anticipated, but it should be recalled that this production was made entirely from the operation of one shaft. 32,000,000 pounds of copper secured from one shaft is in itself a remarkable record. The company is sinking another shaft, but it will be many months before any production is available from this source.

AT LAKE COPPER MINES

Adventure Has Drill Down 155 Feet in Baltic Explorations---Much Work to be Done on Carp Lake Property.

Houghton, Mich., May 18.—The explorations upon the Adventure property for the Baltic lode were delayed for a few days on account of the supply of pipe being exhausted. The drill has been put down 154 feet without striking the ledge, and it will be driven still deeper. The point of attack is in the swamp near Peppard junction.

The Lake has not yet begun the sinking of a shaft on this formation, owing to the unsettled condition of the weather making it difficult to get the necessary material on the ground. However, it is planned to begin operations at an early date, and the work will be watched with more than the usual amount of interest. Messrs. Cole and McDonald, the diamond drill contractors of Virginia, Minn., visited the Victoria mine last week, and it is understood that negotiations are under way for doing considerable drill work on that property.

Victoria produced eighty-two tons of mineral last month. This is an increase of twelve tons over the preceding month, and the best record which has been made by the company. The delay in getting the larger cylinder for the stamp head has caused a great deal of annoyance to the management. The contract called for its delivery along about the first of the year, but the manufacturers were unable to make good. However, it is expected that it will be ready for use very shortly.

Arrangements are being perfected for doing quite a large amount of work on Cary Lake property during the coming summer. The mine is to be unwatered, openings extended and a mill test is to be made of the rock. In addition to this a thorough exploration is to be made of the property with the diamond drill. Work is to be started as soon as the weather will permit. Frank K. Gillespie of New York was in Ontonagon recently. He said that he and his associates are planning to begin an active campaign on the property at an early date, and that it is their purpose to carry the work far enough to be able to determine its value.

A station has been cut at the third regular level of the Medora shaft of Keweenaw at a depth of 525 feet. Drifting both ways has progressed about sixty feet on either side and both drifts are breasted in good copper-bearing ground. It is believed that the directors will soon decide to use one of the heads of the Phoenix mills for stamping. The mine has 10,000 tons on the dump and is so opened that between 250 and 300 tons could be furnished

WARREN IN GOOD FORMATION

Shaft in Mineralized Ground Showing Good Copper Carbonates and Indications Fine for Strike at 1,000 Feet—Auditor Paul, of Calumet & Arizona, Coming to Duluth.

Bisbee, Ariz., May 18.—Work is being pushed rapidly at the Warren and the shaft is now in mineralized ground which shows copper carbonates and glance disseminated throughout the rock. The sinking is on a fault zone showing considerable iron. The condition of the ground is very encouraging and suggests good possibilities at a depth of 1,000 or 1,200 feet.

Among the passengers outward bound last week were H. B. Paull, auditor for the Calumet & Arizona company, and his family, who will spend a short time visiting the Grand Canyon before they go to Duluth, where they will in future make their home.

Their many friends in Bisbee will without doubt regret to hear of their departure from the city where they have lived for several years, during which time Mr. Paull has been head of the local office force of the Calumet & Arizona company in his capacity of chief auditor. During that time, too, both Mr. and Mrs. Paull have greatly endeared themselves to a host of friends.

The reason for their change of residence is that nearly all of the principal books of the corporation are kept at Duluth. Mr. Paull's duties will therefore confine him to a large extent to his new home. He will, however, make occasional trips to this section to audit the books of the local office of the concern.

Mr. Paull will be succeeded as head of the local office by J. E. Curry, who has been chief clerk for some time. He will also have charge of local auditing, it is understood.

R. Stewart of the Denver Bridge company has the contract to erect two buildings for the Calumet & Arizona Mining company at the Junction shaft, which will be used jointly by the Calumet & Arizona and the Junction as machine shops. The structural iron for the buildings has already arrived at the siding at Lowell, and within the coming week it is expected that a crew of iron workers from Denver will arrive in Bisbee and begin work.

One of the buildings which will be used as a machine shop will be 56 feet wide by 125 feet long and 18 feet high at the eaves. The other building will be 128 feet long by 40 feet wide, and will be used as a storehouse and supply depot for the different departments of the mining companies.

The same company has the contract to erect the car barn for the Warren street railway system. The barn when completed will be 120 feet long and 40 feet wide. The exact location of the building has not been chosen yet, but it will be situated just outside of what is to be the residence portion of the city of Warren.

That the deal between the Wolverine, Arizona and Thomas Higgins for the old Higgins shaft is complete is shown by the fact that Supt. Roberts of the Wolverine will advertise in a few days for bids on a drift from the Higgins shaft to the body of ore that was encountered in the Wolverine recently by the diamond drill about 450 feet from the shaft.

An old drift that runs from the Higgins property to within 200 feet of the Warren claim of the Wolverine will be continued until the ore body encountered by the diamond drill is reached and its extent determined. Contracts will be let in sections of 50 feet each, and three shifts will be used in the drifts with the large type of Rand-Ingersoll machines, Mr. Roberts stated the other day.

When the ore was encountered at the Wolverine three weeks ago the diamond drill was stopped and arrangements made to enable work to begin in the Higgins drift, which is the nearest opening to the ore body.

GLOBE CLAIMS FIRST PLACE

Over Four Thousand Men Are Now Employed in District and Hustling Camp Claims to be Leader in Arizona.

Globe, Ariz., May 18.—Globe is taking its place as the leading mining camp of the Southwest and claims that there are more men employed at the present time by the companies of Globe, than in any other camp in the Southwest. This is not because there is a strike in the Warren district, as there are more men working in the Globe mines now than there were at Bisbee before the strike was called.

According to the best authorities from the Warren district, 3,200 men were employed there before the Western Federation called the strike. In the Globe district at present at least 4,000 men are employed by the mining companies.

On the pay rolls of the Phelps-Dodge company alone during the month of March, were the names of 2,800. Of these 2,200 were employed by the Old Dominion company and 600 by the United Globe. During the past few weeks 250 more have been added to the construction forces of the Old Dominion and there are now over 3,000 men in the employ of the Phelps-Dodge company. A very conservative estimate of the number of men employed by the other companies of the district places it at 1,000, making a total of 4,000 men employed in the district.

Every succeeding week witnesses an enlargement of operations. Several companies have been hampered by the slow delivery of much needed machinery. Superior & Boston, Calumet & Globe and Globe-Arizona have suffered from this cause, but hoists for these companies, ordered several months ago, arrived last week and they will now be able to push development work. Ore shipments continue large and although Old Dominion is unable to treat custom ores, the company continues to receive all shipments.

May promises to be a good month for Old Dominion. Four furnaces are running and there is not likely to be any interruption of smelting during the month. With the exception of some low grade sulphide from Cananea, all the ore being smelted is from the company's own mines. The fourteenth level sulphide stope is supplying a large tonnage, as is also the big west stope on the ninth level. The Kirky vein on the tenth level continues to yield a very good grade of sulphide. Connections are being made to open the Kirky vein on the eleventh and twelfth levels and a drift will also be run to open it on the fourteenth. No. 4 crosscut on the fourteenth has been started and should reach sulphide vein No. 1 before the end of this month. The station on the fourteenth level has been cut and the gallows frame for the electric hoist is being erected. The winze, which is to be erected this week and should be completed by Aug. 1, when drifting and crosscutting will be started to open the great sulphide ore body

SKIDOO IS THE LATEST CAMP

In Nevada to Bid for Riches---Hangs 6,000 Feet Over Death Valley---Fourteen Carloads Shipped from Mohawk.

Rhyolite, Nev., May 18.—The new camp of Skidoo has become a topic of interest in Southern Nevada mining circles since the Lee district has become an accepted fact.

The future of Skidoo seems assured and already a nine line nineteen miles long is being built from Telescope peak to supply the camp with water.

The camp has every mark of permanency, but it is not probable that a railroad will reach it for some time as it is perched on the side of the Panamint, 6,000 feet over Death Valley, with every known obstacle in the way of constructing a road bed.

A mill and concentrator is being planned by the Skidoo Mines company, to handle the camp's ores and hauling is now done from Rhyolite and Johannesburg.

The name "Skidoo" was given to the camp by Mrs. E. A. Montgomery, the woman who held Schwab's people off for an extra $50,000 for the Montgomery-Shoshone in the Bullfrog district.

After the sale of the Montgomery Shoshone, "Bob" Montgomery looked over Southern Nevada for investments and bought some camps then known as the "Golden Eagles," by Ramsey and Thompson, the original locaters.

There were 22 claims in all and when Mrs. Montgomery was shown the property she immediately dubbed the property for the "Skidoo" number, and among the miners the name stuck. Shorty Harris, the man who discovered the Original Bullfrog, came into Rhyolite in January of 1906, and told the story of the Thompson-Ramsey strike, which, until that time had been kept secret. In May Montgomery and Hovick bought the 22 claims for $100,000.

At the time of the sale there was not a hole deeper than 18 inches in the district, but 200 tests were made without a single failure to get rich returns and the sale was made at once.

In less than a year and a half Skidoo has become a rattling good camp, for leasers are at work all over the properties of the Skidoo company, and development is going on apace. There are 125 residences and business houses in Skidoo, and lots range from $100 to $1,000 each.

There is litigation pending, however, over the title to the Skidoo property.

Goldfield, Nev., May 18.—The Mohawk has shipped a train of ore consisting of fourteen box cars and loaded with 400 tons of ore.

This is the initial shipment made by the company itself, the ore being the

NEW BROOM AT THE GREENE

Efficiency of Cole Management Shown by the Economies Secured in Production of Ore and Saving at the Smelter.

Hayden, Stone & Co. say in their weekly letter: No more eloquent testimony in behalf of the wisdom of the sale of the Greene Consolidated Copper company to the Greene-Cananea company, and to the efficiency of the Cole management of these properties could be asked than the simple fact which is stated to us in a letter written from Cananea by our own correspondent. In speaking of the changed conditions at the smelter of the Greene Consolidated Copper company, he notes the facts that in the power room of the smelter seven boilers are now doing 22 per cent more work than was formerly accomplished by ten boilers, and the force in this department alone has been decreased by sixteen men. He also notes the fact that just before his arrival the second remodelled furnace had been blown in. This process of remodelling will be continued until all eight furnaces have a daily capacity of 400 tons against 250 tons for the old furnaces. Two new convertor stands have been ordered, which will bring the total up to seven. Except for the crushing plant, the concentrator seems to be doing its work well. A large extension, housing twelve vanners and six Wilfrey tables, has just been made with a new type of table of greater capacity and supposed to give greater saving.

The mines are far ahead of the smelter, and could probably supply 25 per cent more ore than the present amount (2,500 tons daily), if the smelter were in condition to receive it. Here, also, the campaign of cost reduction has had a very noticeable effect by the adoption of the slicing system in the place of the old square set system. The timber requirements alone have been reduced from twenty-six feet per ton to fourteen feet. With timber at $23 per 1,000 this is a material saving. It is hoped to reduce mining costs another $1 per ton. This will be accomplished by the complete adoption of the slicing system, the direct transportation of the ores from the mines to the smelter by electric tram (instead of carrying them to bins and from there

COEUR D'ALENES PROFITS

Last Year Were $6,436,756, While Gross Yield of Ores Was $16,717,601---Massachusetts Women Buy Gold Quartz Mines.

Boise, Idaho, May 18.—The sworn statement of the mines of the Caeur d'Alenes, in Northern Idaho, with the exception of the Success and Stewart, which have not been filed with the assessor, show the total net profits for 1906 were $6,436,756.03, while the gross yield of the ores produced was $16,717,601.63. The cost of extraction was $4,329,517.52 upon a tonnage of 1,521,551. The cost of transportation, reduction and sale of the products amounted to $4,652,436.90 and the improvements $920,235.20. The four Standard - Mammoth, Tiger - Poorman and Last Chance held the record, with a gross product of $7,775,700 and a net profit of $2,685,213.76, but the Bunker Hill and Sullivan surpasses all in the record for a single mine, the gross yield being $4,771,748.35 and the net profit $2,294,389.22. With the exception of the Snowstorm all the output is silver and lead. The mines reporting a loss for the year are Frisco, Hunter and Tamarack-Chesapeake. The Frisco reported a loss of $117,339.56, the Hunter $8,26, and the Tamarack-Chesapeake $10,234.09. The sworn reports are made under a state law compelling such statements to be filed with the county assessors each year.

Communication with the Thunder Mountain district near the wagon road will soon be opened, as the snow is rapidly disappearing from the higher mountains. Much machinery is lying along the route that will be taken in as soon as possible.

A deal has just been consummated whereby the Gold Hill and Iowa groups of gold quartz mines at Quartzburg passed into the hands of Mrs. M. C. Hall and Mrs. Minerva C. Crecker of Lowell, Mass. The purchasers have incorporated under the name of Gold Hill & Iowa Mining company. The old stockholders retain an interest in the new company. As soon as the roads are in good condition a large force of men will be put to work. The Gold Hill is equipped with a twenty-five stamp mill and the Iowa with a twenty-stamp.

The Big Giant gold quartz mine, ten miles east of Boise, now has 5,700 feet of underground workings. To make a thorough test of the ore thirty tons have been shipped to four different re-

LAKE SUPERIOR IRON MINES

Duluth & Iron Range Road to Reach Into Mountain Iron Territory for Ore Shipments This Season—Exploration Near Buhl by Virginia Men Showing Up Better.

Virginia, Minn., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The management of the Duluth & Iron Range railroad is preparing into the Mountain Iron territory for ore shipments next season. Contractor J. Runquist is now at work grading for a spur which will run from Eveleth yards direct to the Mountain Iron mine, a distance of about seven miles. The grading is well along and will be completed the present year. With the beginning of the shipping season of 1908 the Iron Range road will handle all the ore in the Mountain Iron district now hauled to Duluth docks by the Duluth, Missabe & Northern. This change was made necessary by the fact that next year the steel corporation expects to begin making heavy shipments from its mines in the Coleraine district and these shipments, together with the anticipated increase in production in the Hibbing district, would overtax the capacity of the Missabe docks if the road attempted to handle the product of the Mountain Iron district as well. Consequently it was decided to shift the Mountain Iron shipments to the docks at Two Harbors and the building of this spur is the result.

The spur will cross the tracks of the Missabe line running from Iron Junction to Virginia about midway between the two places and will be used by both railroads to run their passenger trains on from Eveleth to Virginia, and the roads will use union depots in both places—the Iron Range depot in Eveleth and the Missabe depot in Virginia. It will be necessary for trains running into Virginia to back down something over half a mile but this will be much preferable to backing down all the way to Iron Junction, as the Missabe trains do now, before proceeding to Virginia.

The Waeootah mine of the Pitt Iron Mining company near Mountain Iron recently transferred its shipments from the Great Northern to the Missabe road. Last year the Great Northern built a spur into the mine with the intention of hauling its ore, but the mining company found its service unsatisfactory and consequently decided to make the change. The Missabe is now constructing a spur to the mine and as soon as it is completed shipments from the Waeotah will be resumed. When the change above indicated is made next year the ore from this mine will probably also be handled by the Iron Range road and hauled to Two Harbors.

The superintendent of an independent mining concern recently informed your correspondent that his company was exceedingly well pleased over the treatment accorded it by both the steel corporation railroads. He says that if any advantages are given as between shipping mines they are invariably given to the independent operators, the disposition being to so regulate affairs that the independents cannot claim that they are not given "a fair show." As a rule cars are promptly furnished when needed and as promptly taken away when filled and every effort is made to facilitate the mining work of the independents. All this has a tendency to keep the smaller operators in good humor and to convince them that the announced policy of the steel corporation of doing unto others as it would be done by is sincere.

The exploration near Buhl on lands secured on a lease by several residents of Virginia, and on which ore was found about two months ago, is showing up better with every drill hole put down and the outlook is that a large deposit of ore

THE COPPER BUTTE COMPANY

Ships Another Carload of High Grade Ore---Mine Continues to Improve in Value--- Pinal County Development.

Phoenix, Ariz., May 18.—The Copper Butte company shipped another carload of high-grade copper ore this week. The mine continues to improve in size and value.

Another big mining deal at Ray is in process of incubation and will probably be completed inside of a few weeks.

The Calumet & Arizona people, who, some time ago, obtained a working bond on the Clark and Scanland properties, situated in Table mountain, near Mammoth, this county, are running diamond drills on the property and will thoroughly prospect the claims through an extensive system of boreholes, before locating their working shafts.

A strong inflow of water has been encountered in the Sharpe shaft at the Red Hills, twelve miles east of Florence, at a depth of about 100 feet. The shaft also penetrated a soft talcose material at water level and will require timbering. Pending the installation of a pump and the receipt of timbers work at the shaft has been discontinued temporarily.

Work has been discontinued at the Newbury mine again, but it is expected that the shutdown will be temporary, as the breast of the new crosscut tunnel is still 150 feet from the vein.

There is a mountain of fine zinc ore in Pinal county, within two miles of the railroad. It should attract the attention of zinc miners as there is good money in mining zinc when the mines are advantageously situated in the matter of railroad transportation.

MINING IN THE BLACK HILLS

Sale of the Hidden Fortune Property to the Columbus Consolidated Company---Latter's Holdings Now Aggregate One Thousand Acres.

Deadwood, S. D., May 18.—The great event in mining circles recently was the sale of the famous Hidden Fortune property to the Columbus Consolidated Gold Mining company. The former company, which was capitalized for 5,000,000 shares of a par value of $1 each, owned some 300 acres of patented ground adjoining the Homestake on the north and west and including the Hidden Fortune claim, from which Otto Grantz took $57,000 in two months. After the company was organized a considerable amount of development work was done, including the running of the Bingham tunnel for a distance of 1888 feet and the sinking of several shafts, one of which has reached a depth of 200 feet. The company has also erected a mill with a 250 ton capacity, and operated the same for a short time. Becoming heavily involved financially, however, many judgments were filed against the company, which finally passed into the hands of a receiver. The Columbus company then made a proposition to buy the Hidden Fortune holdings and to assume the debts. Accordingly the property was sold at public sale on May 3 and was bid in by E. Nesmith for the Colorado Iron Works, which held a judgment against the company for $239,000. This judgment, according to agreement, was immediately made over to the Columbus company, which thus comes into possession of all the ground of the Hidden Fortune as well as of its mill and other holdings.

The Columbus, because of this deal, has increased its capital stock from $5,000,000 to $7,000,000, part of which will go to the stockholders of the Hidden Fortune and has issued bonds to the amount of $400,000. The first $30,000 of these bonds went to the payment of some preferred claims of the Hidden Fortune, and the second $30,000 will be applied directly to the opening up and developing of the ground and to putting the mill into running order. The Columbus has now holdings amounting to nearly 1,000 acres, two mills and a large quantity of milling ore which will be available for treatment at once. On the 200 foot level of the Columbus the vein was crosscut for a distance of 247 feet and showed an average value of $4 a ton. An aerial tramway to connect the mines with the Hidden Fortune mill below Deadwood is contemplated. Both properties are well opened up, showing an immense reserve of low grade ore of from $3 to $5 in value and some very high grade. The company now has a favorable outlook.

BUTTE'S DIVIDEND RECORDS

Boston & Montana Has Paid Its Stockholders More Than $54,000,000, With the Anaconda a Good Second, Nearly $35,000,000—Money in Treasury for Calumet & Butte.

Butte, Mont., May 18.—The record of dividends paid by mining companies operating in Butte seems to be somewhat tangled, for the figures of those who have compiled them do not dovetail. Amalgamated is credited with dividends aggregating $50,584,788, which some statisticians have added to the payments of the subsidiary companies of this corporation, making the total an immense sum, and the Montana Ore Purchasing company is credited with $9,437,274. Then comes the United Copper with a record of $6,675,000. The fact of the matter is, the bulk of the money paid out in dividends by the Amalgamated was paid into the treasury of that corporation by the subsidiary companies, and the entire $50,584,788 cannot be therefore added to the amount paid by the latter. Ten companies are credited with $172,379,786. This includes the $6,675,000 paid by the United Copper company on its common and preferred stock, but the United Copper is a holding company, the same as Amalgamated, and receives its money from the Montana Ore Purchasing company. It is not paying dividends out of its Butte holdings now, for it has no Butte property except the La France Copper, which is not a large producer. The amounts paid by the various companies in Butte are as follows:

Amalgamated	$50,584,788
Boston & Montana	54,325,000
Anaconda	24,850,000
Montana Ore Purchasing	9,437,274
North Butte	5,600,000
Parrott	6,692,724
Coalition	1,360,000
Butte & Boston	1,860,000
Alice	1,115,000
United Copper	6,675,000
Total	$172,379,786

The record shows that Butte & Boston has not paid a dividend since February of 1904, but it has been earning money right along. Amalgamated owns all of the stock in this company and the dividends therefore go into the treasury of this company. Amalgamated also owns all of the stock in the Trenton company, which has no dividend record, notwithstanding the fact that it has been operating twenty-six years and must have paid in that time not less than $21,000,000 in dividends. A portion of the dividends paid by Amalgamated must therefore come from the Trenton.

Red Metal is credited with $1,200,000 in dividends, but Coalition is the holding company for it and the money went into the treasury of the latter.

It is safe to say that the companies of Butte have paid at least the amount stated, $172,379,786, for there is no public record of the Clark interests, the dividends of which must be large. Nor is there any public record of the amount paid by the old Speculator company, which operated the Speculator mine for years prior to the time the property was bought by the North Butte company, for all of the stock, 15,000 shares, was held by the Largeys and John C. Creighton of Omaha.

With the addition of the amount realized by smaller or individual operators, the sum might be increased several million dollars, bringing it close to $180,000,000.

The records show that Arizona as a whole, Colorado as a whole, and Utah as a whole, have paid in dividends a total of $152,634,783, which is not within $25,000,000 of as much as the ten mining companies in Butte have paid, and yet the total number of dividend payers in

SOME VERY RICH ORE BODIES

Are Shown Up in the Quapaw Mining Camp--- Several Duluth Men Located There and Have Good Properties.

Baxter Springs, Kans., May 18.—At no time in the history of the Quapaw mining camp has everything looked so prosperous as now. The past week has shown up some exceedingly rich ore bodies. The Krauner-Morse, owned by Wellington, Wichita and Kansas City men, opened up as fine a deposit of zinc as has ever been seen in this camp, or any camp. The Hobo mine, owned by St. Paul mining men, uncovered a rich body of peacock jack, and cube lead, samples of which are to be seen in the office of the local manager of the property. The Big-Squaw, owned by Chicago parties, blasted out some great boulders of lead. This property adjoins the famous Joanna mine, which has produced the largest lead boulders ever found in the district. The McAllester mine, on the Sweeney Mining & Engineering company's land is turning out ore that assays 62 per cent and has between sixty-five and seventy tons of ore in its bins at this time. This mine is a fine example of what is meant by a water deposit of free ore. Nothing can be more beautiful, as the ore looks like so many jewels. The spring River mill, also new, made its first turn-in of 70,000 pounds of zinc this week, and the Merritt-Newland started its new mill much to the satisfaction of its owners. All of these properties are now numbered among the producers of this mining camp.

As has often been reiterated this camp has the ore, and has it in great abundance, proven over and over again by the drill holes and shafts sunk on the same, and the chances are as good now as three years ago, when the Mission mine was opened up.

The Mission mine had 300,000 pounds of ore in its bins on Thursday of this week taken from its mine in the last ten days. Some time the last of February or the first of March, Mr. T. J. Foley, vice president of the company, came to the mine to personally direct the improvement of its conditions, to increase the hours of operation, to enlarge the output, and make needed repairs, all of which consumed a lot of time also to apply business methods to the production of ore from the Mission mine. The output of the last ten days is proof that his efforts have not been in vein. 200,000 pounds of zinc and 100,000 pounds of lead, valued at nearly $7,000 is only the beginning of this mine's possibilities. Small and inadequate as the present mill is, it has not lost a day in the last five weeks, running twenty-one hours out of the twenty-four. At the present time the plans for the erection of a new 500-ton mill is under consideration, and a deep well is being drilled to supply water. The Mission mine is not only the oldest, but it is the best opened up mine in the Quapaw reserve, Indian Territory, which lies south of Baxter Springs about five miles. This week's output gives the Mission first place among the producers of this mining camp of lead and zinc. Mr. Foley under whose personal direction this output has been made possible has taken up his residence like a true miner, at the mine, even wooing soft slumber by that sweetest of music the pulsing of the air-compressor, the exhaust of the hoister, the grinding of the crusher and the chafing of the big rolls. The underground development of the Mission reveals alike to the miner and the novice the wonders of the ore deposits of lead and zinc in this field, where zinc and lead exist in great abundance. It is too easy of access, and too delightful a climate to be very attractive. Man longs for obstacles to gain wealth.

E. F. Sweeney and family of Duluth, are located in the City of Baxter, and Mr. Sweeney and son Will are daily out over their mining lands, of which they have nearly 500 acres.

T. A. Brown, also of Duluth, is located in this camp, looking after the properties of the Great Northern Mining company.

Adventure Has Drill Down 155 Feet in Baltic Explorations---Much Work to be Done on Carp Lake Property.

Houghton, Mich., May 18.—The explorations upon the Adventure property for the Baltic lode were delayed for a few days on account of the supply of pipe being exhausted. The drill has been put down 154 feet without striking the lodge, and it will be driven still deeper. The point of attack is in the swamp near Peppard junction.

The lake has not yet begun the sinking of a shaft on this formation, owing to the unsettled condition of the weather making it difficult to get the necessary material on the ground. However, it is planned to begin operations at an early date, and the work will be watched with more than the usual amount of interest. Messrs. Cole and McDonald, the diamond drill contractors of Virginia, Minn., visited the Victoria mine last week, and it is understood that negotiations are under way for doing considerable drill work on that property.

Victoria produced eighty-two tons of mill-rock last month. This is an increase of twelve tons over the preceding month, and the best record which has been made by the company. The delay in getting the new cylinder for the stamp head has caused a great deal of annoyance to the management. The contract called for its delivery along about the first of the year, but the manufacturers were unable to make good. However, it is expected that it will be ready for use very shortly.

Arrangements are being perfected for doing quite a large amount of work on Carp Lake property during the coming summer. The mine is to be unwatered, openings extended and a mill test is to be made of the rock. In addition to this a thorough exploration is to be made of the property with the diamond drill. Work is to be started as soon as the weather will permit. Frank K. Gillespie of New York was in Ontonagon recently. He said that he and his associates are planning to begin an active campaign on the property at an early date, and that it is their purpose to carry the work far enough to be able to determine its value.

A station has been cut at the third regular level of the Medora shaft of Kewecnaw at a depth of 525 feet. Drifting both ways has progressed about sixty feet on either side and both drifts are breasted in good copper-bearing ground. It is believed that the directors will soon decide to use one of the heads of the Phoenix mills for stamping. The mine has 1600 tons on the dump and is so opened that between 250 and 300 tons could be furnished

Bisbee, Ariz., May 18.—Work is being pushed rapidly at the Warren and the shaft is now in mineralized ground which shows copper carbonates and glance disseminated throughout the rock. The sinking is on a fault zone showing considerable iron. The condition of the ground is very encouraging and suggests good possibilities at a depth of 1,000 or 1,200 feet.

Among the passengers outward bound last week were H. B. Paull, auditor for the Calumet & Arizona company, and his family, who will spend a short time visiting the Grand Canyon before they go to Duluth, where they will in future make their home.

Their many friends in Bisbee will without doubt regret to hear of their departure from the city where they have lived for several years, during which time Mr. Paull has been head of the local office force of the Calumet & Arizona company in his capacity of chief auditor. During that time, too, both Mr. and Mrs. Paull have greatly endeared themselves to a host of friends.

The reason for their change of residence is that nearly all of the principal books of the corporation are kept at Duluth. Mr. Paull's duties will therefore confine him to a large extent to his new home. He will, however, make occasional trips to this section to audit the books of the local office of the concern.

Mr. Paull will be succeeded as head of the local office by J. E. Curry, who has been chief clerk for some time. He will also have charge of local auditing, it is understood.

R. Stewart of the Denver Bridge company has the contract to erect two buildings for the Calumet & Arizona Mining company at the Junction shaft, which will be used jointly by the Calumet & Arizona and the Junction as machine shops. The structural iron for the buildings has already arrived at the siding at Lowell, and within the coming week it is expected that a crew of iron workers from Denver will arrive in Bisbee and begin work.

One of the buildings which will be used as a machine shop will be 56 feet wide by 125 feet long and 18 feet high at the eaves. The other building will be 128 feet long by 40 feet wide, and will be used as a storehouse and supply depot for the different departments of the mining companies.

The same company has the contract to erect the car barn for the Warren street railway system. The barn when completed will be 120 feet long and 40 feet wide. The exact location of the building has not been chosen yet, but it will be situated just outside of what is to be the residence portion of the city of Warren.

That the deal between the Wolverine, Arizona and Thomas Higgins for the old Higgins shaft is complete is shown by the fact that Supt. Roberts of the Wolverine will advertise in a few days for bids on a drift from the Higgins shaft to the body of ore that was encountered in the Wolverine recently by the diamond drill about 450 feet from the shaft.

An old drift that runs from the Higgins property to within 200 feet of the Warren claim of the Wolverine will be continued until the ore body encountered by the diamond drill is reached and its extent determined. Contracts will be let in sections of 50 feet each, and three shifts will be used in the drifts with the large type of Rand-Ingersoll machines, Mr. Roberts stated the other day.

When the ore was encountered at the Wolverine three weeks ago the diamond drill was stopped and arrangements made to enable work to begin in the Higgins drift, which is the nearest opening to the ore body.

GLOBE CLAIMS FIRST PLACE

Over Four Thousand Men Are Now Employed in District and Hustling Camp Claims to be Leader in Arizona.

Globe, Ariz., May 18.—Globe is taking its place as the leading mining camp of the Southwest and claims that there are more men employed at the present time by the companies of Globe, than in any other camp in the Southwest. This is not because there is a strike in the Warren district, as there are more men working in the Globe mines now than there were at Bisbee before the strike was called.

According to the best authorities from the Warren district, 3,200 men were employed there before the Western Federation called the strike. In the Globe district at present at least 4,000 men are employed by the mining companies.

On the pay rolls of the Phelps-Dodge company alone during the month of March, were the names of 2,800. Of these 2,200 were employed by the Old Dominion company and 600 by the United Globe. During the past few weeks 250 more have been added to the construction forces of the Old Dominion and there are now over 3,000 men in the employ of the Phelps-Dodge company. A very conservative estimate of the number of men employed by the other companies of the district places it at 1,000, making a total of 4,000 men employed in the district.

Every succeeding week witnesses an enlargement of operations. Several companies have been hampered by the slow delivery of much needed machinery. Superior & Boston, Calumet & Globe and Globe-Arizona have suffered from this cause, but hoists for these companies, ordered several months ago, arrived last week and they will now be able to push development work. Ore shipments continue large and although Old Dominion is unable to treat custom ores, the company continues to receive all shipments.

May promises to be a good month for Old Dominion. Four furnaces are running and there is not likely to be any interruption of smelting during the month. With the exception of some low grade sulphide from Cananea, all the ore being smelted is from the company's own mines. The fourteenth level sulphide stope is supplying a large tonnage, as is also the big west stope on the ninth level. The Kirky vein on the tenth level continues to yield a very good grade of sulphide. Connections are being made to open the Kirky vein on the eleventh and twelfth levels and a drift will also be run to open it on the fourteenth. No. 4 crosscut on the fourteenth has been started and should reach sulphide vein No. 1 before the end of this month. The station on the fourteenth level has been cut and the gallows frame for the electric hoist is being erected. The winze, which is to be erected this week and should be completed by Aug. 1, when drifting and crosscutting will be started to open the great sulphide ore body

In Nevada to Bid for Riches---Hangs 6,000 Feet Over Death Valley---Fourteen Carloads Shipped from Mohawk.

Rhyolite, Nev., May 18.—The new camp of Skidoo has become a topic of interest in Southern Nevada mining circles since the Lee district has become an accepted fact.

The future of Skidoo seems assured although a tram line nineteen miles long is being built from Telescope peak to supply the camp with water.

The camp has every mark of permanency, but it is not probable that a railroad will reach it for some time as it is perched on the side of the Panamint, 6,000 feet over Death Valley, with every known obstacle in the way of constructing a road bed.

A mammoth concentrator is being planned by the Skidoo Mines company, to handle the camp's ores and handling is now done in an Rhyolite and Johannesburg.

The name Skidoo was given to the camp by Mrs. B. A. Montgomery, the woman who led a score of people off for the mining district of Montgomery-Shoshone, in Inyo district.

After the sale of the Montgomery-Shoshone Mines Montgomery looked over the remaining claims for investment with the aid of claims then known as the Bonnie Fraser, by Ramsey and Thompson, the original locators.

There were 28 claims in all and when Mrs. Montgomery was shown the property she immediately dubbed the property for the "Skidoo" number, and among the miners the name stuck. Sherty Harris, the man who discovered the Original Bullfrog, came into Rhyolite in January of 1906, and told the story of the Thompson-Ramsey strike, which, until that time had been kept secret. In May Montgomery and Hoveck bought the 28 claims for $100,000.

At the time of the sale there was not a hole deeper than 18 inches in the district, but 26 tests were made without a single failure to get rich returns and the sale was made at once.

In less than a year and a half Skidoo has become a rattling good camp, for lessees are at work all over the properties of the Skidoo company, and development is going on apace. There are 100 residences and business houses in Skidoo, and rents range from $100 to $300 each.

There is litigation pending, however, over the title to the Skidoo property.

Goldfield, Nev., May 18.—The Mohawk has shipped a train of ore consisting of fourteen box cars and loaded with 400 tons of ore.

This is the initial shipment made by the company itself, the ore being the

NEW BROOM AT THE GREENE

Hayden, Stone & Co. say in their weekly letter: No more eloquent testimony in behalf of the wisdom of the sale of the Greene Consolidated Copper company to the Greene-Cananea company, and to the efficiency of the Cole management of these properties could be asked than the simple fact which is stated to us in a letter written from Cananea by our own correspondent. In speaking of the changed conditions at the smelter of the Greene Consolidated Copper company, he notes the facts that in the power-room of the smelter seven boilers are now doing 22 per cent more work than was formerly accomplished by ten boilers, and the force in this department alone has been decreased by sixteen men. He also notes the fact that just before his arrival the second remodelled furnace had been blown in. This process of remodelling will be continued until all eight furnaces have a daily capacity of 400 tons against 250 tons for the old furnaces. Two new convertor stands have been ordered, which will bring the total up to seven. Except for the crushing plant, the concentrator seems to be doing its work well. A large extension, housing twelve vanners and six Wilfrey tables, has just been made with a new type of table of greater capacity and supposed to give greater saving.

The mines are far ahead of the smelter, and could probably supply 25 per cent more ore than the present amount (2,500 tons daily), if the smelter were in condition to receive it. Here, also, the campaign of cost reduction has had a very noticeable effect by the adoption of the slicing system in the place of the old square set system. The timber requirements alone have been reduced from twenty-six feet per ton to fourteen feet. With timber at $23 per 1,000 this is a material saving. It is hoped to reduce mining costs another $1 per ton. This will be accomplished by the complete adoption of the slicing system, the direct transportation of the ores from the mines to the smelter by electric tram (instead of carrying them to bins and from there

Last Year Were $6,436,756, While Gross Yield of Ores Was $16,717,601---Massachusetts Women Buy Gold Quartz Mines.

Boise, Idaho, May 18.—The sworn statement of the mines of the Caeur d'Alenes, in Northern Idaho, with the exception of the Success and Stewart, which have not been filed with the assessor, show the total net profits for 1906 were $6,436,756.03, while the gross yield of the ores produced was $16,717,601.63. The cost of extraction was $4,329,517.72 upon a tonnage of 1,721,571. The cost of transportation, reduction and sale of the products amounted to $4,952,436.90 and the improvements $956,325.20. The four Standard-Mammoth, Tiger-Poorman and Last Chance hold the record, with a gross product of $7,775,700 and a net profit of $2,085,213.76 but the Bunker Hill and Sullivan surpasses all in the record for a single mine, the gross yield being $4,771,748.25 and the net profit $2,264,389.22. With the exception of the Snowstorm all the output is silver and lead. The mines reporting a loss for the year are Frisco, Hunter and, Tamarack-Chesapeake. The Frisco reported a loss of $117,889.58, the Hunter $8,126 and the Tamarack-Chesapeake $10,231.05. The several reports are made under a state law compelling such statements to be filed with the county assessors each year.

Communication with the Thunder Mountain district near the wagon road will soon be opened, as the snow is rapidly disappearing from the higher mountains. Much machinery is lying along the route that will be taken in as soon as possible.

A deal has just been consummated whereby the Gold Hill and Iowa groups of gold quartz mines at Quartzburg passed into the hands of Mrs. M. C. Hall and Mrs. Minerva C. Crocker of Lowell, Mass. The purchasers have incorporated under the name of Gold Hill & Iowa Mining company. The old stockholders retain an interest in the new company. Soon as the roads are in good condition a large force of men will be put to work. The Gold Hill is equipped with a twenty-five stamp mill and the Iowa with a twenty-stamp.

The Big Giant gold quartz mine, ten miles east of Boise, now has 5,700 feet of underground workings. To make a thorough test of the ore thirty tons have been shipped to four different re-

LAKE SUPERIOR IRON MINES

Virginia, Minn., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The management of the Duluth & Iron Range railroad is preparing into the Mountain Iron territory for ore shipments next season. Contractor J. Runquist is now at work grading for a spur which will run from Eveleth yards direct to the Mountain Iron mine, a distance of about seven miles. The grading is well along and will be completed the present year. With the beginning of the shipping season of 1908 the Iron Range road will handle all the ore in the Mountain Iron district now hauled to Duluth docks by the Duluth, Missabe & Northern. This change was made necessary by the fact that next year the steel corporation expects to begin making heavy shipments from its mines in the Coleraine district and these shipments, together with the anticipated increase in production in the Hibbing district, would overtax the capacity of the Missabe docks if the road attempted to handle the product of the Mountain Iron district as well. Consequently it was decided to shift the Mountain Iron shipments to the docks at Two Harbors and the building of this spur is the result.

The spur will cross the tracks of the Missabe line running from Iron Junction to Virginia about midway between the two places and will be used by both railroads to run their passenger trains on from Eveleth to Virginia, and the roads will use union depots in both places—the Iron Range depot in Eveleth and the Missabe depot in Virginia. It will be necessary for trains running into Virginia to back down something over half a mile to reach this cut-off to the Missabe line. But this will be much preferable to backing down all the way to Iron Junction, as the Missabe trains do now, before proceeding to Virginia.

The Wacootah mine of the Pitt Iron Mining company near Mountain Iron recently transferred its shipments from the Great Northern to the Missabe road. Last year the Great Northern built a spur into the mine with the intention of hauling its ore, but the mining company found its service unsatisfactory and consequently decided to make the change. The Missabe is now constructing a spur to the mine and as soon as it is completed shipments from the Wacootah will be resumed. With the change above indicated is made next year the ore from this mine will probably also be handled by the Iron Range road and hauled to Two Harbors.

The superintendent of an independent mining concern recently informed your correspondent that his company was exceedingly well pleased over the treatment accorded it by both the steel corporation railroads. He says that if any advantages are given as between shipping mines they are invariably given to the independent operators, the disposition being to so regulate affairs that the independents cannot claim that they are not given "a fair show." As a rule cars are promptly furnished when needed and as promptly taken away when filled and every effort is made to facilitate the mining work of the independents. All this has a tendency to keep the smaller operators in good humor and to convince them that the announced policy of the steel corporation of doing unto others as it would be done by is sincere.

The exploration near Buhl on lands secured on a lease by several residents of Virginia, and on which ore was found about two months ago, is showing up better with every drill hole put down and the outlook is that a large deposit of ore

Ships Another Carload of High Grade Ore---Mine Continues to Improve in Value--- Pinal County Development.

Phoenix, Ariz., May 18.—The Copper Butte company shipped another carload of high-grade copper ore this week. The mine continues to improve in size and value.

Another big mining deal at Ray is in process of incubation and will probably be completed inside of a few weeks.

The Calumet & Arizona people, who, some time ago, obtained a working bond on the Clark and Scanland properties, situated in Table mountain, near Mammoth, this county, are running diamond drills on the property and will thoroughly prospect the claims through an extensive system of boreholes, before locating their working shafts.

A strong inflow of water has been encountered in the Sharpe shaft at the Red Hills, twelve miles east of Florence, at a depth of about 100 feet. The shaft also penetrated a soft talcose material at water level and will require timbering. Pending the installation of a pump and the receipt of timbers work at the shaft has been discontinued temporarily.

Work has been discontinued at the Newbury mine again, but it is expected that the shutdown will be temporary, as the breast of the new crosscut tunnel is still 150 feet from the vein.

There is a mountain of fine zinc ore in Pinal county, within two miles of the railroad. It should attract the attention of zinc miners as there is good money in mining zinc when the mines are advantageously situated in the matter of railroad transportation.

MINING IN THE BLACK HILLS

Deadwood, S. D., May 18.—The great event in mining circles recently was the sale of the famous Hidden Fortune property to the Columbus Consolidated Gold Mining company. The former company, which was capitalized for 2,000,000 shares of a par value of $1 each, owned some 200 acres of patented ground adjoining the Homestake on the north and west and including the Hidden Fortune claim, from which Otto Grantz took $57,000 in two months. After the company was organized a considerable amount of development work was done, including the running of the Bingham tunnel for a distance of 1888 feet and the sinking of several shafts, one of which has reached a depth of 200 feet. The company has also erected a mill with a 250 ton capacity, and operated the same for a short time. Becoming heavily involved financially, however, many judgments were filed against the company, which finally passed into the hands of a receiver. The Columbus company then made a proposition to buy the Hidden Fortune holdings and to assume the debts. Accordingly the property was sold at public sale on May 3 and was bid in by E. Nesmith for the Colorado Iron Works, which held a judgment against the company for $220,000. This judgment, according to agreement, was immediately made over to the Columbus company, which thus comes into possession of all the ground of the Hidden Fortune as well as of its mill and other holdings.

The Columbus, because of this deal, has increased its capital stock from $5,000,000 to $7,000,000, part of which will go to the stockholders of the Hidden Fortune and has issued bonds to the amount of $400,000. The first $30,000 of these bonds went to the payment of some preferred claims of the Hidden Fortune, and the second $30,000 will be applied directly to the opening up and developing of the ground and to putting the mill into running order. The Columbus has now holdings amounting to nearly 1,000 acres, two mills and a large quantity of milling ore which will be available for treatment at once, on the 200 foot level of the Columbus the vein was crosscut for a distance of 247 feet and showed an average value of $4 a ton. An aerial tramway to connect the mines with the Hidden Fortune mill below Deadwood is contemplated. Both properties are well opened up, showing an immense reserve of low grade ore of from $3 to $5 in value and some very high grade. The company now has a favorable outlook.

BUTTE'S DIVIDEND RECORDS

Boston & Montana Has Paid Its Stockholders More Than $54,000,000, With the Anaconda a Good Second, Nearly $35,000,000—Money in Treasury for Calumet & Butte.

Butte, Mont., May 18.—The record of dividends paid by mining companies operating in Butte seems to be somewhat tangled, for the figures of those who have compiled them do not dovetail. Amalgamated is credited with dividends aggregating $50,584,788, which some statisticians have added to the payments of the subsidiary companies of this corporation, making the total an immense sum, and the Montana Ore Purchasing company is credited with $9,437,274. Then comes the United Copper with a record of $6,675,000. The fact of the matter is, the bulk of the money paid out in dividends by the Amalgamated was paid into the treasury of that corporation by the subsidiary companies, and the entire $50,584,788 cannot be therefore added to the amount paid by the latter. Ten companies are credited with $172,379,786. This includes the $6,675,000 paid by the United Copper company on its common and preferred stock, but the United Copper is a holding company, the same as Amalgamated, and receives its money from the Montana Ore Purchasing company. It is not paying dividends out of its Butte holdings now, for it has no Butte property except the La France Copper, which is not a large producer. The amounts paid by the various companies in Butte are as follows:

Boston & Montana	54,325,000
Anaconda	34,850,000
Montana Ore Purchasing	9,437,274
North Butte	5,600,000
Parrott	6,892,724
Coalition	1,300,000
Butte & Boston	1,380,000
Alice	1,115,000
Total	$172,379,786

The record shows that Butte & Boston has not paid a dividend since February of 1904, but it has been earning money right along. Amalgamated owns all of the stock in this company and the dividends therefore go into the treasury of this company. Amalgamated also owns all of the stock in the Trenton company, which has no dividend record, notwithstanding the fact that it has been operating twenty-six years and must have paid in that time not less than $20,000,000 in dividends. A portion of the dividends paid by Amalgamated must therefore come from the Trenton.

Red Metal is credited with $1,200,000 in dividends, but Coalition is the holding company for it and the money went into the treasury of the latter.

It is safe to say that the companies of Butte have paid at least the amount stated, $172,379,786, for there is no public record of the Clark interests, the dividends of which must be large. Nor is there any public record of the amount paid by the old Speculator company, which operated the Speculator mine for years prior to the time the property was bought by the North Butte company, for all of the stock, 15,000 shares, was held by the Largeys and John C. Creighton of Omaha.

With the addition of the amount realized by smaller or individual operators, the sum might be increased several million dollars, bringing it close to $180,000,000.

The records show that Arizona as a whole, Colorado as a whole, and Utah as a whole, have paid in dividends a total of $152,634,783, which is not within $25,000,000 of as much as the ten mining companies in Butte have paid, and yet the total number of dividend payers in

Baxter Springs, Kans., May 18.—At no time in the history of the Quapaw mining camp has everything looked so prosperous as now. The past week has shown up some exceedingly rich ore bodies. The Kramer-Morse, owned by Wellington, Wichita and Kansas City men, opened up as fine a deposit of zinc as has ever been seen in this camp, or any camp. The Hobo mine, owned by St. Paul mining men, uncovered a rich body of peacock jack, and cube lead, samples of which are to be seen in the office of the local manager of the property. The Big-Squaw, owned by Chicago parties, blasted out some great boulders of lead. This is the famous Joanna property adjoins the famous Joanna mine, which has produced the largest lead boulders ever found in the district. The McAllester mine, on the Sweeney Mining & Engineering company's land is turning out ore that assays 62 per cent and has between sixty-five and seventy tons of ore in its bins at this time. This mine is a fine example of what is meant by a water deposit of free ore. Nothing can be more beautiful, as the ore looks like so many jewels. The Spring River mill, also new, made its first turn-in of 70,000 pounds of zinc this week, and the Merritt-Newland started its new mill much to the satisfaction of its owners. All of these properties are now numbered among the producers of this mining camp.

As has often been reiterated this camp has the ore, and has it in great abundance, proven over and over again by the drill holes and shafts sunk on the same, and the chances are as good now as three years ago, when the Mission mine was opened up.

The Mission mine had 300,000 pounds of ore in its bins on Thursday of this week taken from its mine in the last ten days. Some time the last of February or the first of March, Mr. T. J. Foley, vice president of the company, came to the mine to personally direct the improvement of its conditions, to increase the hours of operation, to enlarge the output, and make needed repairs, all of which consumed a lot of time also to apply business methods to the production of ore from the Mission mine. The output of the last ten days is proof that his efforts have not been in vein. 300,000 pounds of zinc and 100,000 pounds of lead, valued at nearly $7,000 is only the beginning of this mine's possibilities. Small and inadequate as the present mill is, it has not lost a day in the last five weeks, running twenty-one hours out of the twenty-four. At the present time the plans for the erection of a new 500-ton mill is under consideration, and a deep well is being drilled to supply water. The Mission mine is not only the oldest, but it is the best opened up mine in the Quapaw reserve, Indian Territory, which lies south of Baxter Springs about five miles. This week's output gives the Mission first place among the producers of this mining camp of lead and zinc. Mr. Foley under whose personal direction this output has been made possible has taken up his residence like a true miner, at the mine, even wooing soft slumber by that sweetest of music the pulsing of the air-compressor, the exhaust of the hoister, the grinding of the crusher and the chaining of the big rolls. The underground development of the Mission reveals alike to the miner and the novice the wonders of the ore deposits of lead and zinc in this field, where zinc and lead exist in great abundance. It is too easy of access, and too delightful a climate to be very attractive. Man longs for obstacles to gain wealth.

E. F. Sweeney and family of Duluth, are located in the City of Baxter, and Mr. Sweeney and son Will are daily out over their mining lands, of which they have nearly 500 acres.

F. A. Brown, also of Duluth, is located in this camp, looking after the properties of the Great Northern Mining company.

SOCIETY

UNTIL last summer, Duluth maidens from sixteen to sixty were content to sit in the off-end of a canoe, watching the landscape, while a more logical and analytical person did the propelling, or to sit with awesome eyes while the witchcraft of a sailboat was managed with more or less success by another masculine being, or sit helplessly while the various parts of a more or less stubborn engine were tinkered with by another or maybe the same superior man. Last year, there was a bit of uneasiness displayed in this part of inaction by those invited to quietly share the pleasures of boating, and a propensity to paddle her own canoe was developed by the Duluth girl, and an uncanny interest in port and starboard and steering gear of otherwise harmless looking boats was developed. Some little knowledge was acquired, which has been probably forgotten in the intervening months, but it will soon be picked up again, for boating is really very simple and so illogical. You do exactly the thing that you never in the world would expect to do. By the time you have that mastered, you have a very good working knowledge of all boating. Of course, everyone has had some grave-minded person, who takes boating seriously, heavily try to explain to one—that that really isn't true; that managing a boat is the most logical thing on earth and to do it really well, one should understand a compass and trigonometry and such things, and that the only reason that woman thinks it is illogical is because her order of thought as a general thing is illogical, but she calls it logical, so that when she encounters a plan of things that is beautifully clear and sensible, she cannot understand, and calls it illogical.

Maybe! And probably the moon was shining all the time he was laboriously explaining that. Logical minds are hard to understand and go canoeing with. With the first glimpses of the exquisite spring weather the fever for boating will commence, and this year more feminine enthusiasts than ever before are expected on the bay and river.

The last snowstorm of the season, or at least, the last that is expected, was experienced during the week and with the close of the season of snowshoes and skiis, the joys of spring and summer may come. There was little of interest during the week aside from the festival of music, to which all society turned out, and the splendid success of the undertaking is the topic of conversation throughout the city. The visiting artists were accorded a warm reception and the work of the local people has been most warmly commended. The May festival will continue to interest people for some time to come.

The out-of-door amusements will hold forth from now on. Golfing, although a little less in favor than in former years, always has its group of devotees, and the Country club will be the scene of much entertaining. No large and formal affairs are scheduled for the week.

New Compositions of Local Musician.

Ernest Lachmund of this city has just received from Stahl of Berlin, the first copies of his new compositions for piano. The numbers will be handled by Shirmer and will, of course, be of exceptional interest here where the composer is so well known. The numbers now being brought out by Mr. Lachmund's publishers are opus 5 and 6. Opus 5 consists of three children's pieces, "The Brownies," "Playtime" and "Little Waltz," and those interested in piano literature will be especially glad of these numbers. Opus 6 is of the third and fourth grade piano compositions called "Scene de Ballet," "Reverie" and Gavotte."

Those who were interested in the playing of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, heard this week, will be glad to know that Mr. Lachmund's "German Suite for Big Orchestra" will be on its programs next winter. The music was not received in time to put it in rehearsal for the appearance of the orchestra in this city. Carlo Fisher, 'cellist, will play Mr. Lachmund's "Serenade," which Anton Hekking played here in concert last winter. Mr. Fisher will play with orchestra accompaniment.

WILL NOT EAT BIRDS.

The hunting and trapping of rare wild animals for menageries and zoological collections is an industry of which but little is told, principally because those who engage in the dangerous, though fascinating, occupation are men who rarely leave the expedition camps. A grizzled, sunburnt African hunter, who recently came with a consignment of animals for Forepaugh-Sells' menagerie, told a number of interesting anecdotes, says the Washington Post. Speaking of the lion's most marked characteristics, he related instances of the lion's fear of mankind. In three cases the big cat evidently mistook human beings for legitimate quarry. In one case a hunter was packing in supplies, when an unexpected addition to the load knocked him flat. He sat up in time to see a big lion speeding through the cover.

"On another occasion," said the hunter, "a friend of mine was suddenly held up by a tall, extraordinary lean animal, which dropped to the trail some six feet ahead. My friend promptly put a bullet through the head of what proved to be an old female. The third case was of an African woman who, while going to the stream for water, found herself face to face with a snarling lion. Dropping her pail, she grasped her slight wraps and shook them vigorously in the face of the foe. The horrified lion at once fled to the tall timber.

"There is another peculiar thing about lions," said the hunter. "They will not eat the flesh of a fowl. You might tempt them with canvasback duck or the daintiest squab, but they would refuse it. I remember once having a swan which had broken its wing. We doctored it, dressed it carefully, and threw it into the cage of the lions, but they would not touch it, and it finally had to be taken out and thrown away.

I have repeatedly put pigeons alive into the cage just to see what they would do. I have thrown grain down among the lions, and the pigeons have actually gotten down and hopped around the big brutes, even hopping on their backs, the lions making no attempt to disturb them, even seeming to enjoy their companionship.

"There is something rather strange about this which is difficult to explain. To my mind it argues that a lion is not brutal in its instincts. Savage he undoubtedly is. Fierce at all times, but fierce with justice. I believe every one of my lions has a conscience; I know that every one of them knows the difference between right and wrong; they know their wondrous power and are charitable. They would never attempt to injure anything that in no way could do them any harm.

"The study of a lion, his habits, character and capability is one of the most interesting I know. It offers a field as yet comparatively unknown, but the more one goes into it, the more time one takes to find out just what a lion is, the more he is convinced that he has rightly been named the king of beasts."

TREES CURED BY SURGERY.

The successful treatment of trees by surgery is the subject of a report made recently by a botanist named Eberhardt to the Academy of Sciences in Paris. M. Eberhardt has practiced it, he says, with entire success in Indo-China. He has performed operations on tea plants, mulberry trees, orange tree and other tropical plants.

Experiments in cold climates have not met with success so far, but it is believed the system can be used with advantage in the southern regions of Europe. The operations are not amputations, neither are they mere subcutaneous injections, such as have been made successfully in Europe for the cure of some parasitic diseases of plants. They are surgical in the strictly modern sense.

The method is adopted when the trees are attacked by insects, which penetrate the bark and deposit their eggs in the wood. The long horned beetle is a serious plague in Indo-China.

The larvae hollow out galleries in the tissue of the trunk and branches, these interrupt the circulation of the sap and the tree speedily withers and dies.

Eberhardt's method consists of opening up the gallery with a scalpel, removing the larvae with a forceps or curetting instrument and then flushing out the cavity with an antiseptic fluid consisting of forty parts of glycerine, 110 of formaline and 850 of water. Three or four washings are given at intervals extending over about fifteen days, and at the end of that time cushions of vegetable tissue begin to appear along the edge of the scar, which heals completely in from six to eight months. It is esential during the first two or three months to protect the wound from light, which seems to stop the formation of new tissue.

WANTED HIS OWN.

Independent: "I always thought," said the hostess, "that Scotchmen were humorous. Last night I showed a departing Scotch guest a great pile of overcoats in the dressing room.

"'Here,' I said, with a wave of my hand, 'you are the first to leave. Take your choice.'

"'Thank you,' said he, as he fumbled searching among them, 'I'll have me own.'"

Celebration of Silver Wedding

By ROSANNA SCHUYLER.

The celebration of a silver wedding is so pretty a custom that those who are able should never omit it. All the world knows that it marks the twenty-fifth anniversary, and few are the persons who are not pleased at being invited to one.

Everything in the way of invitations, procedure and decorations is based upon silver, and it is impossible to have too much of it in evidence. Remembering this, a housewife of twenty-five years' standing is usually able to make a brave display, and the collection is added to by gifts from friends and members of the family.

Whether or not all those invited shall send gifts is a more or less mooted question. An invitation to a wedding anniversary is taken to mean a gift quite as much as a card to the wedding itself, but it is in the power of the celebrating couple to control this easily by a line on the invitations.

An anniversary is usually celebrated in the evening, and formality in the cards is rather desirable. The regular "at home" formula is used, added to which the date of the wedding and that of the present function are put in the upper corners of the card, with the hostess' maiden name and that of her husband in the bottom ones. There is no question but that the finest taste approves a line written or engraved on the card that gifts shall not be sent.

This request removes any sense of obligation on the part of guests, and it does not prevent old and dear friends from sending a token of auld lang syne.

All engraving is done in silver.

The husband and wife receive the guests standing in line, and instead of their old ushers to make presentations, they are done by sons. If there are daughters of the house they help parents to receive as the bridesmaids did twenty-five years before. It is a nice courtesy to make the ushers and former bridesmaids special guests of honor if they are available.

Only occasionally can the matron, after twenty-five years of married life, wear her bridal frock. In its place may be chosen one of the softest silver gray, and it should be as pretty and dainty as money can make it.

The drawing room, where the guests are received, should be profusely decorated, and wedding flowers, such as lilies of the valley, white lilacs or white violets may be used. White roses with quantities of malden hair fern are always in good taste. Whenever possible the flowers should be in silver receptacles.

In the dining room the table should be a triumph of artistic use of silver, cut glass and flowers, and the refreshments that might mar the effect are better on a buffet, from which they are served. Salads, a couple of hot entrees, sandwiches, ices, cakes, punch, coffee and champagne may be included on the menu, and only such dishes as bonbons, cakes, etc., are pretty on the table. Guests are not seated, of course, although some chairs may be left in the room to be used by those who wish. The color scheme in this room may be white or pink, the latter being emblematical of the rose.

Music may be provided, and there may be dancing for the young people if one likes.

It is quite good form to write invitations in the form of notes for an anniversary, but this presupposes a comparatively small number of guests.

Infants' "Nerves" Often Result of Strenuous Play.

A mother who brings up her baby in such a way that it has "nerves" does it one of the greatest possible wrongs. We are quite too nervous as a nation, and we all suffer accordingly. Therefore, why not try to start your baby's life in such a way that its nervous organization will be sound and its physical condition much better in consequence?

No mother deliberately makes her baby nervous. I know this. But many times, many more than should be, she does the same thing unconsciously, and it is this I wish to write of today.

An infant's nerves are delicate and always ready to jump into evidence. They are all too likely to grow, and the surest preventive against this undesirable development is quiet. Talking much to a young baby, letting its aunts and cousins see it is pleasant; unless practised in great moderation it is bad. Talking and strange faces excite, and if there has been an undue amount of either, baby's next nap will be an uneasy and restless one, and he will not begin to get the strength from it that he should. Sudden noises, like banging a door, or jumping unexpectedly at an infant, should never be allowed. The latter frequently makes the baby laugh, I know, but it excites the tiny mind, which after a time keeps itself tense in expectation of excitement.

Noisy toys should never be permitted, and indeed the quieter the amusements the better. Baby loves nothing better than his own toes to play with, and will amuse himself for five minutes at a time with them if laid on a bed where he may kick and stretch.

More than one baby is weakened nervously by over entertainment. Physicians know that poor people's infants are less nervous than those of wealthy parents, and it is because these women, being occupied with their work, stimulate their little ones less, and therefore the nerves of these babies are stronger.

Continual nervousness on the part of an infant is so apt to indicate a wrong physical condition that it should be looked into. Incidentally it is one of the symptoms of rickets, and when this disease is present the baby is usualy restless at night and perspires excessively on the head. If there is indication of such trouble a mother should lose no time in having a physician see her small child.

If, however, baby is already nervous, it does not necessarily mean illness. The best way of finding precisely what it does mean is to institute a system of quiet living. Let the little one see no strangers and only a few of those whom he knows. Many faces, even familiar ones, should be kept away. The room should have a softened light with sun, of course, but not glaring, and all noises should be kept from him. If he has been much amused or had many toys, let there be only a few and those soft ones. A ball and his own toes are enough. There should be no artificial light at night, or if one is necessary it must be so shaded that it will not shine upon him.

Let quiet be the keynote of the "nerve" cure, and if in a few weeks baby has not responded to it consult a physician, for there is apt to be a physical cause of which nervousness is the indication.

SNEAKERS.

New York Press: "Your boy is going blind; he wears sneakers." So spake a lay doctor to the father of a 12-year-old olive branch. "You are right as to his wearing sneakers," replied the father, "but his eyes are as strong as those of the American eagle. I have been told many times that rubber soles affect the sight. Wherefore? The sneaker is light, it is pliable, it is noiseless, it is springy and having a canvas upper is well ventilated. The only objection I have is its lack of durability. The cost is from 59 cents to $1 a pair, and my boy wears two pairs a month. The rubber is adulterated, of course, and parts from the canvas on the slightest provocation. If some one would make a sneaker with a stout leather sole, sewed to the canvas and not glued on, he could build a quick fortune."

NEW LINEN FIBRE FROM BRAZIL.

Chicago Tribune: The Brazilian linen plant is expected to exert an important influence upon the textile world in the near future.

It is a common weed which reaches a height of eighteen feet in twelve months. When carefully cultivated it matures within three months, and can yield three crops in a year. The fibre has all the qualities necessary for high-class use—strength, fineness, flexibility, and adaptability for bleaching, dyeing, etc.

Every part of the plant can be used for some industrial purpose, more especially for the manufacturing of writing paper. The cultivation was commenced by the state government, and now is said to have emerged from the experimental state successfully.

SOCIETY

UNTIL last summer, Duluth maidens from sixteen to sixty were content to sit in the off-end of a canoe, watching the landscape, while a more logical and analytical person did the propelling, or to sit with awesome eyes while the witchcraft of a sailboat was managed with more or less success by another masculine being, or sit helplessly while the various parts of a more or less stubborn engine were tinkered with by another or maybe the same superior man. Last year, there was a bit of uneasiness displayed in this part of inaction by those invited to quietly share the pleasures of boating, and a propensity to paddle her own canoe was developed by the Duluth girl, and an uncanny interest in port and starboard and steering gear of otherwise harmless looking boats was developed. Some little knowledge was acquired, which has been probably forgotten in the intervening months, but it will soon be picked up again, for boating is really very simple and so illogical. You do exactly the thing that you never in the world would expect to do. By the time you have that mastered, you have a very good working knowledge of all boating. Of course, everyone has had some grave-minded person, who takes boating seriously, heavily try to explain to one—that that really isn't true; that managing a boat is the most logical thing on earth and to do it really well, one should understand a compass and trigonometry and such things, and that the only reason that woman thinks it is illogical is because her order of thought as a general thing is illogical, but she calls it logical, so that when she encounters a plan of things that is beautifully clear and sensible, she cannot understand, and calls it illogical.

Maybe! And probably the moon was shining all the time he was laboriously explaining that. Logical minds are hard to understand and go canoeing with. With the first glimpses of the exquisite spring weather the fever for boating will commence, and this year more feminine enthusiasts than ever before are expected on the bay and river.

The last snowstorm of the season, or at least, the last that is expected, was experienced during the week and with the close of the season of snowshoes and skiis, the joys of spring and summer may come. There was little of interest during the week aside from the festival of music, to which all society turned out, and the splendid success of the undertaking is the topic of conversation throughout the city. The visiting artists were accorded a warm reception and the work of the local people has been most warmly commended. The May festival will continue to interest people for some time to come.

The out-of-door amusements will hold forth from now on. Golfing, although a little less in favor than in former years, always has its group of devotees, and the Country club will be the scene of much entertaining. No large and formal affairs are scheduled for the week.

New Compositions of Local Musician.

Ernest Lachmund of this city has just received from Stahl of Berlin, the first copies of his new compositions for piano. The numbers will be handled by Shirmer and will, of course, be of exceptional interest here where the composer is so well known. The numbers now being brought out by Mr. Lachmund's publishers are opus 5 and 6. Opus 5 consists of three children's pieces, "The Brownies," "Playtime" and "Little Waltz," and those interested in piano literature will be especially glad of these numbers. Opus 6 is of the third and fourth grade piano compositions called "Scene de Ballet," "Reverie" and Gavotte."

Those who were interested in the playing of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, heard this week, will be glad to know that Mr. Lachmund's "German Suite for Big Orchestra" will be on its programs next winter. The music was not received in time to put it in rehearsal for the appearance of the orchestra in this city. Carlo Fisher, cellist, will play Mr. Lachmund's "Serenade," which Anton Hekking played here in concert last winter. Mr. Fisher will play with orchestra accompaniment.

D. A. R. Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Greysolon duluut chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, was held Tuesday of this week at the home of Mrs. J. W. Harbison. One more regular meeting of the society will be held during the present club year on June 14, when flag day will be observed.

The Ladies of the Westminster auxiliary of the First Presbyterian church will serve dinner at 17 West Superior street, Tuesday, May 21, from 11:45 a. m. to 2 p. m.

WILL NOT EAT BIRDS.

The hunting and trapping of rare wild animals for menageries and zoological collections is an industry of which but little is told, principally because those who engage in the dangerous, though fascinating, occupation are men who rarely leave the expedition camps. A grizzled, sunburnt African hunter, who recently came with a consignment of animals for Forepaugh-Sells' menagerie, told a number of interesting anecdotes, says the Washington Post. Speaking of the lion's most marked charcteristics, he related instances of the lion's fear of mankind. In three cases the big cat evidently mistook human beings for legitimate quarry. In one case a hunter was packing in supplies, when an unexpected addition to the load knocked him flat. He sat up in time to see a big lion speeding through the cover.

"On another occasion," said the hunter, "a friend of mine was suddenly held up by a tall, extraordinary lean animal, which dropped to the trail some six feet ahead. My friend promptly put a bullet through the head of what proved to be an old female. The third case was of an African woman who, while going to the stream for water, found herself face to face with a snarling lion. Dropping her pail, she grasped her slight wraps and shook them vigorously in the face of the foe. The horrified lion at once fled to the tall timber.

"There is another peculiar thing about lions," said the hunter. "They will not eat the flesh of a fowl. You might tempt them with canvasback duck or the daintiest squab, but they would refuse it. I remember once having a swan which had broken its wing. We killed it, dressed it carefully, and threw it into the cage of the lions, but they would not touch it, and it finally had to be taken out and thrown away.

I have repeatedly put pigeons alive into the cage just to see what they would do. I have thrown grain down among the lions, and the pigeons have actually gotten down and hopped around the big brutes, even hopping on their backs, the lions making no attempt to disturb them, even seeming to enjoy their companionship.

"There is something rather strange about this which is difficult to explain. To my mind it argues that a lion is not brutal in its instincts. Savage he undoubtedly is. Fierce at all times, but fierce with justice. I believe every one of my lions has a conscience; I know that every one of them knows the difference between right and wrong; they know their wondrous power and are charitable. They would never attempt to injure anything that in no way could do them any harm.

"The study of a lion, his habits, character and capability is one of the most interesting I know. It offers a field as yet comparatively unknown, but the more one goes into it, the more time one takes to find out just what a lion is, the more he is convinced that he has rightly been named the king of beasts."

TREES CURED BY SURGERY.

The successful treatment of trees by surgery is the subject of a report made recently by a botanist named Eberhardt to the Academy of Sciences in Paris. M. Eberhardt has practiced it, he says, with entire success in Indo-China. He has performed operations on tea plants, mulberry trees, orange tree and other tropical plants.

Experiments in colder climates have not met with success so far, but it is believed the system can be used with advantage in the southern regions of Europe. The operations are not amputations, neither are they mere subcutaneous injections, such as have been made successfully in Europe for the cure of some parasitic diseases of plants. They are surgical in the strictly modern sense.

The method is adopted when the trees are attacked by insects, which penetrate the bark and deposit their eggs in the wood. The long horned beetle is a serious plague in Indo-China.

The larvae hollow out galleries in the tissue of the trunk and branches, these interrupt the circulation of the sap and the tree speedily withers and dies.

Eberhardt's method consists of opening up the gallery with a scalpel, removing the larvae with a forceps or cutting instrument and then flushing out the cavity with an antiseptic fluid consisting of forty parts of glycerine, 110 of formaline and 550 of water. Three or four washings are given at intervals extending over about fifteen days, and at the end of that time cushions of vegetable tissue begin to appear along the edge of the scar, which heals completely in from six to eight months. It is essential during the first two or three months to protect the wound from light, which seems to stop the formation of new tissue.

Celebration of Silver Wedding

By ROSANNA SCHUYLER.

The celebration of a silver wedding is so pretty a custom that those who are able should never omit it. All the world knows that it marks the twenty-fifth anniversary, and few are the persons who are not pleased at being invited to one.

Everything in the way of invitations, procedure and decorations is based upon silver, and it is impossible to have too much of it in evidence. Remembering this, a housewife of twenty-five years' standing is usually able to make a brave display, and the collection is added to by gifts from friends and members of the family.

Whether or not all those invited shall send gifts is a more or less mooted question. An invitation to a wedding anniversary is taken to mean a gift quite as much as a card to the wedding itself, but it is in the power of the celebrating couple to control this easily by a line on the invitations.

An anniversary is usually celebrated in the evening, and formality in the cards is rather desirable. The regular "at home" formula is used, added to which the date of the wedding and that of the present function are put in the upper corners of the card, with the hostess' maiden name to injure anything that in no way could do them any harm.

"The study of a lion, his habits, character and capability is one of the most interesting I know. It offers a field as yet comparatively unknown, but the more one goes into it, the more time one takes to find out just what a lion is, the more he is convinced that he has rightly been named the king of beasts."

Infants' "Nerves" Often Result of Strenuous Play.

A mother who brings up her baby in such a way that it has "nerves" does it one of the greatest possible wrongs. We are quite too nervous as a nation, and we all suffer accordingly. Therefore, why not try to start your baby's life in such a way that its nervous organization will be sound and its physical condition much better in consequence?

No mother deliberately makes her baby nervous, I know this. But many times, many more than should be, she does the same thing unconsciously, and it is this I wish to write of today.

An infant's nerves are delicate and always ready to jump into evidence. They are all too likely to grow, and the surest preventive against this undesirable development is quiet. Talking much to a young baby, letting its aunts and cousins see it is pleasant; unless practised in great moderation it is bad. Talking and strange faces excite, and if there has been an undue amount of either, baby's next nap will be an uneasy and restless one, and he will not begin to get the strength from it that he should. Sudden noises, like banging a door, or jumping unexpectedly at an infant, should never be allowed. The latter frequently makes the baby laugh, I know, but it excites the tiny mind, which after a time keeps itself tense in expectation of excitement.

Noisy toys should never be permitted, and indeed the quieter the amusements the better. Baby loves nothing better than his own toes to play with, and will amuse himself for five minutes at a time with them if laid on a bed where he may kick and stretch.

More than one baby is weakened nervously by over entertainment. Physicians know that poor people's infants are less nervous than those of wealthy parents, and it is because these women, being occupied with their work, stimulate their little ones less, and therefore the nerves of these babies are stronger.

Continual nervousness on the part of an infant is so apt to indicate a wrong physical condition that it should be looked into. Incidentally it is one of the symptoms of rickets, and when this disease is present the baby is usualy restless at night and perspires excessively on the head. If there is indication of such trouble a mother should lose no time in having a physician see her small child.

If, however, baby is already nervous, it does not necessarily mean illness. The best way of finding precisely what it does mean is to institute a system of quiet living. Let the little one see no strangers and only a few of those whom he knows. Many faces, even familiar ones, should be kept away. The room should have a softened light with sun, of course, but not glaring, and all noises should be kept from him. If he has been much amused or had many toys, let there be only a few and those soft ones. A ball and his own toes are enough. There should be no artificial light at night, or if one is necessary it must be so shaded that it will not shine upon him.

Let quiet be the keynote of the "nerve" cure, and if in a few weeks baby has not responded to it consult a physician, for there is apt to be a physical cause of which nervousness is the indication.

SNEAKERS.

New York Press: "Your boy is going blind; he wears sneakers." So spake a lay doctor to the father of a 12-year-old olive branch. "You are right as to his wearing sneakers," replied the father, "but his eyes are as strong as those of the American eagle. I have been told many times that rubber soles affect the sight. Wherefore? The sneaker is light, it is pliable, it is noiseless, it is springy and having a canvas upper is well ventilated. The only objection I have is its lack of durability. The cost is from 59 cents to $1 a pair, and my boy wears two pairs a month. The rubber is adulterated, of course, and parts from the canvas on the slightest provocation. If some one would make a sneaker with a stout leather sole, sewed to the canvas and not glued on, he could build a quick fortune."

NEW LINEN FIBRE FROM BRAZIL.

Chicago Tribune: The Brazilian linen plant is expected to exert an important influence upon the textile world in the near future.

It is a common weed which reaches a height of eighteen feet in twelve months. When carefully cultivated it matures within three months, and can yield three crops in a year. The fibre has all the qualities necessary for high-class use—strength, fineness, flexibility, and adaptability for bleaching, dyeing, etc.

Every part of the plant can be used for some industrial purpose, more especially for the manufacturing of writing paper. The cultivation was commenced by the state government, and now is said to have emerged from the experimental state successfully.

Tailor Suits in Dark Cloth

TAILOR SUIT CLOTH

Tailor suits in voile and light weight cloth are deededly popular this season, and no outfit is complete without such a garment. A frock of this description like the one in the above illustration, is modeled on lines that would become the average woman, for the skirt is long and full at the bottom and the coat—a short one—is tight fitting with a vest, and just enough looseness at the waistline to keep the costume from being severely plain.

Smart Summer Coat With Kimona Sleeves.

Pongee, rajah and tussah coats with voluminous capelike sleeves are a distinctive feature of the summer's fashions. The best of these are in three-quarters length and hang loose and flowing from the shoulders, blending the lines of the Japanese kimono with those of the priest's surplice. This wrap illustrated is a copy in white tussah of a Drecoll model. The mandolin sleeve set in the extraordinary large armhole gives the effect of a cape in the back. An effective bit of color contrast is introduced in the collar and cuffs, where a half-inch fold of emerald green satin is set between two rows of black silk braid. The large pearl buttons, rimmed in brass, center the back rosettes, set on the coat fronts at the bust line in a decidedly attractive way that adds much to the smartness of the garment.

New Fluffy Ruffle Veils Worn With Picture Hats

WASH CHIFFON AUTOMOBILE VEIL.

THE "NEW FLUFFY RUFFLES" VEIL.

In the new fluffy ruffle veil there is salvation for the woman who lacks either the patience to pin this important dress accessory securely or to drape it in a smart and becoming style. Two or three pins are enough to keep this novel veil in place, if it is worn fastened close about the neck after the present popular fashion, while no pins are required at the top, for the fluffy ruffles veil is circular in shape and when thrown over a hat it falls just as it should. There is no difficulty whatever in making it fit any hat of ordinary size, and it is particularly stylish with a round drooping brim.

It is usually made of filet or dotted all over net, and, as it is one of the latest novelties, only black and white varieties are to be found in the shops. But such a veil is so simple to make that any one who wants to have a smoke color or a brown one can easily put it together at home and incidentally save money, for umbrella veils are more expensive than ordinary ones.

In making a veil for an average size hat, material about forty-four inches in diameter will be required. A piece of net this size may be cut in a perfect circle and around the edge should be appliqued a band of Chantilly or other fine, but effective, kind of lace, about two and a half inches wide. A pattern showing a small scallop on the bottom and an irregular spray design on the upper edge gives the best finish.

To complete the veil another piece of lace, half as wide, is put on in a circle around and not more than six inches from the center of the net.

When worn over a hat this narrower circle of applique comes just inside the edge of the brim and imparts a chic air to both hat and veil.

A larger veil is needed to drape over a wide brimmed hat. To give the proper effect the veil must fall in long folds and must be even all around.

For automobiling there is yet to be devised a more satisfactory veil than the one of wash chiffon. Not only does this delicate fabric afford excellent protection to the eyes, but it can always be freshened by cleansing in soap and water. Incidentally, it retains its firmness of texture better than almost any other kind. Wash chiffon can be bought by the yard and made up into long veils which fasten over the hat and tie either at the back or front in smart fluffy knots.

Eyebrows Brushed Carefully Will be Silky and Pretty

By MARGARET MINTER.

"Please tell me how to have pretty eyebrows."

The number of times this request appears daily in my mail sometimes makes me wonder if any women have naturally pretty eyebrows. That some have though, I know, and if you ask any woman whose brows are well shaped and of a good color how she acquired them the chances are nine out of ten that she will say in amazement: "Why, I only brush my brows."

Precisely, but how many of us know women who do this trifling thing in the daily dressing? We brush hair and teeth and give scrupulous attention to our nails, but brows are left to take care of themselves, a fact that most show by their scraggy or uneven appearance and bad shape.

Therefore I would say, first brush them morning and night, and through the day, too, if you happen to think of it. Have a soft brush such as is used for a baby's first teeth, if you do not wish to get the more expensive eyebrow brush, and use this for five minutes at a time, always stroking in the line that the brow should grow. Some tonics undoubtedly are aids, and the simplest of all is vaseline. Red is the best, and this should first be put on the finger tips and rubbed well into the brows before brushing begins. This may be done in the morning quite as well as at night, for the grease should be so absorbed as not to show.

Whatever the color the hair may be the brows are usually more effective if a few shades darker. I speak of this because any tonic containing grease is a darkener, from the fact of the presence of oils, and with a tonic of this sort a dye is not necessary. To be sure a dye works faster, but in the end not so well, and I would not recommend one until after a tonic has been used for some months.

A decided stimulant is made of two and one-half grains of sulphate of quinine and a half an ounce of sweet almond oil. Mix, and rub in thoroughly before brushing.

In cases where the brows grow thin from illness something a little different should be used. Good for this condition is a mixture of five grains of tincture of rosemary, one gram of tincture of cantharides, fifty grams of spirts of camphor and fifty grams of cologne. Mix and apply morning and night.

The lustre and prettiness of the brows may be very much increased in the evening by moistening them slightly with almond oil. A fine camel's hair brush should be dipped into the liquid and all that can should be wiped gently from the tip. Then rub the brush over the brows gently and evenly. Should the oil be visible in any place wipe it off with the finger tips.

Menus for Home Entertainments

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:—

As I am going to celebrate my nineteenth birthday in a few days, will you kindly give me a little advice? I am going to invite about twenty-four, and, as they are all friends of mine living quite near, will it be necessary to write invitations? What games would you suggest? As to the supper, I do not want any very elaborate, as it is going to be informal.

A CONSTANT READER.

As your party is not intended to be an elaborate, formal affair, written invitations are not at all essential. As for the supper, you can have plenty of sandwiches, plain bread and butter and two or three varieties of fillings, a salad—lobster or chicken (the canned chicken makes a fine salad)—olives, salted nuts, bonbons, a birthday cake or small fancy cakes, ice cream or one of the quickly made jellies with slices of orange, banana, fig and candied cherries embedded in it and hot chocolate with whipped cream. Or, if all have had dinner at home before coming, ice cream with a hot maple or chocolate sauce and the birthday cake will be quite sufficient.

Hot Chocolate Sauce.

To make the hot chocolate sauce mix two ounces grated chocolate or cocoa with two cupfuls granulated sugar, one-half cupful water, a tablespoonful and a half butter and a little stick cinnamon. Cook until the mixture forms a soft ball when dropped in cold water. Remove the stick cinnamon, add a few drops vanilla, pour into a pretty pitcher and send about with the cream to be poured over it.

Hot Maple Sugar Sauce.

Cook without stirring until it threads a pint maple syrup and a half cup cream. When a little of the syrup cooled in water can be rolled into a soft ball between the fingers, take from the fire and stand in a pan of hot water to keep hot until ready to serve. Add to either the chocolate or maple sauce a half cup English walnuts or butternuts chopped fine. Preserved ginger, gingered pears or preserved peaches are also most acceptable when served with the cream.

The Birthday Cake.

If your birthday cake is baked at home put in it a number of trinkets, each well wrapped in paraffine paper; or if you prefer have them baked in with your small cakes. These tiny gifts should be indicative of the fortune that awaits the individual getting them. Of course, they should not be more than half an inch in length. You can find at most of the confectioners miniature automobiles, animals, dolls and musical instruments that will be most appropriate. Bake the birthday cake in a tin pan, frost heavily and set the candles in a marshmallow bonbon. This receives and closes around the candle holding it in place, while it presents the pretty effect of miniature candlesticks.

An excellent rule for the birthday cake is this: Beat to a cream one cupful of butter and two cupfuls of sugar; sift together four cupfuls of flour, one small teaspoonful of soda and two of cream of tartar; stir this into the butter and sugar mixture, alternating with one cupful of sweet milk; when well mixed and smooth flavor with a teaspoonful of vanilla or rose, then fold in lightly the stiffly beaten whites of six eggs. Bake slowly in a moderate oven, and when cold, ice.

Your small cakes may be baked in patty pans, or make two sheets of sponge cake, and when cool cut in diamonds, squares or oblongs, covering them with different colored icings and ornamenting with nuts, candied cherries, bits of citron, angelico or crystalized violets or rose leaves.

And now for the games.

"Peanut Jab."

This is a popular game for young people on the Pacific coast and will doubtless prove entertaining at your party. Provide as many deep dishes of water as you have couples. Place these on small card tables with towels or folded newspapers. On top of each dish of water set a dozen peanuts floating. Each contestant is then furnished with a hatpin and the game is called. The object is to "jab" the nuts with the pin and land them in a pretty dish provided for that object without touching them with the fingers. When time is called the couple that has been the most successful, retains the nuts in lieu of score cards. The game is progressive, the successful contestants advancing toward the head table. Prizes may be in keeping with the season.

Cake Walk and Peanut Grab.

Another contest that makes much fun is the cake walk and peanut grab. Before beginning this pass favors in the shape of small torpedos, in which, after exploding, a cap and jingle are found, the caps are now put on and partners are determined by corresponding numbers on the torpedoes. Now let some one play a lively march while the judges take their places behind a small table, on which is a huge bowl of peanuts. As the couples dance by the last time a grab is made with the left hand and the peanuts taken are put into dainty handbags made from Japanese paper napkins. For the one making the most extensive grab there should be some simple prize, also for the couple adjudged to be the best walkers.

After a rest, while the peanuts are being disposed of, ask each on to do his or her best "stunt," or turn, and the one who does best is to be given a prize. This specialty may be a song, recitation, a jig, a story or a riddle.

Table Manners Taught as Soon as Infants Eat Solids

By ROSANNA SCHUYLER.

As soon as a baby is old enough to take its first meal at the table with grown people attention should be paid to its manners. Precisely why instinctively we seem always to do the wrong thing until taught better I do not know, unless it is on the basis of the perverseness of human nature.

The fact remains, however, that unless a baby is taught differently it will shovel up food in a most distressing manner and fill its little mouth too full at every bite. Infants seem also to have a positive talent for holding fork or spoon in the wrong way, and all these things, apparently trivial, must be corrected by mothers.

To think that a baby is too young to be shown the proper amount of food that a fork should hold is the greatest mistake, because the little one will continue in the way it begins.

Each one of us has been appalled or disgusted at the bad table manners of the children of some of our friends, but it is not too much to say that such are entirely the result of indifference or ignorance on the part of parents and reflects upon them accordingly.

Only such quantity as may be comfortably put into the mouth should be taken on the fork at a time, and two bites from the same forkful is the height of bad manners, small boys and girls should learn. Attention should be given to the way this implement is held, for the instinctive method seems to be to grasp it at the head of the tines. A child should be taught at once that the clasp must be well toward the end of the handle, and thus eating will be a simpler process for little children, especially if the fork is not large.

There is no excuse for a little boy or girl taking soup from a spoon so full as to be dripping while raised. I know some grown persons have this habit that one cannot help calling disgusting, because it is piggish, but a spoon should never be more than moderately full and the liquid should be taken from the side, not from the tip.

Comparative few children are taught how to drink in a well mannered way. Instead of the cup being allowed to go into the mouth to the corners the little one should learn to take small mouthfuls of the liquid, and the lips will be less covered with it when the cup is taken down. "Milk moustaches" should be as reprehensible for children as for grown persons.

Being just a healthy little animal by nature a child regards a napkin in light of foolishness and will use it only when the arts of civilization are being inculcated. This, however, is one it should early learn, for remnants of food left on the mouth render the sweetest child unattractive.

The carelessness of elders in putting their elbows on the table is making this bad habit more than ever possible for children. It is bad enough for grown people to lounge when eating, for this is what it amounts to, but for children it is inexcusable. Under no circumstances should they be permitted to do it, and when not holding fork or spoon they should learn to keep the hands folded in the lap.

A child is always more or less of a mimic, and in nothing will this show more positively than in its table manners. If those at the table with it eat in slovenly fashion so will he or she, but unfortunately the reverse does not work without aid. A good example alone in the matter of eating is not enough for little children. Prompting also is necessary, but it will more quickly acquire attractive ways and be less of a young animal at its food if the teaching is reinforced by example.

Baby's Band Worn for Three Years An Aid to Strength

By MRS. MARY E. HOOD.

From the time a baby is born until it is at least two years old it should never, night or day, be without an abdominal band. Even young mothers understand the importance of this with newly born infants, but it is not an uncommon thing for nurses or parents to lay aside this article of clothing too soon, and thus the childs runs a grave risk of intestinal trouble. There is nothing which will help as much to keep the bowels in healthy condition, free from cold, as the tight covering over this most sensitive portion of the body, and a babe would better wear one too long than to have it taken off too soon. It is not until the last part of the third year that he should be without it.

The quality and kind, however, differ a little, and that for a young baby is not the same as the two-year-olds should wear.

That first worn is a soft, warm flannel, about ten inches wide. This is put on after the first bath and should be basted always, not pinned, on the left side. The reason for sewing, rather than safety pins, is that with the latter it is impossible to keep the band quite smooth, and the flannel bunches or wrinkles in a way painful to the delicate flesh. Sewing takes no time at all, if a needle threaded is always ready with baby's toilet things.

For a young infant this protection should always be changed at night, as the fresh one is restful and quieting.

Until baby is beginning his fourth month there should be no change in the quality or weight of the band. At the end of that time he may be put into those that are knitted and ribbed. The best of these are made with shoulder bands, rather like a little shirt, and stay in place on an active baby far better than bands sewed around. In the intense heat of a summer day such a band may serve as a shirt and that garment itself be discarded for a few hours. Never, however, run the risk involved in taking off the band for a few hours, no matter how great the heat.

Summer bands may have a little silk in the mixture of the wool. For winter, of course, they are entirely of wool. Always put them over the feet, which will prevent their being stretched out of shape.

While many physicians are of the opinion that a band need not be worn after three years, I have great sympathy with those few mothers who continue to give their children this abdominal protection until the youngsters are seven or eight years old. The value of the band is not understood, because the wrapping is so simple, but latterly persons are beginning to know that if the abdominal part of the body, in which so many of the organs are situated, is perfectly protected from cold, many forms of illness will be avoided. This is true for grown persons and especially so for children, who are so easily affected by change of temperature, food, etc.

The "band habit" is one of which I approve, and if you young mothers will keep them on your children long after they are babies I believe you will save them much pain and yourselves equal anxiety.

Working Woman's Diet Must Include Green Salads Now

Much is said and written about food for the working woman, but when one considers that food is to her what fuel is to a locomotive, it will readily be seen that however she feels she must have it. Also, is it of the most vital importance that she shall have that which will best nourish, and particularly in the spring, when the appetite lags and the "tired feeling" is ever present, must she tone herself with the right kind of meals.

I wish I could get any woman who is using her brain in any way to take to green vegetables and salads, all she can get of them, at this season. By salads I do not mean those of lobster and chicken, but crisp green ones—lettuce, endive, romaine and the like. Watercress is excellent, and good for the complexion, too, as it has a splendid effect upon the blood. All fresh greens have that, but watercress is a little fuller of the properties.

By all means eat these dishes with French dressing, a good olive and vinegar. The oil is nourishing and the vinegar appetizing. The addition of a little raw onion makes it even more appetizing.

Better finish your dinner with a salad just now than with a sweet.

A fresh vegetable diet, for which the system is craving, should include spinnach, beet tops, string beans, peas and asparagus. The latter is only for the rich at present, for the tinned does not quite take the place of it. Spinach is one of the most wholesome things that can be eaten, and it is impossible to have too much of it.

Fresh rhubarb I recommend highly just now. The system is craving the acid. The French way of cooking this makes it like a rich preserve, and is not difficult. Instead of being stewed, the vegetable is put into a shallow earthen dish, after peeling and cutting, and a large quantity of sugar is sprinkled over. No water is added.

This is put into a slow oven, and should cook for two or three hours, not browning. At intervals it should be stirred gently, and a little more sugar added. When taken from the oven there should be a small quantity of thick syrup. This is even thicker when cold. A small quantity of this as a dessert goes a great way.

There is no better breakfast for a working woman at this season than a baked apple, followed by a bowl of any kind of cereal and cream. Instead of sweetening with sugar, a little golden syrup may be used. This, with a cup of coffee, is enough to satisfy one until lunch time.

Meat once a day now is enough, and for lunch or dinner fish should take its place. A woman who values her complexion is better off without fried fish, or fried anything, for the matter of that. Broiling, baking or boiling is better. Cold broiled fish, with mayonnaise, makes a delicious luncheon, and one that is every way good for the system.

THE MINISTER OF BEAUTY. By Stanton Davis Kirkham. San Francisco: Paul Elder & Co.

This is one man's philosophy of living, and it is broad enough, comprehensive enough, sane enough and practical enough to be everybody's philosophy of living, if everybody were sensible enough to take it up. It is an attempt to go below the superficial, within which most lives are confined, and to prove that beauty comes from within, that things are as one sees them, that the power to make one's life is within one's self, and that we are each and every one of us masters of our destinies and the creators of our environments. It is wholesome, scholarly, thoughtful, purposeful, and free from the affected mysticism that characterizes too many flights into the realms of "higher thought." This from the preface may give some idea of the author's temperment and intent:

"Over and above all common necessity is the Divine necessity of beauty; beauty encircling all, back of all, and its purpose moral, its perception joy; hence, if for no other reason, its bearing upon life and the problem of happiness. We are here under the sway of the grandest laws and inseparably linked with the sublime and unutterable, as every drop of water is hitched to the moon and every grain of sand tied to the center of the earth. To be wise and kind is to enlist the universe in our behalf, to focus cosmic rays of love here in our hearts."

It is a remarkable and a helpful book.

THE PRINCESS VIRGINIA. By C. N. and A. M Williamson. New York. McClure, Phillips & Co.

This is a dashing romance of royal love, the heroine being a princess with a sparkling strain of American blood, and the hero the young, handsome and beloved emperor of a mythical European empire. They are tentatively betrothed by the emperor's statesmen, but the heroine's romantic nature refuses to accept such an arrangement, and she determines that if she marries the royal applicant for her hand, it will be because he is a man and not as an emperor devoutly desires it. In other words, she insists that the match shall be one of love and romance, and not one of diplomatic convenience. How she goes about it, and the rapid succession of developments that followed after she, incognito, meets the royal young man, form a story which the authors of "Rosemary in Search of a Father," "Lady Betty Across the Water," and other romances have woven in their most accomplished and effective manner.

EXMOOR STAR; or, The Autobiography of a Pony. By A. E. Bonser: New York: A. S. Barnes & Co.

This is the story of a pony's life, told by the pony itself. The animal is, of course, uncommonly intelligent, or it could not know so much and tell so much, but the author has concealed the improbabilities of the situation behind the well told story, which deals with the colthood, education and triumphs of the pony, from its birth to its retirement in honored invalidism as the result of over-exertion in life-saving. Between these two extremes, the pony hero is a circus star and a polo champion, and its experiences are numerous and most interesting. The little book is full of interesting horse lore, and is written by one who has keen smpathy with horses and a full knowledge of what they like and dislike.

REED ANTHONY COWMAN. By By Andy Adams. Boston: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $1.00.

As specimens of the literature of occupation, the books of Andy Adams rank with the best. Mr. Adams' first book, "The Log of a Cowboy," dealt with the "cowpuncher's" trade, the everyday life of the trail from the point of view of the young "hand." This one tells of the cattleman's business in a larger sense—the buying and selling and breeding, the moving of the herds, the taking up of the land for ranges, the organization of stock companies to carry on the business on a large scale, the political wire-pulling at Washington in connection with government contracts, the expulsion of the cattle from the Cherokee Strip by the order of the president ,with the attendant suffering and loss of life, and finally the bursting of the bubble and passing away of the old-time methods. The story is a fascinating one, and readers will be grateful to Andy Adams for giving them so interesting and informing an account of a phase of American life which is now a thing of the past.

Literary Gossip.

The striking cover of "The Siamese Cat" is, with the exception of the cat itself, an exact reproduction of the paper covering in which the manuscript of Mr. Rideout's story was submitted to the publishers. Even the color scheme is the same, and the whole is remarkably suggestive of the atmosphere of this absorbing story of love and adventure under Asiatic skies.

Whether regarded from the standpoint of style, thought, imagery, or sentiment, everything between its covers is within easy reach of the comprehension and sympathy of all simply pious suls.

In Ellis Meredith's "Under the Harrow," a bright and wholesome story of half a dozen talented young people and their struggle up the heights of Mount Parnassus (New York), there is an underlying motive i na more serious veln, dwelling upon the euthanasia theory of permissible suicide. While it is made entirely subjective, it furnishes a strong dramatic climax, and yet leaves a problem for the reader to solve. "Under the Harrow" has just been published by Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

The publication of a poetic drama is not an every-day event, and so the appearance of a new work, entitled "The Coming of Philibert," by Sara King Wiley, will be of importance to lovers of poetry. In this romantic drama the author has told the story of Conrad, the young ruler of an imaginary mediaeval kingdom, and Philibert, his twin brother, who is brought to the court after spending his entire childhood in seclusion under the care of an unworldly tutor. Much of the dramatic significance of the poem springs from the contrast of the gay, careless, shallow king and his intense, simple, unworldly brother. In the end Philibert's sense of honor and devotion to duty fairly lift the king for a moment to his own level, and provide the startling climax with which the drama ends.

The Harpers have just published an astonishing and unique story. It is "The Invader," by Margaret L. Woods. It is a story of a dual personality—of two women in one.

Part of the time the heroine, Mildred, is good, simple, devout and meek.

The rest of the time she is a very different person, and is alluring, enticing, seductive.

How she marries, under one influence, and how, when under the other influence, she knows only vaguely what she has done—

How her husband falls in love with one personality, and is bewildered when he meets the other—

How another man falls in love with one personality, and finds his love returned—only to be astonished and checked when the other personality asserts itself—

How the woman is jealous of her own self—jealous because her husband adores her in one personality and looks coldly upon her in the other—

And how, through a succession of bewildering scenes, the story works admirably toward its dramatic climax—

All this is told, and told with a natural and convincing air of verisimilitude which carries the reader breathlessly along.

At the request of the New York Sun, Charles Battell Loomis wrote a series of letters covering his trip to England in 1906. These letters were published in the Sun, and attracted a great deal of attention on account of their truthfulness and humor. Mr. Loomis has gathered them together in a book entitled "A Bath in an English Tub"—the title taken from one of his letters—and is bringing them out through his publishers, A. S. Barnes & Co., New York. There is a genial spirit pervading these stories which makes them attractive. The fun in them is of a quaint sort which makes them readable.

A new novel by the author of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden" will be published by Charles Scribner's Sons in June. The title of the story is "Fraulein Schmidt and Mr. Anstruther." It is a love story told from the side of the girl and placed against a most amusing background of life in a little German town. The same charming sentiment and graceful, appealing style of "Elizabeth" and "The Princess Priscilla's Fortnight" fill this new novel with a glow of pleasantness and quiet humor. The various eccentric characters drawn with great skill and sympathetically keen understanding, the very attractive personality of the girl herself, the highly entertaining problems of the little town, and the progress of the love story make a charming book of a very rare and unusual quality.

It is interesting to know that Norman Duncan came very near to missing his career as a novelist. For he was brought up, in his native home in Canada, under such strict and narrow influences as to believe all novel-reading—and, of course, novel-writing—to be virtually wrong. For some time after he realized that the creative literary instinct was strong within him, he could only hope to achieve literary distinction in some field other than the imaginative. Gradually, however, as he grew into manhood, he came to view the subject in a broader and kindlier light, and to know that a novelist, who writes the best and truest that is in him has in his pen the possibilities of good. That Duncan writes so sincerely, so straightforwardly, and with such a strain of manly religiousness, is doubtless due to the mental stress and conflict of those early years.

Owing to the Jamestown celebration in honor of the early settlers of America, "The Star of Valhalla," published this month by Frederick A. Stokes company, may derive a timely interest because it describes those earlier discoverers of America, the Norsemen. An interesting picture is given of their first meeting with the red men. The new country was dubbed by the Norsemen of the tale "Christ's Land," in honor of the religion whose clear light in the tenth century had just begun to outshine the ancient "Star of Valhalla," and to dissipate the old Norse myths. To these Norsemen, as to so many of other nationalities later, the land was a refuge from religious persecution. The clash of the two religions, and the rise of the one and the fall of the other, is shown with historical as well as spiritual insight, and the situations are presented with strong but restrained imaginative power.

Among the Magazines.

The first issue of Uncle Remus's magazine, published in Atlanta, Ga., and edited by Joel Chandler Harris, is notable for the unusual excellence of its fiction. The serial story by the editor entitled, "The Bishop, the Boogerman and the Right of Way" is begun in this number and the charm of the story is felt from its first line. Like so much of Mr. Harris's fiction it deals with the beautiful trustfulness, and the inimitable imagination of a little child—a child who looks out on life with serious eyes and reads its riddles from the unsullied point of view furnished by her own small world. The illustrations for this story are by Charlotte Harding and are excellent in style, tone and accuracy, the period (1868) being most faithfully portrayed. In addition to the serial by the editor and a new "Uncle Remus" story, the other fiction features in Uncle Remus's magazine for June, are "The Schooner Mary E. Foster: Guardian" by John Fleming Wilson, a story of unusual power and unwavering interest; "The Point of View," by Owen Kildare, a character sketch of dramatic force, and "The Wild Bards of Billville," a humorous tale by the associate editor of the magazine, Don Marquis.

A remarkable feature of the political situation in this country is the outspoken admiration and support of President Roosevelt, a Republican, not only by the members of his own party, but also by vast numbers of Democrats. The call of the Democracy for President Roosevelt's renomination is the subject of a strong article in the current issue of Leslie's Weekly by Dr. Charles M. Harvey, who cites many instances showing that if the president ran again hundreds of thousands of Democrats would vote for him. This number fully maintains the paper's creditable record in the matter of interesting illustrations. Among other things, it presents a cover drawing in colors by Arthur E. Jameson; pictures of eminent exponents of baseball in action; photographs of Cuban women and their homes (with an article on Cuba's custom-fettered women by Mrs. C. R. Miller); novel and characteristic scenes in China, and harrowing features of the great famine there; portraits of the American delegates to the coming peace conference at The Hague; and the photo contests.

Delicious Viands to Serve After the Game of "Bridge"

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

My Dear Mrs. Telford: Will you kindly suggest a few things to be served at an afternoon card party? Guests always have had coffee, cake, ice cream, nuts and candy. I would like to serve something different. I am not a very good cook. I am to serve for sixteen women. MRS. M. M. H.

How would this menu answer? There would be nothing for you to cook at the time but the frothed chocolate. Your sandwiches can be prepared ahead, then covered with a damp napkin until needed. You can make the cake yourself—a sponge or angel variety, cut in small squares. Frost and decorate each piece with a candied cherry, bit of angelica or candied flowers, or you can purchase the small cakes or wafers. There are so many nice wafers now in the market that any one who dislikes to cook can be saved much trouble. If you have salted almonds you can do those the days before your party. The turban of strawberries is simply a little mound of vanilla cream in the center of a plate, with a circle of strawberries about it. Serve the chocolate and bread and butter folds with olives and nuts first, then remove the plates and bring in the cream and cakes.

Bread and Butter Folds.
Frothed Chocolate. Salted Almonds.
Turban of Strawberries.
Olives. Little Cakes.

Bread and Butter Folds.

To make these, cut bread twenty-four hours old into thin, even slices. Take them up in pairs, remove the crust and cut into strips an inch and a half wide by four inches long. Spread with butter previously creamed, fold together and press the edges, then arrange log cabin fashion on a dainty plate. A ribbon of crisp lettuce with mayonnaise to moisten or a cream cheese mixed with chopped olives or nuts may be inserted in the folds, if you wish, but they are excellent with simply the butter.

Salted Almonds.

Jordan almonds are the best for salting, and a pound will make quite enough for your company. Shell and blanch by pouring boiling water over them. Let them stand in the water three or four minutes, when the brown skins will loosen and you can rub them off between thumb and forefinger. Drain and dry thoroughly in the oven or by patting between soft towels. Pour over the nuts two tablespoonfuls olive oil, toss and let stand half an hour before crisping. When ready for this part of the program put into a bright dripping pan in the oven, or in a spider on the stove, and shake and toss until all the nuts are a glossy golden brown. When they begin to brown, sprinkle with salt in the proportion of a scant tablespoonful to a pound. Butter may be used in place of oil if you prefer, but in such case cook them in the oven instead of on top of the stove. The oil gives a higher glare. Peanuts may be be treated in the same way, and, of course, are much cheaper. Buy them raw, shell, put in the oven and bake until the skins crack. Brush off and proceed as with the almonds.

Frothed Chocolate.

Heat in large double boiler or saucepan set in a larger vessel of hot water two and a half quarts of milk. Cook in a small pan until smooth and shiny four squares of chocolate, four tablespoonfuls sugar, a level heaping spoonful salt, and four tablespoonfuls hot water or milk. Cook this for ten or more minutes, stirring constantly; pour into kettle of hot milk and with a chocolate muddler or egg beater beat for five minutes. Flavor with a teaspoonful vanilla extract and a little cinnamon and serve in cups, pouring the hot chocolate over a spoonful of whipped cream in the bottom of each cup.

A good plan would be for you to halve this amount some day and make it for your own luncheon, as a little practice will make it easier for you on the day you have friends.

Corn Meal Griddle Cakes.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:

Will you kindly publish a recipe for corn meal griddle cakes, and oblige a constant reader? MRS. F. S. H.

Indian meal cakes may be made from either sour or sweet milk. Sour milk makes the more tender cakes. To make them add to two cups fresh, sweet cornmeal, one cup wheat flour and three cups sour milk; mix well and let stand over night for the meal to swell. In the morning put in a teaspoonful sugar, a half teaspoonful salt, an even teaspoonful soda dissolved in a tablespoonful warm water and two well beaten eggs; beat thoroughly and bake. Some meal swells more than others. If this batter seems too thick, thin with a little sweet milk. Cornmeal griddle cakes take longer to bake than wheat or buckwheat. To make them with sweet milk, add to the sifted cornmeal and wheat flour two even teaspoonfuls cream of tarter and one of soda; sift all thoroughly, then add three cups sweet milk, but do not mix over night, as in the case of the sour milk cakes.

Baked Finnan Haddie.

Dear Mrs. Telford:

Will you kindly publish a recipe for preparing and cooking finnan haddie? MRS. R. S.

Put the fish in a dripping pan and pour over it equal quantities milk and water, about a half cup each. Place on back of stove, where it will heat slowly. Let stand twenty minutes, pour off the milk, spread with butter and pepper and bake in a hot oven ten to fifteen minutes. Serve very hot.

Fried Finnan Haddie.

Soak in olive oil for several hours, then put in a frying pan with a little oil and fry. Pepper well and serve.

Broiled Finnan Haddie.

Brush over with olive oil, dust with pepper, place on a gridiron and broil over a clear fire. Spread with butter and lemon juice and serve.

Welsh Rarebit.

Dear Mrs. Telford:

Kindly give recipes for Welsh rarebit. MRS. A. M. KLEIN.

Welse rarebit is made with milk, ale, or beer, as preferred. To make with ale or beer cut into small pieces or grate one pound American cheese. Put a teaspoonful butter in a chafing dish or saucepan and as soon as melted add the cheese. Stir constantly as the cheese melts, pressing out the lumps with the back of a spoon. When it begins to stick to the dish, add gradually ale or beer by the spoonful until the mixture is soft and creamy. Put in a saltspoonful of salt and the same quantity of paprika, mix well and serve on toast or crackers. It will require from a third to a half cup ale or beer, according to the quality of the cheese. As made with milk the Boston rarebit is usually considered best. If made according to directions, it never curdles.

Cut one pound very fresh cheese into small pieces. Put into the chafing dish or saucepan, two level tablespoonfuls butter, and the cheese, a saltspoonful mustard, and salt and pepper to taste. When well mixed and the cheese softened—you must stir all the time—add a half cup cream. When smooth add two beaten eggs, stir hard a moment then put out the flame or push back on the stove and let it stand half a moment without stirring. Have toast or crackers ready and plates hot. Cover the toast or even plain bread with the rarebit and serve.

Correct Method of Washing Face to Cleanse the Pores.

By MARGARET MIXTER.

Misunderstanding of the proper way in which to wash one's face is frequently a cause of poor complexion and the presence of blackheads and pimples. Nothing will so quickly bring the former as the presence of dust in the pores, and owing to exposure there is more dirt on the face than on any other part of the body. To prevent the pores from becoming clogged, they must be kept open and clean, but this is not done by dipping up a quantity of water and burying the face in it several times. Such a method is merely dabbing or wetting, and only the most surface cleanliness results. Drying with a rough towel is not improving conditions, even though the friction may induce a color for a time. It will be at the expense of roughened skin.

The requisites for a good bath for your face are a big basin, a soft towel, a cake of pure, good soap, and considerable wisdom. With a rough towel you treat your face as if it were made of iron, you enlarge the features, you risk injuring the eyes, and you make your skin coarse. The face should be gently but thoroughly dried with a soft, absorbing towel. While advocating the use of hot water for the face, still, as it is not always desirable in cold weather, if you are going out, unless a cold rinse follows, use water that has the chill taken off. Then, with a thin flannel washcloth, well rubbed with soap, give your face its first treatment, closing your eyes so that the soap may reach to the innermost parts; after this wash the soap thoroughly from your face.

A good quality of soap is apt to preclude shininess, and if the skin feels at all drawn after this bath, another soap must be tried, until one that suits perfectly is found. If dryness follows, a good cold cream should be rubbed in and washed out in the morning.

For greasiness and shiny complexion wipe the face with a solution of one-half dram of boric acid and two ounces of distilled witch hazel. Shake, and apply with a soft cloth in the morning.

If the skin has a dull, dead feeling, throw a few drops of either eau de colongne, gin or whisky in the water, and give your face a thorough bath with it. This tends to exhilarate the skin, and if the circulation is bad will bring the blood to the surface, so that a pretty color is the result.

The idea that soap, or one of its substitutes should be used on the face is a mistake. Many women who have beautiful complexions use green soap and a brush twice a week at night. This green soap is the chemically pure sold at druggists', and is strong. A complexion brush should be moistened, and a few drops of soap put on. The face is then frictioned briskly, and rinsed well.

This is so strong that twice a week is often enough for it, and a cold cream of some kind should be massaged into the skin afterward.

Nails Made Pretty Shape by Careful Manicuring

By MARGARET MIXTER.

One reason why pretty nails are an exception is that few persons understand how to care for them properly. The supporting structure that governs the shape is so delicate and the nails themselves so fragile that damage is easily done, and wholly to rectify it is impossible.

The perfect nail is long and oval —"almond shaped"—and to make others, naturally square and broad, into this shape, is entirely out of the question; but it is difficult to convince some people of this, and in trying to change they spoil the original shape.

The flesh about the nail forms the support and shapes it. If the nail if filed or cut away from this support, as is commonly done, instead of the nail becoming narrower the finger broadens an dthe nail is made flatter. This is because the flesh is deprived of the support that it has, as well as gives, and falls or becomes flat.

The only way that nails can be improved in shape is by caring for the cuticle and keeping them well trimmed at the top. If the base is properly attended to the nail will deepen and, as a consequence, become more oval, and the half moon will grow larger.

In trimming the nails, too much care cannot be taken not to go below the quick at the sides or "corners." There is not the slightest danger of doing this in the center, because the quick there is sensitive, but it is not at the edges and the mischief is done unconsciously. Better not have rounded tops than to gain them by cutting down the sides.

White spots, that I am so frequently asked about removing, may be caused by either one of two things, imperfect circulation or bruising, and there is no question but that the latter is most frequently the explanation of their presence.

For, so delicate is the structure of the nail that pressure from a manicure knife, that may not be felt at the time on the finger will stop the flow of nourishing juices and a white spot soon comes in view.

If one is being manicured by a professional and there are many of these blemishes one would do well to change the operator, for she is incompetent. If, on the other hand, one is taking care of one's own nails, it behooves her to work with a lighter touch.

Nightly application of a paste made of half an ounce of turpentine and half an ounce of myrrh, spread thickly over the spots, will soon remove them. To get off the application it will be necessary to use olive oil in the morning.

To try to remove the cuticle before the nail has been prepared for it is another cause of bad shaping. It is absolutely impossible to do this work correctly until the cuticle has been softened with sufficient soaking. This should be done by preparing a small basin of water made very soapy. Into this the fingers should be plunged for three to five minutes, according to the degree of hardness of the skin. When it has become soft enough to work away from the nail without pressure of stick or knife, clearing should be done.

In the hands of an amateur an orangewood stick is much better than a knife. One who does not thoroughly know the work is apt to cut too deep with a steel implement. With a wood this is not so likely to happen.

Cold cream should be used more than it is. If nails are not smooth, are coarse grained instead, it is a sure sign that they are being insufficiently nourished. Cold cream will give them something they need and will help to smooth them. Nails already nice will be kept so with it.

This nourishing lotion should be rubbed well over the finger tips every night just before going to bed.

Good Words for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mrs. Edward Phillips of Barclay, Md., writes: "I wish to tell you that I can recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. My little girl, Catherine, who is two years old, has been taking this remedy whenever she has had a cold since she was two months old. SIX BROTHERS, ALL PIONEERS IN DIFFERENT CITIES, HOLD REUNION

During the latter part of April a most unique reunion of six brothers took place at the home of one of their number, William C. Danielson near Detroit. Among the six brothers was one of the oldest of Duluth pioneers, George W. Danielson, who has just returned to this city from Detroit where he visited for some weeks after the reunion.

Leaving home fifty-five years ago and never having had a reunion until this last April is the experience of these brothers and instead of the strapping young men who left home over a half a century ago, there were six whose red hair and beards have been touched with the frost of many winters. Their step is not as active as it was when they left the roof tree at Hartland, Mich., but all of them are well preserved and they laugh at Father Time and predict that they will have many more reunions.

The six brothers of the Danielson family have had many experiences since they separated and during their stay at Windsor where the reunion was held they told each other what had befallen them since they had bid goodbye to the mother and other members of the the family.

And it is no wonder that these brothers wandered from home, looking for adventure and fortune. Away back in 1837 the father, Frederick Danielson, was a friend of William Lyon Mackenzie who was the leader of the Patriot war in Canada, and with Mackenzie he escaped from Canada after it was found that the cause was hopeless.

Even now the boys laud the acts of the father in standing up for what he deemed his rights, and to listen to their stories of what they have done through life gives the listener an idea that they have always maintained their independence.

George W. Danielson, the resident of the Head of the Lakes, is the second son of the family, and after the separation of the brothers when they left home he came to Duluth about 1853. There were no white people here then and he owned the first land and was the first actual settler at what is now Duluth. He served three years during the Civil war and since then has made his home at Duluth and Superior, working as a carpenter and joiner. He is at present living with his son, John A. Danielson, in Superior.

Philip B. Danielson, now of Fremont, Neb., had the honor of erecting the first house in Cheyene, Wyo. He has been an Indian fighter and a rancher. John A. Danielson is a citizen of Calumet, Mich., and is the superintendent of the Calumet & Hecla mines. He has occupied the position for thirty-nine years and says he will retire when he has served the company for forty years.

Charles W. Danielson, the eldest brother, who resides at Pigeon, Mich., has followed peaceful pursuits of a farmer, and Thomas, of Detroit, has been in business for many years. William C. of Windsor has lived in the frontier city for the past thirty-five years, and has followed the occupation of a house painter. He is known as a dog fancier and usually has a large kennel of hunting dogs.

BRESNAHAN, IN KNIGHTLY ARMOR, CATCHES BASEBALLS FOR SPORT

He is no knight in shining armor who stands above. 'Tis merely a sketch of Roger Bresnahan of the New York Giants dressed in his up-to-date baseball "togs." His recent and latest improvement is the pair of shin guards which encloses his legs. No other catcher wears them, but there are some catchers who are thinking seriously of adopting them.

Some spectators had a good laugh when they saw Bresnahan on the field for the first time. The shin guards were so new and odd that they could not take their eyes from them. They make the English spectators think of cricket.

The other day when a foul tip came speeding behind the batter and rapped Bresnahan on the shin guards he turned around and had a laugh with the crowd and his club mates. "If it hadn't been for the protector I would have had a lovely black and blue spot on my shin," said Bresnahan after the game. "McGraw thought they would interfere with my running, and looked askance at them at the beginning of the year," he continued, "but he has changed his mind. I can't help how they look to the outsiders, and for that matter I can't tell very well how they look, for I can't see them for and aft myself, but I may say that they do not interfere with my running in the least. On the other hand I think that they help a lot. Last year my legs were bruised from the knees down, and part of the time it was all I could do to walk after a game. That interfered with my running a great deal more than the shin guards possibly can interfere.

"Why did I devise them? That's easy. On the pitching staff of the Giants there are four men who throw a very speedy and a very deceptive drop ball. Ames is most capable of all in that respect. Whenever a batter raps a foul tip nine times out of ten it will shoot down, and in 1906 I received such a batting about the legs that I made up my mind it would be a service to the team if it were possible to devise something to assist in putting an end to it. There's the reason for the shin guards of 1907. Would I recommend them to other catchers? Every minute. Of course, there may be some to whom sore bones and bruised flesh is a pleasant novelty. Let them continue to catch and have their shins pounded. Others who seek comfort on days when then are not playing, as well as on days when they are behind the bat, will try the shin guards. Remember that catchers have to play behind the bat all the time under the new rules and the opportunities to get a pummelling from the ball are just two-thirds greater than they were under the old. I shall not be surprised to see the day come when all catchers will use shin guards, and they will be as much a part of the catcher's outfit as his mask and his chest protector. I haven't heard of a catcher who would care to go behind the bat without a mask and without a protector. Too many of them have been saved wicked smashes since both were invented, and they appreciate the value of facing swift pitching at close range to the batter with something more between them and a knockout punch than a little atmosphere."

SAYS OHIO IS FOR TAFT

The Republican Chairman Talks Plainly About Presidential Contest.

Charges Foraker and Dick With Working for Fairbanks.

Toledo, Ohio, May 18.—Chairman Walter F. Brown of the Ohio Republican state central committee has declared himself as unqualifiedly for Secretary Taft for the presidency, says the Republicans of Ohio are solidly in favor of his candidacy and holds that Senators Foraker and Dick owe it to their friends and themselves to settle the report that they are secretly supporting the candidacy of Vice President Fairbanks. He says that the sentiment for Taft is so strong, that, if further opposed, or in any way misrepresented by Messrs. Foraker and Dick, it will burst all bounds and demand expression in a popular convention.

"There is not, to my knowledge," said Mr. Brown, "a Republican leader whose prominence is acknowledged throughout Ohio who favors any candidate for the presidency except Secretary Taft. There are eighty-eight counties in this state. I have direct information from the leading Republicans in three-fourths of them, and every man is for Taft. I have not as exact information from the remaining counties, but I know, that they, too, are for Taft. There are, of course, a number of men in various parts of the state indebted to Senators Foraker and Dick for benefits received. Some of these are, as is natural, a little noisy in behalf of the senators, but even among them, there is not, in my opinion, any feeling for the presidential candidate but Taft. What is much more important, however, is the fact that the people of Ohio, are overwhelmingly in favor of Taft. There is not the slightest doubt of this, and everybody who does not know it is ignorant of real political conditions in Ohio."

It was suggested to Mr. Brown that a belief exists among politicians in some other states that Senators Foraker and Dick, who are opposing the Taft candidacy, control the state party machinery and that the power of the organization is behind them.

"There never was a greater mistake than that," said the chairman. "The senators do not control the party machinery and they never have swayed, and they do not now sway, the state central committee in any of its actions. It is the absolute truth, as every Ohio politician knows, that the committee has never been under their control at any time since its membership was announced. The organization is with Taft."

"There is one thing I would like to mention," said the chairman, "and that is that nobody who has assumed any responsibility for the Taft movement has expressed any desire to eliminate Senator Foraker from politics. If such statements have been made they are entirely unauthorized by any man who is connected with the Taft campaign. We desire to eliminate the Democracy from politics as far as we are able, and that is the extent of our desires in that direction. On the other hand, is the question of whether Senators Foraker and Dick are supporting the candidacy of Vice President Fairbanks. The friends of both senators are hoping that they will soon find an opportunity of setting this story at rest. There is absolutely no human chance of stopping the Taft movement in this state. It is not possible now for any man or any number of men to do this, and I wish to say in my capacity as chairman of the state central committee that if the senators declare for Senator Foraker as a candidate for the presidency or in any other way attempt to misrepresent the feeling in this state as affecting Taft, the sentiment is so strong as to demand public expression. The obvious way to do this would be to call a state convention, adopt resolutions in accordance with the spirit of the delegates at large to the next Republican national convention. I much prefer not to see such a step taken. There would be 900 delegates in that convention and you can't tell how far 900 Taft adherents might go."

"I know," continued Chairman Brown, "that there are people throughout the country who regard Senator Foraker as a presidential possibility. They have known for years his brilliant personality, and admire many able things he has done. In the matter of presidential possibilities, however, Ohio, is not at present with Senator Foraker. It is heart and soul with Taft. I wish the people of the United States to understand this clearly. I want them to know that the Republicans of Ohio are behind Taft as a people and they are with him as a party, and with all the party organization. These are absolute mathematical facts. Men have been elected president of the United States by sentiment and some party power alone, but in this case it is both sentiment and party. The declaration recently made by Mr. Cox in Cincinnati was intended to convey this information to the country.

ALL ABOUT THE BREATH.

Washington Star: Prof. Emil Otto the German educator, read at a dinner in Milwaukee an essay on "Breath" that a Milwaukee school teacher had given him as a curiosity.

This essay, the work of a boy of nine, ran as follows:

"Breath is made of air. We breathe with our lungs, our ligats, our livers and our kidneys. If it wasn't for our breath we would die when we slept. Our breath keeps the life a-going through the nose when we are asleep. Boys that stay in a room all day should not breathe. They should wait till they get outdoors. Boys in a room make carbonicide. Carbonicide is the most poisonous of living things, dead or alive."

TELEPHONE FRIGHT.

New York Herald: "Telephone fright," said a man who has been accustomed to speaking in public, "seems to be akin to stage fright, but immunity to one does not make a person immune to the other.

"Most of my telephone talk has always been done for me by one in the office, and when I occasionally go to the 'phone and attempt to carry on a conversation with a wooden box I feel like a schoolboy who has mounted the stage to speak his piece and has forgotten it. I usually fail to remember half what I wanted to say, or get it wrong, and I have to get somebody to call up the party again and straighten it out."

If you are selling enough goods—then your advertising in The Herald is sufficient.

OLD TIME TELEGRAPH OPERATORS POSSESSED A ROVING DISPOSITION

Few of Them Remained Long at One Job.

Preferred to Keep Moving From One City to Another.

Duluth Veteran Tells Some of His Early Experiences.

"The present day generation of telegraph operators is different in many ways from the former class of operators who used to be scattered over the country," said one of the old-time operators, who holds a responsible position with a local business firm, the other day, as he repeated some of his reminiscences "on the road."

"The class of operators we have nowadays are of the better sort, men who get good positions and settle down to them. They have not the roaming disposition that the old-time operators used to possess and are content to stick to their jobs when they get them. The class of operators who jump around from place to place these days are more likely to be the bums.

"It does not seem but a few years ago since many of the best operators used to have the roaming habit. It was not that they did not have the money, but it was fun for them to travel.

"In my younger days I was as much a roamer as the best of them and have worked in offices from New York to Kansas City from Chicago to New Orleans. Like many others of my disposition and in the same line of business I used to hike southward for the winter months and northward for the summer.

Never Paid Fare.

"There were very few times when I did not have money enough saved up to pay railroad fare for those journeys, but I don't think any of it was ever spent for that purpose. It was not in the ethics of the profession to pay railroad fare, and the boys used to find pretty good friends among the railroad men, with whom they deadheaded their rides.

"There were divisions, however, where the officials were very strict and the trainmen did not dare give the traveling operator a boost. At such times it was either a case of stealing a ride, paying fare, or walking. If the traveler happened to be shy of the coin of the realm the chances were that he had to endure more or less hardship, especially if he were coming north in the winter or in the spring of the year.

"I remember well one trip that three of us made from Memphis to Chicago. I had been working in the main office of a telegraph company in that city, one of my friends had been employed at a broker's office and the other had been working on a wire in a pool room at Paducah, Ky. One day the other two operators suggested that we start for New York. I had a pretty good position at the time and had $60, a half month's wages coming. Without finding out whether the other fellows had any money I consented to go and suggested that we pay our fares. They told me that they had no money and intended to deadhead their way through. I disliked to show any sign of balking, although I felt that I was up against it to be the financial backer for the trip, but I was game and consented to go.

"We left Memphis one Friday afternoon in the latter part of March and landed in Chicago Sunday morning a week later. We did not get through without stops, however, for there were times when we laid over for a day, or a half day, at some station to wait for some train on which we could make our brotherhood cards good with the conductor.

"We got a pass over the first division from the superintendent. At the end of the division we got acquainted with the operator, and, by showing him our cards and helping him to straighten out some of his wires, we enlisted his help to get further. He talked with the conductor and that official finally consented to take two of us. We decided to bluff it through if we could, so all three of us got on the train.

Bluffed the Conductor.

"When the conductor came through and saw us he looked pretty sore.

"'Now, see here,' he said angrily, 'I told your friend I would take two of you, and I'll be —— if I'll take three. One of you will have to get off.'

"I jumped up and said I would get off and let the other fellows go on through. Just as I started for the door the conductor growled something and called me back. He talked in a more friendly tone and said it would be a shame to break up our party, so he would chance it.

Nearly Froze in Box Car.

"After we reached the end of that division, we found ourselves strictly up against it. The operator, to whom we introduced ourselves could do nothing for us with the trainmen who were afraid of spotters and did not dare give us a boost. It was finally fixed up, however, that if we wanted to take the chances of freezing, we could get into an empty box car. The three of us held a council of war. One of the boys was for going back, the other didn't care which way we went. I was determined to go on to Chicago if I had to be taken on a stretcher and the third operator was finally won over to my side. I bought two pounds of cheese and some crackers and with this extensive food supply we got into the car. Whew, but it was a cold place. There were holes in the floor and the atmosphere inside was so chilly that we had to run, wrestle, box and go through gymnastics all night to keep from freezing. We shouted and sang and acted like wild men, but we kept from freezing.

"We were two days and three nights in that car and the way the rations disappeared was a caution. One of the boys, Kelley by name, had an appetite equal to that of a horse. It kept the other operator and me busy during the night hiding the cheese and crackers from Kelly.

"There were many times during that trip that I wished I had paid my fare and was riding comfortably in the smoking car.

"After we struck Chicago I got a good position right away, but the other two boys thought they would go on to New York, employing the same means of transportation that had brought them to Chicago. I never saw them again. One of the party secured a place in New York and the other started from New York to Washington, riding on the bumpers. Somewhere en route he fell under the wheels and was ground to pieces.

"When I heard of his fate, it put a crimp in my desire to beat my way over the country again, and I did little traveling around after that trip."

WEALTH IN FEES.

Lawyers and Physicians Who Have Become Rich in One Effort.

A million dollars for a fee! As much pay for a brief transaction as the owners of some of America's largest industries are able to make in a lifetime!

It is a well-to-do citizen in this country whose total earnings through life reach $50,000; what of the man who, in payment for a single service, taking only a few weeks or days, may collect as much as twenty prosperous men earn in long lives of toil?

That the day of the million dollar fee has come is shown by one bona fide and another partially authenticated instance recently disclosed. That James B. Dill of New York received a cool million for settling a steel corporation dispute has been asserted as a fact; that William Nelson Cromwell made $1,000,000 or possibly $2,000,000 by negotiating the sale of the Panama canal is a sub rosa assertion, says the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin.

One of the most difficult achievements of the century was the selling of the Panama canal to the United States and well informed persons agree that even if William Nelson Cromwell did get $1,000,000 or $2,000,000 for it he earned it.

He even risked his life to make his negotiations successful. One day while the treaty was under discussion in Washington it looked very much as if the whole project would fall through. But one man could save it.

Where was Cromwell? Friends of the canal found upon inquiring at his hotel that he was in bed very ill with a temperature of 103.

Yet upon learning of the situation he arose, drove to Secretary Hay's office, stayed with him an hour, then returned to the hotel and lay battling with typhoid fever for six weeks.

But the canal was bought.

Before a senate committee Mr. Cromwell admitted having received $200,000 and said he expected more. How much? Only the gossip of Wall street attempts to answer and this places the total amount at almost $2,000,000. The canal cost $40,000,000.

This isn't Mr. Cromwell's first big fee. For reorganizing the firm of Decker, Howell & Co., in 1891 he received from the court $200,000. He is said to have got a $100,000 fee on another excursion.

One of the deepest muddles in American industrial history was the series of disputes between Andrew Carnegie and Henry C. Frick over the transfer of the properties merged in the United States Steel corporation. There are those who say that James B. Dill—he has since become a judge on the New Jersey bench at a comparatively small salary—was the only man in the country who could have untangled the mess; that the job was worth the $1,000,000 he received.

The group of attorneys who secured payment by the government of the long-deferred claims of the Cherokee Indians some time ago, amounting to $15,000,000, were allowed 15 per cent of the whole, or nearly $750,000. Of this fee, it is said, a great part went to one man or firm.

A fee of $80,000 is said to have been paid to a New York lawyer, William M. Guthrie, for breaking the will of the late Henry B. Plant, owner of a system of steamships, railways and hotels. Of the $24,000,000 estate the widow's share was $8,000,000, and as this was tied up in trust she engaged counsel to secure its release, giving him 10 per cent of her share.

Another large attorney's fee recently granted in a court decision at Seattle, Wash., was that of United States Senator S. H. Piles, who will get $450,000 in the famous John Sullivan will case. The estate is valued at $800,000 and two of the heirs gave deeds of conveyance to their counsel for half the amount.

Modest in all things, the city of Milwaukee, would, of course, be expected to furnish examples of modest legal fees. Witness these charges in the Schandin will case, recently closed: Frisbee & Redfield, attorneys for Mrs. Clara S. Heyl, $167,000; Quarles, Spence & Quarles, for the proponents, $150,000; Winkler, Flanders, Bottum & Fawcett, for the contestants, $50,000; A. W. Hard, guardian for the Frank children, $30,000, and George P. Miller, guardian for Erick Heyl, $15,000.

For a single argument before the United States supreme court Joseph H. Choate, former ambassador to Great Britain, once received £20,000. The effect of the argument was the declaring unconstitutional of the income tax.

It has been stated repeatedly that Attorney D. M. Delmas was assured $100,000 fee for his work in defending Harry K. Thaw.

It is not alone the law that offers opportunities for making tremendous sums quickly. Medicine is a profession quite as rich in possibilities. A philadelphia physician, the late Dr. William Pepper, it is understood, charged Robert Simpson $1,500 to ran examination lasting about a minute and Dr. S. Weir Mitchell is said to have been given a fee of $15,000 by one patient.

When America learned that Dr. Adolph Lorenz of Vienna received $30,000 for setting the hip of little Lolita Armour of Chicago and later pay for further attention swelling his total fees to $75,000, there was amazement, and yet this would not create surprise in Europe, especially in court circles.

Whom the present King Edward of England, then prince of Wales, was seriously ill years ago Dr. William Jenner pulled him through and for his four weeks' attendance was paid $50,000. The physician who atended the father of Emperor William of Germany in his last illness—Dr. S. Morrell Mackenzie—presented a bill for $100,000, which was paid without a murmur.

Prof. Zacherine of Moscow, got $75,000 for two days' attendance on the father of the present czar.

Dr. Thomas Dimsdale for vaccinating the Empress Catherine I. at St. Petersburg got $60,000 and a pension of $2,500 for life.

A bill for $100,000 was sent by Dr. Waltee C. Browning of Philadelphia to the estate of Senator C. L. Magee at Pittsburg. It was brought out that Senator Magee had once declared his intention of giving Dr. Browning a fee of $1,000,000, and had added: "I intend to beat Peter Widener's record. Widener, you know, paid his doctor $300,000."

A review of high voluntary fees seems to show that a father whose child has been saved by a physician is especially liberal. Gratitude of the Chicago father to the Vienna "bloodless" surgeon was eclipsed by that of Mr. Flager of New York, who gave Dr. Shelton securities worth $87,000 for curing his daughter. The late shah of Persia paid Dr. Gatezowski of Paris $25,000 for curing his son of an affliction of the eye.

After the death of Marshall Field, the Chicago merchant prince, his physician, Dr. Frank Billings, filed in the probate court a claim for $25,000, a bill for seven days' service.

For 100 days' attendance upon the late William L. Rainey, a millionaire cork manufacturer in Philadelphia, Dr. Samuel T. Barnes made out a bill amounting to $33,000. This charge of $330 a day cannot be noted as among the modest claims of practitioners.

That payment of large fees may be exacted even when cures are not effected was shown by teh recent decision of a French court in the case of George Crocker of California against Dr. Doyen. Mr. Crocker sought to recover a $20,000 fee which he paid in 1904 for having his wife treated for cancer—treatment which he asserted was unsuccessful. The court held that the Paris physician had done his best to fulfill the contract and that he was entitled to the $20,000 fee.

HUMOR OF SHOPPING.

Carolyn Wells in Woman's Home Companion for May: In American shops the establishment and the customer are separate entities. The firm displays its wares, the buyers examine them, and purchase or not, as they see fit.

In London it is different. The moment you enter the door of a shop you are accepted as part and parcel of its interests, a member of the family, as it were. Then a shopwalker pounces upon you and insists on knowing what you want. If you hesitate as to your reply, he plants himself squarely in front of you and waits. When, in sheer desperation (for you had intended a happy, aimless sort of looking about, you say "gloves," he grasps your arm, firmly marches you to the glove counter, seats you at it, and details a salesperson to wait upon you.

All this happened to me, and in an exasperated frame of mind I bought a pair of gloves merely to keep peace in the family. But the bland and gentlemanly glove seller had no notion of letting me off so easily. He took it for granted that that first pair was simply by way of preface, and he displayed gloves of my size, of all styles and colors. The very foregoneness of his conclusion that I would buy them all irritated me, and briefly announcing that I wanted no more gloves, I paid him for the pair I had bought. Surprised and grieved beyond expression, he beckoned the shopwalker, and together they cross-examined me as to why I refused to buy more gloves. Did the colors not suit me? Were the prices not reasonable? Disdaining to answer these questions, I endeavored to stalk haughtily away. But this was not allowed. More in sorrow than in anger, they told me I must wait for my bill. As the gloves were to be sent, and I had given the exact change, I deemed this unnecessary. But I soon found it to be one of their inexorable laws. Bills, signed and countersigned, must be waited for, no matter how trifling the purchase.

The next thing I learned was that the price asked is far from being the real selling price of the article. I cringed at the thought of offering 5 guineas for a 7-guinea hat, but I soon learned that it was expected of a customer, and that the marked prices were merely amounts from which to begin the "dickering."

And the ruses resorted to by these wicked milliners! In Mayfair, is one of the most fashionable millinery shops in the world. Over the door gilt letters spell one of the most famous Parisian names. To this shop I went for a hat. Being very canny, I expressed great interest in several hats which I knew I should not buy. At last I carelessly inquired the price of a hat which had really charmed me from the first. The price was 8 guineas. As it bore four magnificent ostrich plumes, this price was not exorbitant, but, knowing the game, I began to argue.

First I asked if they would call it pounds instead of guineas. This meant a reduction in price of 8 shillings, but the indignity (I discovered) was beyond all words. With a seathing glance the saleslady informed me that they never sold by pounds in that shop, and I stored away the knowledge for future use in swagger establishments.

Determined to beat them at their own game, I then offered 6 guineas for the hat. This was met with appropriate expressions of horrified surprise, and as a great concession 7½ guineas was proposed. I remained firm in my 6-guinea offer, and after a feint of leaving the shop without buying a hat, it was reluctantly accepted.

Then followed what I considered a ruse of extreme cleverness on my part. I had been told that if I left a new hat to be sent home, the milliner would change the trimmings for others that looked the same, but were of inferior quality. I had been advised, therefore, on purchasing a hat to carry it away with me, in order to prevent this. So I remarked, on paying for this hat, that as I wished to wear it that afternoon I would take it with me, the large bandbox being easily managed in my hansom cab. The saleslady kindly agreed to this plan, and sent the hat upstairs to be boxed.

After waiting fifteen minutes for the hat to return to me, I began to grow suspicious; and when it did come, I deliberately untied the box, removed the tissue paper wrappings, and examined the hat. Sure enough, the four long, rich ostrich plumes had been removed and replaced by four others of the same color, but of a distinctly cheaper grade! I boldly declared this fact, but the saleslady haughtily denied it.

"But," said I, look at the hat. See the stitches, hastily put in to hold these feathers. They were not there when the hat left me."

"Ah," she said, "merely a few stitches to fasten a bit of trimming that was loose."

And nothing remained for me but to take the hat and depart. I could not prove my case, I could get no redress. But I learned, when buying a hat, to pin it firmly on my head, and walk away, leaving my own old hat to be sent home.

I think such an episode would not occur in any reputable shop in America.

BUT THEY COME NOT.

If prehistoric Polypods—
Prolific, pallid pests—
Now prowled and peered about the place
Pursuing human quests;
While Pachyderm's prehensile paws
Poked out from pulpy nests;
And quarry-questing Quadrupeds
Of queer and qualmy hues,
With quantities of quelling quills,
For prey were prone to choose
The quaking, quailing populace
Who quivered in their shoes—
If this were true today, I guess
You'd mind your Ps and Qs!

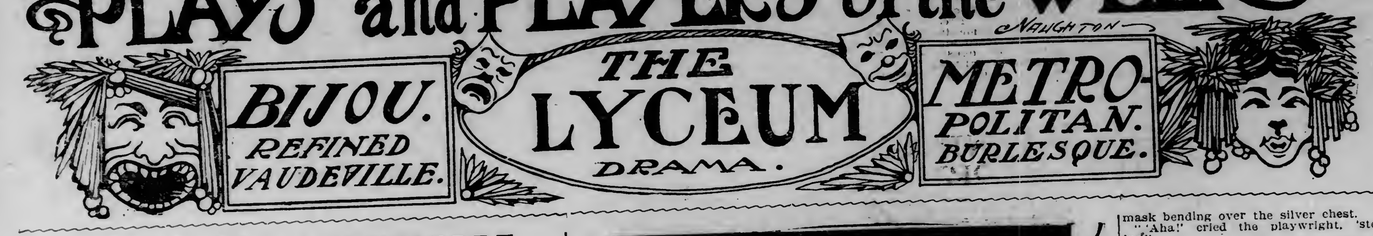
PLAYS and PLAYERS of the WEEK



AT THE LYCEUM

The Dandy Dixie Minstrels on Thursday and Friday Will be the Only Attraction at the Lyceum Next Week.

Following an almost unprecedented run at the New York Theater Roof Garden, last summer, Voelckel & Nolan's latest offering, the Dandy Dixie Minstrels, will be the attraction at the Lyceum theater on Thursday and Friday.

The Dandy Dixie Minstrels are said to be the largest organization of colored performers on tour this season, comprising forty comedians, singers, dancers and musicians, together with the famous "Cotton Pickers' Band" of solo musicians.

The performance offered by the Dandy Dixie Minstrels begins with a new and novel electrical spectacular first part, for which the elaborate mounting and electrical effects are said to have cost in the neighborhood of $10,000. In this part of the entertainment, James Crosby, the inimitable comedian, known as the Tall Talker, is the principal end man.

The olio is replete with specially imported European feature acts, of which the most notable are: Campbell Bros., an original Rag-Time Comedy Musical act; Toney Trio, dare-devil acrobats; Benny Jones, the Texas Teaser; Richard Barrett, the greatest colored baritone; H. S. Wooten, the Indian Territory tenor; John Prampin, a comic acrobatic juggler; the Oklahoma Octette, and the famous "Cotton Pickers' Band," directed by Robert Leach, the colored creatore; following the Dixie College Rangers' rendition of 'Varsity class songs. There is to be a buck dance contest, open to all comers, for valuable prizes.

Following this extensive olio, the performance concludes with a funny fantasy, "A Fowl Deed," in which Charles Williams, assisted by the entire company, plays the leading comedy role of "Judge Yazoo," affording him an opportunity to render his parodies and laughable monologue.

Directly following the American engagements of the Dandy Dixie Minstrels, which conclude June 30, 1907, the company will make a tour to Europe, Asia, South Africa, Manila, Hawaii and return via San Francisco.

Shephard's Motion Pictures.

Motion pictures seem to appeal to the public of Duluth, as has been shown by the liberal patronage each Sunday night at the Lyceum, since the Shepard pictures have been shown. This is because all of the films shown at the Lyceum are of the very latest, original in conception, dramatically interesting and photographically perfect, and dealing with both the humorous and pathetic side of life. It is planned to give some special feature every Sunday evening, among which are the following: "Lost in the Alps," a thrilling story of adventure and rescue; "Daniel Boone, or Pioneer Days in America;" "The Pirate's Treasure, or a Sailor's Love Story;" "The Stolen Pig," a new and novel and original comic film; "The Jamestown Exposition," showing the opening of the exposition and the naval review. Many other special films will be shown during the coming season, as the management has made arrangements with all the manufacturers for their latest films.

Miss Lauretta Reitz will render the illustrated songs. The price for the pictures will remain the same, 10 cents for children and 20 cents for adults.

LYCEUM NOTES.

News and Gossip of the Coming Attractions.

Rosselle Knott, who had to pass by Duluth earlier in the season because her tour conflicted with that of the Madam Butterfly company, will play here May 31 and June 1 on the way back from the coast.

On May 29 and 30 Raymond Hitchcock will be seen at the Lyceum in a new Henry W. Savage production, "A Yankee Tourist," which may safely be called the comic opera success of the season. The piece was written by Richard Harding Davis, Wallace Irwin, and Alfred G. Robyn, and a more entertaining and interesting comic opera has never been booked for this city. Mr. Hitchcock is given great opportunity to display his peculiarly droll style of humor and his success has been unlimited. Mr. Savage mounted the play elaborately. The cast is composed of many well known players and the chorus is pretty and vivacious. In Chicago where the piece opened, the entire engagement was played before packed houses.

Lillian Russell, who is to appear shortly in this city in a new comedy, "The Butterfly," by Kellett Chambers, has been traveling through the West and South in a private car. Her company travels with her. In Denver she left the car and traveled to Colorado Springs and Pueblo in an automobile, letting her company join her in the two cities on the car, the baggage being sent on ahead. She also traveled from Tacoma to Seattle by the same method, two automobile firms fighting for the privilege of supplying the automobile. Her success on the trip has been one of the wonders of the present season.

AT THE METROPOLITAN

The Burlesque Season is Over But the Frank E. Long Stock Company, in Comedy Drama, is Booked for the Coming Week.

Now that the regular season of burlesque at the Metropolitan is over, Manager Longstreet of that popular playhouse, announces a week of legitimate drama, presented by the Frank E. Long Stock company, an organization which has appeared at the "Met" before and has been very favorably received by Duluthians.

The company will begin its engagement of one week, with a matinee tomorrow afternoon. Matinees will be given as well on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. The opening bill will be an amusing rustic comedy, entitled "Our Country Cousins." This play brings out the entire strength of the company.

Miss Nana Sullivan enacts the leading roles and is known as a clever and capable actress. Two members of the supporting company are said to be better than any Mr. Long has ever had traveling with him.

The plays which the Long company present are clean, wholesome drama and appeal to women and children as well as men. In fact, women and children form the greater part of the Long company's audiences as a rule. It is expected that many members of the fair sex will attend the performances during the coming week. No smoking will be allowed and none of the free-masonry of the burlesque will obtain.

Between the acts will be presented clever specialties. Among those who give them are Erin Lacey, Ben Landers, George Saldin and Mock Sad Alli.

AT THE BIJOU

Don Leno and His Ten Merry Youngsters Will be the Big Feature of a Strong Vaudeville Bill Next Week.

If good attractions count for anything, the bill of vaudeville to be presented at the Bijou next week, commencing with the Monday matinee, should pack the popular little theater at every performance.

The feature of the bill will be Don Leno and his ten merry youngsters. The company includes ten boys and girls, who are trained singers and dancers, being also possessed of dramatic talent that is artistic in every detail. They have been schooled in the best dramatic studios of the world. This celebrated troupe will present a musical comedietta entitled "Examination Day in Township High School No. 37," staged and produced by Don Leno. Light and scenic effects are by Sosman and Landis. Some of the musical numbers introduced will be "Like the Fairest Flower," "Colorado," "Won't You Let Me Put My Arms Around You," "Tropical Moon," "Moonbeams," and "Dreams of You." The artists in the production are from 12 to 16 years of age.

Among the other prominent acts for the week will be the beautiful playlet entitled "Leah's Violin," a playlet that calls to mind the music master, of David Warfield fame. "Leah's Violin" will be presented by Louis Morrison and Rosa Roma, a duo of artists that are known the world over for their dramatic talent. The playlet is taken from East side New York life. An old musician lets a hungry waif into his violin shop and through her discovers his long lost daughter. Miss Roma is an accomplished violinist. Her selections never fail to win a veritable storm of applause.

La Bell Meeker will present a novel specialty. She is a clever comedienne as well as one of the best singing and acrobatic dancers before the public.

One of the principal numbers for the week will be Howley and Leslie a duo of singing, dancing and comedy artists, who present an original skit, featuring Miss Leslie's child impersonations, which are perfect in speech, dress and makeup, and are one of the biggest hits on the circuit.

Don Leno will offer a little comedy monologue of his own, which always pleases.

A pleasing act will be presented by May Searey, who is a cultivated solo pianist.

Isadore Silver will render the popular song success entitled "San Antonio," which is now quite popular in Duluth. It will be illustrated with colored views of the Golden West.

The moving pictures for the week show the celebrated ski tournament and competition in Switzerland and the roaring comedy film entitled "Puck's Pranks on the Suburbanite."

Matinees are given daily at 2:45 and evening performances at 8 and 9:30. Seats may be reserved by either telephone for either matinee or night performances. A special school children's matinee Saturday afternoon at 2:30 and regular performances on Sunday afternoon and night.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

John Cort Goes in for a New Light Opera---Is a Musical Play With No Stars and No Tenors.

New York, May 18.—With vaudeville managers turning to the legitimate field, is it any wonder that a legitimate manager should turn to the lighter field of comic opera? John Cort, after organizing the Northwestern Theatrical association, an extensive circuit of theaters out Seattle way, and managing several important stars, will make his first venture in a new field with "The Alaskan," a light musical offering ready for next autumn.

"'The Alaskan,' " said Mr. Cort, "will be a musical play with no stars—and no tenors. The book was written by Joseph Blethan, editor of the Seattle Daily Times, with music by Harry Girard, who also plays the title role, and will be remembered in connection with Donnelly and Girard.

"This is the first time Alaska has been used as the scene of a light opera, and it offers an excellent field.

"There have been 296,000 people in Alaska during the last few years, and they have all returned by way of Seattle, scattering throughout the country, so that the actual scenes reproduced in the new opera will interest a good many people who have visited the country, and those who have stayed at home as well. The play opens in September, in Chicago, arriving in New York soon after.

"Besides this production, I intend to bring Miss Maude Fealey to New York next season in 'The Stronger Sex,' a modern play, by John Valentine, which has been running at the Apollo theater, London, since last January.

"Miss Florence Roberts, Max Figman and Miss Sarah Truax will each be starred next year in new plays. Then Mme. Calve returns in October for a concert tour from Maine to Mexico.

"Aside from operations as a producer, I have acquired theaters in San Francisco and Los Angeles. There is plenty of money in the West for good attractions, and the coming season's bookings indicate a list of bigger shows than have ever before crossed the Great Divide."

Miss Gertrude Barthold, who appeared as Jane in "Babes in Toyland" last year, is dancing in "The Orchid," at the Herald theater, this season.

Probably there is a strong enough dramatic situation in "The Primrose Path" to justify the experiment of its production. At the end of the third act that audience responded quite enthusiastically to an emotional climax, but this was preceded by so much dialogue that failed to interest that one felt the need of something more than a mere end-of-the-act furore by way of atonement.

The author, Bayard Veiller, has taken in "The Primrose Path" the somewhat familiar story of the woman who sacrifices everything for the man that she loves and is then cruelly cast aside. The crucial point in this particular play is that when the man was at the point of death the woman who was living with him as his wife suffered herself to be disgraced irretrievably in order to get him medicine, etc.

He is in ignorance of this fact when he meets the conventionally beautiful and rich Miss Cartwright, who loves not only him, but his art. "The Primrose Path," being the name of one of his paintings. In the third act the artist hero—if he is to be called that—has left the woman and is busy giving an instruction to a number of unartlike students, among whom is Miss Cartwright, now his bride to be. Enter the deserted woman to earn money as a model. She learns of the engagement and tells her story. In the fourth act Miss Cartwright proves that she is not only rich and beautiful, but also good. She endeavors to bring the couple together, but the woman is spirited and refuses.

The main difficulty with the piece was its lack of dramatic gradation. It was all written in one key. In addition to this it was handicapped by a leading man, Sheldon Lewis, who was tragedy personified; Miss Margaret Wycherly, the star of the occasion, did very well considering that she took on the burden of a Devonshire accent that interfered seriously with her enunciation. She worked very hard at the end of the third act to make the story of her wrong telling, but the character had not been developed sufficiently to insure unanimous sympathy. The supporting cast was far from brilliant.

At a dinner in New York recently, David Belasco dissected with delicate and true wit a certain playwright. This playwright is successful; he produces half a dozen pieces every year; but it is admitted on all sides that he owes all his best ideas to playwrights, who have preceded him.

"One night," said Mr. Belasco, at the conclusion of his comments, "the playwright had a dream. And in his dream it seemed to him that he heard a noise downstairs. Rising softly, he took a lighted candle and descended.

"The drawing room was empty, the library was empty, but in the dining room the playwright saw a figure in a black mask bending over the silver chest.

"'Aha!' cried the playwright, 'stealing!'

"'No,' said the other calmly. 'No, not stealing. Only adapting.'"

The player who is in earnest, who wants to go to the top, should never refuse a part because it seems too insignificant. Small "bits" well done, often make reputations.

May Robson made her first success carrying a kettle of hot water across the stage and drawling, "Yes, missus, I'm coming." A more recent case is that of Frances Starr, "The Rose," about which everything centers just now at the Belasco theater, New York. Last year in "Gallops" Miss Starr stood for ten minutes upon the step of a coach while the party of people on top of the coach watched a horserace. She never stirred during the ten minutes. Her lover was riding that race, and she could not look at it. She just stood and shook all over, and the changing expressions upon her face were more potent with audiences than frenzied ejaculations or gesticulations could ever have been. It was this "bit" of acting that caught the eye of Mr. Belasco, that caused him to hunt up Miss Starr and give her her present opportunity.

Eleanor Robson in "Salomy Jane" is approaching the end of her first full season at the Liberty theater, New York. She has completely filled the house with earnest admirers of her personality and her art, and might continue throughout the hot weather with Paul Armstrong's play if the management so desired.

As it is, she will have a comparatively short vacation and will revive "Salomy Jane" in the early fall before producing the poetic drama written for her special use by Edmond Rostand.

Miss Robson will be one of the very few stars to have played steadily in New York for two consecutive seasons.

Henry Miller and Margaret Anglin closed their season in William Vaughn Moody's play, "The Great Divide," at the Princess theater, New York, on April 27. Mr. Moody's play proved to be the most remarkable dramatic success of the year. It was presented at the Princess theater for the first time on Oct. 3, and continued for twenty-two weeks. The play was presented 267 times. Owing to the fact that Mr. Miller and Miss Anglin's lease of the Princess expired on the foregoing date, it was necessary for them to give up the tenancy of the house. Otherwise they would have continued the entire summer. Mr. Miller and Miss Anglin resume their season in "The Great Divide" at Daly's theater, Aug. 26.

An autograph letter of Charles Reade, beginning with the words "Never too late to mend;" a letter from Ristori, relating to a theatrical benefit in England; a bracelet worn by Laura Keene, rings belonging to Charlotte Cushman and Adelaide Neilson, Sir Henry Irving's watch—these are a few of the valuable souvenirs contributed to be sold to the Actors' Fund fair in the Metropolitan opera house, New York.

Siegfried, one of the original cast in "Strongheart," was left behind when the company went to London, because of an English law relating to the exclusion of dogs, and died just three weeks after the company sailed. "Sig," after 700 performances covering a period of three long seasons, plied for the gay life of the Thespian and the glare of the footlights, gave himself up to grief and worry, as actors are wont to do, and with his bark passed through the endless channel Saturday night, May 4.

Siegfried was a dachshund of 1-100 tonnage; he was built in Germany in 1897, and was launched on the American stage in Minneapolis Christmas day, 1903.

The dog was buried at Edeson's country seat, Sag Harbor, L. I., under the famous old Edeson elm.

London critics expressed considerable amazement in consequence of the fact that neither Julia Marlowe nor E. H. Sothern talked through their noses. This is rather surprising, when it is considered that Miss Marlowe was born in England and that E. H. Sothern, although born in New Orleans, was of English parentage and spent a good part of his early life in England. The son of "Dundreary" Sothern talking through his nose is certainly amusing. Equally amazing is the fact that Roland Buckstone, a true born Englishman, and whose father was for many years one of the most prominent actors on the English stage, did not discourse Hauptmann through his nasal organ.

Chauncey Olcott's play for next season, which has just been completed by Theodore Burt Sayre, is entitled "The Irish Cavalier." It is in four acts, with the scenes laid in and around Londonderry, Ireland, in the latter part of the Seventeenth century.

The play will have its first performance Aug. 25 in Minneapolis. Olcott's present season comes to an end next week in Brooklyn, after which he sails for a trip through Ireland.

By come sort of managerial strategy F. Ziegfeld, Jr., has stolen a march on the Shuberts and obtained a contract with William Rock, one of the brightest luminaries in the cast of "The Orchid."

While Rock was favorably known as a dancer he had not approached real fame until the premiere of "The Orchid" at the Herald Square theater. The following day a dozen Broadway managers started on a still hunt for his services. The Shuberts, it is said, had neglected to bind Rock by an inviolable contract.

"George Washington, Jr.," "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway," two companies presenting "Fifty Miles From Boston," George M. Cohan in a new play, Victor Moore in "The Talk of New York," George Beban in "The Italian," Thomas E. Shea in repertoire, Southern company of "Brewster's Millions" and a new play by Channing Pollock, will be among the Cohan & Harris attractions next season.

Joseph W. Herbert left for Europe last week on the Deutschland. Mr. Herbert has well earned his summer vacation abroad. During the past season he wrote Lew Field's great success, "Ahoy Town," and played in it for several weeks. He rewrote "The Orchid," which has proved with Eddie Foy, one of the greatest musical comedy successes of the year. Mr. Herbert also appeared in the latter musical comedy, making a great hit at Toby Blockett, the Cockney pugilist. Another work from Mr. Herbert's pen will shortly be seen in New York, some being "Faschnating Flora," the musical piece now in preparation for a summer season at the Casino theater.

Something of a surprise was sprung last week when the Shuberts announced that they would present Marguerite Clarke, in "The Road to Yesterday" at the Waldorf theater, London, following the engagement of E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe.

It has been reported that Lena Ashwell had obtained the English rights of the piece. If any American actress were to appear in it abroad there was good reason for believing that Minnie Dupree would be awarded the glory, for her performance is one of the most charming to be seen the length and breadth of Broadway.

Miss Clarke, of course, has been identified only with musical plays. Her rise has been extremely rapid and she has deserved every promotion. Seven years ago she was a chorus girl in one of the Ahorn opera companies. eGorge W. Lederer took her under his managerial wing and after her first appearance on Broadway her future was assured.

Elgar Selwyn is to succeed Edeson as the star of "Strongheart" next season.

"Cleo," in which Nance O'Neill has been starring, has been thrown into the discard. Boston didn't like the play.

A new word has been coined by Harry MacDonough, comedian of the "Two Little Girls" company. MacDonough introduces the description of a recently discovered animal and the name of this unusual beast is the Gazeka. In this connection an amusing incident is said to have occurred the other day during a ball game on the American league grounds in Chicago. Detroit and the White Sox were playing and the famous Silk O'Loughlin was umpiring. O'Loughlin rendered a questionable decision and Sam Crawford, a Detroit player, was protesting it. He was making absolutely no headway and finally turning on his heel in disgust he hissed, O'Loughlin, I think you're a Gazeka." The umpire banished him from the game for using vile language.

Lillian Russell's tour of the Pacific coast in Joseph Brooks' production of Kellett Chambers' comedy, "The Butterfly," is proving remarkably successful. She will continue to play till June 16, when her season will end in Detroit. In October next Miss Russell will begin her second season in dramatic work at the Illinois theater in Chicago in a new play written by George Broadhurst and George V. Hobart.

Klaw & Erlanger's production of Edmund Day's drama, "The Round Up," which is to open the season at the new Amsterdam theater, New York, in September, is drawing a capacity audience at every performance at McVicker's theater in Chicago. The third act of this play created a sensation at McVicker's on the openin gnight. It represents a battle between two prospecting miners and marauding Apache Indians. The miners are rescued by a troop of cavalry scouts in the finale of the act, led by Sheriff "Slim" Hoover, the character played by Maclyn Arbuckle. Thrilling realism is added to this indident by the presence of genuine Indians, cavalrymen and cowboys from Arizona, where the scenes of the play are laid. Florence Rockwell and Julia Dean act the leading female roles and both have made successes in their characters.

Guy Standing, who is now leading man with Alla Nazimova, the Russian actress, has been engaged by Klaw & Erlanger and Joseph Brooks to play the part of Charlie steele in Eugene W. Presbrey's dramatic version of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel, "The Right of Way," which will be presented in October. At the conclusion of his engagement with Miss Nazimova, Mr. Standing will go to London to play an important role in a new production. While there he will consult with Sir Gilbert Parker in reference to his character in "The Right of Way." The opening date will be Montreal, Oct. 7. The production, which will be one of the most conspicuous of the coming season, will receive its New York premiere at a Broadway theater in November. Other engagements for this play are Theodore Roberts, May Buckley, Berenice Golden Henderson, Paula Gloy, J. Tuohey, Alexander Kearney, Louis Le Bey, Mignon Beranger and Henry J. Hadfield. Richard Marsden, the scenic artist, is at work on the scenery.

Joe Welch, formerly vaudeville actor, and his former manager, Gus Hill, are in a legal tangle. The basis of the difficulty is a contract whereby Welch was to be booked in good houses to play "The Shoemaker," upon forfeit of $5,000 should he not live up to his part of the agreement. The comedian has quit Hill and wishes to return to vaudeville at $750 a week. Hill has sent out notice that any manager who engages Welch will have injunction proceedings on his hands, while Welch, through his counsel, P. H. Goldbaum, will seek to enjoin Hill from sending out any more notices of this character.

Judge Drysdale, at Halifax, last week delivered judgment in the supreme court in the case of Theodore A. Liebler, George C. Tyler and W. F. Connor of New York vs. W. S. Harkins. The plaintiff sued for $700 damages, alleging the defendant put on the play "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman," under the name of "The Gentleman Burglar." The plaintiffs asked for $200 royalty for two performances and $500 for general damages. The judgment was in favor of the plaintiffs for $40.80 and costs, amounting to 10 per cent of the gross receipts of two performances of "A Gentleman Burglar."

"FREAKS" OF THE CIRCUS

Some Interesting Facts In Regard to the Human Monstrosities That Are Seen at the Traveling Shows.

Barnum's reputation as a showman was built wholly on freaks and strange curiosities, says the Chicago Tribune. His circus fame was nothing until he became associated with men who made the most honest of businesses out of the circus that had been largely fraud.

With bum circuses went bogus curiosities and fake freaks. In the modern circus everything must be genuine.

I personally have known but few frauds. Joyce Heath, the alleged colored nurse of Washington, was one. The Fiji mermaid was another. The latter was exhibited in a small glass case in Barnum's museum at the corner of Ann street and Broadway.

I recollect it well. It was composed of the body of a fish and the cured and dried head of a monkey, the hair having been shaved off. Some said it was the head of a human infant. It bore no resemblance to the pictures of mermaids printed in the story books. It was an insignificant fraud and did no particular harm.

Tom Thumb was not nearly so small as many men known to have existed before him, but he was Barnumized so well that the public thought him the smallest man that ever lived. There have been some attempts at deception, such as making giants taller by building up a few inches beside their boots, but they don't look serious.

However, if you don't think three or four inches important, just contemplate an ordinary child on two-inch roller skates. Put four inches in his boots, fig him up in a frock coat and high "plug" hat, and any tall man will look a foot taller than he is. It is one of those curious optical illusions.

The so-called "Circassian girls" were all pronounced frauds. There never really was a genuine Circassian woman with the hair worn by these exhibits. In the old Bowery museum days almost any girl who would consent to have her hair cut and would bathe her head in beer every day could be a "Circassian girl." The beer made her locks stand out to scare an Indian.

We once had a pretty young girl who wore a wig for the "moss-haired girl." She traveled all over Europe without being detected, although the "moss" wig was discarded after every performance. Her parents were the tattooed people, and in order to travel with them she consented to become a freak. In theatrical parlance, she "created a part."

"Wild men" years ago quite common with shows were all frauds. The "What is it?" was merely a light-colored negro idiot from somewhere back in New Jersey, where he now lives, I believe, after having traveled all over the world as a freak. He came from a section which has produced several albinos—the real albino, with pink eyes.

There is a species of fascination about all living abnormalities. certain people seem to be hypnotized by horrors of any kind, much as a bird is charmed by a snake.

We had a peculiar case in which a beautiful young girl became enamored of a pygmy man in our "freak" department. This man was known as "Chetah, the Chinese dwarf." He was a hideous creature, whose legs were withered and bent under him. The loose clothing he wore concealed his principal deformity and gave him the appearance of a dwarf three and one-half feet high, but enough of him was visible to show about the ugliest human being that ever lived.

This pretty girl of 17 saw him first in Madison Square Garden. The attendants noted her standing for a long time, apparently entranced, as if unable to tear herself away, and oblivious to everything but this monster. The next day she came again, and there she remained until the beginning of the performance in the arena closed that department of the exhibition.

This continued every day, twice a day, until she attracted so much attention that she was forbidden to enter the place. Then she waited outside and waylaid the "freak" in the street. The last I heard of the affair before starting out on the road, she had left her family for this monstrosity.

She was but a conspicuous instance of many similar cases in which apparently cultured women have become infatuated with human monstrosities, though that is the only case I know of in which the results were so shocking and disastrous. This curious sympathy is not confined to the softer sex, for the negress known as the "Great Lentus," whose face was pretty, but whose body was that of a lower animal, had a similar fascination for some men.

It may seem an odious comparison to make, but it is a fact that in point of intelligence, general information and mental endowment the circus "freaks," as a class, are superior to those who crowd about them in curiosity and pity. And there is a touch of irony, as well as humor, in the additional fact that the professional freak regards the passing crowd from his elevated platform with something like the same curiosity, not wholly unmixed with contempt. The remarks, sotto voce, exchanged on this platform sometimes would be highly edifying, even if not always complimentary, were they understood by the swarm below.

In all my experience in this connection I have known few cases wherein the "freaks" on exhibition were below the average intelligence. The midgets Lucie Zarnte and "Great Peter the Small" possessed a low order of intelligence and no education. The giants, on the other hand, Chang, the Chinese eight-footer; Col. Goshen, Capt. Bates and George Auger, were all of a higher order of intellect, were fairly well educated and interesting conversationalists. Having traveled widely, they possessed stories of information such as even well educated people who remain in their narrow environment never require.

As a rule, it may be said that giantesses are neither so intelligent nor so well informed. Ella Ewing, the tallest woman of whom there is any record, was just a plain Missouri country girl, who "had to be shown."

She was exceeding modest and retiring and refused to leave her own country, though tempted by the show with the offer of $1,000 a week. Her small education had been in a country school, which she was compelled to quit early because of her increasing size.

Perhaps no two children ever were born with more natural intelligence than the "Orisso twins," Radica and Daodica. They were bound together by a seemingly indissoluble bond at the breastbone—though, when one sickened and underwent in Paris a celebrated French surgeon succeeded in separating the living from the dead.

They were the brightest children I ever saw, and absorbed information as a sponge takes up water. At 12 years they could speak three languages fluently, and they were lovely and charming to look upon.

The dogfaced man, "Jo-Jo," is perhaps the most extraordinary freak of nature ever exhibited. He is a Russian of superior intelligence. While his head and face, with the thick growth of long silk hair, most nearly suggests a Skye terrier, his brain is above the normal. He has been exhibited in every civilized country and he is one of those broad-minded men who unfailingly profit by what they see and hear.

He understands and writes Russian, German, French and English. I have conversed with him on various topics and invariably became so much interested in what he said that I forgot for the moment that I could merely see his twinkling eyes through the hair that made the rest of his face invisible.

The man born without arms and the one born without legs must fully illustrate nature's law of compensation. The present Charles Tripp certainly is an armless wonder, not only in doing practically everything with his toes that ordinarily folk can do with their hands, but in his degree of intelligence and mental equipment.

The loss of the valuable foil for another equally remarkable freak, the legless man, Eli Bowen. They always are placed together on the platform and are likely and another as successful merchied men and the fathers of interesting families. One of Bowen's sons is a judget and another a successful merchant. Bowen himself is an acrobat, climbing and leaping with his hands and arms, which are developed like another man's legs.

The "bearded lady," Annie Jones, is a woman of culture and refinement. Beards on women are not uncommon in the show business. They have been on public exhibition for the last fifty years. This particular one really is a modest and charming lady, in all that the title implies. She can draw, paint a little, and can play on various instruments of music. She is ready and intelligent in conversation, and has been married twice.

The "celastic skin" man, James Morris, is a harber by trade, and a good one. He now has a shop in New York, and on the road runs the barber's tent, handling the razor and shears to the satisfaction of the employes of the show between performances.

"Billy Wells," the hard-headed man, who permits a man with a sledge hammer to break blocks of granite on his head, has an entirely normal brain under an abnormally thick skull. He often took tickets in front of the main tent, and it is presumed that he would not be trusted in such a responsible post were he not thoroughly equipped mentally for such a trying job.

The double bodied Hindoo, "Laloo," was an intelligent freak. I have heard him disputing with his personal manager. His only failing was prodigality. He would spend money lavishly, and would buy everything he might fancy, which called for frequent protests from his manager.

He was well read on ordinary subjects, spoke four languages and always went well dressed. Away from the platform of "freaks" he gave the impression of a foreign gentleman in comfortable circumstances. His abnormality, the lower half of a second body, protruding from below his breastbone, carefully was concealed by his clothing.

J. W. Coffey, familiarly known as the "skeleton dude," had all the intellectual gifts common to the average man. Herman, the marvelous expansionist, who could break chains by lung power, was educated in Germany, and had as much good sense as any of the Kaiser's middle class subjects. He delighted in practical jokes.

Sometimes the boys took him to a clothing store, and in the selection of a vest he would complain to the proprietor that the buttons never were sewed on properly. Of course, the proprietor would solemly guarantee these particular buttons. Then Herman would breathe, and the buttons would fly all over the store, to the astonishment and chagrin of the shopkeeper.

"Beautiful Marie," the fat girl; Harry Clarke, "the human pin cushion," and Rob Roy, a true pink-eyed albino, with the faculty of disjointing his limbs at will, were all of average intelligence. What they lacked in early education they made up in general information picked up in their wide travels, showing good and wholesome powers of observation.

If one had any doubts about the mental equipment of "freaks," such doubts would be solved by reading the accounts published in the London papers of the sensational "revolt of the freaks," in which their speeches and quips were printed in full. The reporters who attended that "indignation meeting" confessed themselves astounded. Even the midgets—and I mean the small people, not 30 inches high—took a hand.

The Haworth troupe of five midgets, by the way, were highly accomplished musicians, vocalists and linguists, and they gave a bright and sparkling parlor entertainment equal to anything of the kind ever offered by larger actors. Tom Thumb and Minnie Warre were of the same intellectual character. Both were perfectly normal human beings except in the matter of size.

The purely intellectual "freaks"—so-called from some extraordinary mental superiority—have been numerous. Some have been on public exhibition and others have not. In the show they are exhibited on the same platform with the physical freaks.

Of these perhaps none has been more remarkable than little Gracie Cochran, a girl of 7 years. Her memory was something almost supernatural. She could answer any question on a great variety of subjects propounded by any person or persons in a crowd.

You might name any country, obscure island, town or village in the world, and she could tell you where it was, the number of inhabitants, etc., and this instantly—almost before the last word left the questioner's lips. Frequently a lot of smart college students would band together in the crowd and by preconcerted arrangement fire questions at the child with the idea of confusing her with names and dates, etc. But she invariably came out victorious.

Storming the Castle

By Eleanor H. Porter.

(Copyright, 1907, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"But I'm determined to win you, Kathleen."

"As if you could against my will!"

"It won't be against your will—you'll wish it."

She raised her eyebrows in unbelief.

"I'll make myself so necessary to you that you can't help wishing it," he went on, confidentially.

"But I don't need you for—anything," she objected.

"Oh, but you may, you know," he smiled, imperturbably. "I'll be your knight and fight for you as in the olden time."

"I'm no princess shut up in a castle, Charlie," she retorted, all the more scornfully because his words had given her a curious little thrill. "The extent of your warfare thus far has been to procure me an ice or to bring me my fan," she went on, with up tilted chin.

"Not very dragon-like obstacles, I acknowledge," he laughed back at her; "still—there's time yet, so long as the princess remains unwed," he finished, bringing his thin, clean-cut lips together decisively, as Kathleen turned away.

When Kathleen Randal had unexpectedly come into her own small fortune, she immediately announced her intention of traveling.

"All my life," she declared laughingly, "I've been like Helen's babies and have wanted to 'see the wheels go 'round'—if only they were car-wheels and taking me somewhere!" she supplemented. "Now I'm going to go—and go—and go, and see if I can't satisfy this longing that is devouring me."

It was but two days now before she, and the aunt who had been a mother to her all these years, would start on their wedding journey. Trunks and tickets, plans and packing, filled the house with confusion and her soul with delirious joy; there was no time for Charlie Heywood and his love-making—making that had become trite in its periodic repetition ever since her pinafore days. That Charlie was young, good to look upon, rich, and altogether approved by her relatives, made it as nothing as she could grow sentimental over her next-door neighbor, with whom she had made mudpies in her babyhood!

As the very outset of her journey, Kathleen seemed doomed to disappointment, for the stagecoach—her only means of transportation from the village to the railroad station five miles away—failed to call at her door, and disappeared far down the road in a cloud of dust.

"Why Auntie—if they haven't left us!" cried Kathleen, dropping in limp dismay onto the piazza step.

"Never mind; we'll go tomorrow," soothed Mrs. Howells.

"But the boat—oh, Auntie, we'll lose the boat!" wailed the girl, springing to her feet in sudden realization of what the delay meant.

"Not gone yet?" called Heywood cheerfully, over the fence. "Old Abe's late this morning," he continued, with an airy innocence that gave no hint of his knowledge of the shameless bribe even then in Old Abe's pocket. "I was just going down to the station to see you off."

"Oh, Charlie, he's left us—we've lost the boat!" moaned Kathleen, wringing her hands.

"Not much, you haven't!" shouted Heywood over his shoulder, as he turned with suspicious promptness and hurried off with all those little implies. She can draw, paint a little, and can play on various instruments of music. She is ready and intelligent in conversation, and has been married twice.

The "celastic skin" man, James Morris, is a harber by trade, and a good one. He now has a shop in New York, and on the road runs the barber's tent, handling the razor and shears to the satisfaction of the employes of the show between performances.

"Billy Wells," the hard-headed man, who permits a man with a sledge hammer to break blocks of granite on his head, has an entirely normal brain under an abnormally thick skull. He often took tickets in front of the main tent, and it is presumed that he would not be trusted in such a responsible post were he not thoroughly equipped mentally for such a trying job.

The double bodied Hindoo, "Laloo," was an intelligent freak. I have heard him disputing with his personal manager. His only failing was prodigality. He would spend money lavishly, and would buy everything he might fancy, which called for frequent protests from his manager.

"Stop, stop, Kathleen, you're not going to leave me like this!" he cried, springing to his feet and following her.

"Like this?" she echoed, with a shrug of her shoulders.

In London Kathleen saw Heywood just three times—once when she and her aunt lost their bearings on the Strand, again when he obtained for them permission to enter a certain palace which they wanted very much to see, and a third time when in a panic in a London theater made his presence something in the nature of a godsend.

"Charlie Heywood has a remarkable faculty of making his advent delightfully opportune!" observed Mrs. Howells, with a shrewd glance at Kathleen's face.

"Humph! it strikes me he's a little bit officious," retorted Kathleen, again trying to banish with scornfulness that ominous thrill.

Kathleen had friends in Paris, and she danced and flirted and drove and shopped in an endless whirl of gayety.

Days passed. Save with the eye of her fancy, Kathleen had not once seen Heywood, though she looked for him at every turn. One afternoon, ignoring the fact that Paris is not New York, she slipped out alone for a short walk. She was strangely restless, and her feet flew faster and faster; even then, they seemed to her to be but crawling over the pavements. An hour passed and she turned to go back, but after another 60-minute walk, she awoke to a realization that she had lost her way.

"How stupid of me!" she murmured, biting her lips with annoyance.

She stopped to rest at a table in an open-air restaurant, but when a beringed, bestudded man slipped into the seat at her left, she fled again to the sidewalk.

"You are looking for some one?" a voice at her side suggested.

A sudden throb of joytingled to Kathleen's finger-tips.

"Go—go away!" she cried feebly, glorying in the absolute certainty that the man wouldn't obey her.

"Right away— now?" he asked.

She nodded—but drew nearer to him.

"I—I'm tired of being rescued, Charlie," she laughed hysterically.

He gave a keen glance at her flushed cheeks and hailed a carriage. He helped her in without speaking, gave an order to the driver, and seated himself at her side.

"How stupid of me—I never thought of a carriage," she quavered, brushing back the loose hair from her eyes. She stole a glance at the man's gloomy face, and a rose-pink flushed to her forehead.

"Let me see," she went on softly, "an automobile, a cushion, a—a—"

"Don't!" he interrupted harshly.

"But, really,' she continued, a queer little tremor in her voice, "I was only naming them over—the weapons have been so very—effective— that—"

Heywood looked up quickly.

"Kathleen, you don't mean that—" "The castle has been stormed and the princess is—is—" She raised shy eyes to his face.

"Mine at last!" he breathed, the light of a long-deferred joy in his eyes.

ALL FOOLS' DAY

By Hilda Richmond.

(Copyright, 1907, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Richard Foster Henderson has never decided whether the day, Satan, who is supposed to have the oversight of idle hands, fate or the overflowing missionary box in his sister's sitting room was responsible for the important events that were crowded in the brief afternoon of April first. Certain it is that time hung heavily on his hands, and he looked about for some occupation to beguile the weary hours. His brother-in-law was out of town and his sister off helping with a reception, to be gone till late, and the early hour precluded calling on Miss Kenneth, since he had spent the morning with that young lady and must in decency wait till at least 3 o'clock before going to her home, which was less than one square away.

"Come to your uncle, Bobs," he said, holding out his arms to his small nephew, but even this consolation was denied him.

"He must have his nap first, Mr. Henderson," said the nurse, making no move to relinquish her charge. "He'll be up about 3 and then you can play with him."

"I don't want him then," said the perverse Richard to himself, and then the brilliant thought struck him: "By the way, Mary, did Mrs. Carver tell you I was to keep the young man this afternoon till 4 and you could have an extra afternoon out? She asked me to remind you, for her head was full of that reception, and I almost forgot it. He's got on his nightgown, hasn't he? Give the young rascal to me, and I'll see that he takes his sleep. I'm sorry I didn't tell you sooner."

The smiling nurse had hardly left the house when Richard escorted his sleepy nephew to the missionary box and began clothing him in fearful and wonderful fashion. When the dressing was complete the little head drooped against the strong arm, and Richard heaved a sigh of relief as he wiped the perspiration from his brow. "Gee whiz! Imagine dressing half a dozen youngsters three or four times a day! If that job isn't worse than any football game I ever tackled I'll give up. Bobs, you're a dandy! Your own mother wouldn't know you in that rig."

He had no trouble in finding a big basket in the kitchen and in making a little bed with the aid of some more missionary garments. Then he deposited the sleeping baby in the improvised hamper and proceeded to array himself in an old raincoat of his brother-in-law's that hardly came below his knees, for Mr. Carver was a small man and his wife's brother a small giant. The cook was out, so he thanked his lucky stars and hurried as fast as possible. A slouch rubber hat and an old umbrella completed the costume, and the basket he carefully covered with an old cape belonging to the cook.

"I'd just like to be there when she jumps and screams," said Richard, chuckling to himself as he hurried through the soft rain with the basket carefully shielded in his hand. He deposited his basket softly inside the hall door and made his escape without being caught.

Quite by chance, of course, Miss Dorothy Kenneth was visiting her married sister at the same time Richard Henderson was spending a week in Newtown, and on this particular afternoon she, too, found time hanging heavily on her hands. She was to go to the reception at 4, and she wondered if she had told Richard, so he could call before that hour. She was dressed and trying to read a book, though she did little more than turn the pages till the door bell rang and she was summoned by the maid to the parlor.

"Is your sister at the reception?" he inquired, after taking in her costume at a swift glance. Evidently Bob was still sleeping, or some one had taken care of him during the past two hours.

"Yes; she went early to assist in the dining room. The house seems so still without her and the children." She must have been making fun of him, he thought, but he never moved a muscle as she continued: "Florence sent the babies over to their grandmamma's and gave the nurse her afternoon out. Maggie and I are keeping house all alone."

He was wondering if the baby had been hidden in the barn or given away. After a few moments more of conversation, in which the young lady took the lead, he said abruptly: "I'll own up the joke is on me. What did you do with the little scamp?"

"Joke? Scamp? What on earth do you mean, Mr. Henderson?" asked Dorothy, rising as if she meditated flight. "You have been acting very strangely all afternoon."

"I put Bob in a basket and brought him over here for a joke," blurted out the now alarmed young man. "It's All Fools' day and I'm one of them. I put him in your hall two hours ago and it's strange he hasn't cried."

"He never was in this house, for Maggie was cleaning on the hall most of the afternoon," said Dorothy positively. "I remember she didn't get through this morning and swept there right after Florence and the children went away. What on earth will your sister say?"

"You really are not joking?" And the cold chills ran over the delinquent uncle. "Where do you suppose he can be? Some one must have kidnaped him, for I could swear I put him in your hall. I certainly must have lost my few wits to think of such a brainless scheme."

"You've got to find him at once, Maggie! Maggie! Did you see anything of Bobbie Carver? Mr. Henderson brought him over here for a joke and put him in the hall about 1 o'clock, but I didn't see anything of him."

"Neither did I," said Maggie, looking with contempt at the pale joker. "Maybe he's only jokin' now."

"Richard! Is it possible you would excite me like this? Aren't you ashamed of yourself? I don't care if it is the first of April, you have no right to tell us a—"

"What's that?" asked Maggie, excitedly, as a young girl came out of the next house and got into a cab with a bundle that looked suspiciously like a baby. "Grace Richards is goin' away with some sort of a bundle. Mebby you got into the wrong house."

"The very thing!" screamed Dorothy. "The two houses are exactly alike and you might easily make that mistake, being a stranger in town. Hurry! Hurry! Don't let her get out of sight!"

Down the street in the pelting rain rushed the excited young man, and a short distance behind came Dorothy, scarcely less agitated. Richard was hatless, but he paid not a bit of attention to that fact as he splashed through the middle of the street, keeping the cab in sight. Just why Dorothy followed she could not have explained, but with dainty silk skirts clutched in both hands she flew over the wet walks, while Maggie and puffing Mary brought up the rear.

"You say this child was left upon your steps," the mayor was saying just as Richard flung himself up the steps of the office. "Will you kindly make a statement of the facts to the officer before you both leave?" He lifted the howling Robert in his motley garb and vainly tried to soothe him.

"That isn't Robbie!" cried Dorothy, bursting in at that instant. "Richard! Have you lost your senses? The idea of that beggar child being your nephew! You are wasting time!"

In his patched and faded garments poor little Robert certainly did look like a waif, but Richard undertook to expostulate with the mayor and the officers. "I did it for a joke!" he said over and over again. "Of course that's Bob being! Let me give him anything to eat or drink out of that dirty tin," for one of the bystanders was offering the baby milk out of the office drinking cup. "His mother is very particular about his diet."

"Young man!" said the chief of police, now thoroughly angry, "you can consider yourself under arrest! We will have no more such foolishness. Evidently you are a candidate for the jail or asylum, and you'll get a stiff sentence if you don't sit down and be still. Then turning to Miss Kenneth he said: "Where is Mrs. Carver? At a reception? I'll go after her and see about this being her child."

Miss Richards departed serenely to the reception and ten minutes later Mrs. Carver, on the verge of hysterics, was ushered in by the officer. Mary and Maggie had also reached the scene and were engaged in a hot dispute as to the identity of the wailing captive while the cause of all the trouble was forced to hold his peace.

"That my angel child!" said Mrs. Carver, tragically pointing to the dirty, red-faced howling youngster. "I am astonished that you should think of such a thing for a minute. Those clothes and that face!" It was growing dark in the dingy little office, and even a mother might well be mistaken in her offspring. Some well-meaning man had given Robert a stick of candy and he had played havoc with hands face and hair with the sticky sweet. "Richard, Dorothy, what does this mean?" and she turned to the young people in a manner that alarmed them more than the threats of the officers.

"I told him it wasn't Robert," wailed Dorothy, deserting Richard in his hour of need. "Maggie will 'll you so, too."

"I suppose you don't know me, Nell," said the prisoner coldly. "If you can't recognize your own son, I suppose hanging is too good for me, but there's no use inhaving the whole family act in a manner becoming to the day. Take Bob and go home. I'm under arrest for something I never did and am willing to pay the penalty."

"Are you all here yet?" asked Grace Richards, looking in on her way home from the reception. "Mr. Henderson, what do you think of playing jokes on little country girls by this time?"

"Miss Richards," said the victim imploringly, "if you'll convince these deluded women that that youngster is Bob Carver I'll give $50 to any charity you mention and confess on my knees that you are a thousand times more clever than I ever aspire to be. I didn't try to play a joke on you anyway so I think you owe me that little bit of help. I put Bob in the wrong house."

"Oh, that's it," said the smiling young lady. "Well, how about a nice box for the missionary society? I see Bobbie has rifled the one we were going to pack tomorrow, and the family out West needs clothing pretty bad."

"Who sent these beautiful new pack the missionary box next day. "They look almost too good to send to a famthings?" inquired the ladies who met to fly on the ragged edge of civilization. I think it looks like vulgar display to give away things like these," said several.

"There was no name to the package" said Grace Richards demurely. "It came yesterday late in the evening."

"Yesterday was All Fools' day, so that was an appropriate time," said the severe lady, who thought the oldest garments good enough to give away.

"Yes, and one of them sent the clothes," put in Richard Foster Henderson, on his way to call on Miss Kenneth and patch up the unpleasantness caused by their discussion of the kidnaping of Bobbie Carver the night before.

MINNESOTA UNIVERSITY

Annual Government Inspection of Cadets by Capt. Sheldon.

Consolidation of All the Musical Clubs and Interests.

Minneapolis, May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The annual government inspection of cadets took place on the university campus Tuesday. All regular class work was suspended for the day and from 8:30 till 4 o'clock Capt. Sheldon of the general staff from Washington carried on the inspection of the cadets. In spite of the rain and snow the drill passed of excellently, and a large crowd of students witnessed the maneuvers. Capt. Sheldon met all commissioned officers of the staff and line in full dress uniform at 8:30 to give his final instructions. At 9:30 the first call brought in line all cadets in the university numbering nearly 600 men, probably the largest body of cadets the captain will inspect. No excuse for absence, save a doctor's certificate, was accepted, and failure to answer "here" meant a semester failure for the unfortunate.

In the morning the regimental review inspection took place, followed by guard mount, crack squad drill and battery practice. The drill of the crack squad given in the armory received much applause from the spectators, Captains Sheldon and Sigerfoos showing their especial appreciation. The battery went through their practice with skill, and from the excellent showing that they made it is not probable that the war department will call in the field pieces which are at the university.

At a meeting of the officers after the drill, Capt. Sheldon congratulated them on the showing made by the corps.

At its meeting last Saturday afternoon the faculty passed a rule putting scholarship requirements in all student activities on a par with the requirements for eligibility in athletics. The rule which follows is to go into effect in September, 1908, so as not to be retroactive.

No student in the college of science, literature, and arts, with any "condition" or "failure" standing against him shall be eligible after his first year.

a. As a competitor in intercollegiate debate and oratory.

b. For membership in the dramatic club or in any student dramatic or musical organization which gives entertainments outside the university.

c. For membership on the editorial board of any student publication.

The rule was made to, as far as possible, prevent student enterprises interfering with students' work in their class.

The desired course in journalism is now an assured thing. The committee recommends a course in journalism of one hour a week through two semesters in the department of English, provided a capable man can be secured for the course. In connection with the proposed course the following regulation was recommended: "That the course in journalism shall be open only to students connected with students' publications and to others especially approved by the department of English, with such perrequisite courses and grades in rhetoric and English as the department of English may prescribe."

Another case of smallpox has been discovered among the students. This time it is a sophomore girl living at 515 Fifteenth avenue southeast, who has the disease in a well developed form. She has been sent to the pest house, where another roomer at the same house was sent a short time ago. Quarantine has been established, although students and others living in the house have been exposed. Another student in the same house has been sick a few days but the doctor has not yet pronounced his case to be smallpox.

Another college organization has come into existence. This time it is a consolidation of all the musical clubs and interests at the university, and will include the Glee and Mandolin clubs, the Euterpean club, the University orchestra and any others who have musical talent.

At the party given by the "Pinafore" cast at Glen Morris Inn on Wednesday evening, Miss Francis Chamberlain strongly urged the plan stating the needs for it and the benefits to be derived from such an organization. Prof. Carlyle Scott stated that he though the time was now ripe for a society of this kind and that he considered the university very rich in musical talent. Prof. Schlenker also urged the plan, saying that it would undoubtedly pave the way for a department, and later a school of music. The officers elected were. President, William Norton; vice president. Augustus Milner; secretary, Louise Leavenworth; treasurer, Lulu Crozier.

William Jennings Bryan talked informally to university students Friday in chapel. Mr. Bryan was in the city to address the Norwegians of the Twin Cities on the evening of Norway's Independence day, May 17. When President Northrop heard of his visit to Minneapolis, he promptly extended to him an invitation to address the student body. The audience crowded the chapel to the doors and the words of this great orator of America were greeted by enthusiastic applause at every stop. Mr. Bryan went from the university to Macalester, where he also addressed the students.

For a second time within a few years Dr. Cyrus Northrop has refused an increase of salary as president of the university, saying, "Others need the money more than I do." Other officers and members of the faculty of the university have been given raises of from 20 to 25 per cent, yet President Northrop steadfastly refused to allow himself to participate in the general increase.

A unanimous decision in favor of the Law Literary society was the result of the final inter-society debate, Saturday evening. By winning this debate the Law Lits secure possession of the Jacobs trophy cup, which, if won for three consecutive years, will become a permanent possession of the society.

The question debated was, "Resolved; That Congress Should Have Exclusive Power to Regulate All Transportation Companies Doing an Interstate Business, and That Hereafter No Such Companies Formed Shall be Created Under and Regulated by a Uniform Federal Law."

The affirmative was supported by the Law Literary team and the negative by the Minervas.

Minnesota suffered defeat Thursday afternoon at the hands of Nebraska by a score of 8 to 7. Everything looked rosy for Minnesota up to the ninth inning, when three hits and a base on balls gave Nebraska three runs and the game.

Minnesota was defeated by the Nebraska track team in an exciting contest last Saturday, scoring 44 points to Nebraska's 54. Up to the last two events, the contest was close and exciting, with Minnesota in the lead. Nebraska won the victory by capturing first and second in the two-mile run, and first in the broad jump.

In track events, both teams had excellent men and the events were evenly divided, Nebraska winning 29 points and Minnesota 27.

On their trip to Dakota, the Gopher men won easily, the two games they played. The first at Grand Forks, they played with the State University of North Dakota and won by a score of 17-2. Sixteen errors were made by the opposing team.

The second game was played with the Agricultural college at Fargo, and the Minnesota team made a new record for the season, being credited with an errorless game. The score was 11 to 0.

Tuesday, North Dakota again went down to defeat before the Gopher nine. A five-inning game was played on a slippery field, in a drizzling rain, with no spectators or rooters on the bleachers. However each side made only one error and the final score was 7 to 1, in favor of Minnesota.

Monday, Minnesota will meet Chicago in an intercollegiate tennis meet. Four matches of singles will be played and two of doubles. The meet will take place on Northrop field.

On May 24, Minnesota will travel to Madison to play Wisconsin, in a similar program of games. The next day after the Wisconsin meet the intercollegiate meet will be held at Chicago. Each competing university will be represented by two men for the singles and one team for the doubles. Minnesota's team is not yet selected, but probably the two highest in the tournament now being played, will form the team.

BABY'S UNCONSCIOUS CHARM.

New York Press: Members of the woman's club were talking about babies.

"I like them when they're pretty," said the president.

"I dont care especially whether they are pretty or not if only they're bright.", said the secretary who was a literary woman.

The club hostess smiled henignly. She was a spinster and was therefore without maternal prejudices.

"It's all in the care of them," she said. "I once had to take care of a baby for two weeks. It was without doubt the homeliest baby I had ever seen—if anyone may apply that adjective to a baby—and it looked as dumb as an owl in the daytime. It was thrust upon me against my will and I had the sole charge of it. At the end of the two weeks I thought it was the most beautiful thing on earth and the smartest child that had ever been born. When its mother came to take it away I felt deeply injured."

By DEXTER MARSHALL.

Oldest but one of the world's reigning monarchs, and the only one now living who has had personal experience of real warfare, a man who has suffered nearly every possible disappointment in life, and knows that his death may upset the delicate balance of Europe's peace, Francis Joseph of the House of Hapsburg, emperor of Austria Hungary, surely is entitled to a place among the world's most striking half dozen old men.

He lacks only three years of 80, and in the nature of things his course is nearly run. Oscar Bernadotte, the gentle king of Sweden, is a year older, but he isn't in the runing with the Hapsburg kaiser, who has people of more different nationalities for his subjects than any other monarch ruling wholly in Europe.

Napoleon had been dead only nine years, and the memory of the Corsican was still vivid, when Francis Joseph came into the world. He was not born to the Austrian throne, but had to take it in 1848 on the abdication of his uncle Ferdinand, who wasn't man enough to manage his dominions in that Revolutionary year.

Warlike work was cut out and ready to the hand of the imperial boy of 18, since armed insurrection was in progress both in his Hungarian and Italian provinces, this being years before the dream of United Italy came true. He took part himself in the Hungarian campaign, which was won with the help of the Russians in 1849. He hoped for continued peace after that, although he hardly could have expected it, and certainly was not to enjoy it.

In 1859 he had to fight the combined force of Italians, the French and the Hungarians, and was beaten in the great battles of Magenta and Solferino, losing Lombardy, now a part of Italy. Five years later he joined with Prussia and whipped little Denmark. Then, quarreling over the territorial spoils, Prussia and Austria got into a war between themselves.

Italy joined with Prussia in this war and Francis Joseph's forces were thrashed as soundly as the king of Denmark's had been. Shadowa was the decisive battle.

This was only a year after the conclusion of our own Civil war, and Austria was thrown out of the German federation. Until then the Austrian kaiser had been overbearing toward his subjects, especilly the Hungarians, but his thrashing taught him moderation and in the compromise reorganization of his empire, in 1867, Hungary was made a sort of partner, though not an equal one, with Austria.

Francis Joseph had had no wars since 1866 and during much of the forty-one years elapsing has been a strong factor in Europe's peace. Today he is beloved of all his subjects, whether they be Magyars, Czechs, Slavs, Germans, Italians, Greeks, Turks, or what not, but they all hate each other, and it will be a marvel if his death is not the singnal mixup of antagoniste races.

Francis Joseph's family troubles have been numerous. His mother was the Princess Sophia (daughter of Maximilian I of Bavuria); nevertheless he married Elizabeth, daughter of a later Bavarian Maxmilian. For generations the Hapsburgs have been marrying near relatives, which may account for certain things.

At all events, twelve years after he had settled his troubles with his neighbors and his Hungarian subjects, his son Rudolph, the crown prince, was found dead in the same room with the corpse of Marie Battazzi, daughter of a Greek banker, with whom he was in love.

Officially it was declared a case of double suicide, but at Meran, in the Tyrolean Alps, they tell another version. According to it the lovers were found together by the man Marie Battazzi was soon to marry. Wild with rage, he grasped a champagne bottle, and with one blow crushed the prince's skull, after which he battered out the girl's brains also. Then he fled to nearby Switzerland, where he is still living, secure as long as he stays there.

The bodies were found by a man in the imperial service, and he told the truth to Francis Joseph, who sealed the man's lips by presenting him with one or two old castles in the vicinity of Meran. In the tourist season the man lets rooms in them to Americans and others, who prefer to live in damp old castles rather than in modern hotels. Whether this story is the true one or not no one knows, but no one believes that the facts were as officially reported.

Francis Joseph and his empress were on bad terms during most of their life together. Like Francis Joseph's mother, she came of the Wittelsbach family, to which Bavaria's notorolous "mad king" Otto belonged, and her eccentricities were numerous. She was intensely jealous, and possibly with reason, since for many years the emperor was a great friend of Frau Katherine Schratt of the Vienna stage, whom he is said to have married morganatically not long after the death of the empress.

It came suddenly by the hand of an anarchist, in 1888, while she was making one of her famous trips from palace to palace in search of rest and forgetfulness. A strange story was published in 1899 that the emperor, wishing to be married again to a woman of his own classs, had asked for the hand of another Bavarian princess, granddaughter of Prince Luitpold, then reigning at Munich in mad Otto's palace. Her parents agreed, but the princess, who was in love with a Bavarian army officer, after burning his letters, attempted suicide, preferring death to the marriage.

It is said that the emperor then made advances to one or two other princesses, hoping that from the union thus formed a son might be born to take the place of Rudolf as crown prince, but none accepted him. Rudolph's widow, the Princess Stephanie of Belgium, gave her father-in-law a good deal of trouble. She first set her cap for Francis Ferdinand, his nephew—who was slated to take the throne when it became vacant—and afterward married the Count Lonyay of Hungary, and terribly scandalized her dissipated old father, Leopold, king of the Belgians, by her union with one below her own rank.

Stephanie and Lonyay separated some years ago, reasons were found why Francis Ferdinand could never reign, and although Francis Joseph's successor has been selected officially, no one outside a small imperial and official circle knows who he is.

Weird Old Count Tolstoy.

Count Leo Tolstoy, most powerful Russian writer, alive or dead, enemy alike of emperors and war, and prophet of protest against whatever is, is 79, two years older than the Hapsburg Kaiser.

Tolstoy has had his griefs, also, and, like Francis Joseph, he had a taste of read war in the first half of his life. Tolstoy was educated at the University of Kazan, joined the army soon after getting his degree, and did military service in the Caucasus before the Crimean war, but it was in that struggle that he learned to hate war.

The Crimean war began in 1853, when he was 25, and was concluded in 1856, when he was 28, ten years older than Francis Joseph on ascending the throne. Tolstoy was in several battles, and was present during the storming of Sebastopol. He behaved himself so well as a soldier that he was given command of a battery in 1855, and after the close of the war was sent as a special courtier to St. Petersburg. Then he got out of the army.

Five years later, in 1861, the serfs were liberated, when Tolstoy retired to his remote estates in the government of Tula, south of Moscow. There, when not traveling up and down studying men and women and conditions, he gradually wrought out the philosophy which he has now been giving to the world for forty-six years, and on a remnant of that estate he has written most of his powerful novels and essays. His "War and Peace" was not produced until 1865, nearly ten years after his own life as a soldier had closed; "Anna Karenina" not until 1875 and "The Kreutzer Sonata" not until 1890, but he began to write in the '50s, composing "Sebastopol" and "The Cossacks" while in the army.

At a year less than 80, Tolstoy is a great and unique figure, and no one denies his supreme genius, yet the world is by no means agreed as to whether he is a real prophet or a fantastic old crank. Born into a family of rank and wealth he showed "temperament" and self-consciousness very early. Before he was 10 he threw himself from a second story window merely to attract attention. He was unconscious for eighteen hours. His next exploit was clipping his own eyebrows, "thus disfiguring his face, which was never striking beautiful," according to his sister, "and causing himself a great deal of grief."

He began to have the itch for writing very early. At first he confided his thoughts to his diary, and, judging from an entry given in Paul Birlekoff's book, must have then been almost weirdly introspective. "I am ugly, awkward, uncleanly and uneducated; I am irritable, a bore to others, rude, intolerant as a child * * * and so lazy that for me idleness has become almost a necessary habit."

He formulated his great idea and wrote it down in his diary while encamped near Sebastopol. "This idea," he wrote, "is the foundation of a new religion, corresponding to the present state of mankind—the religion of Jesus, but purified from dogma and mysticism, a practical religion, not promising future bliss, but giving bliss upon earth."

It was trying to live the religion he thus laid down that Tolstoy put on the clothes of a peasant and did the work of a peasant, and his sincerity is generally accepted, although some of his critics can see nothing in his course more praiseworthy than in his leap from the window and the shaving of his own eyebrows.

Tolstoy married the handsome young Mlle. Sofya Bers at 34. Undoubtedly she saved him from financial ruin if not from mental wreck. She was a mere girl, a Moscow physician's daughter, when he met her. He was "a jaded man of the world," who thought there were no good women and had decided never to marry. His new religion had began to work and he had sold the larger part of his ancestral property preparatory to living a celebate's life.

He fell deeply in love with the young woman, however, although she says that at first all the family thought her elder sister was the attraction. Immediately after the marriage the couple removed to a hut standing on what remained of the Tolstoy estate, where they lived for seventeen years, and where their eleven children were born and the countess endured many privations and experienced great loneliness.

During all these years the Tolstoy finances were in a bad way, since, although his books were selling marvelously well, he would accept no royalties, declaring that he could not do so conscientiously. Finally the countess rebelled, insisted on collecting the royalties, gradually paid off the debts on the estate and bought a house in Moscow. There the family now lives a part of each year and there, in the latter part of her life, the Countess Tolstoy is able to enjoy in some measure the society from which she was shut out so long.

Whether in the country or in Moscow, Tolstoy is overrun with visitors. Many of them are sincerely in sympathy with his ideas and his work, but others are mere celebrity hunters and some call upon him simply to scoff. Often he refuses to see them, yet he receives a surprisingly large number, for some reason never turning away Americans if he can help it, although he sometimes abuses this country.

It is because of the conflicting tales of his visitors perhaps, that some one has said "the stories told about his life have almost assumed the proportions of a myth." Willingness to be photographed in his favorite peasant's dress and in all sorts of theatric attitudes, with or without his guests is one of his weaknesses. Despite the great fame brought to him by his novels, he is now said to look with extreme disfavor upon all works of fiction.

Minister, Novelist, Historian.

At 85, six years older than Tolstoy, and of an entirely different sort, Edward Everett Hale, chaplain of the United States senate, writer, editor and Unitarian minister, is as striking a figure in his way as Tolstoy in his or Francis Jospeh in his.

Unlike most of this country's brightest literary lights he was not a country boy his birthplace being Boston, which, in 1822, was perhaps the most citified city in the United States, although nothing of its type can now be found.

Hale's boyhood differed from the boyhood of the average well-born youngster, about as the Boston of that day differed from the Boston of 1907. He prepared for Harvard at the Boston Latin school, learned to set type how to "make up" a "form" and how to run a hand press in his father's printing office at 12, entered college at 14 and was graduated at 17. He was a regularly ordained minister at 22, which is about the average age of the college graduate of today, and his active career has now extended over sixty-five years, as he was an usher in the aLtin school for two years before he began to preach.

To say of this fine old man that he comes of good stock would be to gild fine gold. His father was Nathan Hale, of the same family as his namesake who was hanged as a spy. His mother was Sarah Preteon Everett, sister of Edward Everett and lexander Hill Everett, both statesmen and diplomatists of almost the first water in the first half of the last century. The boy knew the entire New England coterie of nineteenth century literary and philosophic lights, including Longfellow, Emerson, Alcott and all the rest, and he also knew nearly all the public men of two or three generations ago including Webster, and has told good stories about some of them in his remarkable book entitled "Memories of a Hundred Years" Besides, he has known nearly everybody worth knowing since their time.

He is extremely proud of the fact that his father, in addition to being the publisher of the Boston Daily Advertiser for nearly half a century, was the promoter of one of New England's first railroads and bought its first locomotive.

Dr. Hale's most famous book is "The Man Without a Country." His "Lend a Hand" clubs have done as much real good, perhaps, as all of Tolstoy's lurid writings He has been the minister of the South Congregational (Unitarian) church in Boston fifty-one years. He learned to write shorthand when a boy, and still writes it. He believes he could still do a fair day's work as a journeyman printer in an office that is not too up-to-date. He has two children who have made marks for themselves—Edward Everett Hale, Jr., a college professor, and Ellen Day Hale, a successful artist.

Salvation Army's Founder.

Two years under 80, which means that he is a year younger than Tolstoy, William Booth, "general" of the Salvation Army, is quite as striking a man as any of those mentioned and as well known to the world in spite of their respective literary and imperial pre-eminence He surely has as much initiative as any of them, and is second to no man living in originality of method.

Gen. Booth is a Nottingham man. At 21 he became a minister of the Methodist New Connection, an offshoot of the regular Methodist in Great Britain, as they were an offshoot from the Church of England. He decided that the densely people slums of London, where religion of any sort was almost unknown in 1850, needed him most and there he began his work.

His wife helped him with all possible enthusiasm. Both saw, however, that the right tack had not yet been taken. The Methodist New Connection methods were hardly more potent in reaching the people of the slums than those of the older church organizations.

It was Mrs. Booth who got the first inkling of the right course. She saw that it was no more use to ask people to go into her husband's chapel than into a splendid church of the established faith, with its magnificent music and its showy ceremonial. She saw that the only way to get the people at all was to go to them. So she proposed to make a noise on the street; this would draw a crowd about the noisemaker, who would then preach the gospel to the crowd. Booth saw the point, though not as yet completely, and the first meeting after the new plan was held on July 2, 1865. It was not strictly an open-air gathering, however, being sheltered by an old tent pitched in a Whitechapel burying ground, but the actual open-air meetings came later.

The idea of organization along military lines, of uniforms and drums and the name Salvation Army came still later, the name not being adopted till 1878, a baker's dozen of years after the first tent meeting under the name of the Christian Mission was held.

Commander Booth has traveled many thousands of miles since then, visiting the uttermost parts of the earth, in extending the scope of his remarkable religious organization. All his children have been practical aids of their father in the work.

In the twenty-nine years of the Army's life he has had to develop organization, perseverance, indifference to criticism and no little despotism. Of this last he showed so much a few years ago that Ballington Booth, then head of the Army in the United States, seceded when ordered elsewhere by his father, and formed a new gospel army of his own, the Volunteers of America. Yet under the general's command the Salvation Army is supreme in its field in this country today, and the opposition which it met here, as in England, in its youth, has practically all been overcome.

The most recent of Gen. Booth's half dozen visits to the United States took place early in this year. He is now on a trip around the world, the last, he says, that he shall ever make. Nobody save himself knows who will succeed him when death shall call him away.

Canada's "Grand Old Man."

At 84, Goldwin Smith, now and for thirty-six years a Canadian citizen with residence at Toronto, but before that a professor in an American university, and, until he was 45, a figure and a power in English public and literary life, is fully entitled to be listed among the world's most striking old men.

He has been remarkable for the force which he has exerted throughout a career extending over two full generations—he was graduated from Oxford university sixty-five years ago—and his championship of new world ideas and ideals, although surrounded by the most conservative influence in his youth. He was very progressive, however, before he left England, being termed a radical in Palmerston's days.

He was nearly 40 when the American Civil war broke out, and throughout that struggle was a strong champion of the Union cause. He came to this country in 1864 and was so impressed with its future and its possibilities that, four years later, he left England permanently to accept a professor's chair at the then newly founded Cornell university. To do this he sacrificed a most promising career in letters, politics and social life in Great Britain where he had reached a high place as an author, a university lecturer and a government official.

When he left Cornell he presented that institution with his own private library, a most valuable collection of books. He believes that Canada is destined to merge her political life with that of the United States eventually, and has written much in support of that notion. His published books, all on the most important questions, number about twoscore and he has been a voluminous magazinist.

He is an ardent champion of the higher criticism of the Scriptures and his letters on the subject are an important attraction to many readers of a certain New York newspaper. He did not marry till past 50. His home, the Grange, a picturesque vineclad old house, on the outskirts of the city, is one of Toronto's best known show places.

John Bigelow at 90.

Oldest man of the list, being 90, John Bigelow, who in his official biography is modestly described as an author, is now almost forgotten, although he was one of the world's most striking men for half a century and is still more active than some men of 60.

He was almost as precocious in his youth as Dr. Hale, but was not graduated from his alma mater, Union college, until 18. The law was his chosen profession, and that led him into politics, through which he became inspector of Sing Sing state prison in 1835, so long ago that the septuagenarian of today was not yet born. Then, when he was 32, he slid over into newspaper writing, becoming one of the New York Evening Post's editors under Bryant when its staff was made up of genuine intellectual giants. Bigelow remained on the paper until 1861, and during his stay Walt Whitman was one of its correspondents, Artemus Ward contributed, Bret Harte was a regular attache and the Sainte Beuve letters were published.

In 1861, when the consul generalship at Paris was considered of prime importance because of the Civil war, Bryant was suggested for the place. He couldn't go, and Bigelow was appointed instead.

He did great work in Paris, making himself a favorite at the court of Napoleon III in spite of its sympathy with the South, and he discovered and stopped the sale by the French government of four ironclads to the Confederates. It was Bigelow, who, while assisting in the search for information about Benjamin Franklin's life in Paris, found and rescued the manuscript of the sage's autobiography, which gives such a faithful picture of that philosopher and statesmen as never could have been written by any hands but his own.

On the death of the minister to France President Lincoln placed Bigelow at the head of the United States legation in Paris, and he served from 1864 to 1867. After his return to the United States he became active in politics, acting as chairman on Tilden's Erie canal commission. He was an intimate friend of Tilden's, lived near him on Gramercy square in New York—he still lives there, by the way—and was one of Tilden's executors.

Mr. Bigelow has written many books, he is still actively interested in affairs, though retired from business, and often appears in public. He is a tall, rather gaunt man, talks pleasingly and wears white ducks in the warm weather when at his country place up the Hudson.

Poultney Bigelow, who used to be Emperor William's friend, and who wrote up the Panama canal after a visit of thirty-eight hours, is John Bigelow's son. Another son, John Bigelow, Jr., is a West Point man, and served in the Spanish war, but retired from active military service in 1904, owing to a wound. He is now professor of French at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

DULUTH MAN HAS BEEN TRYING THE NEW CHEMICAL MIXTURE WHICH IS CLAIMED TO MAKE ASHES BURN

Gives Benefit of His Experiments to Herald Readers.

Says It Will Materially Reduce His Coal Bills.

A certain Duluth gentleman of an inventive turn of mind has been experimenting with the new mixture which is claimed to make ashes burn. He modestly desires his name withheld, but consented to an interview by a Herald reporter:

"Did it burn?"

"I should say it did. I put two quarts of the stuff in the range in the morning and it burned for nearly four hours."

"The new fuel, eh? How did you fix it?"

"Well, as you want to know I'll explain the whole works. I took about a handful of oxalic acid—bought four ounces at the drug store for 20 cents—mixed it with perhaps a half pound or more of ordinary salt in a gallon crock half full of water. Any kind of a dish will do to mix the stuff in, though. When it had thoroughly dissolved I poured about a quart of the mixture over half a coal scuttle of ashes—not sifted—which I had shaken up with a couple of quarts of pea coal. Any kind of coal will do, coal dust, hard coal or soft coal. When it had partially dried out, or when the ashes and coal had soaked in all of the mixture, I put a coal shovel of the stuff on a bed of hot coals in the range and it certainly did burn.

"There wasn't the least bit of smell, the flame could hardly be seen, and for a while there did not seem to be much heat. But after the mixture had started burning well it heated the stove up in great shape, well enough for a wash day, anyway, and the heat was well distributed all over the stove, just the same as it is when I burned clear coal.

"And that's all there is to it."

"Very simple, isn't it? This is the way one man who tried the so-called new fuel succeeded in proving that the 'new fuel' is really fuel. That it can be burned just as well, if not better, than can coal."

"This was but my first trial," he said. "The next was better. I was told to mix two ounces of the acid with one pound of salt in a gallon of water. Then to moisten a mixture of three parts ashes and one part coal with some of the fluid. These directions are not very definite, are they? Well I went about it my own way and the first attempt proved very successful. The new fuel is all O. K., as far as I am concerned, anyway.

"I have all of my winter's ashes in the cellar and I don't expect to have to buy any wood or coal for some months—till the ashes are used up anyway. Great stunt, isn't it. Then I suppose I will have to buy some more coal.

"I ran short of coal and had to try something or do something. Wood is high and coal was not to be had for the simple reason that the dealers had sold all of their stocks. I had read of the new fuel and laughed. I thought it was some kind of a space killing gag to beat from ashes. But, though it is absurd to the chemist, it is practicable enough to suit the householder—the poor man—whose fuel bill amounts to quite an item every winter.

"Just what the chemical action in the mixture is has puzzled many, but it is quite easily explained, according to one authority, who says that a sort of acetylene gas is formed and burns as it passes off from the mixture."

BARTENDER OF TODAY MUST HAVE A WIDE KNOWLEDGE IN ART OF MIXING DRINKS.

He Must Also be Something of a Doctor.

Some of the Strange Combinations Demanded of Him.

He Must Mix Them "Right Off the Reel."

"What's yours?"

Try to imagine if you can the number of times that this question is handed over the bar every day by the be-aproned individual who presides on the cash register side of the shining mahogany. Then try to imagine how many different answers the questioner gets, and you may glean some idea of the all-embracing knowledge which is required of a bartender in Duluth today.

The time was when the answer was limited to one or two of the staple drinks and the question was one merely of formality, but now it is different. The drinks ordered in Duluth saloons today are as varied as the patrons who ask for them, from the stolid, florid-faced man who asks for his beer, to the nervous, fidgety one who demands his two fingers of whisky.

Strength Not Needed.

The bartender of today is not a man who is hired because he is big enough to throw the obstreperous out of the place. To hold a position in a first-class buffet he must be chemist, physician, an excellent mixer in both senses of the word and withal a diplomat. There are today several hundred kinds of mixed drinks, and when one is ordered the bartender has no time to hunt for directions. He must mix it immediately, "off the reel," as the phrase is, and hence he must have the modus operandi of all these "smiles" at his fingers' ends.

Duluth bartenders are as capable as any in the country in this regard, and it is seldom that a customer can walk into a first-class saloon in Duluth and stump the attendant with an order.

Some Strange Drinks.

"What's yours?" says the bartender as a dozen men line up at the bar, and here is what they answer:

"A dry Martini," "A Santa Cruz sour," "A porter sangaree," "A brandy flip," "A golden fizz," and so on.

Would this set the average man thinking? It doesn't freeze the skillful bartender for a minute. Smilingly noting each of the orders he turns to the back of the bar and reaches for half a dozen bottles, then gets busy on the brass arrangement attached to the bar, known as the working table.

Half a Doctor.

The bartender of today is obliged to have a considerable knowledge of common ailments and their remedies. Many a man who is not feeling well but could not be persuaded to see a physician will step into a saloon and ask the bartender to "fix him up" something. Now, the "medicine" he should take varies with the nature of his ailment. Sometimes it is a whisky, at others a little brandy, or maybe his stomach is bad and a glass of Chartreuse is the thing. Many times a mixture of several liquids is beneficial, and it is up to the bartender to decide. Frequently he gets a request which at first might seem surprising.

An up-to-date young man, attired in evening clothes, walks into the place and speaks to the bartender in a low tone. Then the latter proceeds to serve him a drink. Onlookers sometimes think that the man is inquiring whether his credit is good, but this is not the case.

"I tell you, old scout," he is murmuring to the bartender, "I am going out to a banquet tonight. I will meet some of the boys, but I don't want to get 'puffed.' Can you give me something?"

Then the Samaritan behind the bar hands him the drink which will counteract the effects of liquor. There are several of these, one of the most well known being olive oil. This coats the lining of the stomach and rises to the top, preventing the fumes from going to the head. Many a man has saved himself a session of key-hole hunting by resorting to this expedient.

What They Drink.

"What do they drink?" said one of the bartenders at a Superior street hotel. "Well, I'll tell you I haven't been here very long, but my experience so far is that Duluth is a great town for straight whisky. I have handed 'em over in Chicago, Minneapolis, Milwaukee and several other towns, but I never worked anywhere where we got so many calls for straight whisky as we do here. Minneapolis and Chicago are great for the mixed drinks, but Duluth is at it here on the whisky. Milwaukee, of course, is beer. Duluth's cold climate probably has something to do with this.

"The Martini and the Manhattan cocktails are the most popular of the mixed drinks, with a slight margin in favor of the Martini. They only differ in that the Martini has a gin base, while the Manhattan has a whisky base.

"Straight high balls are also popular, but we make less of these than of cocktails. We make a specialty of what is called a Zenith high ball. To make this a small drink of whisky is added to half a glass of ginger ale and the glass is then filled up with apollinaris. That is one of the many, but we don't serve as many of all the rest combined as we do of straight whisky."

"Fizz," replied the ruler of a popular downtown buffet bar when asked what was most frequently called for in that place of refreshment. And he was not trying to make a noise like a soda fountain, either, but was simply designating the particular kind of drink which was a favorite there. It is a combination which is guarded with as great secrecy as the doings of the civil service department. No amount of urging would induce the thirst-cure artist to divulge the secrets of its composition, but it is said to be very popular.

"We fix up a lot of ordinary gin fizzes here, too," he added in an effort to be accommodating and consented to divulge the following formula for that popular thirst remedy:

"One-half tablespoonful of sugar, three or four dashes of lemon juice, one-half glass of shaved ice, one wine glass of Old Tom gin. This is stirred well with a spoon and poured into a fizz glass which is then filled up with seltzer water or vichy and drunk quickly.

"Yes," he continued after he had concluded his labors on a rotund individual who ordered a stein of beer, "Duluth is a warm town for straight whisky, too, there is no doubt about that."

At another bar the man with the white coat assured the reporter that the Martini cocktail was Duluth's most popular drink though he corroborated his borther mixers in their statements as to Duluth being a good town for straight whisky.

"A town can use up an awful lot of straight whisky without its being counted the favorite drink. Duluth certainly takes more of it straight than most towns, but then the mixed drinks are more popular. The gin rickey goes pretty well here. It consists of the juice of a lime in a wine glass full of gin, in which are one or two lumps of ice. This is filled with an effervescent water and served with a spoon."

"The high ball is, of course, fairly popular. To make a highball? Why a high-ball is just two or three lumps of clear ice, a wine glass full of Scotch whisky and the rest of the glass full of vichy."

Though there are dozens of brands of cocktails none of them approach in popularity the Manhattan and Martini varieties in Duluth. In fact, the bartenders assert, most people do not seem to know that there are any others. Some of the most common of the many other varieties are the absinthe, bottle of whisky, applejack, brandy bijou, champagne, gin, Irish, Japanese, Cincinnati, silver, star, vermouth oyster, Montana, olivette, soda, Saratoga, Jersey, royal fox, whisky, tuxedo, turf, coffee and Trilby. The coffee cocktail is in reality a misnomer, the name being applied because when properly made it looks like coffee.

Sours Not Popular.

Sours are not as popular in Duluth as in some other places according to the majority of the bartenders. A good whisky sour is made by taking one and one-half tablespoonful of sugar dissolved in a little seltzer or appolinaris water, and a wine glass of bourbon or rye whisky. The glass is filled with shaved ice, and the mixture after being well shaken is then strained into a claret glass.

There is no fixed rule for drinking. Each man has his favorite "nip," and the varieties of drinks are as numerous as the sands of the seashore.

The theory which is commonly believed implicitly, to the effect that a good bartender can tell from the looks of a man what he is going to order, is not held by Duluth bartenders.

Making a Mistake.

"Say, kid, there's ruttin' to dat," said one of them who presides over a mahogany on the Bowery. "Feller may come in here that's been on a bat for a week and order whisky. Same guy may stroll in next day and be squatting on de water wagon wid the whip and robe nailed down. Well, he won't touch the wealthy water; won't grab a thing but pop or some other pink tea suds.

"But, say! I did used to be so I could tell when a guy was goin' to ramble in and slop up a mug of lemonade. Don't know how I could tell it; guess I wised up from his looks he had a grudge against himself. S'sh! Keep your peepers on this guy comin' in now. Betcher a bace of iron men he orders whisky.

The next minute the man of wisdom was leaning weakly against the cash register mopping his troubled, reeking brow with the bar cloth. The supposed whisky drinker had come in to sell a War Cry.

PRACTICAL SOCIOLOGY

Eliminating Future Bad Man By Bringing City Waif Near to Nature's Heart---How An Asylum Trains Good Citizens.

New York, May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—"Eliminate the 'hundredth man' who represents the criminal and dependent elements of our population," says one prominent sociologist, "and prevent his place being filled by another, and the courts may take vacations three quarters of the year, the prison doors be thrown off the hinges, and asylums razed to the ground." The two facts that are pre-eminently to the fore in working out this hypothesis that are the "hundredth man" of tomorrow is the dependent and delinquent child of today and that city life is undeniably productive of an ever increasing number of juvenile potential criminals. The seriousness of this problem becomes more plainly apparent when it is realized that the tendency toward city life is an ever-increasing one in this country and that society must be destroyed when the average of criminality reaches 10 per cent. Fortunately for the future progress and safety of the nation, with its ineradicable penchant for city life, the remedy has already been found and worked out and now, according to experts in the reformation of delinquent children, need only be elaborated along the most progressive lines.

The remedy is simplicity itself, so apparent that the wonder is that it has only been tried within the last two or three years. Remove the delinquent child, the product of social conditions inherent in congregate life, from unnatural surroundings, says the sociologist, permit him to receive the kindly ministrations of nature in her strong-hold, the country, give him healthy occupation, both work and play, and the miracle is wrought—the street Arab or the budding criminal becomes a useful member of society, not infrequently a veritable son of the soil content to live his life in the open. This is theory, the practical working of the scheme may be seen in one or two places in this country, notably in the New York Juvenile asylum, the first corrective institution to abandon the old methods by which is was sought to shut out evil by a high fence and a locked gate and to correct by a "system" which included keepers, barracks, innumerable rules, and all the dreary routine of institutionalism.

The visitor at Dobb's Ferry, a little town well up the Hudson from New York, in the beautiful Palisade country, famous as the home of millionaires, where the Children's Village of the Asylum is located, fails to find a single trace of the sort of institution usually associated in the mind with the care of unfortunate children. As he breasts the long rise leading to the high plateau overlooking the Hudson, and views the well-separated cottages where the children live, the visitor is inclined to exclaim, "But where is the asylum?" It is in full view, spread out over nearly 300 acres of woodland, hill and dale without even the semblance of a fence to mark its limits and prevent the escape of the children. The listless, dependent boy, characteristic of the barrack and keeper institution, is nowhere in evidence. Everywhere about the village are sturdy, sun-browned lads going about various tasks or at play, alert and happy as nature intended them to be. If the visitor be from some great city, he is familiar with the type of street boy from whom these lads are recruited, and marvels at the change in them.

One of the most effective regenerative influences, one to which the boys take instinctively, is curiously enough the world-old occupation of farming, a thing as far apart as can well be imagined from their previous life in the city, and this enthusiasm for working close to the soil is significant of the potency of heredity. It might seem at first glance that novelty inspired their evident liking, but the unanimity with which these boys from the slums, born and bred midst the strife and stress of the city, take to nature in all her manifestations argues a deeper cause.

There is another reason why the delinquent should be taught farming. New York Juvenile asylum, the first corrective institution to abandon the old methods by which is was sought to shut out evil by a high fence and a when they have become mentally and physically normal, or, in other words, what they would have been if brought up in some village or upon the farm. In a Western city the juvenile asylum maintains an agency, which finds homes for the boys, and when placed upon some farm, or in some village, watches over them and reports progress. So far, the reports have been almost without exception satisfactory. Before the new system was inaugurated, this same practice was followed, and in all some 6,500 boys have been sent West with results which, though good, will undoubtedly be bettered by improved methods at the home plant, near New York.

Under growing conditions in our big cities, it seems essential to utilize every facility and advantage in combating effects of evil environment, and the percentage of failure must be cut down as an offset to the increasing percentage of initial delinquency. So the boys are taught farming as a means of salvation for soul and body. There are 360 of them now at the juvenile asylum, who do almost all the work upon a fifty-acre farm, which supplies the entire village with an amplitude of all kinds of vegetables as they come in season, stocks the bins and cellars with winter supplies, and provides fodder for all of the stock the year round.

The young farmers are under the tutelage of a graduate of an agricultural college and are taught all there is to know of this occupation, both theory and practice. Rotation of crops, conservatism of the soil and intensive culture are things which they understand thoroughly and which fit them to become useful and productive citizens when later removed to Western farms. The boys study farming at the village in groups for a part of each day from the time the frost is out of the ground until the little tasks are performed before the cold weather sets in again. Only a part of the time is devoted to farming, however, for, important as it is, there is much else to be accomplished in so rounding out the child's character and knowledge that he may be fitted to cope from all points with the battle of life awaiting him beyond the sheltering care of the asylum.

A part of the village system is very appropriately a village school, which in this instance is a large red brick building facing a broad athletic field. Here the children spend part of their day, which at this season of the year, begins at half past six, over books and a part is devoted to industrial training. This training is of the most practical sort and usually, as in the case of farming, instruction is combined with utility. Much tinware, for instance, is made by the boys and is used about the farm for milking and the like. Printing, shoemaking, carpentering and other useful trades are taught and a boy who shows aptitude for a particular vocation is given special instruction in the trade he elects to follow.

Individuality is emphasized all along the line and no chance is neglected to differentiate the boys by cultivating indications of initiative and character. In the village school at present is a child who displays marked talent with pen and pencil, and who is being encouraged to develop this trait. His drawings are to be seen about the walls of his class room and the particular cottage in which he lives, and exhibit great range varying from the drawing of a milk pail to a battleship in full action. The children become familiar with the economics of their village by actual experience, taking turns at being electricians in the central power house, cooks in the big kitchen, where all the food for the entire community is cooked, and engaging in other communal activities.

Mr. C. D. Hilles, superintendent of the juvenile asylum, believes in the boys, giving them every liberty and his confidence is seldom violated. The woods are free to the boys at all seasons and a boy is never at a loss for amusement among the trees, where much imaginary game abounds and not a few desperate Indians. Baseball, football, swimming, in a most delightful swimming hole, in short all the sports and pastimes dear to a boy's heart are indulged in by these children. Down in the big city, spring is softening the air and exciting boyhood to much activity, but the only outlet for ebullition there is worrying the push cart tender, the policeman, or indulging in some mischief instead of racing buoyantly over the open country and tiring oneself out as do the boys at Dobb's Ferry to the benefit of body and brain and morals.

In moving to the country the juvenile asylum made one sacrifice. It was compelled to reduce the number of children for whom it could care from 1,000 to 360, but in view of the vastly superior results obtained and the substantiation of the soundness of its theories, this is a minor consideration. Then, too, the plans provide for enough cottages to accommodate a thousand children and these will be built as additional funds are received.

NO WALL FLOWERS THERE.

Outing Magazine: The average New Yorker probably couldn't tell you the name of the congressman from his district. But it is different in the land of sagebrush. The great state of Nevada, for instance, has but one congressman; all Wyoming from the Big Horn down to Cheyenne, from Raw Hide Butte westward to the Vintas, is represented in the lower house by one lone man. Is it any wonder that folks want to be that man, that every young elbow who can think on his feet should invariably want to grow up to be a congressman as naturally as that a small boy in Boston or Philadelphia should want to grow up to be president? Folks know their congressman out there. When campaign time comes round in such a state as Wyoming, the candidate's task is something like that of a scout making a forced march through an uncharted country. The speech of tomorrow may be an all-night ride and more from that of today; sometimes he can catch a Pullman, more often he must trek 'cross country—in the saddle perhaps, or catching a few hours' uneasy slumber as the stage jolts along the trail.

In Wyoming every political gathering ends in a dance, and after the speech-making, the congressman-to-be must foot it into the small hours with the wives and daughters—for the women vote in Wyoming and dancing counts. It takes an up-and-doing man, lively and hard as nails, successfully to run for congress in such a neighborhood and the man who wins means something more to folks than just a name. They've seen him, fed him, brushed the alkali dust from his clothes, given him a bed, drunk with him, eaten with him, danced with him. And when he comes back from the far and mysterious East, they are interested and glad. They want to talk with him and hear what he has been doing, and from the big towns to the cross-roads in the sagebrush, they hang up bunting saying "Welcome to Our Frank," and greet him like a brother.

In Buffalo Bill's town the banquetees danced—there being no time for a banquet—in Cody, on the plateau above the Stinking Water. After dark a coach—a great band wagon affair that would hold a score or so—carried us across the canyon from the town. Into this the banquetees piled and away we went—down into the canyon, brakes on and horses at the gallop, in a way calculated to inspire admiration for the laconic individual who did the driving, up again on the other side, still galloping. The dance was in the dining room of the hotel which the Hon. Buffalo B. Cody built and named after his daughter and it was a very well worth while dance indeed. You would have a pretty hard time finding as many different sorts of people at a dance back East, all enjoying themselves together. The only ones about whose enthusiasm there seemed to be the slightest doubt were the lady waitresses of the hotel, and their natural hateur, together with pompadours piled to an almost Alpine height, combined to cloud expressions doubtless inwardly happy with a certain ambiguity.

There were folks from town and from ranches nearby, and the engineers had come down from their camps up the canyon; there was a beautiful and mysterious French lady who didn't dance and could only say a few words of English, and a nice, pink cheeked cub of an architect, just out of college and come to this green corner from New York to try growing up with the country, and the play actress lady who did ingenue parts with the So-and-So family, which was spending a week in Cody and had "never been East, but once," she said—the time they played in Denver.

Two gentle pioneers at the dance that night were seen following a lord and master—two sisters, farmers because they liked it. They had been "finished" in the East and had then gone to an agricultural college and learned all about farming, each now were conducting a ranch a dozen miles or so out of town, with, apparently, both success and satisfaction. Now and then they hitched up and drove to town—for the dances at the hotel and at election time. I asked one of them what had been put on the floor by the dance committee. She rubbed the toe of her boot over it thoughtfully and observed demurely that it might be cornmeal and it might be gold dust. Presently the music paused, the gentleman from Wyoming made a speech then the band-wagon coach appeared, again we galloped down into the canyon and out again and while the lights still blinked from the town across the gulch trailed away, down the Shoshone toward the Big Horn and Crow country.

LIVED ON SNOWBALLS.

Chicago News: Recently a group of traveling salesmen were sitting in the dingy office of a South Dakota hotel waiting for the bus to start for the train. One was reading a newspaper several days old, giving particular attention to the information as to the possibility of a railway trainmen's strike that was impending.

"They'll go out sure as shooting," he said at last.

"No they won't," said the quiet-looking ore-armed man in the corner where all the grips were huddled. "Some of the younger hotheads may quit, but these old boys won't go out. I know. I am a B. R. T. member myself, and I struck once. It was the time of that big strike in 1894. I struck in the summer and if it hadn't snowed that winter I'd 'a' starved to death."

HIS SCHEME FAILED.

Chicago Tribune: "I wonder why it is," remarked one of the two men who had just lunched, turning to speak to the other, "that they always have pretty cashiers at these restaurants."

But the pretty cashier, though she blushed and smiled, did not fail to detect the Canadian quarter he threw down in payment of his check.

WHATS WHAT IN THE SPORTING WORLD

By Naughton and Ye Sporting Scribe.

The League Season.

Even the Northern-Copper Country league, with its mid-May opening, couldn't get away from the weather man. First, the gentleman who hands out the winter blizzards stepped in and gave the big league magnates to understand that they couldn't play baseball while he was doing business. He next took up the minor leagues, one at a time, and either made them postpone their openings, or made the opening days mighty uncomfortable for the players, from a physical standpoint, and for the managers, speaking with the financial side of the question in view.

The "Grasshopper" league looks like a little bush affair on the face of things. Four towns strung out like a stretched rubber band on a circuit 800 miles long, will attempt to keep ball teams in the field for a period of four months, with jumps hitherto unheard of in Class C leagues. The salary limit isn't very great, but it is still a considerable item, and it will be far overshadowed by the traveling and hotel expenses of the teams on the road. But the magnates are optimistic, and are looking, not only to finish the season, but to come out on the big end of the horn financially.

And there is no reason why they shouldn't. Winnipeg, Duluth and Calumet have all shown that they can support baseball teams, winning or losing. Houghton wasn't a financial success last year, but it was the town's first venture into professional baseball for a long period of years. The men behind the team are the right sort, and they will do their best to revive the interest in the game. Houghton had some mighty good crowds last year, and if the teams play the right kind of ball there is no reason to believe that they will not meet with support in the central town of copperdom.

The Duluth team has been unfortunate in the exhibition games, in a certain measure, but the fans have confidence in "Smiley" Smith. They are ready to give him their hearty support, and he is willing to give them his best efforts to give Duluth a winning team. With that combination of good intentions, there is no reason why Duluth should not be a factor in the race, and the season of 1907 be a successful one in the Zenith City of the Lakes.

Be Kind to the Umpire.

"The umpire is a most unhappy man," sang Fred Mace in the musical comedy, and in the words he expressed the sentiments of all those who have watched professional baseball games and seen the indignities to which the arbitrator of the ball field is subjected. Players and spectators alike seem to take delight in torturing the man with the indicator and the spectators can do more harm than the players, for the umpire can reach the latter class through their pay-envelopes, but he can't get at the spectators in that way. They may throw eggs, lemons, decayed fruit, cushions and pop bottles at will and the best he can get is police protection from the grounds.

But it shouldn't be so. If the people who attend ball games would only remember that the umpire is a human being, not an infallible creature, they would probably be more considerate of his feelings and personal welfare. But they seem to think that the two bits they hand over at the gate entitles them to wield twenty-pound sledge hammers at the players and umpire and the umps gets the butt of it, if he happens to make a mistake, which goes against the home team.

The managers along the Northern-Copper Country league circuit have always tried to protect the umpires, but in some cases they have been unsuccessful. The umpires are never seriously injured, but they are accorded treatment, which they do not deserve at times. A crowd is naturally biased in favor of the home team, and if they see a shade of an advantage given the opposing team, they are bound to term the umpire a robber, a pirate, a highbinder and all the other choice terms that come to mind. If they would stop to think, they would see that he is doing his best and look upon his mistakes with a kindlier feeling.

Think Francis Is Fooling.

This is the way Otto Floto of the Denver Post pays his compliments to Frank Gotch, the well known wrestler:

"Did you ever notice where Frank Gotch is just pining to enter the prize ring? I only hope his desire will be realized and that he meets the peanut champions. I am willing to go on record and say that there is not one in the bunch, viz: O'Brien, Squires, Burns, and Schreck, who can't trim him with the greatest of ease.

"My, my, can't you picture Gotch in the ring with Schreck? What a scattering of half nelsons, head locks and strangle holds there would be in the roped circle for a few minutes. I know that Gotch has never seen that hurly-burly Michael in action or he would not designate him a peanut champion. And then there is Tommy Burns, who is a long way from being a parlor fighter, and who might make Gotch take to the tall and uncut himself.

Frank Gotch aspires to pugilism.

"It looks to me as if Gotch wants to enter the ring, take a good walloping and draw down a fat, juicy slice for his losing end. It will not hurt his reputation, for he can go back to the wrestling game again. We have never had a wrestler yet that tried the fighting game that ever proved a success at it.

"Take the famous engagement of Clarence Whistler with Jack Brady in San Francisco, and the manner in which Whistler, who was then the champion wrestler of the world, was knocked out in one round, ought to be a lesson to Gotch."

Michigan's Case Again.

Who is going to suffer by the withdrawal of Michigan from the Western conference of colleges, the conference, or the Wolverine university? The point hasn't been made quite clear yet, but it will be before another year has passed, providing Michigan sticks to its determination to cut loose from the West. On the face of things at present, the "big nine" is to be the sufferer. The appearance of Michigan's crack athletes at the interconference meet at Chicago in June would go a long way toward making that event more interesting to the athletic world. The other colleges may be able to furnish good men, but there is only one Garrels, one Heath, one set of millers like Coe, Maloney, Ramey and Rowe, and only one Keene Fitzpatrick to put such men on the track. The East is going to have those men to add interest to her meets, just because the "big nine" officials cannot see where reform ends and tomfolery begins.

Michigan isn't going to have any trouble arranging dates with the East. The Army and Navy are after games with the Wolverines, Pennsylvania will probably play the Maize and Blue again, and Dartmouth is something more than a possibility for Baird's schedule. In the meantime, the other Western colleges are preparing their little five-game schedules, with probably one big game to each and four, which will attract no more interest than games between a couple of third-rate colleges. With no opportunities to bring the rivalry between Michigan and the other members of the "big nine" into play, a good deal of the spice will be extracted from the football season in the West. It isn't too late for the "big nine" to square things yet. Of course, it wouldn't be right to allow Michigan to act the autocrat and secure everything she demands. That wouldn't be fair to the other colleges. But Michigan has always shown a spirit of fairness, and a compromise is possible. Those who have followed the undulations of the "big nine" sea think that there is some justice in Michigan's claims that the rules of the conference are too rigid at present, and the reformers have overstepped themselves, only to defeat the end they set out to gain.

Farewell Jack O'Brien.

That Burns-O'Brien fiasco at Los

The sad finish of O'Brien.

Angeles last week has given the pugilistic game a discolored optic, which will last for many a day. Of course, it will be forgotten in time, but the sports are slow to forgive anything with a shady tinge to it, and the fight promoters of the country will have to bend every effort for a long time to put the game back on a solid footing. Had the fight in Los Angeles been all that was predicted for it. Burns' fight with Bosher Bill Squires at Colma, Decoration day, would have drawn one of the largest crowds in the history of the game. But now the fighters will be lucky if they pull pin money out of the scrap, providing they fight for a percentage of the receipts.

The pugilistic world is through with Jack O'Brien. The exposures made by Tommy Burns and Tom McCarey has shown the Philadelphia gentleman up in his true light, and he wouldn't draw a corporal's guard in a fight today, were he to induce Jim Jeffries to enter the ring with him. It will be back to the real estate office for him, as the world knows him now for what he is, a piker and a parsite, one who doesn't care for good sport as long as he can get the money, if not by fair means, then otherwise.

The butt of the blame is placed on O'Brien, of course, but Burns and McCarey are not altogether blameless, and their part in the affair has put vigorous dents in a good many high opinions of them, which were held among the sporting men of the country. Tommy says that if he didn't consent to lay down to O'Brien he never would be able to get the Philadelphian in the ring. He might better have stayed out of the ring altogether than to get O'Brien in the squared arena and double-cross him. McCarey says he couldn't go back after making so many arrangements, so all he could do was to call the bets off and let the men go ahead. He may have been acting right, but he would have been doing the more sportsmanlike act had he informed the world of the state of affairs just as soon as he was apprised of it. It would have been money in his pocket in the end. The sporting world can at least thank McCarey and Burns for calling off the bets, while O'Brien is in thorough disgrace, and the only thanks he has coming are for his weakness in falling into a trap, which would show him up in his true colors, and thus rid the pugilistic stage of a viper.

Jack Johnson Ignored.

Poor Mistah Johnsing. The man who has a better claim to the title of heavyweight champion of the world, perhaps, than any other man, Jim Jeffries not excepted, has arrived in San Francisco after chasing Bill Squires half way around the earth. Jack is hot on the trail of the Antipodean, and he is back in America to force the man from Kangarooland into a scrap. But it isn't likely Jack will be successful. Squires is too busy getting ready to take on Tommy Burns, Decoration day, with the hope of getting a chance at Jeffries, should he dispose of the Canadian to pay any attention to the son of Ham, who is loudly calling on him to "come outside and try it."

Jack Johnson's color is the only obstacle which lies between him and recognition as the champion heavyweight of the world. As it isn't likely he can overcome that obstacle, he will never gain that recognition, but will continue to put away third and fourth-raters in order to keep on top of the earth. Johnson has had a hard row to hoe. He has been after heavyweight champions for these many years, but has been unable to hook up. At times he had his men cornered, but they always exhibited elusiveness enough to glide out from under his ebony paw, and it was up to him to take up the chase anew. He went to Australia for the purpose of meeting Squires, but Bill took a ship just as soon as Jack landed, and the colored man was forced to earn his passage by licking dubs. Now he wants a chance at Squires, but the Australian has drawn the color line. It appears that the only chance for Johnson to get at Squires is for Tommy Burns to lick the visitor. Then Bill might be willing to hook up with the negro, but the men wouldn't get enough out of the fight to keep them in talcum powder for a week. If Squires can't lick Burns it would be highway murder to let Johnson get at him. And if he does put the Canuck away, Johnson may as well look for other matches, for Squires will force Jeffries to come out of his retirement, and Johnson will not be able to peek through the key-hole at a match.

Who Will Get Talbot?

The sporting world of the east is concerned over the question of what college is to get Lee Talbot, the young Mercersburg academy giant, who recently startled the world by hurling the twelve-pound hammer 190 feet. This is a remarkable performance for a school boy and there is no doubt but that under a university trainer the youth will develop into a marvel with the weights. Now the colleges of the East are offering him every inducement, which can be shown on the surface, to have him enter and the one which does secure him, will be the object of the envy of the others.

Such is the fate of the high school star. He has every college, which hears of him, on his trail, and the one which secures him is bound to be forced to deny charges of unfair methods made by others. Talbot's mental ability isn't considered in bidding for his services on the athletic field. His physical prowess is the only thing considered.

In this case, however, the boy evidently has a mind of his own, for he says he will enter Cornell to take a course in forestry. He realizes that throwing the hammer will never bring him a living, unless he uses the strength thus acquired, to wield a pick and shovel, and the Ithaca institution will draw a star athlete because of the fact.

Can You Beat It?

Four bases on balls, five stolen bases, not a runner forced in, and but one run scored!

Can you figure that out?

It is not a manufactured puzzle, but actually occurred on the Polo grounds in New York a few days ago, and the play was made by the Giants.

The play looks impossible, as four bases on balls seemingly would have forced in a runner, and the stolen bases would have made it more.

When the players were shown the figures they could not believe it until the enigma was explained. It happened thus:

Shannon out on a grounder. Strang walked, but Devlin, who was next, flied to third. Strang stole second, and on a bad throw went to third. Seymour walked, and on a double steal Strang scored and Seymour took second. Bresnahan walked, and he and Seymour again worked a double steal, making five stolen bases. McGann walked, making the fourth base on balls, and that is how they were left when Dahlen struck out.

Every play was perfect, the base stealing was wonderful, and still but one run scored.

Can you beat it?

Just to show the fans that the results of the exhibition games were all wrong, the White Sox started the Northern-Copper Country season yesterday by leading the Houghton Giants out to Athletic park and slaughtering them by a score of 9 to 3. The fans who gathered for the game saw baseball from the word go, at least on the Duluth side of the fence. Every white legged boy was in the game all the time and condiments enough were displayed to keep a French restaurant going for a year. With the exception of the third inning, when the Sox bunched a couple of bum plays and Myers clouted the ball to the left field fence, the Giants didn't have a look in. The Sox fielded faster, hit better, ran bases with more vim, best of all, displayed better team work and brain action.

Smiley Smith has his men drilled in the game as it should be played, if one may judge by their performance of yesterday. They didn't throw away any chances. They ran bases with daring, but not recklessness and took the full measure of advantage afforded them by every play. Individual work wasn't the bill, the team played together and therein lies success in baseball.

Krick in Good Form.

Smith sent Josie Krick to the firing line and the smiling boy was all to the good. Three different times he pitched himself into a hole by passing the first man up and he had difficulty in finding the plate all the way through the game, but he was steady with men on bases. Myers was the only man who did any damage, for his two bagger came after two men had been given sacks by errors in the third, but, after that inning, but one man got around to third. And Josie got a hit for two bags, scoring a man. That, in itself, is not to be looked upon lightly, for Krick has never been noted as a slugger.

A young gentleman named Kaiser, who expectorates quite freely on the ball, started flinging them over for the men from the red metal country. He began well, but six men facing him in the first two innings, but in the third, the Sox began to dump them at him and he went all to pices. In the sixth, again, he showed poor headwork in handling bunts. The Sox got to him five times, but two of the five bingles were for two sacks and the third was a triple, every one of them counting in the run getting. In the seventh, after all the damage had been done, Miller took the hill and, after Leighty had taken a healthy swat off him, the Sox let up and but six more men stood at the plate in the remaining two innings.

The Giants started the festivities right smartly in the first inning, Bitting hitting safely. He went down on Sundheim's sacrifice, and Solbraa went out to McCormick. Krick passed Meyers and Gilmore fanned. Summers, Tracey and Goldsmith didn't get the ball out to the outfield, and were easy outs. Krick started the second by giving Taylor a ticket, but he didn't get any farther than second. Again McCormack, Leighty and Smith went down in order.

Fireworks in Third.

Big fireworks in the third. Jimmy Fagan touched the match which began the pyrotechnic display, falling down on Bitting's grounder. Sundheim dumped one, and Fagin went after it. He fumbled, but recovered and threw to Summers, who was covering first. Summers muffed the throw, and Sunny was safe, with Bitting on second. Solbraa fouled to Fagin, and the fans began to breathe again, but Meyers took the breath all out of them by clouting one to the right field fence. It would have been good for but two sacks, but Roy fumbled the ball, Meyers taking third and both men scoring. The next two men were out, and Houghton's scoring was over.

Temporary success was too much for Kaiser. On the third strike he threw wild, with Fagin at the bat, and Jimmy took first in a canter. Roy rolled one at Kaiser, who threw to first, but Taylor let it get away from him. Krick bunted and Kaiser fumbled, filling the bases. Summers was all there. He popped one up and it landed safely behind second. Fagin scoring. Kaiser was so far up he couldn't see the plate, and he walked Tracey, forcing Roy in. Goldsmith rapped one through the pitcher's box, and Krick and Summers scored. McCormack sent Tracey and Goldsmith ahead a base with a sacrifice, and Leighty fanned. Smith went out from Kaiser to Solbraa, and ended the fun for that period.

Egan, Gibson and Kaiser couldn't do anything in the fourth, and the Sox took up the thread again, Fagin landed on first on Solbraa's error, but was caught napping by Gibson, Roy ambled to the first sack on four wide ones, and then Josie Krick sprung his big card. He inadvertently clouted one on the nose, and it landed safely between left and center, good for two sacks, Roy scoring. Krick died on third, the next two men going out.

Bitting walked in the fifth and was nailed trying to steal second. Sundheim's ribs connected with one, and he met the same fate as Bitting. Solbraa was out on a fly. The Sox decided to give Kaiser a respite in the fifth, and went out, one, two, three.

Meyers fanned to start the sixth, and Gilmore singled. Taylor hit one near second, and Leighty knocked it down. He couldn't handle it, but chucked it within Summers' reach. The second baseman picked it up, touched the bag and pegged to Tracey to complete a double.

Kaiser's Finish.

The sixth saw Mr. Kaiser's finish. He started well by fanning Smith, but couldn't find the bag for Fagin. Chief Roy picked out a board near the pikers' granstand, in left field, and fell a few feet short of planting the sphere against it. He stopped at the second station and Fagin at third. Mr. Kaiser then gave a little exhibition of dumb ball. Krick poked one at him, and he stood and held the ball while Josie took first. With Sox resting on each pillow, Summers dumped one at Kaiser, and while he and Gibson were kow-towing over the ball, Fagin scored. Tracey hit a long fly to Meyers, and Roy scored, Krick and Summers moving up. Goldsmith assumed the heavy villain role, and nearly broke Kaiser's heart. He leaned his massive form against a nice one, and by the time it was back into the game he was on third, and the other two men had been chased across the plate. McCormack went out on a fly, and the Sox quit rolling them up.

Nothing doing on either side in the seventh, but the Giants made things interesting for a few minutes in the eighth. Bitting drew a pass and Sundheim hit for two sacks, Bitting taking third. Solbraa's fumble was between the ball and the bat on a fast one and he insisted on taking first and filling the sacks. With all stations occupied and nobody out, the Giants were in a fair way to better their score. But they didn't. Meyers fanned, Gilmore went out to Roy, and Smith nailed a hard foul from Taylor's bat. One-two-three for the Sox in their last whirl at Miller.

The Giants essayed a feeble rally in the ninth, Krick letting up a little to encourage them. Egan bingled and the next two men went out on flies. Bitting hit safely and took second while McCormack was fumbling the ball. Sundheim wasn't there and popped to Krick. It was all over.

Same performers today, with the big parade and other frills. Tomorrow again and Monday and Tuesday likewise.

CALUMET WON SECOND GAME

Maroons Defeated Yesterday by Mullane's Aristocrats.

Winnipeg, Man., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Frank Mullane's dandies were better mud-hens than the Maroons yesterday and won 3 to 2. The field was in wretched condition, a snowfall the night before having made it wet and slippery. The weather overhead was none too comfortable and but a few shivering fans turned out to see the game. They saw a good game at that, for, despite the unfavorable weather conditions, both teams played good ball.

Both Schroder and Glencke pitched well, but the Aristocrats had the better of the argument, he being almost unhittable in pinches. The Calumet men bunched in three innings for as many scores and won, the deciding score coming in the eighth.

Fitwells Want Games.

The Fitwell Clothing company has organized a ball club and is anxious to hear from clubs within 300 miles of Duluth. Manager Jacobs of the Fitwell Clothing company is an old Louisville ball player and calls all the association players by their first name.

AMONG THE AMATEURS

Games Scheduled for Sunday on the Corner Lots.

Commercial Teams of City May Form a League.

Today the Kelley Hardware company's baseball team will go to Hibbing, where tomorrow, they will meet Judge Brady's Colts in the first game between the semi-professional teams at the Head of the Lakes. Sam Menefee's boys haven't had as much practice as the range team, but they think they will be able to make a good showing and, perhaps, come away with a victory. Ernie Larson, who pitched good ball against the White Sox last week, and has been showing good form since the snow first went away this year, will fling them over for the Kelley boys and he will probably be opposed by Freeman, Brady's mainstay in the pitching department. Tommy Robinson will receive Larson's slants and the remainder of the Kelley team will probably be made up about as it was in the game with the White Sox.

The Columbia Clothing company team is the latest addition to the ranks of Duluth commercial nines. Bert Dingham is manager and Charles Foster captain. The team will line up about as follows: Catchers, Winstein and Sorby; pitchers, Cook, Ott, Duffy and McCluskey; first base, Bert Dingham; second base, Charles Foster; third base, Fenton; shortstop, Harold Foster; outfielders, O'Donnell, Bennett and one of the pitchers. The team will be open for games with the other commercial teams of the city.

Monday evening at the Northern Hardware company's store, a meeting of the managers of the commercial teams of the city will be held for the purpose of talking over the formation of a league, with a schedule of games for the entire season. The proposed membership of the league consists of the Columbia's, Fitwells, Big Duluths and Universal Millers, or it may be increased to six teams, should that number express a desire to get into line.

The plumbers of the city have organized a team and are ready to meet any similar organization in Duluth or Superior, the ciragmakers preferred. The pipe handlers will line up as follows: K. Campbell, catcher; M. Walsh, pitcher; W. Jones, second base; H. Bouttier, third base; D. Stewart, shortstop; Otto Sturms, Center field; F. Sturms, right field; A. McGilles, pitcher; J. Harney, left field. W. McEachern will manage the team and those desiring games should communicate with him.

Tomorrow afternoon, the barbers of Duluth will cross to Superior and endeavor to put a crimp in the hair of certain Superiorites, whose occupation in life is attending to the tonsorial needs of the Badgers who live across the bay. Balls, bats and gloves will be used in the crimping operation and the Duluthians are hoping that they will not be the victims. The barbers say they can play some ball and they invite all victims of their art to get out and watch them tear into each other.

If the weather is fine, tomorrow will see all of the cornerlotters in action. Thus far, the Sundays have been by no means fine for baseball, but if the weather of the past few days continues through tomorrow, the futurgreats will have a grand chance to get into action and they will take full advantage of it.

READY FOR FIELD MEET

Saturday June 1 Is Date Set for Big Event.

Saturday, June 1, is the day that the boys of the school are looking forward to, and a committee will wait on the weather man and request him to do his prettiest for the occasion. The grounds for the big interscholastic field meet have been secured and there is a great deal of speculation going on as to what school will carry off the banner. Last year it was between the Jefferson and the Lincoln. This year all the schools seem to be evenly matched, and the contest promises to be evenly fought.

It is expected that there will be a larger number of contestants this year than in any previous year. The captains of the school teams will have their men out this week and next and a lot of good hard practice will be held. The silk badges to be given the winners of first and second place will prove a strong inducement for individual work. The gold medal to be given the all round champion, and the silver one donated by the Kelley Hardware company, as a special prize to the winner of second place, have arrived, and will be on exhibition along with the badges in the window of the Kelley Hardware company all next week. Another meeting of the committee will be held at the boys' department next Friday. At this meeting each school will hand in its entry list, and the men who will officiate will be chosen. Every member of the committee is requested to be present.

Day after day The Herald want columns show a procession of opportunities—opportunities to buy, to sell, to lease, to hire, to find people to work for you, to find people to work for, to find boarders, lodgers, tenants, or partners. These want ad. opportunities touch almost all phases of life and living in this city.

THE FIRST GAME OF THE SEASON

FIRST BATTER UP IN THE OPENING GAME YESTERDAY.

NAVY AND COLUMBIA

Big Rowing Event for Midshipmen This Afternoon.

Record-Breaking Crowd Will Witness the Race.

Annapolis, Md., May 18.—Today promises to be the gala rowing day of the season at the naval academy. The Columbia 'varsity eight, with whom the midshipmen will contest, are the only opponents of the season here that they will meet in the big American Henley at Poughkeepsie, in June. They will also furnish the last race of the season for the navy first eight, which has been unfortunate this season in having several of its races cancelled.

The day dawned with every promise of ideal conditions for the afternoon's event, which is scheduled to go two miles, and which will be started at 2 o'clock, if the weather does not change and compel a postponement. The indications are that the crowd which fills the the craft lining the course will be a record-breaker. The navy baseball team is off to meet the army cadets at West Point, this afternoon, and the only other event which will draw a crowd will be the Swathmore-Navy track and field match. The bigger part of the crowd of sport-lovers will take in the race, which will be rowed over the inner course. The crews will row in the following order:

Midshipmen: Bow—Davis, 2—Bagg, 3—Pritchard, 4—White, 5—Leighton, 6—Rockwell, 7—McKee, stroke—Ingram (captain), coxswain—Roberts.

Columbia: Bow—Sneviley, 2—Jordan, 3—Spaulding, 4—J. McKenzie, 5—Von Salza, 6—G. McKenzie, 7—Boyle (captain), stroke—Cerussi, coxswain—Winslow.

Average weight:—Navy, 174 pounds; Columbia, 190 pounds.

PIGEON CLUB IS ORGANIZED

Owners of Pigeons Will Hold Races This Year.

The latest addition to the clubs of Duluth is the Duluth Racing Pigeon club, which was organized this week. The club has, already, a membership of ten and the prospects are that as many more will apply before the time set for the first race. The officers of the club are Emil Chapin, president; John De Yonck, vice president, and E. C. Junker, secretary-treasurer.

The first sanctioned race is set for May 30, although a preliminary fly will take place on Sunday from Silver Spring, a distance of thirty-five miles. From information on hand at the present time the number of pigeons competing in this race will total over 300 and inasmuch as the birds are the pick from the lofts of the East and West end, the finishes will be very close.

The majority of the members are Belgians and they are accustomed in the races which are held weekly in the provinces and towns of Belgium. While it is not expected that this club will ever fly the number of pigeons that are flown in Belgium, where entire train-loads are entered in competition, it is, nevertheless, certain that the rivalry will be as keen and the winner in any event will have seconds, only, to spare.

Applications for membership should be mailed to the secretary at 120 Seventh avenue east.

M'CLELLAN IS WILLING.

Wrestler Says He Will Meet George Milton on Mat.

Clarence McClellan, the young wrestler, who has asked for a match with George Milton and who was the object of a challenge by Milton last evening, called on the sporting editor this morning and said he is willing to go on with the match at any time. He will put up any reasonable side bet Milton may desire and he says he thinks he can dispose of the little fellow. McClellan weighs about 126 pounds and Milton his. The men are expected to get together some time today to arrange the match, which will probably be pulled off some time in the course of two weeks.

RIB WAS FRACTURED.

Beaulieu Met With Accident in Wrestling Match.

The heavyweight wrestling match at the Metropolitan opera house last night between W. H. Beaulieu and Emil Peterson had an unsatisfactory ending. Beaulieu's rib being fractured during the second bout. Peterson secured the first fall in five minutes and the second bout had gone about four minutes, when Beaulieu was thrown heavily to the floor, the injury resulting. In the first bout Peterson showed superior form and he looked like a winner, had the match gone to a decision.

Monday, May 20,
Tuesday, May 21.

Everybody come and help to make the Duluth club a success. Week day games at 3:30. Sunday games at 3:00.

BOYS WILL HAVE AN AUTO RIDE

Y. M. C. A. Members Are Planning an Attractive Outing.

The season for the summer outings in the boys' department will open next Friday, May 24, and will take the form of an automobile ride. A number of Duluth automobile owners have been asked to loan their machines for the evening, and already a large number of replies have been received expressing the willingness of the owners to take a group of boys out for the evening. The plan is to leave the boys' building Friday evening at 7:30 and return to the building, where the party will be entertained to refreshments. This is the first outing of the kind that the Duluth boys have had, and they are looking forward to it with a great deal of expectation. The next trip will be an excursion to Mountain Iron to visit the largest open mine in the world. This trip will take place June 8.

The older boys' Sunday meeting will be held at the central department instead of the boys' department. The meeting will be held at 3:15. All older boys are cordially invited.

The Knights of Sir Gallahad will meet at 3 o'clock at the boys' department.

ALL GAMES POSTPONED

Wet Weather Interfered With Interscholastic Baseball.

The wet weather during the week caused all the interscholastic baseball games to be postponed, with the exception of one which was pulled off yesterday between the Washingtons and Lincolns and resulted in a victory for the Washingtons by a score of 7 to 4. Both teams put up a good game of ball, and a large number of spectators witnessed the game. Frank Downing was the umpire. This puts the Lincolns, Jeffersons and Washingtons in the same class. The games played today are: 10 a. m., Emerson vs. Jackson, Jackson field, William Eklund, umpire; 1:30, St. Thomas vs. Jackson, St. Thomas field, Asher Taylor, umpire; 2:30, Emerson vs. Endion, Endion field, Lyman Taylor, umpire; 3 p. m., Lester Park vs. Washington, Lester Park field, Harvard Rockwell, umpire.

Monday's games are as follows: Emerson vs. Washington, Washington field; Lincoln vs. Endion, Endion field, and Lester Park vs. St. Thomas, Lester Park field.

The Madison school team on account of the fire that destroyed their school have disbanded for the season. They had four more games to play. These will be forfeited to the teams they were to play.

CULLED FROM THE SCORE BOOK.

Nice start, eh!

Notice the way those boys are in the game all the time.

Five errors, but only two of them counted for anything.

Guess those boys didn't connect when hits meant something.

Only one hit of the six wasted. That's bingling in pinches.

If the gentlemen who tote hammers about will please keep them concealed while the Sox are playing this kind of ball, they may keep it up.

Pretty small crowd for the opening game, but today and tomorrow may help some. Ball playing like that yesterday is worthy of support.

McCormack didn't connect safely, but the fans aren't worrying. They know the boy and he will strike his stride before many moons.

Individually the Giants field well, but need team play. Taylor seems to be rather shy on sluggers, also, judging by yesterday's work with the club.

Smiley Smith was all there behind the bat. He pulled down some hard fouls and the Giants also tested his ship twice, with disastrous results.

Taylor is depending on Kaiser to be his mainstay, once he recovers from his wildness and nervousness in handling bunts. He has some mean curves.

Krick's luck and the men behind him saved some scoring in the eighth. With Giants on all sacks and nobody out, the situation was decidedly interesting for a time.

Fred Goldsmith was the big noise with the stick. His single in the second scored two and in the sixth his triple totaled another brace of runs.

Roy looks good for the right field berth. He isn't slow at fielding and he handles himself well at the bat. He's the only substitute catcher on the field, and, with the cares of manager on his mind, Smith will need frequent relief.

Nolan wasn't working just right, but he had only one strenuous kick from Kid Taylor to deal with. He evidently knows the game and should make a good umpire.

Nolan had to enforce the new rule relative to players discoloring the ball. He called the Giants for rolling the new sphere around on the diamond before turning it over to the pitcher.

The plowing of the ground has evidently helped some. The infield will be fast after it settles. The pitcher's box was pretty soft yesterday, but otherwise the grounds were good.

Tracey dropped a foul in the eighth and drew an error. It looked as though the big fellow did it intentionally, though, as the bases were full, and the man might have scored from third had he held the ball.

With Bitting, Sundheim, Solbraa, Myers, Kaiser, Neuwauer and Miller in the lineup, the Giants ought to make a hit with the Germans along the circuit.

PURSUED BY A CURSE.

Brooklyn Clerk an English Nobleman Victim of Misfortune.

Brooklyn Eagle: That the curse of the monks on the occupants of the famous old abbeys of England, which were wrested from them when the reformation gave England a new faith, has pursued the descendants of the house of Montagu down to the present day, is the belief of Edward McKereth Browne, who lives at 15 Carroll street, and who has been driven to the expediency of working like a "commoner" in an effort to provide for his family. Lineal descendant of the house of Montagu, Mr. Browne became heir to a portion of a vast estate which had been granted by King George to his great grandfather; but he is heir also, it seems, to the curse which the monks pronounced on those who "desecrated" by occupancy the abbeys which the monks considered consecrated to their use forever.

Among these abbeys was Cawdray Castle, in Cawdray Park, which was erected in the days of William the Conqueror and devoted to the uses of a monastery by the friars. The friars were discredited because of the onslaughts of the movement known as the reformation. When Henry VIII reigned came the climax of the agitation and the friars were thrown out of Cowdray Castle and out of the other abbeys. Cowdray Castle was given to Sir Anthony Browne, the favorite retainer of Henry VIII, of whom Mr. Browne, of Carroll street, is a lineal descendant.

Sir Anthony Browne, according to the best informed historians, celebrated the acquisition of Cowdray Castle with a feast to which all the nobility of England were invited. In the midst of the feast there appeared a monk in somber garb, who pronounced a baneful curse on the new occupants of the converted abbey "and all their descendants forever."

And the misfortunes that have been handed down to Edward McKereth Browne, if they are not a fulfillment of the curse of the monk, at least form a strange series of coincidences. From Sir Anthony down to Edward McKereth, every descendant of the Brownes has been visited with some form of misfortune; not the slight, petty misfortune that is forgotten in a twelvemonth, but their fortunes have suffered irreparable damage. So the present Mr. Browne was brought from his high estate to the level of a common worker. The vast estates which he inherited from his grandfather, and so on, back to the days of the American revolution, were wiped out not many years ago. The estates consisted of vast plantations on the island of St. Vincent, in the British West Indies. It was the eruption of the giant volcano, La Souffriere, which has lain dormant for a century, that wiped out his fortune in a single night and compelled him to start again, as his ancestors had been forced to do before him.

Handicapped in a way by the traditions of a country where caste is not recognized, Mr. Browne had not made very much progress in the new beginning, although he has been seeking to rehabilitate his family fortune by doing such work as New York may have to offer for a good, capable, steady and reliable man. This descendant of the house of Montagu, notwithstanding his many accomplishments, works harder than most men do in New York, and until he can find something better must be content with the salary of an ordinary clerk. He is better educated than the majority of lawyers in this town and seems to be equipped for good work in a responsible position.

His friends, of whom there are few in this country, say of him that there is a niche which he could fill with results beneficent to himself and others, but that "niche" has not yet been found, but that "niche" has not yet been found. Meanwhile Mr. Browne continues at his daily task with a smile for all his associates. A man of less finer strain and less noble blood would long ago have given way to despondency, but the nephew of the Eleventh Viscount Montagu is an optimist of the most pronounced type and laughingly declares that "one of these days" his search for "the opportunity" will be rewarded.

In outward appearance, too, Mr. Browne impresses those who know him as one through whose veins flows the blue blood of aristocracy. Refined in appearance and in his ways he has affected a democratic manner that makes him pleasant company. He betrays no trace of the trouble that he seems to have inherited although more of it has come to his lot than most individuals are able to bear.

It was in September, 1904, that Mr. Browne came to New York to lay the foundations of a new family fortune. That the task has proven unusually hard has only served to convince him all the more that he is under the baneful influence of the curse that was pronounced on the head of his old time ancestor.

Born in England, Browne went to the West Indies in his infancy. In 1856 he came into possession of a portion of the estate which King George had given as a grant to his great grandfather, Col. Thomas Browne, who achieved wonders in behalf of the king in the American war of the Revolution.

Six thousand acres was the extent of grant to the colonel in 1868. The colonel was murdered with treacherous brutality, the motive being, it was supposed, revenge for some of the blows he had dealt in his military capacity. He settled in America in 1774, and some of the orders and messages which were written to him by Harry Lee, Grierson, Sir Henry Clinton, and other officers who figure in history, are now in the possession of his descendant, Edward McKereth Browne. The misfortune that befell the colonel in his life, however, was the death of the man who held the evidence by which he was about to establish his claim as sole heir to the estate and title of Jonas Browne, a magistrate of Hull. Jonas Browne was next of kin to George Samuel Browne, the eighth Viscount Montagu, who was drowned in the falls of Shaffhausen, Rhine, in 1793.

When Jonas, the magistrate, died, Col. Thomas Browne procured the necessary evidence to establish his claim as next of kin but the counsel who had the papers was the only victim of the fire that destroyed the Drury Lane theater in London. He had the papers on his person and they were burned. Prior to George Samuel, all the heirs of Sir Anthony, the first possessor of Cowdray Castle after the monks were banished, were visited with misfortune, supposed to have resulted from the curse of the monks.

Thomas Browne, when colonel of the Florida Rangers, was possessed of large tracts, acquired as a settlement, and several thousand acres of timber land granted to him by signed deed of the Cherokee chiefs, who called him their "Little Father." All this he lost because of his loyalty to King George. His houses, barns and negro dwellings were all destroyed by fire. The King, however, was not ungrateful, and gave him one-third of the island of St. Vincent in the British West Indies. On this renewed prosperity the supposed curse of the monks also frowned, and the volcano La Souffriere let loose in 1812 and laid his estates in ruins.

Edward McKereth Browne, as a great grandson of the colonel, fell heir in succession to part of these fine estates. They had been rehabilitated and were growing to profitable advantage cocoa, arrowroot and coffee. On May 7, 1902, the curse of the monks was again forcibly brought to the mind of a succeeding Montagu when La Souffriere let loose again, after almost a century of quiet, and once more the family fortune was wiped out. Leaving his wife, four daughters and two sons in St. Vincent, Browne came to New York. He settled himself in rather humble lodgings in Brooklyn and braved the bridge crush, laying aside his aristocratic nature in the effort to wrest again the shekels from the lap of Dame Fortune. A son, Edward, is earning a livelihood as a machinist in Canada, and the other son, John, is trying to fight his own way to success in Trinidad. Mrs. Browne and the four daughters are in St. Vincent, living as best they can from the meager incomes which the few houses spared to the family yield.

One of these days, when Mr. Browne has found the "niche," he will bring his wife and daughters to New York.

"I am endeavoring to obtain for my family a home in your generous country," said Mr. Browne to an Eagle reporter. "Here, citizenized, my identity with the aristocracy dissolved by a democratic environment, I may escape or divert the anger of the monks of yore."

HEROES OF EVERYDAY.

Ordinary Men Who Rise Quickly and Effectively to Emergency.

The germ of heroism lies at the heart of every man's nature. Scratch the ordinary citizen and you find a hero, says John Coleman in the Worker's Magazine. This truth is the more remarkable because the power to perform heroic deeds, upon occasion, by no means presupposes or even implies an elevated mental or moral status, the endowment of marked courage. The man who will forswear his best friends for the sake of money or ambition will lay down his life for a stranger under sway of the heroic impulse; the woman who screams at a mouse will risk not only life but love and beauty to serve her rival when the same voice calls to her. Some of the bravest deeds ever done or chronicled have surprised nobody more than the doers, who, "lifted out of themselves," have become heroes in the twinkling of an eye.

Leaving to psychologists and scientists the much-discussed question of whether the sublimated self, unsuspected but latent tendencies, or a power quite outside the personality wields the unseen wand that at the wonderful moment makes of the ordinary man or woman something fine and noble and worth reverence, it is worth noting that the heroic impulse is swayed by no recognizable laws of education, social standing or altruism. The giving of the Carnegie, Weaver and other medals and rewards for heroic deeds calls renewed attention to the fact that the transforming hero impulse glorifies alike all sorts and conditions of humanity's children. Young and old, rich and poor, vigorous and feeble, the learned and the uncultured, all receive honor in the lists of those admittedly heroic. The too often unrewarded, unrecorded heroes who go down to self-sacrificing death in the course of ordinary life and duty are drawn from equally varied ranks.

For specific examples, consider first the case of Louis Lieber, the New York chauffeur, who recently weighed his own life in the balance with the life chances of the two young women rushing toward him round a dangerous curve and pressed down their side of the scales. Not a man of good judgment, it may be deemed, perhaps not of much common sense, since he was taking a narrow cliff road at the rate of a mile a minute when fate confronted him with the "their life or mine?" problem. But a man of superb courage, beyond doubt.

It need but a second for Lieber to decide that death is better than life under some circumstances. Steering his car straight at the face of the hill, knowing that the cruel rocks held no single chance of safety, he made a dramatic exit.

"Are the ladies safe?" were the only words he lived to utter. Let Lieber previously had been considered quite an ordinary individual, by no means cast in heroic mold.

Such heroic deeds as this, moreover, are so numerous, so common as to attract but brief public attention. Forbes Robertson, the English actor, recently contributed to a volume entitled "The Bravest Deed I Ever Saw" his admiring account of the courageous act of an American fireman who rescued a woman from the third story window of a burning New York building under conditions of great personal danger. But scarcely a winter passes without some hero of the hook and ladder wagon coolly, almost unnoticed, facing a similar task.

Admiral Dewey in the same collection of true stories admits his inability to distinguish the superlative nobility of two of the many heroic deeds he personally has witnessed. One of them occurred in 1863, when Dewey was a midshipman on Farragut's temporary flagship, the Monongahela, then besieging Port Hudson on the Mississippi river. A round shot from one of the heavy batteries cut the mainmast in two and fell on deck. No one knew whether or not it was a shell, since the old-time fuses were then used; there was immediate danger that it might burst and scatter gory destruction.

A brief, shocked pause and a member of the crew, strolling easily to the grim object, picked it up, threw it overboard, and returned quietly to his place. Such an incident, it may be remarked in passing, occurred at least twice during the Crimean war.

There are those who contend that deeds of sudden courage are performed on the spur of the moment, from pure impulse and therefore should be described as thoughtless rather than heroic. However this may be, the theory is invalid when applied to those examples of heroism that demand patience, continued suffering, a long wait or trial. Yet these are by no means uncommon. Every now and then, indeed, are told thrilling tales of some brave soul's slow struggle with danger or death.

A number of such instances came to light in connection with the severe storms that not long since swept over the United States, causing water disasters from Maine to California. Ed Jacobson, sailor on the barge Foster that went ashore during a fierce gale above the Portage Lake ship canal near Buffalo, saved six lives through quietly offering his own.

The surf ran high, the shore seemed distant. Slowly the boat pounded on toward the grim death that seemed relentlessly awaiting. No help was apparent, no salvation, no way of escape. Then Foster, taking the free end of a line in his teeth, dropped into the seething water, breasted it, now vainly, now with determined progress that seemed terrible like no less to the struggling swimmer than to the anxious eyes peering after him, fought, conquered, reaching the land at last.

The line grimly retained during that terrific combat with wind and waves served as a means of communication with the wrecked vessel. Later the six remaining members of the crew rode safely ashore on a breeches buoy.

A lock tube of the Pennsylvania railroad tunnel, fifty feet below the surface of the earth, near the East avenue shaft in Long Island City, but a short time ago provided scene and background for the life sacrifice of three heroes who died in the effort to save their fellow workers.

These three men, George Chapman, J. Peers, and Michael Daly, were at breakfast when the compressed air in the telephone booth caused an explosion and sudden burst of flame. Fortunately, the hour being early, most of the working gang were taking the morning meal beyond reach of danger. The air pressure being about twenty pounds, several men were left in the tube as a matter of safety. These were the men who, to avert appalling disaster, ran back to put out the fire and were themselves shut out by a wall of smoke and flame. Four other heroes, among them Chapman's brother, George, tried to rescue the innocent victims, but were overcome by smoke.

Heroic deeds and examples might be multiplied indefinitely, feminine names no less than masculine appearing in great number. But where is the use of heaping proof upon conviction? Let it suffice, when pessimists decry humanity and its altruistic possibilities and capabilities, to remember how widespread and variform is the heroic impulse that leads men and women to sacrifice self for fellows, how frequent how diversified its expression, how impressive the view of humanity thus attained.

INFORMATION BUREAU.

New York Press: Learn one new thing every day and remember it. That is the secret of knowledge. If you learn too many things at a time your mental stomach cannot digest or assimilate them all, and you suffer from mental clog. The cerebral wheels are gummed up. The machinery refuses to work to advantage. The average man's entire vocabulary is about 3,000 words. The uneducated manage to get along in life with about 300. Some of the cleverest men of the day struggle along with 5,000. Philologists may have mastership of 10,000. The dictionaries give from 200,000 to 500,000 words. But most men are too lazy to consult their dictionaries; they prefer to write to the editor. The press in general is the information bureau of the world.

CRIPPLE CREEK DISTRICT

New and Unparalleled Era of Production as Result of Second Drainage Tunnel---Stratton-Independence Leases Showing Good Returns.

Cripple Creek, Colo., May 18.—That a new and unparalleled era of production is now at hand for the Cripple Creek district as a result of the completion of the second drainage tunnel is generally conceded. The benefits will by no means be limited to the particular mines drained by the tunnel, in which the immense flow of water at depth was rendering the cost of mining excessive. Depth of operations now possible for the whole district is practically unlimited, and enormously increased production is certain to result. Renewed activity is already apparent throughout the district, and especially among the operators on Bull hill. The strike reported there a few days since yielded values as high as $270 to the ton in gold from one five-inch seam, while the main ore body is over two feet wide between the side walls and carries values of from $40 to $116 to the ton.

The Stratton Independence, Ltd., on Battle mountain, has a force of some twenty sets of lessees working through the big property. During the month just ended, these lessees consigned approximately 2,000 tons to the smelter at Colorado City.

Wilson and his associates, leasing on the fourth level, better known as the "Jewel Casket," are producing the richest ore being sent out. Five or six months ago these lessees caught up in a big cave-in and passing through, encountered a big, flat vein from which big assays were obtained. The ore now being sent out from this lease is reputed to give returns from $80 to $150 in gold to the ton.

It is expected most any time that the directors in London will take some action toward the building of a large cyanide mill to treat the tremendous quantities of dump rock as well as the low-grade ore in practically endless quantities which is to be found in the mine. Experiments are being made constantly, plans submitted and other data secured, and when the plans are finally decided upon it will mean that the company will erect one of the most up-to-date cyanide mills in the world, with a capacity ranging from 300 to 750 tons daily, with spare room left in the buildings to increase the capacity if desired.

The ballers are now at work unwatering the shaft on the Colin of the Granite company. The pumps were allowed to be lost on the 1,200-foot level a number of months ago, and water has come up to nearly the 900-foot level. It is expected that within ten days that the pumps will be working, when the Portland and Strong mines will feel the effect. All three companies, it is understood, are defraying the expense of pumping. As soon as feasible, both the Strong and the Portland will begin sinking their main working shafts at least 200 feet deeper. In both of these properties new ore bodies have recently been discovered, which makes it advisable to sink and get under them.

Collins & Mores, leasing on the old Bonanza producer, the Anchoria-Leland, Cripple Creek, are following a well-defined vein three feet wide for a junction with a cross vein. The vein now gives values ranging from $20 to $60 per ton. The strike was made in the 200-foot level. Big values are expected at the contact.

The Battle Mountain Ajax, Cripple Creek, mines is producing 1,200 tons of $30 ore monthly. The company is operating on three levels below the 200-foot, all above this being operated by lessees.

Immense bodies of low grade ores at Empire, Col., have been reserved for years for a process adapted to them. Recently experiments have been made with the electro-cyanide process. This system includes continuous agitation of pulp, which can be ground to any degree of fineness without danger of packing in the tank. The agitator accomplishes in a few hours what formerly required days. This process, it is believed, will solve the problem. A test of heavy iron sulphide worth $8.70 a ton from the Empire tunnel's Gold Dirt mine resulted in saving 85 per cent after six hours agitation. On $40 ore the saving was 95 per cent. The company's mill at the mouth of the old Aorta tunnel will be removed to a site where the ore can be dumped into it direct. A dynamo will be installed at the water wheel on Clear creek for power for mines and mill. Hundreds of thousands of tons can be treated if the process proves satisfactory. Besides, mining throughout the district will be greatly quickened.

In Ouray, Colo., district the Neosha Mining, Milling and Reduction company is driving a development tunnel into Mount Hayden to cut the Neosha and Daniel Boutgen veins. The Neosha vein is a large, lead-zinc vein and the other a lead-silver, which has yielded in upper workings $40,000 worth of ore.

New York and other capitalists are planning to restart the old Elgin smelter just north of Leadville, Colo. This is due to the increased production of sulphide ores in the Leadville district.

The Paymaster lease to Coggswell Bros., Upper Clear creek district, is in an eighteen to twenty-four-inch vein carrying on a test mill run of five tons, $80 a ton. At present three tons of ore are outputted daily. This will be largely increased when shipping facilities are better.

The Vidler tunnel mill, with a capacity of seventy-five tons daily, is running on full time on ores from the tunnel. About 400 tons of concentrates await shipment.

Breckenridge, Colo., May 18.—A daily output of three carloads is being maintained from the main tunnel of the Wellington mines, and the Oro drift is being extended rapidly to the eastward with a view of blocking out the ore bodies. A raise from the Oro has broken into Wellington workings, exposing an ore body for 50 feet vertically. A new shoot has also been struck in the eastern section of the Wellington, which will be blocked out and reserved for future exploitation. When first encountered this vein was two feet wide and is still widening out, showing heavy values in lead and zinc, with probably sufficient silver and iron to pay the cost of mining.

duction works for treatment. They are to treat by different methods so the mangement can order such a mill as will give best results. At the depth of over 400 feet the veins are large and the ore good.

Idaho City, Idaho, May 18.—Quartz mining is assuming an importance hitherto unknown in the Boise basin, and there is a general impression here that while the placers will continue immensely profitable for years to come the bulk of this section's output will came from the quartz ledges, the source of the placer gold. A practical demonstration of this opinion is being furnished by the Big Giant mines near this place, which have been working steadily for two years. One of the veins that has been cross-cut is over eighty feet in width, and already over 600,000 tons of ore are blocked out. On Jupiter mountains the McKinley and Great Divide properties are making excellent progress in the way of proving up the quartz mining possibilities at depth. The assays obtained on these properties show splendid values; and large results are looked for from the new tunnel bore that is now to be run into the mountain to penetrate the mineralized ledges.

AT THE LAKE COPPER MINES

daily. The railroad is in a position to handle shipments easily. The drift from the Medora to the Empire tract is going forward rapidly, although sinking on the first Empire shaft has been delayed by the late spring. A second shaft will be started late this summer on the Empire.

At the present time the Mohawk is turning out refined copper on an average of nearly 16½ pounds to the ton, as compared with an average return of refined copper per ton of rock stamped last year of 15.12 pounds. The mineral yield per ton of rock thus far this year has been better than the average for the twelve months of 1906, in that period the mineral averaged 29.57 pounds to the ton. In January of the current year the mineral yield averaged better than 22.40 pounds, dropping somewhat in February, but rising again in the month just ended to 21.59 pounds. After several months of delays the various parts of the machinery necessary for compounding the heads of the Mohawk stamp mill are on the ground, and within ten days or two weeks the management expects to have a third head compounded and with its completion the fourth head will also be altered. While these changes are being made, three heads of the company's mill will be in constant operation.

C. R. Corning, who has just been elected to the directorate of the Michigan Copper Mining company, is one of the largest stockholders on the company's books. He is a resident of New York and is a prominent mining engineer and is acquainted with the Lake Superior region through personal trips there. His election to the board has no special significance. As regards conductivity the copper produced by the Michigan company is understood to be the best at the Lake not excepting that of Calumet & Hecla. A recent test showed conductivity qualities of 103 per cent. Michigan should this year operate under materially lower costs as it will have the benefit of its own stamp mill which will treat the rock at a lower figure than is possible even under the advantageous conditions which the company has with the Atlantic mill. Furthermore, the C. shaft, where the company is at present devoting its greatest attention, is expected to make a good showing. Drifting to the east has opened some promising ground.

An erroneous impression seems to prevail as to the current rate of production of the Quincy, which is being commonly placed at above 20,000,000 pounds or refined copper per annum.

These figures are misleading and probably arrived at by an over-estimate of the percentage of refined copper in the company's mineral. The proportion of the low-grade mineral recovery is larger than that of any of the Lake producers, Franklin excepted, a fact indicated by the average smelting returns of 1906 of about 60 per cent.

The present Quincy rate of production is a trifle over 18,500,000 pounds per annum, and any increase above these figures would necessitate an enlargement of the working force. This output is being secured at a gross cost not to exceed 11½ cents per pound, so that on a 25-cent metal market there are indicated net earnings equal to about $25.25 per share per annum. It is not amiss to state that the Quincy has sold considerable copper this year at 25 cents.

The Quincy advantages are to be found in its exceedingly complete mining, mill and smelting plants, together with an experienced, conservative and honest management. This combination has achieved wonderful results in the treatment of low grade rock, most of which is being hoisted from a depth of close to a mile, for it must be remembered that the costs per pound include those for the extension of new pumping, which aggregate approximately five miles per annum. The present dividend rate will undoubtedly be maintained while copper rules at 25 cents or better.

the Paradise mining district in the Chiricahua mountains good reports of that mineral country are obtained.

At the Savage the long trestle from the tramline to the smelter is nearly complete; the well, after having been deepened, has developed water sufficient for all purposes of the camp; the wagon scale is being placed in position, and as soon as the hauling of fuel from Rodeo is finished, the smelter plant, now in readiness, will be started. The company is pushing its work, especially in the shafts.

Work has been going on steadily at the Savage for three and a half years, and very soon the owners of the property will have the bullion evidence of the value of their mine. Mr. Lewandowski, who is a mining engineer of ability, has been constantly watching the work at the Savage, and deserves credit for bringing the property from a virgin prospect to a mine of value, now nearing the dividend-paying basis.

The option taken on the property of Taylor and Cardroot in Wood canyon by Eastern parties has created quite a stir in the mountains. Good showing by the work done has been so attractive to the new holders of the option that they have no doubt but what the deal will go through successfully.

Morrow and Chamberlain are doing good work on their group near Paradise. The ores shipped to Douglas and El Paso smelters have netted good returns to the owners. The ore is of good grade and the showing tends to prove that in time another good mine will be developed.

The Virtue company is said to have reached good ore with their crosscut tunnel. The value is not known yet. This company adjoins the Savage at the southern end.

J. A. Lewandowski's Rabbit group near Dunn springs, keeps on showing well, revealing real earmarks of an unusually good property. The surface showing is more than good, and the size of veins, coupled with high values, will undoubtedly develop this prospect into a good mine.

The week just closed has demonstrated that the mining companies of the Warren district are experiencing no difficulty in gradually filling the places of those men who responded to the strike order of the Western Federation committee on April 9. More than a month has elapsed since the issuance of that order, and with an absence of street meetings, with only two or three pickets still on duty, with the mines and smelters operating as usual, the so-called strike is at an end. Miners at a distance are rapidly learning the truth about the Bisbee situation, and the past week has shown another large gain in the working force. At the Calumet & Arizona and Superior & Pittsburg properties a splendid gain in the number of employes was made during the past week, and at the cole shaft of the L. S. & P. a heavy increase in production was made over that reported for the week previous.

The smelters at Douglas, both the Copper Queen and Calumet & Arizona, are running full capacity on ore shipped from the mines at Bisbee, and the necessity for drawing on the reserve ore pile has passed.

At the junction work is being pushed steadily forward on the station which is being cut at the 1,200 level. It is expected that this task will be finished within the next two weeks. Another relay of pumps will be installed on the 1,000 to throw water to the main battery. The southern stope on the 900 level is showing up exceptionally well, two cars of ore being shipped each day to the smelters at Douglas from this one stope.

At the Briggs sinking of the shaft was resumed during the present week, and will be prosecuted steadily.

At the Oliver shaft of the Calumet & Arizona company the new Nordberg hoist and electric pump have been installed, and are working very satisfactorily. The pump is installed on the 1,200 level, and was especially designed for the company by the Nordberg Hoist company. It has a capacity of 600 gallons per minute, lifting the water to the surface.

At the Cole shaft the production was slightly increased during the past week, but outside of this one feature there was no chance in the ordinary run of events.

product of development work on the new shaft.

The company values the shipment at $30,000, averaging $75 to the ton, and after treatment at the sampler will sell it to the smelter making the best offer. While it is not the intention of the company to crowd shipments, the mine will be a regular shipper from now on. Work will be held up for a short time while the new hoist, which will be driven by compressed air, is being installed. Immediately after, sinking on the main shaft will be continued, and development work around the mine begun. Eventually men will be put to work in the "jewelry shop" stopes of the old Hayes & Monroe and Francis Mohawk tunnel, where there is still an abundance of ore.

The Morton-Beesley lease on the Combination Fraction ground is now shipping on what is considered one of the richest streaks of "pay dirt" yet unearthed in Goldfield. Approximately the earnings of the lease for the next forty days, which will be close to $20,000 a day. Over 100 tons, averaging fully $400 to the ton, are being broken and loaded on railroad cars every twenty-four hours.

The strike on the property of the Atlanta Mining company is bearing out the hopes of the management. Thomas H. Condon is president of the Atlanta Leasing company, which works secured the first showing on the Atlanta.

The Pollard lease on the Florence is also making big money. It is now working three shifts a day in the same mineralized formation in which the stuff was struck in the Little Florence, and may be handling "picture ore" within a few days. Drifts are being run both ways at the 300-foot level, and water trouble is an unknown quantity.

Water is the bugbear of the Mohawk, No. 1 Leasing company and the Mohawk Consolidated. The former, whose shaft is down 300 feet with crosscuts and drifts on both sides, has about thirty feet of water to contend with. The edge is getting heavy, and work will be rushed ahead to find it when the mine is dry. The former mine is also troubled considerably with water. Two shifts, however, are bailing it out, and will start sinking an additional fifty feet, to get under a ledge which they struck on the floor of the 230-foot level.

on the sixteenth level. B shaft is now almost down to the eleventh level and the connection with A shaft on the tenth should be made this month. The west drifts on the ninth and tenth levels are getting into the region where a heavy flow of water is likely to be encountered and for that reason are being driven rather slowly. However, these drifts should reach C shaft by the middle of June.

Arizona Commercial maintains its shipments of sulphide ore from the Copper Hill mine to the old Dominion smelter and it is also sending to the smelter iron ore carrying some copper and three or four ounces of silver per ton. Shipments of siliclous ore are also being made to the Douglas. Pumps were installed in the Black Hawk shaft last week and sinking was resumed yesterday afternoon. Six hundred feet will be reached in the incline shaft by the first of June and the sixth level will then be opened.

A marked improvement has taken place in the west drift on the Black Oxide claim, which has been driven with numerous seams of carbonate of copper. The showing is very encouraging. At the Great Eastern shaft a crosscut is being run to the south on the 160 level and to the north crosscut is being continued to intersect a small vein that has been located north of the shaft. The limestone was penetrated ten days ago. The shaft is down 124 feet and preparation is being made to start a level at 118 feet.

The strike made last week in the north crosscut of the 500 level of the Globe consolidated is of considerable importance to the Globe, as the iron is a splendid indication of copper in that district. It had not been expected by the management that any strike of importance would be made on the 500 and the level was run to ascertain the dip and trend of the vein. It is expected that the south crosscut will cut into the vein within the next week or ten days. Sinking is being pushed rapidly in the Gem shaft which is now down 675 feet and will continue without cessation to a depth of 1,100 feet. In the Boston shaft, sinking is also being prosecuted vigorously at the rate from 75 to 100 feet per month. The shaft is now down to a depth of 575 feet. Last month there was 210 feet of work done in the north crosscut of the 500 level.

to smelter by narrow gauge, as at present,) and by the substitution of three electric for seventeen steam hoists. When all this has been done mining costs ought to be very low indeed. Greene has none of the expensive ore hoisting of the Bisbee camp, but little pumping as compared with the latter, and none of the expensive rock selection of Cliften.

One has personally to go over the ground to get any idea of the enormity of the ore reserves. All the ore from the Oversight, the chief producer, is coming from above the first level. On the first, second and third levels, tremendous tonnages of good concentrating ore are being blocked out that may not be touched for years. No attempt is being made to get any show of production from the Cananea Central, and the output there at the moment is less than it was. All energies are being concentrated on development, chiefly at the Bonanza shaft, which is down 150 feet and in good ore. There will be no material production from this property until it is in such condition that the ore can be extracted in the most economical way.

will be exploited. This property was explored with drills twice previously and the ore was not found simply because the drills were not driven deep enough.

A diamond drill operator who was traveling from Duluth to Virginia one afternoon this week, happening to notice a drill at work a considerable distance south of Eveleth in the neighborhood of Spruce junction, outside the defined limits of the ore bearing formation, said he would not be surprised to see many holes driven to a depth of from 1,500 to 2,000 feet in that territory in the near future. The iron formation dips to the south and it is his belief that the ore bearing rock is very liable to underlie the slates which come to the surface in this territory and that there is a possibility of ore being found under both slate and taconite. Slate was originally nothing more than clay which was hardened by heavy pressure and it is, of course, a possibility that some of this slate rock may overlie bodies of ore. Of course it will be necessary to drive holes very deep in order to prove the truth or falsity of this theory, but it was the drill man's opinion that much diamond drilling would yet be done in an effort to locate ore under the slate. The drill at work near Spruce is located at least a mile south of the defined ore bearing limits and the work is probably being done by the steel corporation.

The Foundation company of New York has completed its contract at the Syracuse mine of Pickands, Mather & Co., midway between Biwabik and Aurora. The compressed air has been removed from the shaft and everything has been found satisfactorily. This ends a struggle of over two years duration to get a shaft down through the treacherous quicksands that overlie the ore on this property. The shaft has been driven a considerable distance into the rock under the quicksand and is but a short distance from the ore. After the compressed air was shut off water rose in the shaft to a distance of about ten feet but this was expected and will be easily pumped out.

The shaft is sunk in a bluff about 60 to 80 feet high over-looking Lake Embarrass. When the glaciers came down from the north several years ago one of them had picked up somewhere a considerable quantity of coarse sand and, concluding that it had carried its burden far enough, dumped it down on the north shore of Lake Embarrass, creating a nice level plateau extending about a half mile back from the lake shore. At the eastern end of the lake the sand is but little higher than the water level and Pickands, Mather & Co., first attempted to sink a shaft in this low spot. They found that it would be necessary to pump Lake Embarrass dry before they could accomplish it. Then they tried the scheme of driving a tunnel into the side of the bluff at the lake level, with the intention of sinking a drop shaft at the end of the tunnel. This plan also failed because the quicksand worked harder than the men in the tunnel, coming in from top, bottom and sides. Then the idea of driving patent interlocking steel piling was taken up. This was undertaken on top the bluff where the present shaft is located. The piles were driven to a sufficient dept that it was supposed they had penetrated the rock under the sand to a considerable distance. But when an effort was made to remove the sand inside the piling it failed because sand came in as fast or were driven to a sufficient depth that it faster than it could be taken out. Then it was thought that the sand was coming in around the bottom of the piling and that this might be remedied by forcing concrete through pipes driven down to the rock. The concrete was sent down but the quicksand continued to do business and this plan failed. Then the management concluded to let a contract to the Foundation company. This was done and the company has now, last fall. But a mistake was made in attempting to sink the shaft inside the steel piling. For it was found that when this piling had struck the rock it refused to enter and had curled up inward so that was necessary to cut it all away with pneumatic tools before sinking could be continued. This required many weeks of time and caused much more expense than would have been required if an entirely new shaft had been started. When the rock was reached it was found to be so badly broken that a successful joint could not be made so it was necessary to go down several feet into the rock in order to secure a solid foundation for the joint.

The experience gained in sinking the Syracuse shaft led Manager F. W. Adgate of the Foundation company to adopt an entirely different plan of sinking the shaft on the Bangor, west of the Syracuse. This property is also controlled by the Pickands, Mather & Co., and the surface covering to the ore is very similar to that at the Syracuse. A clamshell dredge was installed here and as fast as the sand is removed a circular shaft with walls composed of steel and concrete settles down into the hole thus made. As the concrete moves downward more is added to the top and the huge affair is carried downward by its own weight. The method has proven very successful and the shaft is now down within a few feet of the rock. As soon as it sank is reached air will be turned in and the water and sand thus driven back until a joint can be made. Then the shaft will be turned over to the operators to complete.

The sinking of these shafts has been looked upon with great interest by mining men all over the range as the methods adopted are entirely new to this section.

Marquette, Mich., May 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Because of the certainey that a considerable area of the surface will collapse at the Steel corporation's Section Sixteen mine at Ishpeming, Marquette range, it will be necessary for the city to remove the main supply pipe of the municipal waterworks system. The ground at the point in question has been undermined, the ore having been extracted, and the surface shows unmistakable signs of settling. Not only will it be necessary to construct a new line of pipe some distance on the westwar, in which work something like three miles of main will be needed, but a new pumping station must be erected. The changes proposed will cost in the neighborhood of $40,000, and authorization to issue bonds for this amount will be asked shortly at a special election.

The area affected adjoins that portion of the ground which collapsed at Jones & Laughlin's Lake Angeline mine last winter, when for days, or until the main could be removed from the disturbed zone, there was danger the entire city would be cut off from its water supply. Since that time there have been increasing indications of the extension of the cave-in to the old workings of Section Sixteen. The company has been filling its stopes as the ore has been taken from them, but it is impossible to make the ground as solid as it was originally. There is bound to be a subsidence of the surface, hence it would be perilous to permit the water pipe to remain, not only menacing the water supply of the city, but threatening the flooding of the mine itself. Notice of the danger has formally been made, following an expert examination by mining engineers, and the common council has been asked by the company to transfer the pipe line as soon as possible. While the mains throughout the city cross properties of mining companies, the right-of-way is in no instance held by the city.

Jones & Laughlin's Rolling Mill mine has been added to the shipping list. This property, located at Negaunee, Marquette range, has been in progress of development the past two years. It was opened on the strength of diamond drill discoveries. The shaft is upwards of 700 feet in depth, and extending from it into the ore deposit a number of drifts have been opened and are in commission. The ore body is very large and for years since the Rolling Mill should be an important producer. A fortnight ago 100 names were on the pay roll, but more have been added since, and still more men will be taken on as fast as room can be made for them underground. It is likely that a force of 300 to 400 will be employed before the close of the year. The opening of this mine is of much importance to the Jones & Laughlin company, for the reason that, while it will still be active for some years to come, the Lake Angeline property at Ishpeming has seen its best days, and the Rolling Mill will gradualy take its place in supplying Marquette range ore for use in conjunction with the company's Mesaba district product. The Rolling Mill is well equipped for a large output, its machinery being sufficient in capacity for a mine four to five times the present size of the property. Much of this equipment was removed from the Lake Angeline. No mining work will be done this year in the old open pit, from which Capt. Samuel Mitchell of Negaunee, the fee owner of the property, shipped a considerable tonnage some years ago. There is still much ore in this portion of the tract, although of comparatively low grade, and in time it will go forward to the Pittsburg furnaces.

The Breitung interests of Marquette, which have opened one of the best mines on the range in the Mary Charlotte property at Negaunee, have awarded a contract for the erection of ten double houses at the mining location for occupancy by employes. The site selected is desirable, and each of the families will be given ground for gardens. The construction of these dwellings will be followed by the erection of more buildings of like nature, and in addition a large boarding house will go up this year. The mine is employing nearly 50 men at present, and a third shaft is sinking. The Mary Charlotte was cramped for stockpile room last winter, but during the past fortnight more ground has been made ready for use in storing ore and all the space needed is now available. Up to the present week the only labor troubles on the range this season were those experienced recently at this mine, this a result of a misapprehension on the part of the men. A few days since, however, some 100 underground employes quit work at the Steel corporation's hard ore property at Ishpeming, alleging that the machinery in No. 7 engine house was defective, and that it was on this account a fatality had occurred in the operation of the cage in No. 6 shaft. In reality the man had been injured in an attempt to board the skip while it was in motion. The officials invited an expert examination of the machinery. The report submitted to the men was satisfactory, and all have now returned to work.

The Walpole mine of the Pewable company, at Iron Mountain, Menominee range, has resumed operations after an idleness of nearly six months. A force of over 100 men is employed. There is good demand for ore of the Walpole grade, and the production will equal that of last season. The Millie mine, in the same locality, is preparing to resume. This property, formerly owned by the Dessau interests of New York, is now controlled by the Algoma Steel company of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., having been taken over a year ago, and the usual output of ore is anticipated. There will be no curtailment of forces at the Steel corporation's big Chapin mine at Iron Mountain, reports to the contrary notwithstanding. An average of 120 carloads of gravel is now dumped daily into the Chapin pit by the St. Paul road, and nearly as much more by the Northwestern road. This work is necessary for the maintenance of the tracks, and it will be continued indefinitely.

With the return of the season when outdoor operations are possible, Capt. John T. Spencer has resumed exploratory work on the St. Clair property, at Iron Mountain. This tract is favorably located

SOLVING CURTAIN PROBLEM.

London Tribune: A further improvement on the build of the window would be to make use of the clever invention which a lady patented some time ago. The idea came to her after long endurance of the trials caused by perpetual changing and washing of muslin and lace. The shape of her windows necessitated having drawn muslin "blinds" fixed to the lower sashes, but to avoid having to change these every two or three weeks she had a second frame and glass made to fit exactly over the existing lower sash, and the drawn curtain was fixed between the two sheets of glass.

From the appearance of the windows, seen from either the interior of the room or exterior of the house, it was impossible to detect any difference from the usual order of things, but the saving in the wear and tear of the muslin blinds, the freedom from worry, and lessening of the washing bill—for this was a large building, with a great number of windows—soon repaid the cost of the frames. The curtains might remain unchanged for a twelve month at least, and even then could hardly be called soiled when taken down.

QUEER TIPS.

Philadelphia Record: "Tips? Oh, yes, we got them, but not from all our customers," said a waiter in one of the principal hotels. "The strangest I ever got? Well, it was from a man who looked prosperous, ate an expensive meal here, and after paying his bill, thrust his hand into his vest pocket and handed me a cough drop. Evidently he mistook it for a coin. Another man, whose appearance led me to believe that he was a preacher, gave me a small piece of chewing tobacco. Both men were in deep thought, and probably only half aware of what they were doing. I've seen them often since, but, no, I never mentioned those tips."

NEWS OF THE WEEK AT THE CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL

Cast for the Senior Play is Finally Selected.

The Public Speaking Club Will Hold Annual Banquet.

After considerable time spent in rehearsing, the cast for the senior play, which will be given on class night, has finally been selected. The characters and the parts which they will take are as follows: Mrs. Fitzgerald Mandeville de Smythe, a would-be society leader, Marie Erd; Miss Edith Norton, her niece, a Western heiress, Dale Montgomery; Miss Mabel West, a friend of Miss Norton's, Gertrude Hoopes; Jane McCarthey, an Irish maid servant, Margaret Pearson; Lord Chelsea, an English Nobleman, Walter Newcomb; Jack Earl, his friend, a happy-go-lucky fellow, Ralph Ely; Danny McQuade of the "Gold Dust," Mickel Mickelson, and George Washington Johnson, a colored gentleman, Richard Hodgeson. The play is a three-act society comedy, which takes place in the city of New York at the present day. It is amusing and witty and incidentally is a satire on the foibles of the smart set. Many complications take place, but are finally straightened out to the satisfaction of all concerned and the piece has the usual happy ending.

Several of the characters took part in the annual play of the class and made decided hits in it. Ralph Ely, who had the comedy part in the former play, will take the comedian's role in this also, while Dale Montgomery, who made such a hit in the other play, will also have a prominent part.

The costumes will be pretty and effective, but not as elaborate as in the class play. Although no music will be introduced into the play there will be several musical numbers on the program.

Public Speaking Club.

The members of the Public Speaking club will hold their annual banquet next Monday night at the high school lunch room. There will be from twenty to thirty members present and the dinner will be prepared by Charlie Colby, the chef at the high school.

Owing to the fact that the dinner will not last until a late hour, Principal Smith has consented to it, although it is not the policy of the board to allow parties during the week.

Prof. Lambert, who has been at the head of the Debating club this season, has announced the plans of the society for next year. An extensive campaign has already been outlined by him and he proposes to carry it into execution as soon as school commences next fall. A captain will be elected for every room in the school to take charge of the work among the students in his own room. These captains, of whom there will be about fifteen or twenty, will form a sort of board of directors, who will manage the affairs of the club generally and will take charge of the debate and appoint the committees to arrange programs.

By this plan it is hoped to organize the whole school in a systematic manner and also to add a large number of members to the club. It will also arouse much rivalry among the different rooms and will tend to stimulate the interest in debating.

Prof. Lambert recently had a conference with Principal Lynch of the Blaine high school of Superior, at which the latter expressed his eagerness to advance the interest in debating at his institution, and agreed to do his best toward this end at the beginning of next year.

During this summer Mr. Lambert will also make an effort to enroll the school in the high school debating league of the state and get into the game next year with the members of that organization.

Debating will commence immediately after the opening of school and the Junior-Senior debate will be held before Christmas so that the members will be in shape for outside contests before the close of the season.

Seniors Meet.

A meeting of the senior class was held last Wednesday. The treasurer reported that there is $9.38 in the treasury. Besides this amount, the class has $104 deposited in the bank from the advance sale of the Zenith slips, and $148.50 from the senior play.

The farewell party of the senior class will be given May 24, and will be open to the class only. The question of whether the affair should be open or restricted to class members was debated to some extent, but it was finally decided to do as in former years, and admit only the seniors.

The commencement invitations will be ready next week and the graduating students can put in their orders for them. There has been some talk of having a souvenir postal card with the picture of the class made, but this has not been definitely decided upon.

Examinations Held.

Examinations are being given at the high school today for entrance to the college; science, literature, and the arts courses at the University of Minnesota. Every applicant is required to pass an examination in writing, spelling and English composition. There are two parts to the examination, the elementary and the advanced tests.

In order to enter it is necessary to pass the former, but the advanced test is optional and need not be taken if the student feels that it is more than he is capable of passing. However, if it is successfully passed an advance credit at the university is given.

The students who have not yet decided whether they are going to the university may take the examination next September, if they decide to go later on. However, Principal Smith advised the students to take it now, if possible.

The examinations in solid geometry, plain geometry, and advanced algebra will be given here the week commencing May 27. A large number of students from the Duluth school will take the examinations for the engineering course.

Straight Talk From Mr. Smith.

Principal Smith gave the students a straight talk in regard to truthfulness at the chapel exercisse Monday morning, in which he advised them always to be frank and straightforward.

He warned the students that an education would do them not the least good if they were dishonest, and even went so far as to say that an education tends to make an unprincipled man more crooked, rather than to reform him.

He said that he sympathized with those students who have intluences around them outside of school which tend to make them dishonest, but said that they would be all the stronger if they would but rise above these and conquer them.

He quoted Holme's illustrations of truth and falsehood, in which he likens truth to a cube which is clean cut, and stays where it is put, and dishonesty to a sphere which is continually rolling around and trying to hide.

"Truth," he said, "may bring inconvenience and even mortification upon you, but in the end it is the best policy."

Graduation Exercises.

Music practise for the senior graduation exercises commenced last Tuesday, under the direction of Prof. Custance, and will be held every Tuesday and Friday night until the close of the school. The whole class will take part, and a great deal of preparation is required to put them in good shape. The class will, as usual, be seated on the stage.

On class night the music is light and tuneful, as this is considered appropriate, the "Alma Mater" song, which has been sung by the graduating classes for several years, will be rendered this year also, as it is considered almost a fixture of the program, and it would be hard to find a substitute for it.

The class night exercises will be opened with a song, after which the president's address will be delivered. There will aslo be a play, and the class oration.

On commencement the program will be more serious in their nature, as it marks the departure of the seniors from their "Alma Mater," and is for them, at least, a sad occasion. The five best essays will also be read on that night.

The seniors were delighted by the announcement that Miss Alice Sjoselius will be the solotst for the graduation exercises. Miss Sjoselius was formerly a member of the graduating class, but discontinued her high school course a year ago in order to cultivate her voice. Her singing when here was always a delight to her fellow students, and they will welcome her back with open arms.

High School Notes.

The athlets who come out victorious in the interclass meet will compete with Blaine next Saturday, provided their standings do not bar them. Most of the men are eligible, and the Duluth boys expect to win.

The game with the Nelson Dewey baseball team, which was to have been played last Wednesday, was postponed on account of the snow. The next game will be with Blaine, and will be played at Duluth next Wednesday.

No chapel exercises were held Tuesday, as Principal Smith was busy with the seniors.

It is as yet undecided whether the seniors will have to take any examination in trigonometry. The test which was recently given may be counted in place of the examination.

WILD ANIMAL BARGAINS.

Menagerie Remnants Disposed of Cheaply at Spring Clearing Sale.

New York Sun: To make room for an invoice of choice spring lines of rhinoceroses, hippopotamuses and horned toads, Louis Rhue had a remnant sale at 248 Grand street of some odds and ends of elephants, assorted lions and lionesses, packages of fish food, leopards and other end-of-the-season leftovers. There are 1,000 birds on the notion counter, also, and two polar bears in the white goods department. After everybody had fingers over the stock through the day there was a love of a python left about twenty-seven feet long—eight and three-quarter yards, to be exact—marked down from $900 to $50. In fact Jake Funke, floorwalker in the snake department, said that he felt sure Manager Andrew Mayer would let the python go for five forty-nine ninety-eight if approached in the right way, and no trouble to show the goods.

Some of the prettiest barrains in the early spring sale are to be found in the elephant department. As the elephant season lasts only a month and there are five left in the stock department, still a suburbanite who goes in for amateur farming may get the kind of elephant that a bookkeeper on moderate salary would like to have about the place to work the garden patch for a mere song, as songs are sold to Herr Conried or Herr Hammerstein. Dealer Rhue offers them as low as $1,500, just as good as new and exactly the same thing they are asking fifteen fifty for at the department stores. There is a slight charge fordelilvery in the suburbs if one doesn't want to take the purchase home.

When the firm of Louis Rhue—Louis the founder, is dead, but his son Bernard runs the business, under the old firm name—finished taking inventory recently and found that among the remnants were the five elephants, ten lions and lionesses, eight leopards and a number of deer, zebras, Thibet bears, polar bears, gnus, emus, swans, 1,000 monkeys, 1,000 assorted snakes and other goods they played up their display ads of the left-over sale in the theatrical papers quite strong. As a woman can't resist a bargain, many who didn't have to work at a matinee and two or three that were supposed to be working were on the job early.

Showmen made up all the rest of the crowd with the exception of two gentlemen farmers. Thomas E. Powers, who runs a farm just over the Connecticut line and does cartooning on the side, and a Jersey farmer, who was about to have one of the elephants. Genevieve by name, all crated up and addressed to Charles A. Selden, Rural Delivery No. 1, Plainfield, N. J., when he decided not to have the package delivered until some of the folks have had a chance to come to town and pass judgment on his purchase.

Louise Gunning came in just after luncheon to look over the jackass section to see what she could pick up to take the place of Harold, the little burro on which she makes her entrance in the second act of "The White Hen." Harold, Miss Gunning said, seems to be all run down because of the late hours he is keeping, and she thought it well to look up one strong enough to stand seven shows a week from here to the coast.

"We haven't any jackasses now," said Salesman Paul Henning with deep regret to Miss Gunning, "but we have a beautiful line of Nyigua antelope at $300 a pair over here near the elevators. Boy! Show the lady through the hog deer department and let her see the photographs of some of the swellest lions and tigers out on the farm at Woodside, L. I. Cash! Mark this elephant as sold to Edwards Bros. It's to be called for. Now, what can I do for you, young man?"

Rose Stahl fluttered in to see what was doing in lion cubs—something for about $8—and does the cage go with them? Bernard Ruhe was sorry, but he never sold cubs younger than two months old, and at that age they begin at $50 up, he said. Miss Stahl offered $49.50 finally for a diminutive chap named Clawed. Nothing doing at the price. Madlyn Summers, the little person who kicks her slipper out into the audience at the Anna Held show every night and Saturday afternoon, wandered around with Frances Ross, the Girl with the Green Teddy Bear, and they showed a total disregard for the signs placed about that ran:

DANGER! ! !

Buyers or other visiting this establishment to look at our line of goods do so at their own risk. The proprietor will not be responsible for any damages or injuries contracted while on these premises, whatever the cause may be.

Miss Ross said she had come when she read that part of the Ruhe advertisement that say: "The Tibet bears, unlike the Teddy bear, will not rip, ravel or run down at the heel." When she found that they sold alive at $25 a throw she said that she and Miss Summers had merely come to look around anyway.

Whereupon Bernard Ruhe, Manager Frank Meyer and Clerks Jake Funke, Jake Rudipsky and Paul Henning said in chorus that they were there simply to show goods and that although there was no obligation to buy they felt sure that if the goods were shown to the young ladies they wouldn't be able to resist the bargains. There was pythons, for instance, as low as $15. Jake Funke gladly took down bolt after bolt of python from the shelves with the fearlessness of a dry goods clerk and the prospective buyers admired the stock from the distance. Although one snake had prettier eyes than another and the next was more graceful and cheap even when sold by the yard, and with colors guaranteed not to run, none was quite what Miss Stahl wanted. The perspiring clerks finally slid back the shelf door of the eight and three-quarter yard python, whose name is Fairbanks.

"Because of his scales?" asked Miss Ross artlessly, and an African gray parrot across in the bird section yelled, "Birdseed! Oh, birdseed!" just as Jake Funke answered, "No, miss; because of his length."

The entire establishment took Fairbanks out on the floor at the request of the shoppers. First, Bernard Ruhe threw a bit of burlap over Fairbank's head and then grabbed the bi gfelow near the base of the skull. Mr. Ruhe yanked a couple lengths of python off the shelf, and Jake Funke got a grip a few feet back of the Ruhe strangle hold. Another tug and Paul Hening got another hold farther down the line and so on till the working force of the house had manned the snake like an eight-oarded crew.

Then they all pulled together, with occasionally recesses in which each man under his arm temporarily while he wiped his brow with his lef thand.

They plumped Fairbanks to the floor at last and knelt on him, while their faces grew red. For about this time Fairbanks decided what's the use, and started back toward his shelf. But all the crew tugged at Fairbanks to keep him straight for a while till the shoppers could see what a nifty piece of goods he was. Suspender buttons were on the point of flying all along the line when the strain began to get too great for the humans. They then placed Fairbanks back on his shelf yard by yard, like a long fireman wrestling with an incorrigible fire hose to get it up the ladder. They got the last yard shelved at last, just as Miss Ross remarked again that she and Miss Summers had only come to look around anyway. So they each took a sample package of birdseed and hurried up to Rector's for dinner.

The Plainfield farmer who had practically decided to buy Genevieve, the elephant, hurried into the sale again just before it closed, and said he had decided not to buy. He had figured out, he said, since his first burst of enthusiasm, just how much hay Genevieve would require in a year, and had found that it would take a ton or more than he can raise on his farm. Under the circumstances he decided there would be no economy in the investment. Farmer T. Powers, however, bought a pair of rabbits at 50 cents and said he wouldn't let Homer Davenport have anything on him as a stock farmster.

There is a choice emu left at only $200, various smaller birds as low as $15 a dozen without wine, and some minas from India, which are like a raven but talk better than a parrot and can swear in three languages. The mina with its black body, yellow legs, yellow bill, yellow turnover collar and yellow language is the nearest thing to a final edition in all ornithology. One man who represented a circus yelled loudly for a gy-raffe in the early hours of the sale, and showed two $1,000 bills to pay for it. But a gy-ra

OUR YOUNG FOLKS CORNER

A Woeful Tale

Little happy Puglet
Drinking from a muglet,
Drinking grandpa's cider,
  Isn't you know!
Cider hard as bricklet,
Serves poor Pug a tricklet,
Makes him full and lays him
  On the floor!

Little Pug gets crazy,
For his mind is hazy,
Maybe after several years of fishing we Never having drunk so,
  I'll confess!
He thinks his tail a snakelet,
And his neck does breaklet;
So he dies in awful
  Drunken-ess!

Let this warn all puglets
Ne'er to touch such muglets;
Cider's not for doggies,
  Any how!
And if some bad outsider
Should pass a mug of cider,
Let the puglet bravely say,
  "Bow-wow!"

MAUD WALKER.

"I've had the grip," answered Pat in a weak voice.

"The grip? Begorry, and phwat's that?" asked his friend.

"It's a disease that makes you sick six months after you've got well," explained Pat.

HOW NED AND SPECKLES WENT TO SEA.

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

Ned had a new rowboat. It was the joy of his heart. Every evening as soon as his after-school chores were done and supper over, he took Speckles—his dog and chum—and went down to the little cove in the river bend where he kept his "pride" moored. With Speckles in the stern of the boat Ned would take the oars and pull off down the river for a mile; then would return with so much additional muscle that his mother laughingly called him the "coming Samson," declaring that if Ned kept on rowing he would soon become "one great bunch of muscles."

Ned's home was on the banks of a big river that poured into a fine bay some 10 miles below the "bend" where Ned kept his boat. Then 10 miles of bay took one into the great sea, the dim blue of which could be seen from Ned's own home.

And often as Ned and Speckles went for their mile down the river (Ned's father had forbidden his son's going any further, as the current was so strong that it was dangerous to risk himself in so small a craft too far from home) Ned would say to Speckles:

"Some day, my old chum, you and I shall go into the bay. Then as I grow stronger and older and you grow more accustomed to rough water we'll push on through the bay and take a taste of old ocean. But, of course, Speckles, that time is a long, long way off. In all probability this boat we now love so much will be worn out, lying a leaky old hull on dry land. Mamma will doubtless make a coop out of it for young chickens. Who can tell? But we—you and I—will then have a new boat—15 feet long and with a sail and rudder. Gee! Then we'll be real seamen. I hope you won't get seasick, old Speck. You know the water of the bay is more frolicsome than this of the river, and the bay is a sleeping babe as compared with that roaring and bellowing old ocean. Of course, we'll catch fish in the bay—a boat full, and sell them in town for enough money to make us quite rich. Maybe after several years of fishing we may have enough cash to buy a ship to sail around the world. Hully gee! That would be going some, wouldn't it, Speckles?"

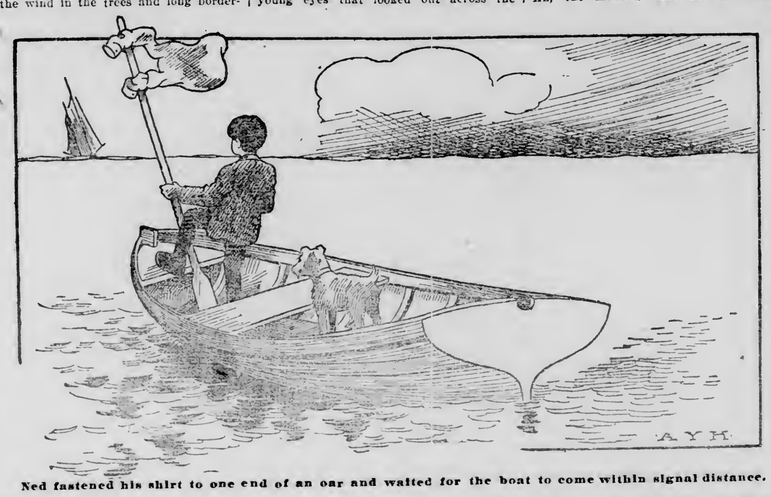
And Speckles would wag his tail in acquiescence, for Speckles always agreed with his master and chum in everything. That was one reason—the principal one, too—that kept Speckles and Ned such close friends. Even when Ned hinted that Speckles might become seasick the old four-footer only smiled in his own way (by wagging his tail) as if saying: "Yes, Ned, I know I may, but I'll do my best to not bark about it."

One evening when Ned came home from school he found his mother ready to go to town for a week's visit with an old friend who was in very poor health, and who had sent for her. Ned's father would go, too, returning the following day. A hired man and his wife would be at the home to look after things during his parents' absence.

After supper Ned and Speckles, as usual, went for a row on the river. As Ned descended the bank he saw a man skulk off into the woods. "Aha," he said to Speckles, "that tramp is hanging round here to steal our boat—I'll bet nine to five! Well, we'll just lay for him after we've returned from our rowing.

And good as his word Ned, after tying up the boat, stretched himself in it to watch for the return of the man whom he had seen prowling about the bend. Speckles, of course, kept him company, lying down against his master, his head thrust beneath the broad seat.

The night settled down, the moon rose and the stars twinkled, but the "tramp" did not return to the boat. But a visitor did come and enter it, a visitor whose name was Sleep. An hour had hardly passed after Ned and Speckles stretched themselves in the boat when both dog and boy fell into deep slumber, being soothed by the rocking of their bed on the restless water and the soft sighing of the wind in the trees and long border-grasses.



Ned fastened his shirt to one end of an oar and waited for the boat to come within signal distance.

It must have been long after midnight when Ned awoke. He was roused by Speckles licking his face and whining. Opening his eyes he first looked into the sky, wondering for a moment just where he was. Then the rough rocking of the boat and the chill night air roused him to the reality of his situation. Quickly sitting up he was surprised and frightened to find deep, dark water all about him, no sight of land on any side. He caught hold of Speckles in his terror, hugging the old doggie as he cried: "Land of love, Speck, the boat's broke from its moorings and we're drifting into the bay! Here, sit still old boy, while I get the oars out and row back homewards."

But rowing against such a current was like walking up a mountain of slipping sand. He made no progress; in fact, the water carried him further and further out towards the ocean. A light-house looming through the darkness told him of his location. He was at the bay's entrance into the sea!

In vain he rowed with all his wondrous muscle; he kept right on towards the mighty waters that would make quick work of him, Speckles and the toy craft. Poor Ned fully realized his danger. He put the oars in the bottom of the boat for now rowing was impossible, the boat was tossing so. With one arm about Speckles, who seemed trying so hard to console his frightened young master, and with the other hand holding tightly to the edge of the boat, Ned settled himself to suffer the inevitable. Though he was terror struck he was no "booby" and no tear dimmed the brave young eyes that looked out across the great expanse of waters that seemed to cover the earth.

How long he sat there waiting for the morning he never knew, but after what seemed to be an eternity of time the dawn broke and the sun slowly came into view through the morning mists that always hang over the ocean. Ned and Speckles found themselves alone on the waves that were to them mountainous, but in reality very calm for the sea. Ned did not talk to Speckles, nor did the latter wag his tail in communication to his master, though his eyes, that were almost human, looked with a sort of helpless despair on his strange and terrible surroundings.

At last a speck appeared in the distance. Ned watched it with some feeling of hope. The speck grew larger and larger, then took on the shape of some kind of sea craft. Ned's heart gave a flutter. Hugging Speckles to his breast, he broke the long silence:

"Oh, dear old chum, there's a boat, a boat! We must attract the attention of her sailors as soon as they come close enough to see us."

Ned then removed his coat and shirt, replacing the former, and fastening the latter to one end of an oar. Then he waited patiently till the boat came within signal distance. After a few minutes the craft—which evolved into a fishing smack—came dancing towards them full sail. Evidently the fishermen had spied, through their glasses, the little boat that was drifting at the mercy of the billows. Ned held the oar with its fluttering white fing as high as his poor, cold hands would allow. Ah, the muscles that he had boasted of were weak things after all when tried against the mighty strength of the ocean.

The fishing smack veered in its course, setting straight for the little boat, which must have looked no larger to the seamen than a thimble. Soon it came within hailing distance of Ned, who still frantically waved his shirt-flag fastened to an oar-pole. All the time Speckles kept a cool head, never moving from his place, close beside his excited little master.

Well, to shorten a long story, Ned and Speckles were taken on board the fishing smack, whose name was "Captain Peck." And "Captain Peck" was a right merry little boat, too, with her five fishermen and big haul of deep-sea fish. After hearing Ned's story, the owner of "Captain Peck" declared that it was "the dimdest, nerry escape he had ever heard of." Then as Ned and Speckles ate a most welcome breakfast—Ned wrapped in an old tarred coat—the fisherman continued: "W'y, bless my sould and Captain Peck, I don't understand how you ever managed it! W'y, coming down that bay 'at's as full of craft as a sailor on shore is full of liquor is risky for old dogs what's ust to it; but fer a kid—an' him in the arms of Morphus—with only a dorg fer lookout—Gimeny! It beats me. Wonder is that you're not this minit in the bottom of the bay, servin' the fish fer breakfast instead of sittin' here safe an' sound a-eatin' of fried fish and biscuits. Well, boys do git through what would be the finish of men—an' sea-dogs at that."

Ned and Speckles—with their little boat towed behind—were carried safe to shore by the "Captain Peck." They landed several miles from home, and as the owner of "Captain Peck" would not allow Ned to try rowing home (and really I don't think Ned wanted to try it, though he pretended to think it safe enough to do so) he was obliged to leave the little boat in the care of the good old fisherman, and borrowing a few dollars from him, took the first train for home. But before starting he wired to the station agent at the little railway fing station near his own home to say to his father—should he be making inquiry for him—that he was safe and sound and en route home.

That afternoon Ned and Speckles reached home, walking from the railway station. To Ned's relief he found on jumping from the train that his father had not yet returned from town. The friendly agent had been on the lookout for both parent and son, and luckily the son had turned up first. Thus the father would be spared any anxiety.

"Well, Speckles, old chum, the folks will be somewhat surprised when we tell of our expedition down to the sea in a rowboat with me asleep and you the only 'lookout,' eh? But, say, I'm glad it happened that mother and dad were away from home during our absence. Otherwise we might arrive on time for our own funeral ceremony. Of course, seeing boat, dog and boy gone they would think us drowned. But it takes a good deal to down old Speck and Ned, doesn't it?"

And Speckles smiled with his tail, saying with his eyes the while: "We've come out of danger into safety. Let us profit by our experience. So far as I'm concerned, I'd rather pass my nights in the stable manger than in the open rowboat out at sea."

As Ned and Speckles turned the corner of a hill and came in sight of their own home they saw the hired man coming on the run to meet them. He had been stationed on the roof with a pair of field glasses, scanning the country for Ned. To Ned's amazement the stupid fellow had never once thought of the boat, and just supposed Ned had got up early and gone off for a stroll before breakfast. As the forenoon passed and Ned failed to put in his appearance he became a bit uneasy, and at his wife's suggestion he took the field glasses and climbed upon the roof to make a search of the surrounding country. But when Ned told him of his late experience you "could have knocked him down with a feather," to use his own words. "Waal, waal, an' so you've bin down to the ocean—the OCEAN. Gorry, what'll yer pap do?"

"He'll be thankful that I'm here instead of a funeral crowd," said Ned. And Speckles agreed with him by wagging his tail.

When Bob Was "Out of Sight."

A picnic party Mary gave
  To all the girls and boys;
They came dressed in their Sunday best,
  And brought their nicest toys.

Among the guests was chubby Bob,
  Dressed up in linen white,
And all the other boys declared
  That "Bob was out of sight."

Well, little Bob mischievous was,
  And he was sure a fright
When home he ran by the back wa,
  To keep himself from sight.

For when the dinner all was spread
  Bob rose with a wild cry,
Of "Pass that jelly roll around!"
  Then fell he in a pie!

The pie was made of pumpkin brown,
  And Bobby's suit was white.
Ah, how his mother lathered him
  When he went to bed that night!

HELENA DAVIS.

LITTLE HOLLAND.

BY MAUD WALKER.

There is a pretty little park in the heart of the city of New York called Washington Square. In the spring time the grass comes out green and restful to the eye; the flowers that border the walks and encircle the cool fountain burst into bud and prepare to bloom. And on the first warm days the children pour from the great, dark, unhealthy tenement-houses that form the back streets south and west of the square, into this breathing space where they may run and romp and feel the genial rays of the sun.

One day in the early spring came little John and Mary into Washington Square to play. They lived in a street leading into the park, and their house faced the west. Also, their father had a good position in a big store and their mother had nothing to do except to look after her children and their home. Thus you will see that Mary and John were not "tenement children," but of the "comfortable" class. So in playing in the park they rarely joined with the hundreds of other children that came there, but held themselves aloof.

On this day I am telling you about Mary was sitting on the soft green grass watching her brother as he went up and down the broad walks on his roller skates. But her attention was called from John to a little figure that came and sat near her. It was a tiny boy, in ragged overcoat and muddy stockings and shoes. A rusty brown cap partly covered his flaxen hair, which straggled in an uncombed condition, hanging over his eyes, that were as blue as the sky when it is unveiled by clouds. His face was pinched and pale, and two of the front teeth were missing. On the whole, this child was one to be shunned by Mary and John, themselves so clean and well-dressed. But something in the lonely little fellow's face excited the pity of Mary. She watched him for a few minutes, then said to him:

"Hello, little boy! Haven't you anyone to play with?"

The little boy only looked at her, dropping his head in a bashful way. Then he walked down the path, stopping at an unoccupied bench. But Mary kept watching him, feeling sorry that he had no companion. After a little while John came skating up and stopped to rest beside his sister.

"Look at that little boy," said Mary, pointing toward the child who had solicited her sympathy. "Doesn't he look awfully solemn? I guess he's a foreigner, too, for he doesn't look a bit American."

"Oh, he's Holland," said John. "Only Holland children have such white hair and stoggy legs. And see his eyes; they're blue like your doll's eyes are. Yes, he must be Dutch."

"Well, I'm awfully sorry for him," said Mary. "Let's call him to us and play with him. He is all alone."

"Yes, and you might catch something, too," declared John. "Those foreigners always have some disease—maybe the itch—who can tell? And he's dirty enough for that. No, thank you, I don't want to mix up with little Holland. Excuse me from the Dutch."

Then away went John, skating round and round the square. But hardly had he gone when the little boy came slowly toward Mary, smiling in a bashful though friendly way. Mary smiled back at him and motioned him to a seat on the grass beside her. But the child would not come quite so close, preferring to stand some distance away. However, he kept smiling at Mary, showing her that he understood and appreciated her invitation to come and sit beside her.

Thus half an hour passed, and Mary and "Little Holland"—as she mentally called the child—became friends, though no word passed between them. Presently John came back to Mary and asked her to put on the skates and have a little spin around the park. Mary declined, saying that she preferred to sit there and "talk" with "Little Holland."

"But he hasn't spoken a solitary word, has he?" laughed John.

"No, not words," confessed Mary; "but he has conversed with me in the cutest little smiles you ever saw. Really, brother, I've taken a great fancy to Little Holland. I wonder where he lives?"

"Oh, in some basement, or over some Chink laundry," answered John. "See how unkempt and unwashed he is. I can't see how you can be so interested in him. He looks a real little vagabond."

"You should not talk so about a helpless little child," chided Mary. "I pity him from my heart. I wish he could talk American, and I'd learn all about him."

Then it came time to go home, and as Mary and John turned into their own street Mary heard a footstep close to her side, and, looking down, she saw the little stranger following her. "Why, it's Little Holland!" she exclaimed to John. "See, he has followed us home. I'm afraid he's lost."

"Well, he certainly knew how to get to the park and will know how to get home from there," said John. "Suppose you take him back there. I'd offer to do so, but he seems to have taken a liking to you."

Mary returned to the park, leading Little Holland with her. And to her surprise the child did not draw away from her when she took hold of his chubby hand. In fact, he seemed to feel safe in her care. On reaching the spot in the park where she had first seen him Mary sat down and motioned to him to go. But the child only smiled and remained beside her. In vain Mary talked to him, he did not seem to understand a single word she said. Then as it was growing late and her mother would be expecting her at home Mary decided to turn Little Holland over to the park policeman, telling him, of course, of her fears that the little fellow was lost.

Little Holland trotted along beside her as she ran after the big blue-coated officer. "Oh, Mr. Policeman," Mary called out, "here's a little child lost—a little Hollander, I guess, sir. Will you take him home?"

The policeman stopped and interrogated Mary, Little Holland shrinking behind her as if in fear. "Well, how do you know the child is lost?" the policeman asked. "Did he say so?"

Oh, he doesn't say a word, sir," Mary explained. Then she told the officer how Little Holland had followed her home and how she had tried in vain to have him go away from her—tried to make him understand that it was time for him to go home.

"Well, leave the kid t' me," said the officer. "I'll turn him into the station if he can't tell me where he lives."

Mary hesitated a moment, then said: "Suppose he cries, Mr. Policeman! I'd hate to have him carried to the station if it frightened him. Indeed, I'd rather go along, sir, than to have the little Dutch thing afraid."

"Ah, Dutch is he?" asked the officer. "Then I think I can direct you to the place where he lives. There's a family of Dutch lives at Number 17 — street. You can trot around there with him, and if he don't belong there just bring him back to me and I'll turn him in at the station. His folks will find him in the course of a day or two, for he'll be advertised in the papers."

Mary resented the cool, indifferent manner of the officer and decided to find the home of Little Holland without his aid. Taking the little child's hand she went to the place where the policeman had said a Dutch family lived. But to Mary's disappointment the woman of the house shook her head on surveying Little Holland and said: "No, I don't t'ink him to me belong. In de house mit a popper is my childer."

Just as Mary was on the point of going to her own home and asking her parents' advice as to the disposal of Little Holland she heard a cry of pleasure behind her, and turning round, saw a little blonde woman—Little Holland on a larger scale—coming at a run after her. She was crying out something in a foreign tongue, and at the first sound of her voice Little Holland turned toward her, clapping his chubby hands and laughing happily. In another instant the woman had the tousled head of Little Holland against her mother's breast and was weeping and laughing over him by turns.

"Him lose he," she said in her best English to Mary, who was looking at her interrogatively. "Him playing went an' lose he. Myself all day look. Now he I gotten an' keep." And the little mother clasped her baby boy to her breast, her blue eyes shining with love and thankfulness.

Mary turned homeward, going at a run, for she knew her own dear mother would soon be out looking for her. As she went along she felt glad that she had not turned her Little Holland over to the policeman.

"The hearts of the poor are as full of love and anxiety as are the hearts of the well-to-do," said Mary to herself. "Clothes and education only affect the exterior—not the interior. After this I shall always keep my eyes open in the park for lonely little ones, especially for my Little Holland."

Little Holland trotted along beside her as she ran after the big blue-coated officer.

QUEENS OF ENGLAND

Queen Anne succeeded to the throne of Great Britain and Ireland at the death of her royal brother-in-law, William III. of Orange, who had reigned jointly with Mary during her sovereignty. At the time of her accession Anne was in most wretched health, caused from self-indulgence at the table and habits of ease. Owing to gout and rheumatism—and almost unsightly corpulence—her coronation ceremonial was gone through with in a low armchair.

Much of her early life was clouded by the differences between herself and her royal sister, Queen Mary. As a wife she was devotion and fidelity. As a mother she was fond to adoration, but only one of her numerous children lived beyond a few months or a year; he was the young Duke of Gloucester, and he died while in his early teens and before his mother became queen. As he had been the one great joy of her life Anne grieved deeply for him, never really recovering from her loss.

From the time she was eight years old till within a few years of her death Anne was very susceptible to the influences of the wicked and designing Sarah Jennings; who afterwards became Lady Churchill and later the Duchess of Marlborough.

Anne was born in the year 1664, succeeded to the throne in 1702 and died in 1714. During her reign there was almost continuous warfare raging, a fact which Anne deplored deeply. It was in the third year of her reign that the famous battle of Blenheim was fought, the British soldiers winning such a proud victory.

Till she became queen little could be said of her in commendation, for she had been a selfish, self-indulgent woman and a most unnatural daughter to her fond old father, James II., whose dethronement she intrigued for. And even that father, who had been generosity itself to her, begged for her assistance and love she turned a deaf ear to his pleadings. Also, she pretended to believe the story circulated at the time of James' sad downfall that her brother—James' son by his second wife—was an impostor and not the son of the queen consort. This absurd and dangerous story was put afloat to rob the young Prince of Wales of his birthright and throw the succession to Mary.

But after becoming queen Anne seemed to have undergone a change of heart, and she always manifested the deepest love for her subjects. Almost her last words were to the Duke of Shrewsbury as she, on her deathbed, made him lord treasurer, placing in his hands the staff of office and saying: "For God's sake, use it for the good of my people." And during the last hours of her agony, and while in delirium, she kept crying out as if in real anguish of soul: "My father, my father!" And again, "Oh, brother, brother!" By "brother," she meant the young Prince of Wales, whose birth she had helped to besmirch and whose rightful place on the throne of Great Britain she had helped to usurp.

She was in her fiftieth year when she succumbed to a complication of diseases, after many years of continual suffering.

RUSSIAN TERRORISTS KILL CHIEF OF POLICE AND TWO DETECTIVES

Seven Other Persons Are Seriously Injured by Explosion.

Infernal Machine Fired in the Bureau of Police.

Two Men Are Captured, But Girl Accomplice Escapes.

Odessa, May 20.—The superintendent of police of Odessa and the two chief detectives of this city were killed and seven other persons were seriously injured by the explosion of an infernal machine in the central police bureau this morning.

The machine was deposited in the bureau, just before it exploded, by two men and a girl. The police pursued, wounded and captured the men, but the girl escaped. The leader of the trio turned out to be a Terrorist named Tchertkoff.

The two detectives killed were bitterly hated by the Terrorists, one of them for participation in inciting the outbreak of 1905 here, and the other, who was nicknamed "the hangman," because he had tortured political prisoners.

St. Petersburg, May 20.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Nikolai Lenin, leader of the majority faction, now attending the Social Democrat congress in London, on the charge of high treason. He will be taken into custody if he returns to Russia. The warrant is against "Vladimir Ulianoff, alias Lenin," and it is said that the police have identified him as a noted Radical leader of the early nineties and a brother of the Ulianoff who, with four comrades, all armed with bombs, was arrested in 1887, while lying in wait for the carriage of

GRAND JURY'S WORK IS DONE

Investigation of San Francisco's Graft Nearly Finished.

San Francisco, May 20.—This week, it is said, will see the end of the grand jury's graft investigation, except for the picking up later of loose ends of testimony concerning the minor corruption deals and the examination into the affairs of the municipal departments. Evidences concerning every one of the big grafts which the prosecution announced their intention of exposing is well in hand, and a batch of indictments will, it is expected, be voted within the next few days. District Attorney Langdon stated that the conclusion of the work is but a matter of a few days.

He said: "The grand jury's work is practically at an end and so far as the matter of investigation of matters which we have undertaken is concerned should be concluded by the end of the week. Certain matters must still be inquired into, but the evidence against those men connected with the big briberies is about concluded."

COMMISSIONERS OFF TO DENVER

Three Carloads of United Presbyterians Leave Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, May 20.—Three Pullman cars, loaded with commissioners to the United Presbyterian assembly, which meets at Denver, Colo., this week, left here today. The special feature of the assembly will be the election of a successor to Dr. Alexander Gilchrist, corresponding secretary of the Board of Home Missions, who died last January, this being one of the most important offices in the church.

Among the names suggested for the place are: Rev. George E. Hawes of Braddock, Pa., formerly of Oregon; Dr. John A. Henderson of Allegheny, Pa.; Rev. A. R. Hutchinson, Altoona, Pa.; Rev. R. L. Lanigan, Washington, and Rev. J. D. Rankin, D. D., of Denver.

The choice of moderator, it is said will likely be between the Rev. Dr. H. H. Ball of San Francisco, and Rev. Dr. Anderson of New York.

The committee on the consolidation of the funds of the church, so that all may be in the care of one treasurer will, it is said, report favorably, although there will be much opposition.

Reports will be heard from all the boards of the church and appropriations made for the coming year to the extent of about $700,000. The assembly will adjourn May 20.

HEARING IS POSTPONED

Illness of Judge Sets Eddy Case Over to Tuesday.

It Will be the First Legal Battle in Celebrated Suit.

Concord, N. H., May 20.—The hearing in the Mary Baker G. Eddy case, ordered for today, was adjourned till tomorrow, on account of the indisposition of Judge Robert N. Chamberlin, the presiding justice.

In expectation that the long awaited case would be opened today a great crowd assembled at the courthouse long before the hour set for the opening. The majority of the people present were women, and nearly all the spectators were followers of the Christian Science faith. Three trustees, Henry M. Baker, Archibald McLellan and Josiah E. Fernald, to whom Mrs. Eddy has made over her property, and who are destined to play an important part in the litigation, also were present. Calvin A. Frye, Mrs. Eddy's secretary; Louis C. Strang, formerly an assistant secretary to Mrs. Eddy, and Edward A. Kimball, three of the defendants, were not in court. The seven other defendants were present. Mrs. Eddy's household was represented by August Mann, her coachman.

A great array of counsel was present for both sides. Former United States Senator William E. Chandler was the leader of the counsel for plaintiff, while the interests of the defendants were attended to by numerous attorneys headed by Gen. Frank S. Streeter.

Although the celebrated suit in equity to secure an accounting of the property of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy has been a matter of record for almost three months, the first legal battle of counsel engaged in it will occur in this city tomorrow, when arguments will be heard on the motion of the trustees of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy's estate that they be substituted for the "next friends" as plaintiffs in the original suit. The hearing will be in the Merrimack county courthouse, where Judge Robert N. Chamberlin of Berlin, is holding a term of superior court.

On March 1, 1907, there was filed in the court a bill in equity proceedings signed by George W. Glover of Lead, S. D., the only son of Mrs. Mary Baker Glover Eddy; his daughter,

RUSSIAN HOUSE HEARS OF PLOT

To Kill Emperor and Adopt Resolutions of Indignation.

St. Petersburg, May 20.—Before today's session of the lower house of parliament, from which all the radical representatives were conspicuously absent, Premier Stolypin made a formal announcement of the discovery of a plot to kill the emperor, Grand Duke Nicholas and himself, and a resolution expressing the great joy of the house at his majesty's escape from the danger and deepest indignation that the criminal conspiracy so fortunately frustrated was unanimously adopted.

The Social Democrats, Social Revolutionists, part of the Group of Toil and others were absent from the house when the resolution was presented and adopted.

OUTCOME DOUBTFUL

Temperance Question Chief Topic of Discussion at Columbus.

Committee Will Return Overture to the General Assembly.

Columbus, Ohio, May 20.—The temperance question continues to be the chief topic of discussion today among the 1,000 commissioners of the Presbyterian general assembly, and the outcome of the fight is still a matter of speculation. A sensation was created as the commissioners were gathering for the session today, by the authoritative announcement that Dr. Henry E. Dosker, chairman of the standing committee on temperance, will today return the overture on temperance, referred to his committee on Saturday by the committee on bills and overtures. The overture in question condemns the organization of the church federation of temperance, and recommends that the church give hearty support to the Anti-Saloon league. Dr. Dosker announces that it is the business of the overture committee to handle this temperance overture, and he turned the overture back to this committee. The action of Dr. Dosker is being criticized by many of the commissioners, and the feeling on the temperance question seems to be becoming rather bitter among some of the commissioners. The whole question is scheduled to come up next Friday. The assembly, when called to order today, began considering the report of special and standing committees and boards.

On the program for today the most important report was that of the

To be Revealed by National Association of Manufacturers.

New York, May 20.—Whether or not they favor a revision of the tariff, to what extent, and in what manner, is expected to be announced by the National Association of Manufacturers which convened at the Waldorf Astoria hotel today. The question will come up in a report of the tariff committee of the association, which has taken a poll of the 3,000 members on the question of revision. The convention will continue Tuesday and Wednesday. The speakers will include Charles A. Prouty of the interstate commerce commission, who will discuss railroad legislation, Oscar Straus, secretary of commerce and labor, and Dr. Charles P. Neill, United States commissioner of labor.

PAT CROWE AGAIN PLACED ON TRIAL

PAT CROWE.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, May 20.—Pat Crowe was today placed on trial on a charge of holding up and robbing two street cars on the night of July 4, 1905. Crowe, together with another man, was indicted while he was on trial in Omaha for the kidnaping of Eddie Cudahy. Crowe has pleaded not guilty to the indictment.

ABE HUMMEL HIDES FACE

As He Dashes From Home to Carriage for Prison.

New York, May 20.—Abraham H. Hummel, who, for nearly a third of a century was one of the most widely known and successful criminal lawyers in this city, today began the service of a one-year sentence in the Blackwell Island penitentiary for conspiracy in the Dodge-Morse divorce litigation. A big crowd gathered in front of the Hummel residence when the little lawyer dashed out of a basement door, holding a large handkerchief in front of his face. He ran to the curb, jumped into the closed automobile, and a moment later was whirled away toward the prison.

BLOODLESS CAMPAIGN

Of Army in Cuba Has Enabled Force to Study Island.

Now Thoroughly Familiar With Every Inch of Territory.

Havana, May 20.—Enriched by constant practice in every department of military experience save the supreme test of battle, the army of Cuban pacification, after a bloodless campaign of six months, may fairly take rank as the crack corps of the forces of the United States, without having been called upon to fire a shot or make a single hostile demonstration, it has to its credit a list of achievements of which officers and men are proud.

Among its moral trimphs have been the maintenance of a standard of discipline and sanitation of more than Japanese excellence and the preservation of perfect self-control, while in contact with an unsympathetic population.

Its greatest material achievement has been the production based on countless reconnaissances and surveys of a chart of the island of Cuba, which officers declare to be the most minutely perfect military map in existence. With the completion of this work the possibility of successfully carrying on guerilla tactics such as formerly enabled the Cubans indefinitely to prolong their revolution against the overwhelming forces of Spain may be said to have vanished.

Should United States troops ever be called upon to take the field in Cuba they will begin the campaign with the advantage of perfect familiarity with the topography of the whole island, in-

PRESIDENT IS ASKED TO RESIGN

Mutual Life Reserve Insurance Company Would Oust Burnham.

New York, May 20.—The Herald says that Frederick A. Burnham, president of the Mutual Life Reserve Insurance company has been asked by the board of directors of the company to present his resignation not later than Wednesday of this week.

Action looking to Mr. Burnham's resignation is said to be a result of his indictment and the conviction of his brother, George P. Burnham, of fraud and forgery in connection with the company. The directors said his continuance at the head of the company was an injury to its business and an endorsement of the methods which led to the indictments.

THEY ARE BEGINNING TO FEEL THE HEAT IN THE EAST.

DAVID COCHRANE, WELL-KNOWN ATTORNEY OF DEER RIVER, KILLS ALLAN WITT

Tragedy Occurs on the Homestead of Fred Anderson.

Previous Dispute Over Land Cause of the Deed.

Witt Fired First at Cochrane, But Bullet Went Wide.

On a lonely homestead near Deer River, Allan Witt was shot and instantly killed by David Cochrane, a well known Deer River attorney, last Thursday.

The story of the shooting has just come to light through the arrest of Cochrane, who has been taken to Grand Rapids by the sheriff. The coroner's inquest will be held there tomorrow, and at that time it is believed that the defendant will be able to show that the killing of Witt was done in self defense.

Through a settler, living in the vicinity and who is in Duluth today, The Herald is able to give the story of the events which led up to the shooting, and which will be brought out at the coroner's inquest tomorrow.

The case is an interesting one, inasmuch as the defendant is very well known in the district about Deer River, and was formerly judge of probate in Wright county.

The homicide took place last Thursday at the homestead of Fred Anderson. Cochrane was staying at Anderson's homestead. Anderson came home

GEN. KUROKI VISITS YALE

Where Many Japanese Officers Received Part of Education.

Lunch Served Distinguished Party at the Graduates' Club.

New Haven, Conn., May 20.—The visit of Gen. uroki to Yale today was brought about by the desire of the distinguished soldier to see the institution in which many Japanese officers received a portion of their education in the higher branches. Many of the officers served with distinction at Port Arthur and in the battle on Manchurian soil and several of the officers holding high rank had their preparatory school education in Mark Pitman's school at Wallingford, at the time one of the famous schools of this section. In the home of a Yale professor also lived for a time, prior to her entering Vassar college, the young woman who is now the wife of Field Marshal Oyama.

Gen. uroki and party reached this city at 11 o'clock from New York, and the party included Brig. Gen. Oliver Wellsworth, U. S. A. (retired) and Maj. Charles Lynch of the general staff.

The party took carriages at the railroad station and drove at once to the green, then visited various departments of the college, and then were driven to East Rock park, from which the entire city was seen. At Woodbridge Hall the party was officially received by President Hadley of the university, and here also the Japanese students, twenty in number, were assembled and presented an address, through their spokesman, Dr. Saiki, a graduate student in the Sheffield scientific school. A lunch was served the party at the Graduates' club. There were present Secretary of State Elihu Root, Governor Woodruff, Mayor Studley, President Charles S. Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, President Hadley and a number of professors and the faculty men of the university, besides a number of citizens.

Following lunch at the Graduates' club, the party visited the university dining hall, where the guests were enthusiastically received by the students. The Yale men, numbering about 1,000 arose in their seats, and gave the general the long Yale cheer.

TEAM ATTRACTS MUCH ATTENTION

Armour's Grey Horses Highly Complimented at English Show.

London, May 20.—The team of six big grey draught horses, belonging to Armour & Co. of Chicago, which have been attracting so much attention among horsemen since their arrival in England, made their first public appearance at the 220th annual cart horse show, held in Regent's park today.

The magnificent horses, which are larger than the largest English draft horses, with their brilliantly mounted harness and immense truck, more common in the United States than here, were the center of attraction and the means of instilling more interest in the show than displayed for some years. There were ninety-six entries for the prizes for the best turnouts of various descriptions of horses used for delivery purposes. The Armours' string did not compete for any of the prizes, for which only London horses were eligible, but won unstinted praise when they passed before the judges.

BUSSE REMOVES EIGHT MEMBERS

Of the Chicago School Board Who Refused to Resign.

Chicago, May 20.—Mayor Busse today formally removed eight members of the school board who had refused to resign as requested. The mayor recently requested the resignations of twelve members of the board, but only four of them responded.

Mr. Busse's action is said to be for the purpose of assuring the retention of E. G. Cooley as superintendent of schools.

PICKETING WILL BE DIFFICULT

Judge Sanborn Issues Sweeping Decision Against Unions.

Milwaukee, May 20.—A sweeping decision against union picketing was rendered today by Judge A. L. Sanborn of the United States district court in the case of the Allis-Chalmers company against the striking union molders. The strike began about a year ago, and last fall Judge Quarles issued a temporary injunction, restraining the unions from interference with non-union workmen, and with the business of the company. Later Judge Sanborn convicted several union men for contempt in violating the injunction, and suspended sentence as to the greater number of them, twenty or more. Now he makes the injunction permanent, and so sweeping in its provisions that concerted picketing will be practically impossible.

HARGIS' TRIAL NEARS END.

TALESMEN GROW LESS

Another Special Venire Will Probably Have to be Summoned.

Work of Filling Constantly Occurring Vacancies in Jury Proceeds.

Boise, Idaho, May 20.—The number of talesmen to fill the constantly occurring vacancies in the jury that is being formed to try William D. Haywood for the alleged murder of Frank Steunenberg, continues to shrink and it now seems certain that another special venire of fifty or 100 talesmen must be issued early this week. Some of the counsel were of the opinion this morning that the last of the special veniremen would be reached this afternoon, and that it would be necessary for the court to take an adjournment to give time for the summoning of the new special venire.

There was a scant attendance of spectators when the trial was resumed this morning, and the court took up the work of filling the vacancy created on Saturday by the ninth peremptory challenge. The Haywood family was absent. A number of witnesses, including Bulkeley Wells of Colorado, were in the courtroom. The prisoner sat close to his counsel and frequently consulted with them as to the talesmen under examination.

The defense exercised its fifth peremptory challenge on Joseph Chinn, in the eighth chair. Ten peremptory challenges have been used and twenty-three talesmen remain to be examined.

LODGE NOTES

PYTHIANS WILL HONOR MEMBER

Will Give Reception for Frank L. Young Tuesday Evening.

Members of the North Star lodge, No. 25, Knights of Pythias, are making preparations for a big jubilee, or reception, to be held Tuesday evening in honor of their esteemed brother, Frank L. The Duluth members of the order, and especially members of North Star lodge, which claims Mr. Young as a member, are very much pleased over Mr. Young's election. The reception will be held at Castle hall, 118 West Superior street. Committees have been at work making the arrangements for several days, and the following program has been prepared:

An invitation has been extended by the committee to all of the neighboring lodges to join in the reception, and a large number of members of the order will probably be in attendance. At 6:30 supper will be served in the banquet room of the hall and the rank of esquire will be conferred upon a class.

PASSED AWAY IN MONTANA

Mrs. Emily W. Merritt Died Yesterday in the West.

T. H. Merritt was advised last evening of the death yesterday at Townsend, Montana, of his mother, Mrs. Emil W. Merritt. No particulars of the cause of death were received. Mrs. Merritt was a pioneer resident of Duluth, removing to Montana only two or three years ago. She was 71 years old and was born in Northern Ohio, where she was married in 1858, coming the same year to Duluth. Mr. Merritt passed away several years ago.

The remains, accompanied by Wilber J. Merritt, her son, will arrive in Duluth Wednesday afternoon, and be taken direct from the train to the Merritt Memorial M. E. church, Halifax street and Forty-sixth avenue west, where services will be conducted by Rev. Samuel G. Briggs. Interment will be in Oneota cemetery.

A TRUTHFUL SHOPPER.

She was a guileless-looking school girl, and as she stepped to the glove counter the shopman smiled encouragingly, says Tit-Bits.

"Gloves?" he said. "Yes, miss. What kind? Dogskin is very fashionable."

"Oh," she answered. "I should not like gloves made from the skins of poor little dogs."

"That is merely the trade term," he explained. "They are not really of dogskin."

"Then why do they say so? It is clearly dishonest."

"Oh, it is just the popular name for them. They are a good deal worn now."

"I don't want worn gloves; I want new ones."

By this time the shopman's smile had become a trifle sickly.

"They are all new," he said; "this season's goods. Perhaps you would prefer suede gloves?"

"Is suede the name of an animal?"

The shopman did not know.

"I should like to know!" she murmured. "Suede—now isn't that French for Sweden?"

The shopman fell back on his former defense. "It is merely a trade term," he explained. "These trade terms are merely—er—in fact, they are just, so to speak, trade terms."

And to cut the discussion short he reached down several boxes of gloves. After a long interval consumed in selecting the right shade, the girl made her choice.

"I will take one of these," she said, presently.

"One pair, miss?"

"No, one glove. Right hand, please."

"But we can't split them."

"No? I don't want you to. The gloves would be no good then."

"I mean we can't separate them."

"Oh, yes; simply break the thread that joins them."

Then the young man grew irritable.

"I mean we can't sell you one glove," he snapped.

"The left hand glove is of no use to me," she said, simply. "My mother has lost her left hand, and I am buying a glove for her. Of course, I should expect to pay the price of a pair."

The shopman regained his good temper.

"Oh, that alters the case," he said. "We shall be very pleased—the right hand glove, I think you said?"

"No, thanks," exclaimed the young lady. "You told me you could not separate them. You told me so twice. I don't want to make you tell untruths for the sake of a dollar. I will buy the glove elsewhere. Good afternoon."

BUT LITTLE OPPOSITION

Meeting Will Probably Favor the Park Bonds Unanimously.

Ordinance Providing for Issue May be Submitted at Once.

The sentiment is so unanimously in favor of the mayor's proposition regarding the issuance of $50,000 for the acquiring of park properties, that there seems to be but little doubt as to what will be the result of the meeting called for this afternoon in the council chamber by Aldermen McEwen and Foubister, chairmen of the finance committee and the harbors, parks and roads committees of the council, to discuss the matter.

Many of those most vitally interested expressed themselves as being highly in favor of the project this morning, and as far as can be ascertained there will be no opposition to the move to issue the bonds. The mayor expressed himself as confident that his suggestion would receive the support of the committees in going before the council, and several of the committee members boosted the project.

"I think we all realize that we can never get the property as cheap again as we can now," said Alderman Ribenack of the finance committee this morning. "The prices of real estate are going up and now is the time to buy. I guess there is no doubt that we need more park property, and I do not think there will be much opposition to the issuance of the bonds."

Should the committees find in favor of the bond issue, an ordinance providing for it will be submitted to the council and given its first reading this evening.

The ordinance will not provide for any further issues of bonds, but simply for the present $50,000 issue. Under the act of the legislature, authorizing the bonds, a similar issue is permitted for six successive years, making a total of $300,000 in all.

It is expected that the general plan of spending the money will be talked over to some extent this afternoon. The mayor will be present and will outline still more in detail his plans for a big park system, and for the purchasing of more park property. Among other things, the extension of the boulevard still further west than is already planned, so as to connect with Fairmount park, will be discussed. This would lengthen the present proposed western extension of the boulevard about two miles and a half.

POLICEMAN BREAKS CLUB

On Head of Insane St. Paul Negro With Good Results.

St. Paul, May 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles Dixon, a negro dishwasher in a cafe at Third and Robert streets, went suddenly insane today, but a rap from a policeman's club restored him to his senses. The club was broken, but the negro's head was improved rather than injured by the thump he received. Dixon had a room on the third floor, over the restaurant, and when the proprietor called him to go to work this morning he refused, saying he owned the place, and did not have to work unless he wanted to. Clark, the proprietor of the restaurant, tried to eject the negro, but was routed himself. Dixon then barricaded the door. Patrolman Friel and Detective Springer were called, and when they forced the door Dixon hit the patrolman over the head with a bottle, knocking him over. The patrolman retaliated with his club, breaking it over the negro's head. Dixon then tried to hit the officer with a big pitcher, but Detective Springer got the blow on his arm. Dixon was overpowered and taken to the police station, charged with attempt to kill. He then seemed to recover from his fit of insanity and denied all knowledge of what he had done.

HANDWRITING OF AUTHORS.

Scientific American: An interesting study is the handwriting of authors, as it indicates to a greater or less degree their personal temperaments.

Longfellow wrote a bold, open backhand, which was the delight of printers. Joaquin Miller writes such a bad hand that he often becomes puzzled over his own work and the printer sings the praises of the inventor of the typewriter.

Charlotte Bronte's writing seemed to have been traced with a cambric needle, and Thackeray's writing, while marvelously neat and precise, was so small that the best of eyes were needed to read it. Likewise the writing of Capt. Marryat was so microscopic that when he was interrupted in his labors he was obliged to mark the place where he left off by sticking a pin in the paper.

Napoleon's was worse than illegible, and it is said that his letters from Germany to the Empress Josephine were at first thought to be rough maps of the seat of war.

Carlyle wrote a patient, crabbed and oddly emphasized hand. The penmanship of Bryant was aggressive, well formed and decidedly pleasing to the eye; while the chirography of Scott, Hunt, Moore, and Gray was smooth and easy to read but did not express distinct individuality.

Byron's handwriting was nothing more than a scrawl. His additions to his proofs was frequently exceeded in volume the original copy, and in one of his poems, which contained in the original only 400 lines, 1,000 were added in the proofs.

The writing of Dickens was minute, and he had a habit of writing with blue ink on blue paper. Frequent erasures and interlineations made his copy a burden to his publishers.

There is no want ad. printed in The Herald to-day which does not strongly interest at least ten people—and there are some that will strongly interest thousands.

GOOD WORD FOR DULUTH

Grand Forks Mayor Says City Will be Jobbing Center.

Crops All in Ground and Everything Looks Favorable.

A delegation of the city officials of Grand Forks arrived in the city this morning to examine the paving and municipal improvements in general of the Zenith City. They spent the day about town, and will return home on the 8:35 train this evening. The delegation consists of Mayor Duis, Dr. E. J. Davidson, Oscar Knudsen, O. T. Ellestad, L. H. Sannes and M. W. Day.

Mayor Duis was most complimentary to Duluth.

"We of the Northwest are getting more and more to look toward your city as the natural distributing point for our country, and as the center of the main jobbing business of this Western country," said the mayor this morning. "It has got to be so. The coming of the steel plant will give you just the standing needed to build up such a business, and I am confident that it will come.

"About the crops in our section of the country? You can say that the seeding is practically all done all through Dakota. What little is left to be done is so small as to be hardly worthy of mention. The late spring has caused some delay, but I never saw the soil of the Dakota work up so well as it has this spring. The wheat, too, has gone into the ground in such good shape, that in spite of the late spring I believe that the crops will not be harmed in the least.

"We have a good active little town of our own up at Grand Forks. There is no boom on there such as you are anticipating here, and are already beginning to feel the effects of, but we are growing just the same. There will be more building done there this year than ever before in the history of the city. We are going to lay 55,000 yards of pavement this summer. That is why we are on this investigation tour."

We have plotted, planned and figured, working from morning till night, seeking for a medicine that will take the place of Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea, but we can't find it. Tea or Tablets, 35 cents. Ask your druggist.

THREW AWAY HIS FORTUNE.

Young Englishman Squanders $110,000 in Exactly Eleven Months.

New York Press: Ruined by a fortune! Such, in a nutshell, is the story of Josselyn Robert Augustus Riley. He ran through $110,000 in eleven months—was swindled out of most of it—and has since for years, in various climes, been living the life of the social outcast, the man for whom the world has no use. There is lots of blue blood in him. His father was Capt. Frederick Augustus Riley, who served with distinction through the Crimean war. His uncle is Lord Stafford. The earl of Muncaster stood godfather for him at his christening. A few days ago he appeared in Bow street police court, charged with stealing an overcoat. He was released as the evidence made it clear that some other fellow really stole the garment and unloaded upon Riley the proof of his guilt.

I found him the day after his release at the address he had given in the police court. It was a dingy, lodging house in a slum street and he occupied a wretched room on the top floor. He was shabbily clad and—but there is no need to describe him in detail. Everybody is familiar with the type of human wreckage which he represents—the man who might have been something decidedly different. At the race track; told me that racing life talked freely after we had adjourned to some place more conducive to a free exchange of conversation.

"So you want my story," he said, "You think I would look well in type, as a short human document illustrating the ruin that follows the sins of the smart set which Father Vaughan keeps hammering at? Well, I don't mind. I've got rid of those things I started life with, including I suppose, a sense of shame. To begin with, then, I must have been born a sucker."

"But you weren't born in America?" I interposed, startled by his glib usage of American slang.

"No, I wasn't, but I've been there and picked up some of their lingo. Good place, America, for the man who has lots of go in him; bad place for the man who hasn't. I'm one who hasn't. That is why America didn't agree with me. Perhaps if I had been born there I might have turned out differently, because they have different notions there of the right way to train a fellow in the way he should go.

"But to make a fresh start," he went on "I was born a sucker at Twickenham. Historic place, you know. Americans go there to see Pope's villa. My dad died when I was 13. That was bad for me, because he might have straightened me out before I had gone so far on the wrong road I couldn't turn back. I was sent to Belmont college, Windsor, and afterward to Sandhurst, where they train young swells for the army. That was bad for me, too, for there I got the notion that swells are a privileged class, that hard work is derogatory to their dignity and that to go the pace should be the chief aim of their life.

"I put that idea into execution as soon as I got out of Sandhurst. I went to Brighton for a holiday. There I met the kind of chaps that I have since learned are always looking out for suckers. They showed me how to get a good time and shared it—at my expense. But the expense was greater than I could meet on the allowance my mother made me. My new friends, though, soon showed me a way out of that difficulty. They introduced me to a London money-lender, and I signed some document by which I represented myself to be of age, which I wasn't, and acknowledged the receipt of a loan of £500. But all I got in cash was £150. The rest was in shares in something or other in some outlandish place I had never heard of. They turned out to be worth nothing, of course. With the money lender I went that night to the old Pelican club. We played cards. When we left the club they had the whole of the £150.

"They suggested another visit to Shylock. He advanced me more money on the same terms. It went the same way—wine and cards. In the course of a few weeks I had borrowed £7,000 on my expectations and lost it all. Then Shylock said he could let me have no money on my own name. My friends suggested that I could use my mother's name. I did. The only excuse I can make for myself is that my condition was such that I did not realize what I was doing. That money went the same way.

"Shylock would not let me have no more. My jolly companions let me have enough to keep me going until I came of age. Then I had to shell out £11,850 to settle with my creditors. I was a fine specimen of an aristocratic ass in those days. You will hardly credit it, but it is a fact, the suspicion never entered my head that the jolly chaps who struck so close to me and had such prodigious luck always in winning my money were sharpers. A week or two after I came of age I went with them and some other friends I had picked up to a pigeon shoot at Bodlam, in Sussex. There I lost £3,000 in one day, betting. My friends suggested that I try my luck at dice. I had never tackled dice before, but they told me a novice always had luck. I have thought since that the dice were loaded. Anyhow, when I woke up next morning I found that I had lost my last £1,000 and my friends had all vanished.

"I managed to keep going for a time by the aid of the pawnbrokers, and tried to hunt up my friends but couldn't find them. There was a reversion of £9,000 coming to me on my mother's death. I sold that. Then my friends turned up again. Strange, wasn't it? But still I didn't tumble. We went to a race meeting. There I had a little luck. But that same night I lost £2,800 playing baccarat. Then my friends reminded me of my luck me. I was induced to buy four or five horses, which were sold to me as race horses. I never won anything with them, of course. I had gone the pace for eleven months, and it has cost me just £22,000.

"My friends again all mysteriously disappeared. I ran across one of them a few days later and asked for a loan. 'I've no money to spare,' he said, 'but I'll give you a bit of good advice. Try to find as big a fool as yourself and then do him as you've been done.' I haven't found him yet.

"I tried to find work, but my expensive education had taught me nothing of any use in earning a living. I could only pick up an odd job here and there.

"Often I walked the streets nights. Some of my relatives raised enough to take me to South Africa. But South Africa had no use for a man like me. The best job I struck there was that of a billiard marker at Johannesburg, but it didn't last long. I worked my way back to England after a couple of years there. England had no use for me either. My folks shipped me to New York. I struck a job there as a waiter in a Bowery restaurant. Held it just one week. The proprietor said I was too dead slow for the billet. That was too dead slow for the billet. That was the trouble. Every job I tackled it was always easy to find some fellow who could do it better. I drifted all across the continent as far as San Francisco. Even as a tramp I wasn't a success. And here I am back in old England up against the same old game.

"My mother married a vicar in Nottinghamshire after my disgrace. She sends me small sums of money occasionally—all she can afford—and good advice. But what's the use of good advice to a fellow like me? I'm a failure and my worst failure is that I didn't peg out years ago."

SET THEM GOLD DIGGING.

How New York Irishman Got Men to Make New Cellar Cheaply.

New York Sun: Dan Hussey, watchman, has had a weather eye these many years, ever since he was bos'n on the old Penscola and scoured the seas from Hongkong to the Brooklyn navy yard, and he has kept it open on land as well as on sea. That was why he threw down his pick and shovel in the cellar of the old building on the southeast corner of South and Montgomery streets just before noon on Saturday, and shouted:

"Byes, help yourselves! Shure it looks like gold. I believe it is gold. I've seen stuff loike that all over the wurrld, but this is as fine as iver I saw, even in Massachusetts."

There was a scramble and the improvements in the cellar of O'Neill Brothers' trucking office came to a stop. A dozen of the truck drivers gathered about. Then there came a run with palls and cans. Dan told every one to pitch in and get rich. Little children came running with wash boilers. The Italians working in the ruins across the street of the National Biscuit company's fire of Christmas week, began to knock off work and steal into the cellar.

Every one that came got all he could carry and ex-Bos'n Dan smiled. Dan never read "Tom Sawyer" and he never knew how to whitewash a fence when you really wanted to go off and play, but, although, he is now only a watchman and sorry he ever left the navy, he knows a lot about getting a cellar dug.

You see Dan watches the biscuit company's ruins nights, but he often gets up before noon and now and then he take an off job in the neighborhood. When the O'Neill Brothers decided to excavate the cellar so as to enlarge their stable facilities, Dan got a few hours' work.

"You see, said Dan, yesterday, "it takes a man of experience to superintind a delicate job loike that and so I was helpin' me old frinds the O'Neill byes out. There's so many inspiictors 'round that yeh have to be careful."

Dan says he had got about eight feet below the curb when he pried out a couple of niggerheads. He declares that they are the meanest kind of stones there is and he was bent on burying them. It was mighty hard work finding suitable graves for these niggerheads, and Dan, who has had experience with the heathen Chinee, although he never knew Tom Sawyer, being a deep sea sailor exclusively, saw a great light. A glint in the shaly stuff that he was struggling with caused him to stop. Then he got down to work furiously.

"Keep away; don't bother me," he shouted.

The perspiration rolled off his face. With every shovelful he grunted. These grunts grew louder and louder, and between the grunts he kept warning his fellow diggers to stay in the background. Big Tom White could stand it no longer. He pushed Dan aside and demanded to know what he was so mysterious about. Dan took up some of the shaly stuff and it crumbled to bits. As he rolled it between finger and thumb thousands of bright colored specks glistened in it.

Dan thereupon issued his general invitation and in fifteen minutes there was a run on that cellar that beat any on an East side bank when a story gets out that it is going to fail. The truck drivers loaded up first. Then came the women and children. Dan took two fine specimens for himself and then a council of war was held. It was decided to go deeper. Every new applicant by that time had to dig for his. The way that hole grew made any east side excavation look sick in comparison. The dirt not only flew but it took wings up the steps and hid itself in scores of tenements round about. The saloons began to be crowded and those who had just got rich went into them to spend a little of their newly acquired wealth. In less than two hours Dan saw the hole dug out thoroughly, and, having no more use for the niggerheads, he condescended to bury them himself.

Dan bade his fellows not to be too sure about the find being gold.

"If it is gold, non of yez need wurrik anny more," he said, "because yez have pounds and pounds of gold in your homes."

It was decided to call in the help of science and the government. So Tom White and William O'Neill, the son of one of the bosses of the truck concern, ventured timidly into the assay office on Wall street yesterday morning with samples. Gently they were told to come back in three days and receive the bad news they will get that "fool's gold" has enchanted them.

Dan was on the job yesterday afternoon. He said he never dreamed of getting rich but he was sure that this find was "the finest kind of that kind of stuff" that he had ever seen. He had told the boys not to be too confident. It was no surprise to him that it was worthless.

"But that was a foine piece of cellar diggin'," he said, as he smiled. "I've had harder jobs than that. I'm sorry now that I didn't keep those two foine pieces I dug out meself. Mebbe I'd got me name in the newspapers. I had it there wance. I caught a forty-eight pound codfish in Coney Island channel. Shure he was so big I had to drown him. Yeh needn't mintion me name in the paper, but yeh might say that if annyone wants a cellar dug expheditously yeh know where to foind the roight man."

TALESMEN GROW LESS

Another Special Venire Will Probably Have to be Summoned.

Work of Filling Constantly Occurring Vacancies in Jury Proceeds.

Boise, Idaho, May 20.—The number of talesmen to fill the constantly occurring vacancies in the jury that is being formed to try William D. Haywood for the alleged murder of Frank Steunenberg, continues to shrink and it now seems certain that another special venire of fifty or 100 talesmen must be issued early this week. Some of the counsel were of the opinion this morning that the last of the special veniremen would be reached this afternoon, and that it would be necessary for the court to take an adjournment to give time for the summoning of the new special venire.

There was a scant attendance of spectators when the trial was resumed this morning, and the court took up the work of filling the vacancy created on Saturday by the ninth peremptory challenge. The Haywood family was absent. A number of witnesses, including Bulkeley Wells of Colorado, were in the courtroom. The prisoner sat close to his counsel and frequently consulted with them as to the talesmen under examination.

The defense exercised its fifth peremptory challenge on Joseph Chinn, in the eighth chair. Ten peremptory challenges have been used and twenty-three talesmen remain to be examined.

PYTHIANS WILL HONOR MEMBER

Will Give Reception for Frank L. Young Tuesday Evening.

Members of the North Star lodge, No. 85, Knights of Pythias, are making preparations for a big jubilee, or reception, to be held Tuesday evening in honor of their esteemed brother, Frank L. Young, who was honored with the position of grand chancellor commander of the order in Minnesota, the highest state position, at the grand lodge convention held in St. Paul last week.

The Duluth members of the order, and especially members of North Star lodge, which claims Mr. Young as a member, are very much pleased over Mr. Young's election. The reception will be held at Castle hall, 18 West Superior street. Committees have been at work making the arrangements for several days, and the following program has been prepared:

Toastmaster, William B. Lamson; piano solo, Edgar Rowley; congratulatory address to the grand chancellor, James A. Wharton, who made the nominating speech at the grand lodge and took the entire convention by storm; response, Grand Chancellor Frank L. Young; bass solo, Louis Dwarshak; recollections of the recent convention, George E. Storms; "Ambitious Duluth," Hon. M. B. Cullum; "What Is Pythianism?" Hon. B. F. Fowler; Two Harbors; tenor solo, O. G. Olson; recitation, W. S. McCormick.

An invitation has been extended by the committee to all of the neighboring lodges to join in the reception, and a large number of members of the order will probably be in attendance. At 6:30 supper will be served in the banquet room of the hall and the rank of esquire will be conferred upon a class.

Delegate Elected.

PASSED AWAY IN MONTANA

Mrs. Emily W. Merritt Died Yesterday in the West.

T. H. Merritt was advised last evening of the death yesterday at Townsend, Montana, of his mother, Mrs. Emil W. Merritt. No particulars of the cause of death were received. Mrs. Merritt was a pioneer resident of Duluth, removing to Montana only two or three years ago. She was 71 years old and was born in Northern Ohio, where she was married in 1858, coming the same year to Duluth. Mr. Merritt passed away several years ago.

The remains, accompanied by Wilber J. Merritt, her son, will arrive in Duluth Wednesday afternoon, and be taken direct from the train to the Merritt Memorial M. E. church, Halifax street and Forty-sixth avenue west, where services will be conducted by Rev. Samuel G. Briggs. Interment will be in Oneota cemetery.

A TRUTHFUL SHOPPER.

She was a guileless-looking school girl, and as she stepped to the glove counter the shopman smiled encouragingly, says Tit-Bits.

"Gloves?" he said. "Yes, miss. What kind? Dogskin is very fashionable."

"Oh," she answered, "I should not like gloves made from the skins of poor little dogs."

"That is merely the trade term," he explained. "They are not really of dogskin."

"Then why do they say so? It is clearly dishonest."

"Oh, it is just the popular name for them. They are a good deal worn now."

"I don't want worn gloves; I want new ones."

By this time the shopman's smile had become a trifle sickly.

"They are all new," he said; "this season's goods. Perhaps you would prefer suede gloves?"

"Is suede the name of an animal?"

The shopman did not know.

"I should like to know!" she murmured. "Suede—now isn't that French for Sweden?"

The shopman fell back on his former defense. "It is merely a trade term," he explained. "These trade terms are merely—er—in fact, they are just, so to speak, trade terms."

And to cut the discussion short he reached down several boxes of gloves. After a long interval consumed in selecting the right shade, the girl made her choice.

"I will take one of these," she said, presently.

"One pair, miss?"

"No, one glove. Right hand, please."

"But we can't split them."

"No? I don't want you to. The gloves would be no good then."

"I mean we can't separate them."

"Oh, yes; simply break the thread that joins them."

Then the young man grew irritable. "I mean we can't sell you one glove," he snapped.

"The left hand glove is of no use to me," she said, simply. "My mother has lost her left hand, and I am buying a glove for her. Of course, I should expect to pay the price of a pair."

The shopman regained his good temper.

"Oh, that alters the case," he said. "We shall be very pleased—the right hand glove, I think you said?"

"No, thanks," exclaimed the young lady. "You told me you could not separate them. You told me so twice. I don't want to make you tell untruths for the sake of a dollar. I will buy the glove elsewhere. Good afternoon.

BUT LITTLE OPPOSITION

Meeting Will Probably Favor the Park Bonds Unanimously.

Ordinance Providing for Issue May be Submitted at Once.

The sentiment is so unanimously in favor of the mayor's proposition regarding the issuance of $50,000 for the acquiring of park properties, that there seems to be but little doubt as to what will be the result of the meeting called for this afternoon in the council chamber by Aldermen McEwen and Foubister, chairmen of the finance committee and the harbors, parks and roads committees of the council, to discuss the matter.

Many of those most vitally interested expressed themselves as being highly in favor of the project this morning, and as far as can be ascertained there will be no opposition to the move to issue the bonds. The mayor expressed himself as confident that his suggestion would receive the support of the committees in going before the council, and several of the committee members boosted the project.

"I think we all realize that we can never get the property as cheap again as we can now," said Alderman Ribenack of the finance committee this morning. "The prices of real estate are going up and now is the time to buy. I guess there is no doubt that we need more park property, and I do not think there will be much opposition to the issuance of the bonds."

Should the committees find in favor of the bond issue, an ordinance providing for it will be submitted to the council and given its first reading this evening.

The ordinance will not provide for any further issues of bonds, but simply for the present $50,000 issue. Under the act of the legislature, authorizing the bonds, a similar issue is permitted for six successive years, making a total of $300,000 in all.

It is expected that the general plan of spending the money will be talked over to some extent this afternoon. The mayor will be present and will outline still more in detail his plans for a big park system, and for the purchasing of more park property. Among other things, the extension of the boulevard still further west than is already planned, so as to connect with Fairmount park, will be discussed. This would lengthen the present proposed western extension of the boulevard about two miles and a half.

POLICEMAN BREAKS CLUB

On Head of Insane St. Paul Negro With Good Results.

St. Paul, May 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles Dixon, a negro dishwasher in a cafe at Third and Robert streets, went suddenly insane today, but a rap from a policeman's club restored him to his senses. The club was broken, but the negro's head was improved rather than injured by the thump he received. Dixon had a room on the third floor, over the restaurant, and when the proprietor called him to go to work this morning he refused, saying he owned the place, and did not have to work unless he wanted to. Clark, the proprietor of the restaurant, tried to eject the negro, but was routed himself. Dixon then barricaded the door. Patrolman Friel and Detective Springer were called, and when they forced the door Dixon hit the patrolman over the head with a bottle, knocking him over. The patrolman retaliated with his club, breaking it over the negro's head. Dixon then tried to hit the officer with a big pitcher, but Detective Springer got the blow on his arm. Dixon was overpowered and taken to the police station, charged with attempt to kill. He then seemed to recover all knowledge of what he had done.

HANDWRITING OF AUTHORS.

Scientific American: An interesting study is the handwriting of authors, as it indicates to a greater or less degree, their personal temperaments.

Longfellow wrote a bold, open backhand, which was the delight of printers, and Joaquin Miller writes such a bad hand that he often becomes puzzled over his own work and the printer sings the praises of the inventor of the typewriter. Charlotte Bronte's writing seemed to have been traced with a cambric needle, and Thackeray's writing, while marvelously neat and precise, was so small that the best of eyes were needed to read it. Likewise the writing of Capt. Marryat was so microscopic that when he was interrupted in his labors he was obliged to mark the place where he left off by sticking a pin in the paper.

Napoleon's was worse than illegible, and it is said that his letters from Germany to the Empress Josephine were at first thought to be rough maps of the seat of war.

Carlyle wrote a patient, crabbed and oddly emphasized hand. The penmanship of Bryant was aggressive, well formed and decidedly pleasing to the eye; while the chirography of Scott, Hunt, Moore and Gray was smooth and easy to read but did not express distinct individuality.

Byron's handwriting was nothing more than a scrawl. His additions to his proofs was frequently exceeded in volume the original copy, and in one of his poems, which contained in the original only 400 lines, 1,000 were added in the proofs.

The writing of Dickens was minute, and he had a habit of writing with blue ink on blue paper. Frequent erasures and interlineations made his copy a burden to his publishers.

There is no want ad. printed in The Herald to-day which does not strongly interest at least ten people—and there are some that will strongly interest thousands.

GOOD WORD FOR DULUTH

Grand Forks Mayor Says City Will be Jobbing Center.

Crops All in Ground and Everything Looks Favorable.

A delegation of the city officials of Grand Forks arrived in the city this morning to examine the paving and municipal improvements in general of the Zenith City. They spent the day about town, and will return home on the 8:35 train this evening. The delegation consists of Mayor Duis, Dr. E. J. Davidson, Oscar Knudsen, O. T. Ellestad, L. H. Sannes and M. W. Day.

Mayor Duis was most complimentary to Duluth.

"We of the Northwest are getting more and more to look toward your city as the natural distributing point for our country, and as the center of the main jobbing business of this Western country," said the mayor this morning. "It has got to be so. The coming of the steel plant will give you just the standing needed to build up such a business, and I am confident that it will come.

"About the crops in our section of the country? You can say that the seeding is practically all done all through Dakota. What little is left to be done is so small as to be hardly worthy of mention. The late spring has caused some delay, but I never saw the soil of the Dakota work up so well as it has this spring. The wheat, too, has gone into the ground in such good shape, that in spite of the late spring I believe that the crops will not be harmed in the least.

"We have a good active little town of our own up at Grand Forks. There is no boom on there such as you are anticipating here, and are already beginning to feel the effects of, but we are growing just the same. There will be more building done there this year than ever before in the history of the city. We are going to lay 55,000 yards of pavement this summer. That is why we are on this investigation tour."

We have plotted, planned and figured, working from morning till night, seeking for a medicine that will take the place of Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea, but we can't find it. Tea or Tablets, 35 cents. Ask your druggist.

THREW AWAY HIS FORTUNE.

Young Englishman Squanders $110,000 in Exactly Eleven Months.

New York Press: Ruined by a fortune! Such, in a nutshell, is the story of Josselyn Robert Angus de Riley. He ran through $110,000 in eleven months—was swindled out of most of it—and has since for years, in various climes, been living the life of the social outcast, the man for whom the world has no use. There is lots of blue blood in him. His father, was Capt. Frederick Augustus Riley, who served with distinction through the Crimean war. His uncle is Lord Stafford. The earl of Muncaster stood godfather for him at his christening. A few days ago he appeared in Bow street police court, charged with stealing an overcoat. He was released as the evidence made it clear that some other fellow really stole the garment and unloaded upon Riley the proof of his guilt.

I found him the day after his release at the address he had given in the police court. It was a dingy lodging house in a slum street and he occupied a wretched room on the top floor. He was shabby clad and—but there is no need to describe him in detail. Everybody is familiar with the type of human wreckage which he represents—the man who might have been something decidedly different. He talked freely after we had adjourned to some place more conducive to a free exchange of conversation.

"So you want my story," he said. "You think it would look well in type, as a sort human document illustrating the ruin that follows the sins of the smart set which Father Vaughan keeps hammering at? Well, I don't mind. I've got rid of those things I started life with, including I suppose, a sense of shame. To begin with, then, I must have been born a sucker."

"But you weren't born in America?" I interposed, startled by his glib usage of American slang.

"No, I wasn't, but I've been there and picked up some of their lingo. Good place, America, for the man who has lots of go in him; bad place for the man who hasn't. I'm one who hasn't. That is why America didn't agree with me. Perhaps if I had been born there I might have turned out differently, because they have different notions there of the right way to train a fellow in the way he should go.

"But to make a fresh start," he went on, "I was born a sucker at Twickenham. Historic place, you know. Americans go there to see Pope's villa. My dad died when I was 13. That was bad for me, because he might have straightened me out before I had gone so far on the wrong road I couldn't turn back. I was sent to Belmont college, Windsor, and afterward to Sandhurst, where they train young swells for the army. That was bad for me, too, for there I got the notion that swells are a privileged class, that hard work is derogatory to their dignity and that to go the pace should be the chief aim of their life.

"I put that idea into execution as soon as I got out of Sandhurst. I went to Brighton for a holiday. There I met the kind of chaps that I have since learned are always looking out for suckers. They showed me how to get a good time and shared it—at my expense. But the expense was greater than I could meet on the allowance my mother made me. My new friends, though, soon showed me a way out of that difficulty. They introduced me to a London money lender. I signed some document by which I represented myself to be of age, which I wasn't, and acknowledged the receipt of a loan of £300. But all I got in cash was £150. The rest was in shares in something or other in some outlandish place I had never heard of. They turned out to be worth nothing, of course. With the friends who had introduced me to the money lender I went that night to the old Pelican club. We played cards. When we left the club they had the whole of the £150.

"They suggested another visit to Shylock. He advanced me more money on the same terms. It went the same way—wine and cards. In the course of a few weeks I had borrowed £7,000 on my expectations and lost it all. Then Shylock said he could let me have no money on my own name. My friends suggested that I could use my mother's name. I did. The only excuse I can make for myself is that my condition was such that I did not realize what I was doing. That money went the same way.

"Shylock would not let me have no more. My jolly companions let me have enough to keep me going until I came of age. Then I had to shell out £11,850 to settle with my creditors. I was a fine specimen of an aristocratic ass in those days. You will hardly credit it, but it is a fact, the suspicion never entered my head that the jolly chaps who struck so close to me and had such prodigious luck always in winning my money were sharpers. A week or two after I came of age I went with them and some other friends I had picked up to a pigeon shoot at Bodlam, in Sussex. There I lost £23,000 in one day, betting. My friends suggested that I try my luck at dice. I had never tackled dice before, but they told me a novice always had luck. I have thought since that the dice were loaded. Anyhow, when I woke up next morning I found that I had lost my last £1,000 and my friends had all vanished.

"I managed to keep going for a time by the aid of the pawnbrokers, and tried to hunt up my friends but couldn't find them. There was a reversion of £9,000 coming to me on my mother's death. I sold that. Then my friends turned up again. Strange, wasn't it? But still I didn't tumble. We went to a race meeting. There I had a little luck. But that same night I lost £2,800 playing baccarat. Then my friends reminded me of my luck at the race track, told me I was racing was evidently the proper game for me. I was induced to buy four or five horses, which were sold to me as race horses. I never won anything with them, of course. I had gone the pace for eleven months, and it has cost me just £22,000.

"My friends again all mysteriously disappeared. I ran across one of them a few days later and asked for a loan. 'I've no money to spare,' he said, 'but I'll give you a bit of good advice. Try to find as big a fool as yourself and then do him as you've been done.' I haven't found him yet.

"I tried to find work, but my expensive education had taught me nothing of any use in earning a living. I could only pick up an odd job here and there.

"Often I walked the streets nights. Some of my relatives raised enough to place me in South Africa. But South Africa had no use for a man like me. The best job I struck there was that of a billiard marker at Johannesburg, but it didn't last long. I worked my way back to England after a couple of years there. England had no use for me either. My folks shipped me to New York. I struck a job there as a waiter in a Bowery restaurant. Held it just one week. The proprietor said I was too dead slow for the billet. That was the trouble. Every job I tackled it was always easy to find some fellow who could do it better. I drifted all across the continent as far as San Francisco. Even as a tramp I wasn't a success. And here I am back in old England up against the same old game.

"My mother married a year in Nottinghamshire after my disgrace. She sends me small sums of money occasionally—all she can afford—and good advice. But what's the use of good advice to a fellow like me? I'm a failure and my worst failure is that I didn't peg out years ago."

SET THEM GOLD DIGGING.

How New York Irishman Got Men to Make New Cellar Cheaply.

New York Sun: Dan Hussey, watchman, has had a weather eye these many years, ever since he was bos'n on the old Penscola and scoured the seas from Hongkong to the Brooklyn navy yard, and he has kept it open on land as well as on sea. That was why he threw down his pick and shovel in the cellar of the old building on the southeast corner of South and Montgomery streets just before noon on Saturday, and shouted:

"Byes, help yourselves! Shure it looks like gold. I believe it is gold. I've seen stuff loike that all over the wurrld, but this is as fine as iver I saw, even in Massachusetts."

There was a scramble and the improvements in the cellar of O'Neill Brothers' trucking office came to a stop. A dozen of the truck drivers gathered about. Then there came a run with pails and cans. Dan told every one to pitch in and get rich. Little children came running with wash boilers. The Italians working in the ruins across the street of the National Biscuit company's fire of Christmas week, began to knock off work and steal into the cellar.

Every one that came got all he could carry and ex-Bos'n Dan smiled. Dan never read "Tom Sawyer" and he never knew how to whitewash a fence when you really wanted to go off and play, but, although, he is now only a watchman and sorry he ever left the navy, he knows a lot about getting a cellar dug.

You see Dan watches the biscuit company's ruins nights, but he often gets up before noon and now and then he take an off job in the neighborhood. When the O'Neill Brothers decided to excavate the cellar so as to enlarge their stable facilities, Dan got a few hours' work.

"You see, said Dan, yesterday, "it takes a man of experience to superintind a delicate job loike that and so I was helpin' me old frinds the O'Neill byes out. There's so many insphictors 'round that yeh have to be careful."

Dan says he had got about eight feet below the curb when he pried out a couple of niggerheads. He declares that they are the meanest kind of stones there is and he was bent on burying them. It was mighty hard work finding suitable graves for these niggerheads, and Dan, who has had experience with the heathen Chinee, although he never knew Tom Sawyer, being a deep sea sailor exclusively, says a great light. A glint in the shaly stuff that he was struggling with caused him to stop. Then he got down to work furiously.

"Keep away; don't bother me," he shouted.

The perspiration rolled off his face. With every shovelful he grunted. These grunts grew louder and louder, and between the grunts he kept warning his fellow diggers to stay in the background. Big Tom White could stand it no longer. He pushed Dan aside and demanded to know what he was so mysterious about. Dan took up some of the shaly stuff and it crumbled to bits. As he rolled it between finger and thumb thousands of bright colored specks glistened in it.

Dan thereupon issued his general invitation and in fifteen minutes there was a run on that cellar that beat any on an East side bank when a story gets out that it is going to fail. The truck drivers loaded up first. Then came the women and children. Dan took two specimens for himself and then a fine specimens for himself and then a council of war was held. It was decided to go deeper. Every new applicant by that time had to dig for his. The way that hole grew made any cast side excavation look sick in comparison. The dirt not only flew but it took wings up the steps and hid itself in scores of tenements round about. The saloons began to be crowded and those who had just got rich went into them to spend a little of their newly acquired wealth. In less than two hours Dan saw the hole dug out thoroughly, and, having no more use for the niggerheads, he condescended to bury them himself.

Dan bade his fellows not to be too sure about the find being gold.

"If it is gold, non of yez need wurrk anny more," he said, "because yez have pounds and pounds of gold in your homes."

It was decided to call in the help of science and the government. So Tom White and William O'Neill, the son of one of the bosses of the truck concern, ventured timidly into the assay office on Wall street yesterday morning with samples. Gently they were told to come back in three days and receive the bad news they will get that "fool's gold" has enchanted them.

Dan was on the job yesterday afternoon. He said he never dreamed of getting rich but he was sure that this find was "the finest kind of that kind of stuff" that he had ever seen. He had told the boys not to be too confident. It was no surprise to him that it was worthless.

"But that was a foine piece of cellar diggin'," he said, as he smiled. "I've had harder jobs than that. I'm sorry now that I didn't keep those two foine pieces I dug out meself. Mebbe I'd got me name in the newspapers. I had it there wance. I caught a forty-eight pound codfish in Coney Island channel. Shure he was so big I had to drown him. Yeh needn't mintion me name in the paper, but yeh might say that if annyone wants a cellar dug expheditously yeh know where to foind the roight man."

TEACHERS INTERESTED

In Commercial Club Attitude Toward Question of Salaries.

They Give Figures Showing Scale Here and Elsewhere.

Duluth school teachers are very much interested in the movement on the part of the municipal committee of the Commercial club to look into the question of teachers' salaries.

They all think that, despite the increase decided upon by the board of education, that the salaries of the majority of the instructors in the public schools of the city are too low.

Their principal objection to the present order of things is the maximum salary paid. The maximum salary paid to the seventh and eighth grade teachers is now $775.50, and the maximum for the lower grade teachers is $75 a month. As the school year is only of nine months' duration, the teacher receiving the maximum salary of $75 would only get an average salary of $56.25 a month for the entire year.

The teachers here, or at least some of them, are talking of waging a campaign for higher salaries, such as was recently carried out to such a successful conclusion in Minneapolis and in Spokane, Wash.

Now that the Commercial club has interested itself in the question, they feel surer of success. The municipal committee of the club will meet Wednesday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, to discuss teachers' salaries.

In Minneapolis the rank and file of the teachers stormed the superintendent of the schools and the board of education with petitions for more money, and nine days after the movement was started, they had gained their end, although during that time it was necessary to secure from the state legislature permission for a higher school tax levy in the Flour City. The 700 educators who signed the Minneapolis petition lobbied industriously with the board of educators, members of both houses of the legislature, and with the governor himself, and they won out. There was some talk to the effect that the teachers were presumptuous in starting the movement without first consulting the principals, but they were tired of waiting.

The Minneapolis teachers sought an increase of the salary limit there to $1,200 per year.

On April 30, the school board of Spokane, Wash., decided to increase the salaries of principals and teachers 20 per cent, adding two weeks to the school year. It was on the recommendation of the superintendent that the advance was made.

In Spokane now principals get from $950 to $1,600 a year, heads of departments in the high school from $1,400 to $1,500, and high school instructors from $850 to $1,200, according to their experience. High school teachers of seven years' experience receive $1,200 a year.

These figures were taken from the Daily Spokesman-Review of Spokane, as was the following table, which will undoubtedly be of interest to Duluth teachers:

GRADE TEACHERS.

2 years' experience	650
3 years' experience	700
4 years' experience	750
5 years' experience	800
6 years' experience	900

A similar schedule of monthly salaries—the Spokane table, of course, mentions the yearly salary—has been prepared by some Duluth grade teachers and is as follows:

1 year's experience	$50.00
2 years' experience	$52.50
3 years' experience	$55.00
4 years' experience	$57.50
5 years' experience	$60.00
6 years' experience	$62.50
7 years' experience	$65.00
8 years' experience	$67.50
9 years' experience	$70.00
10 years' experience	$72.50
11 years' experience	$75.00

A comparison of the Spokane and Duluth table shows that with six years' experience the Spokane teachers may receive an annual salary of $900, whereas a teacher here in the lower grades can only receive $675 a year in eleven years of service. Teachers in the seventh and eighth grades here may receive $703.50 a year in eleven years of service.

BAPTIST HOME MISSION SOCIETY

Has Made Remarkable Progress in Seventy-five Years.

Washington, May 20.—In his annual address before the American Baptist Home Mission society which met in this city today, Dr. H. L. Morehouse, who has held the office of corresponding secretary for twenty-eight years, reviewed the progress of the organization for the seventy-five years of its existence, showing that in that time the home missionary force had increased from 50 to 1,535 and that the receipts had grown from $6,000 to $800,000 a year. He placed the total receipts of the society for seventy-five years at $16,000,000 of which over $12,000,000 had been contributed in the past twenty-five years. He also called attention to the fact that while in the beginning the work of the society had been confined largely to the West, it now covers the entire country and is carried on among twenty-five different nationalities. He said demands upon the society call for the expenditure of no; less than a million dollars annually and urged an united effort to secure that amount. The meeting was presided over by W. S. Shallenberger, former second assistant postmaster general, who in his address urged continued effort in behalf of the home mission work. The treasurer's annual report showed that over $802,000 had been collected during the past year.

BODIES ARRIVE AT READING, PA.

Victims of Shriners' Wreck Will be Buried Tuesday.

Reading, Pa., May 20.—With the mutilated remains of seventeen of the victims of the Shriners wreck in California safely at home, Reading today prepared to bury its dead. Because of the condition of the bodies, two of the victims were buried this afternoon. They were Mrs. W. W. Essick and her 19-year-old son, Richard. They were placed in one grave. The husband and father was not in the wreck, he having been detained at home because of the pressure of business, and his wife and son were accompanied by his brother, W. E. Essick, who was chairman of the committee of arrangements for the California tour.

The funerals of the other fifteen victims will take place tomorrow and Wednesday. At 2 o'clock this afternoon the city fire alarm bells were tolled seventeen times.

MONEY SHARK SENT TO JAIL

Kansas City "Uncle Ike" Punished for Taking Usurious Interest.

Kansas City, Mo., May 20.—Patrick J. Hughes, a money lender, who formerly had branch offices in a dozen of the principal cities of the country, must pay a fine of $100, and serve thirty days in the county jail, for exacting usurious interest from J. H. Williamson, a printer. Hughes was convicted in January, 1906, of collecting 7½ per cent a month for several months on a loan of $10. He appealed and the court of appeals, all the judges concurring today decided against him on every point. Hughes' appeal was made on technical grounds. Hughes is well known to money lenders throughout the country.

STRIKES MAKE TROUBLE.

Evansville, Ind., May 20.—The first disturbance today between the street car railway strikers and non-union employes of the company occurred at Main and Louisiana streets. A crowd surrounded a car, manned by strike breakers, and began jeering. A riot call brought police officers on bicycles, who dispersed the crowd.

RAILROADS

TERMINALS FOR DULUTH

Reported Wisconsin Central Will Have Extensive Yards Here.

Will be Needed for Transferring the Ore Cars.

While certain Duluthians are very much excited over the reported purchase by the United States Steel corporation of large tracts of land west of West Duluth, there comes a well defined rumor to the effect that at least a part of these purchases should be laid at the door of the Wisconsin Central railroad. While it is generally believed the new steel plant will be located west of the present site of the blast furnace, it is also understood that the railroad is desirous of securing a generous slice of land in virtually the same district for yard purposes.

There will be room enough for both along the river, however. Those who are in a position to know, claim the main site of the steel plant will be far enough up the river to leave sufficient room for railroad yards between it and West Duluth. While the Wisconsin Central will have extensive terminals in Superior, it will also need yards in Duluth to handle the ore cars used in hauling iron ore from the range to Cary, Ind., the site of the big steel plant being built by the Steel corporation. There is little doubt that one of the primary purposes of the extension of the Wisconsin Central is the conveying of iron ore from Duluth to the Indiana steel plant.

As the plant is a very extensive one, a large amount of ore will be used, and the traffic over the new extension will be heavy. This will necessitate extensive railroad yards in this city for the transferring of cars from one of the range roads to the Wisconsin Central. It is believed the Duluth, Missabe & Northern will bring the ore to Duluth, and here deliver it to the Wisconsin Central. Yards in the vicinity of West Duluth could easily be reached from the Missabe tracks. With roomy terminals in Duluth, the process of transferring a string of cars from the Missabe to the Wisconsin Central would be a very simple one.

Superior is excited over the report of the transfer of over 1,000 acres of land on the Wisconsin side of the St. Louis river, west of Pokegma bay, to H. O. Oliver of New York, who some are inclined to believe, represents the Steel corporation. A few say it is possible that the ore yards of the Wisconsin Central will be placed there, but this is considered hardly likely, in view of the great size of the purchase. The general belief on this side of the bay is that the land in Wisconsin was bought merely as a speculation, on the theory that the steel plant on this side of the river would mean an increase in the value of land immediately opposite, in Wisconsin.

NEW MAPS ARE OUT.

Show Route of Proposed Milwaukee Extension to the Coast.

C. L. Kennedy, commercial agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, this morning received a bunch of the maps just issued by the Milwaukee, showing the route to be followed by the extension of the road to the Pacific coast. It has been announced positively, after several conflicting reports, that work on the extension would be pushed forward as rapidly as possible this year, and that the line will be completed into Butte by next January, and to Seattle inside of a year later.

According to the map, the extension, starting from Glenham, S. D., runs in a northwesterly direction into North Dakota, cutting across the corner of that state and crossing the Northern Pacific at Terry, Mont., and then running west between the Northern Pacific and Great Northern, hitting the Northern Pacific again at Lombard, and running thence to Butte, crossing the rival road three times more between Lombard and the Western boundary of the state, and again in Washington. The survey runs between the Northern Pacific and Great Northern to Seattle. The Milwaukee will cut into the territory of these two roads, besides opening up a large area of new territory which has up to the present time been without railroad accommodations.

RATES READJUSTED.

Old Scale Between Duluth and Sioux City Re-Established.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 20.—Word was received in Sioux City yesterday from the executive officials of the interested railroads of a readjustment of freights from Chicago to Sioux City and Sioux Falls and from Duluth to the same points. The order goes into effect June 25. By the readjustment the old rates which were established by the interstate commerce commission, and which were in effect until December last will be restored. This readjustment restores the old basis of 104 per cent of Sioux City rates as applicable to Sioux Falls from Chicago and puts both places on a par as to rates from Duluth.

This action on the part of the roads follows the filing of a complaint by the Sioux City Commercial club with the interstate commerce commission, alleging unfair discrimination by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and six other roads. The order probably will have the effect of dismissing the complaint.

BENEFITS CONDITIONS.

Reconsignment Charge Placed on Coal by Railroads Pleases Dealers.

The Black Diamond, a magazine for coal dealers published at Chicago, speaks as follows in regard to the coal situation as affecting the railroads:

"The railroads, in placing a reconsignment charge on coal handled in Chicago, benefited trade conditions, from the operators' standpoint, this spring to a surprising degree. Coal production may not be as heavy as formerly, and in fact is short for this time of the year, but the prices are holding unusually steady, and the disposition is to place contracts earlier. Some good-sized orders, that were withheld last year until August and September, or even later, are now on the books of the coal companies. Even making liberal deductions on account of the strike last year, contracts are much ahead of normal. This is traced to the absence of free coal, the direct outgrowth of the reconsignment charge. The movement of domestic coal to the market continues surprisingly heavy, indicating a late consumption, the possibility of a good market in the fall and possibly that dealers are storing more now than in the past. Screenings are strong because the use of stoking devices has broadened the market. The one district sending in coal on consignments, a week ago, has found the futility of such practice by breaking the market for spot delivery.

"Anthracite buying is fair. The city is taking egg sizes and the country adheres to chestnut. The market is in no wise brisk as yet, most agencies reporting buying as rather late."

MAY FORCE THEM TO IT.

Flat 2-Cent Passenger Fare May be Established in Kansas.

Topeka, Kan., May 20.—The Kansas railroads may be forced to put into effect a flat 2-cent passenger fare. The limited 2-cent fare law passed by the legislature became effective May 1, and those who travel enough to warrant the purchase of a 500-mile mileage book; or a book good for 2,000 miles now pay a rate of 2 cents a mile. It is possible that before Sept. 1 the railroads will be compelled to grant a flat 2-cent rate to all passengers in the state.

It is understood that S. S. Ashbaugh, attorney for the board of railroad commissioners, will file within a short time before the board a complaint asking it to establish a 2-cent passenger fare in Kansas. It is expected that an order will be granted then which the railroads will refuse to obey, and the case will be taken to the supreme court on a writ of mandamus to compel the railroads to obey the order of the board.

What Retail Markets Offer.

Watercress, 5 cents a bunch.
Grapefruit, 20 cents each.
Pansy plants, 35 cents a dozen.
Egg plant, 15 and 20 cents each.
Strawberries, 20 cents a box.
New potatoes, 4 pounds for 25 cents.
Veal, beef and pork.

Gently flowering pansy plants are in the market. Plants with bigger blossoms than they probably will ever grow again are smiling giddily at the passersby on Superior street and nodding in a friendly manner at people whom they have no business to notice. A smiling pansy is about the most hypnotic thing that one can encounter without warning upon an early spring morning. A row of pansies glowing from the confines of a cigar box make one wonder if there isn't just a speck of ground somewhere that one could poke in just a dozen plants. Instead of frowning slightly at the idea of cramped quarters for the summer, the pansies nod eagerly and the deed is done. You have a box wrapped up and hurry off with them under your arm. If you want to avoid that this year, remember that the pansies are in the market ready to hypnotise you into taking a dozen or two home, with no available planting ground.

THE REBELLION OF JACKIE

By Susie Bouchelle Wight.

(Copyright, 1907, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"What a perfectly exquisite child!" exclaimed a passer-by to her companion, after a glance at little Jack. Jack's mother fidgeted with complacency, and looked admiringly at the vision at her feet— a vision of golden curls, rich, creamy complexion, and the most tempting briar-rose cheeks—a small boy, clad from top to toe in spotless white. He was a pretty boy. She knew there was no denying that fact and so she did not tarry to ask herself the meaning of that inscrutable look that was dawning in the great brown eyes. A look new and strange, it would have seemed to her, for she was all a-flutter with maternal vanity.

Mrs. Perham sighed.

"How fortunate you are Mattie," she said. "Jack is such a perfect gentleman, and takes all the lovely dressing you can think up for him, but my James—" She sighed again, and Jack's mother laughed, for the mere mention of James, the unspeakable, usually provoked smiles in Oldtop.

"You needn't laugh, Mattie. I assure you it is anything but funny to be the mother of a freckled little tough, that will not stay clean two minutes after he is dressed."

Jack's mother laughed again. "Oh, James is all right, only it is a pity that he looked like the Perhams instead of like our family—that is all! I do believe, though, Jennie dear, that if you would pursue a different course with him, you could mold him as much to your liking as Jack is to mine. Now, no matter if he does rebel at blouses and frills and other things that he ought to wear as a matter of course, you ought to make him understand that your will is to be his law about his dress for a good many years to come yet."

"How can I? I told him only last week that if he would wear a sweet little brown sailor suit to the Fourth of July celebration I would give him a dollar—now what do you suppose Jim said to that? Why, he simply looked up from his paper and said, 'Take her up on it, son, and get your dollar, and then father will give you another to go out and roll in a mud-puddle with that suit on.'"

"Jennie Perham! You don't mean to say that Jim Perham set your authority at naught in that way?"

"Oh, he didn't mean to set it at naught—but he is always saying that he cannot bear to see country people trying to put on city airs—" Mrs. Perham stopped suddenly and bit her lip at a recollection of the connection in which he had said this, but Jack's mother did not seem to feel hit, so she continued: "He is given to abetting James in all of his shines, anyway, and I simply haven't the backbone to undertake the quelling of the two of them."

"There's where you and I differ!" said her sister. "Now listen to me. Go right on and make that linen suit for the Fourth, and when the time comes let him choose between wearing it and staying at home all day, and you will see that he will come to terms; then, when he has worn it there will be no more trouble. Don't say a word to Jim about it, and above all, do not try to hire James—just be firm and positive and you will see that you will carry your point readily. He really would be a strikingly handsome boy if he were well dressed, and whether you will believe me or not, his freckles and his snaggled teeth look a great deal worse to you than they do to anyone else."

They left the room and Jackie, aged 7, looked out of the window across the street at his cousin James turning a handspring in the dust of a vacant lot, and then down at his own immaculateness, with envy and rebellion in his soul.

The Fourth came. It was in the South, where the sound of fireworks did not smite the morning air. Early in the morning the people began to gather from all the country 'round, for Oldtop was to do itself proud this day, and was keeping open house.

Jack's mother, flushed and charming in white and lavendar—the first appearing in anything else than widow's weeds for a long time—came down the street, leading her lovely child by the hand. He was all in white, except for a tiny bow of blue ribbon, which peeped out from under the broad rolling brim of a handsome white sailor—the bow of which tied back the long locks, which were saving for subsequent use. His little shoes were white, too, so he had to walk circumspectly, to avoid mud and dusty spots.

They paused a moment at the gate for Mrs. Perham, who came down the walk, drawing on her long white silk mitts.

"Why, Jennie, where is James?" asked Jack's mother.

"James is in bed," replied Mrs. Perham, firmly. "I have locked up all his other clothes, and laid out the linen suit and the tan shoes and he can either wear them or spend the day in bed."

"That's right—be firm and positive, and you will carry your point, as I have always told you—but what about Jim?"

"Oh, Jim! I'll tell you later about him. He had to sally out immediately after breakfast—you know he is chairman of the committee on tables, so he doesn't know a thing about the unpleasantness," she concluded as the sound of a muffled kick and howl came from James' room.

Jack's mother stood a moment in concentration and said: "Jackie, dear, suppose you go back and talk to your little cousin, and then you can help him dress, too, and come on to the procession with him. If you persuade James to get up and come right on, mother will buy you a beautiful new book."

Jack faced obediently about, and when his back was well turned, he made a wry face which would have curdled the blood of a Goop, for he had overheard his Aunt Jennie say, admiringly:

"Now, isn't Jackie the sweetest thing! I don't see how it will be possible for James to persist in his naughtiness after he sees him."

Jack felt very doubtful about his mission, for he knew that James did not approve of himself or his mother, but the unusually smart raiment with which he had been decked out made him wildly reckless, and he longed for something to break the monotony of his perfect propriety, and even felt equal to the listicuff which he half expected. If James should get the best of him, as he was altogether likely to do, he still there would be the satisfaction of wearing tumbled clothes in consequence, and oh, sweet hope, perhaps in the melee the blue ribbon would be loosened and fall from his hair!

James lay sprawled out in the middle of the bed, with his feet propped up on the pillows, a neat array of holiday garments lying on a chair by the bed.

"They sent me back," said Jack, "to help you put on your little clothes."

"Shoo!" cried James. "I guess papa'll see me through this thing!" With a bounce he landed on the floor, and snatched from the wall a long-discarded Astrakhan cap.

"Come on, little gal-boy!" he called. "I'll take care of you, and we'll go right on to the pavilion and hear the band play."

"Oh, Jamie, you wouldn't ever?" panted Jack, as he raced along at James' heels, and watched the pink nightshirt flopping.

"Oh, you come on, little frill-breeches!" was all the answer he received, and then Jack made a grab for James, just as the gate clanged behind them. He planted one small fist plump in the back of his cousin's neck and then they both stopped and squared off. James gave Jack another of those puzzled looks, and then dropped his fists.

"I couldn't bear to hurt a little thing like you!" he said, and then he had to dodge Jack's fist again.

"Say, Jack!" he said, as a sudden thought struck him. "I dare you—I double-dare you—to stomp in your sundown!"

In a twinkling the lovely white sailor hat was trampled in the dust, and a blue ribbon lay beside it.

"Jimmy! But won't Aunt Mat skin you for that? Dare you to roll over in the road!"

The words were scarcely out of his mouth before a little white figure was kicking and tumbling in the middle of the street and Jack was thinking as actively as his legs were working. He was relieving the pent-up feelings of all the weeks that had gone by since his first realization of the fact that he was not as other boys of his age. He had thirsted for a fight, but the was even better, and he gave a final roll as he saw a team drive past.

"You're a sight!" James remarked, coolly, when Jack straightened up.

"Want to dare me some more?"

"No, thank you—not any more for today—but what Aunt Mat will do to you when she sees you will be a plenty."

RUSSIAN TERRORISTS

Emperor Alexander II. and who was condemned to death and executed. Vladimir took up the mission of the brother who was executed and has continually been hunted by the St. Petersburg police. He succeeded in evading capture until 1897, when he was arrested and sent to Siberia, for organizing the first political strike in Russia, which was the precursor of the great general strike which wrested the present constitution from Emperor Nicholas in 1905. Vladimir escaped in 1901, disappeared, reappeared in St. Petersburg under the name of Lenin, after the publication of the amnesty decree of 1905, and immediately reassumed his old ascendancy in the Social Democratic party. He laughed at the endeavors of the police, who believed him to be a new leader, to arrest him and boldly declared himself a candidate under his real name for election from St. Petersburg to the second parliament. Recently, however, the police determined to arrest him and he removed to Finland.

Lenin is regarded by the police as being the most dangerous and most capable of all the revolutionary leaders and is well known as a writer on economic subjects.

cluding every trail and by-path, and every mountain fastness to which Gomoz, Garcia, Maceo and other heroes of the war for independence were wont to bid defiance to Spanish pursuit. Added to this, the increase in railroad facilities and the completion of the projected system of highways throughout the island will afford such ready means for the rapid concentration of the troops and will make any attempt at hostile concentration little short of impossibe.

The army of Cuban pacification, which originally numbered 6,500 men of all arms, exclusive of marines, has now dwindled by the natural process of discharges on expiration of enlistment to about 5,300 men. There are under Gen. Barry's command about 1,000 marines. These it was proposed to withdraw, but on account of the difficulty of obtaining recruits sufficient to fill up the ranks of the army, they will be retained in compliance with the request of Gen. Barry, who believes that his force is none too large as it is. Of these troops nearly 2,000 are quartered in Camp Columbia, form the garrison of Havana, and the rest are scattered over the whole island in thirty posts, eleven of which are occupied by marines.

Against this force there is yet to be registered a single trespass upon the persons or property of the people, the protection of whom against each other has been the main object of the army's presence, and this is the feature of the campaign of which the commanding general is most proud.

Not the least onerous condition of army life in Cuba is the deadly monotony of existence in the small provincial towns. As a relief from this the men welcome the reconnaissences, and practice marches that are conducted in such a fashion as to make them as attractive as possible to the rank and file, the commands moving only in the early hours of the morning in the cool of the evening and at night.

OUTCOME DOUBLFUL

committee on "administrative agencies, to whom were referred at the last assembly the overtures of 114 synods and presbyteries, asking that consideration be given to the advisability of consolidating the church boards.

On this topic the committee simply reports progress, asks to be continued, and advises against commencing by consolidating any two or more of the boards, thinking if action is taken it should be taken in regard to all boards at once. The committee also took into consideration other administrative agencies in addition to the church boards, and it reports at length on the improvement of executive oversight and direction.

The committee deplores the fact that the church with its pastor and its session is the only unit in the church thoroughly organized. The synods, the presbyteries and the assemblies lack an executive administration head at all times except when they are in session and the committee is of the opinion that the church at large has suffered from this fact. It advises giving presbyteries and synods the power to appoint executive commissions, with administrative powers only, of which the moderator of the respective synods and presbyteries shall be the head.

It advises a similar commission for the assembly to act as a sort of advisory council for the moderator and which may be given the work of some of the special committees. The council, it advises, should be composed of the moderator and the two preceding ex-moderators and three classes of four men each, one class to retire each year. It advises also that the terms of all synodical and Presbyterian moderators be made one year. It presents overtures, covering the suggestions it names, and should they be adopted by the assembly, they will then be referred back to the presbyteries for ratification by a majority of the members, the changes are made by the law.

The board of missions for freedmen made its report today.

shortly before noon bringing with him Witt and Mrs. Witt, who were newcomers in the neighborhood, having been there but a few weeks. They all had dinner at Anderson's place, and then Anderson and Witt started out to look at some land. Cochrane joined them and they had gone but a short distance, when, it is claimed by the defense, Witt accused Cochrane of numerous things, among them being that he was in conspiracy with Anderson to defraud him, Witt. It is claimed that Witt threatened to shoot Cochrane, declaring that he "was from Kentucky and would just as soon shoot as eat."

Cochrane then left Witt and Anderson, and returned to the house. Half an hour later Witt returned and it is claimed he repeated his threats to shoot Cochrane. Cochrane is about 60 years of age and has been in poor health.

Anderson interfered and told Witt there would be no shooting around his homestead, and Witt left.

According to the defense, Cochrane and Anderson then stayed inside the cabin. Cochrane busying himself cleaning a 32-Winchester rifle, with which he had been shooting at a target a few days before. Anderson had just gone to one side of the cabin to get a pipeful of tobacco from a shelf, when he heard outside the door the words: "I'll shoot the old ——————."

Instantly there was the report of a rifle, followed by a second one from inside the cabin. Cochrane had picked up the rifle, which was lying on the table in front of him, and without waiting to lift it to his shoulder, had fired through the open door. The bullet struck Witt in the heart and he expired within a few seconds.

The bullet from Witt's rifle flew wild and passed through one of the windows in the cabin.

Cochrane was taken to Grand Rapids by the sheriff yesterday, and the coroner's inquest will be held tomorrow. It is stated on good authority that the defense have secured a sworn statement from Anderson, the only witness of the shooting, giving the facts about as they are stated above, and if such is the case, it is likely that the coroner's jury will return a verdict of self-defense. Cochrane, it is claimed, had never seen Witt or Mrs. Witt until the day of the shooting. He is defended by G. H. Spear, formerly prosecuting attorney of Itasca county.

Mary Baker Glover, and George W. Baker of Bangor, Maine, a cousin of Mrs. Eddy.

These three "as next friends" in legal parlance, of Mrs. Eddy, complained against Calvin A. Frye, Irving C. Tomlinson, Herman S. Hering and Lewis C. Strang of Concord; Alfred Farlow, Ira O. Klapp, William B. Johnson and Joseph Armstrong of Boston, Mass.; Stephen A. Chase of Fall River, Mass., and Edward A. Kimball of Chicago, alleging that Mrs. Eddy is, and has been for some time, incompetent to do business, or to understand business transactions for her by others, and that the defendants have possessed themselves of her person and property and that there is reason to fear that they have wrongfully converted her property to their own use.

On these grounds the plaintiffs ask for an accounting on the part of the defendant and the creation of a receivership for Mrs. Eddy's estate.

On March 11, Ebenezer J. Foster Eddy of Waterbury, Vt., and adopted son of Mrs. Eddy, and Fred Walter Baker of Epsom, N. H., her nephew, were joined as plaintiffs.

On April 2, announcement was made that on March 6, five days after the institution of proceedings, Mrs. Eddy had conveyed all her property to a board of trustees, Henry M. Baker of Bow, N. H.; Archibald McLellan of Boston, Mass.; and Josiah E. Fernald of Concord, N. H. These trustees asked of the court the right to intervene and be substituted as plaintiffs in place of Glover and the other "next friends" in the suit of Eddy vs. Frye.

Counsel for the "next friends" countered this step on April 6, by asking that the trustees be joined as defendants in the original suit instead of plaintiffs.

To this, on April 16, the trustees made answer and prayed for a speedy hearing on their motion. On the same date the original defendants filed their answer to the original bill, entering a general denial of its allegations and charging a lack of good faith in the institution of the proceedings.

Meanwhile voluminous affidavits have been filed on both sides, including a letter by Mrs. Eddy herself to the presiding judge, expressing her disbelief in the good faith of the original proceedings.

Judge Chamberlin has granted a motion made by counsel for original plaintiffs, asking for fifteen days after his decision on today's hearing to file supplemental bills and pleadings and it is known that whichever way his decision is made the matter will be taken up to the supreme court upon appeal. The latter court does not sit between June and September, so any final decision of the case seems months away.

Allan Hollis of counsel for the trustees, will open the hearing and for the original plaintiffs, the "next friends," De Witt C. Hoyt of Martin & Howe of this city, will make the opening. The closing arguments will be made by William E. Chandler for the "next friends" and Frank B. Streeter for the trustees.

DEARTH TO CATCH PHRASES.

London News: "Song writers are becoming alarmed at the continued absence of a catch phrase," said Mr. Charles Willmott, the well known musical author. "'Are we downhearted?' has he," a good innings; but nothing new, I'm afraid, is likely to turn up until the pantomime season. New phrases have been invented since the holidays without striking popular fancy. We had hoped that some of the seaside pierrots would have devised a fresh phrase. Take, for example, 'Are we downhearted?' There are many stories as to the origin of that phrase, the most authentic, I believe, being that it was an impromptu wheeze from the brain of a seaside pierrot. But the holiday season crop has failed, and for the first time for a good many years London is without its catch phrase. Go to any music hall, which you must bear in mind is the quickest reflex of any street phrase struggling for popularity, and there is no effective substitutes for 'Now we sha'n't be long,' 'Where did you get that hat,' 'Knocked 'em in the Old Kent road,' or 'They're all very fine and large.' Whether the creators of these phrases—each of them famous in their day—have lost their originality, or whether the public taste is becoming more refined, I do not know. The art of winning the public fancy with a catch phrase depends on the skill of the man who seeks to do so. A politician may unconsciously coin a phrase that will cling to him forever, such as Mr. Balfour's "I am a child in these matters;" Mr. Winston Churchill's "terminological inexactitude," and Lord Rosebery's "ploughing the lonely furrow." But with a professional Yorick it is different. The way Harry Randall popularized "Get your hair cut" at the Grand theater some years ago was a masterpiece. At his entry in every scene in the pantomime the trombone played the opening bar of the song. As scene followed scene his hair gradually got shorter, till at last he was perfectly bald, and when the trombone played the notes again he brought down the house with the remark, "You're just too late." Years ago, at the Standard theater, Cyrus Bell, a well known comedian, leaped into fame as the originator of "I never expected that"—a phrase uttered by him each time a property brick or cat greeted him as he took the stage. The following year he won more popularity by twisting the phrase "That's just what I expected."

There is a bone that the opening words of the song "Put a little bit away for a rainy day" may soon be transformed into a catch phrase. It is very popular just now on account of its homely melody and the catchy rendering of the old proverb. It is sung by one of the steadies of plaintiffs. "Waiting at the Church" is another popular song which has met with great success in America, where cartoonists have seized upon a certain line in it and are booming it for all they are worth. One of the most popular airs in London at present is, according to Messrs. Francis Day and Hunter, Whit Cunliffe's "Hello, hello; it's a different girl again."

LIVE LOBSTER IN LIVE COD.

Augusta Dispatch to the New York World: The attention of L. T. Carleton, chairman of the fish and game commission, has been called to a large steak cod recently caught by Capt. Everett Rieker, and which contained in its stomach a live lobster, ten inches in length.

Chairman Carleton, in company with a photographer, visited Portland, where the fish was on exhibition, and had several photographs made. "It is the most remarkable thing I ever heard of in the shape of freaks," said Mr. Carleton. "From the condition of the cod's stomach it was evident that the lobster had been swallowed when an infant, and had been years growing to attain its present size."

VIRGINIA STORES CLOSED SUNDAY

Drygoods, Clothing, Meat, Grocery and Hardware Stores Closed.

Virginia, Minn., May 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—All dry goods and clothing stores as well as meat markets, grocery and hardware establishments in the city were closed all day yesterday. Several merchants that failed to sign the closing agreement at first decided later to close their places at 6:30 evenings. Only two have openly opposed the early closing movement, Messrs. Milavety and Halstein. The Retail Clerks' association placed pickets in front of their places of business last Thursday and Friday evenings and quite lively doings ensued. A large crowd assembled to witness the fun and the police had difficulty in keeping the sidewalk clear. The clerks succeeded very well in preventing the proprietors from making any sales those evenings and promise to keep up the boycott if the proprietors insist on keeping their places open. They closed their places all day Sunday, however, along with the others and the probabilities are that they will make no further opposition to the early closing movement.

PROSPECTIVE ROADS

From Bovey to Feeley and Other Points Receiving Attention.

Bovey, Minn., May 20.—A good deal of local interest is being taken in the proposed new Feeley road. The new road was legalized by the county board last year. It follows east along Trout lake, south through the Trout lake settlement, and southeast to Feeley, going through what is said one of Itasca's best farming sections. Iron Range township has a small portion of the new road to build as the most of the road is in the adjoining town. A portion of the road follows the south line of the township, and, owing to the more prosperous condition of this township, it is suggested that Iron Range should help their agricultural neighbors by building this part of the road without assistance from the adjoining township. The town board will start to work on this road as soon as engineers can definitely locate the road. A petition was circulated for a road running west of Trout lake, from the Grand Rapids road, near the Eastwood place, to the Bovey-Grand Rapids road, striking near the Coleraine Lumber company's yards.

Tower—Saurta Kauttara, a 19-year-old girl of this place, will be deported to Waasa, Finland, by the immigration authorities. She arrived at Quebec from Finland, on Sept. 5, 1906, and came immediately to Tower. She has been acting strangely for the past two or three months, and is now hopelessly insane.

Two Harbors—Archie Cameron, a homesteader who lives near here, is at the Budd hospital. One of his hands was cut and lacerated by a revolving disc saw, and the wound had become badly infected, when it was deemed best to bring him here for treatment.

Hon. John Dwan, judge advocate general on the governor's staff, with the rank of brigadier general, leaves with Mrs. Dwan Tuesday for St. Paul, where they will join the governor and his staff on the trip to witness the unveiling of the monument to Minnesota soldiers who fell on the Vicksburg, Miss., battlefield.

Guy W. Small has assumed editorial charge of the Two Harbors Iron Trade Journal. The management will remain the same. Mr. Small was recently editor of the Index at Warren, Wis.

Emil Carlson, a laborer for Barnett & Record on the new dock work here, fell from the top of the dock Saturday, striking some planks in the water. His right arm was broken at the elbow and his back badly bruised.

Hibbing—The first work which will be undertaken by the newly organized Good Roads Association of Stuntz township, which will act in co-operation with the township board, will be the repair and maintenance of various roads. For this purpose split log drags are now being manufactured in the Oliver Mining company's shops.

MARINE NEWS

ARE WELL CLEANED UP

Big Fleet of Ore Carriers Leaves for Lower Lakes.

Trip of Dredge Enterprise From Sarnia Was Expensive.

The situation at the local harbor is considerably improved since last week, and the big fleet of ore carriers has been pretty well cleaned out, notwithstanding the fact that the Missabe docks were not in operation yesterday. There was a big list of departures of ore carriers Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning.

Lumber boats are moving back and forth along the lakes in good shape. Since Saturday several boats arrived at the Head of the Lakes, and quite a fleet departed well loaded down with lumber. Package freighters are coming and going regularly, and in a couple of days the passenger business will open up with the arrival of the Anchor liners.

That the dredging business must be a profitable one was well demonstrated by the arrival of the dredge Enterprise Saturday from Sarnia. She is owned by the Duluth-Superior Dredging company, and it is said that the expenses of towing her up to the Head of the Lakes were over $100 a day, and the trip consumed about three weeks' time.

The towing was done by the tug Schenck of Sarnia, and on board the dredge as well as the tug report a successful trip. The tug departed today for Sarnia, but the dredge Enterprise will be in use at this port this season. She is a sand-sucker as well as a dredge.

Last summer the dredge was chartered by a firm with dredging contracts on Lake Ontario. The tug James Reid and scow also arrived yesterday from Sarnia.

STRIKE AT BUFFALO.

Freight Handlers on the Docks Demand Increase in Wages.

Buffalo, May 20.—Three hundred freight handlers on the docks quit work demanding an increase in wages from 17½ to 20 cents an hour. The freight house of the New York Central was the principal one affected.

It is said that the strike affects all the transportation companies having freight houses along the docks and that the strike was in the nature of a surprise to many of the leading officials of the freight houses.

It has been known for some time that the men were dissatisfied, but it is said that there was a general belief that all difficulty had been smoothed out and that there would be no strike. The strikers are what are known as "inside men" and are mostly Italians. They are said to be well organized.

PASSENGER SEASON BEGINS.

Anchor Liner Will Arrive With Passengers Wednesday.

The passenger season has begun on the Great Lakes and two Anchor line steamers, the Japan and Juniata, are now on their way to Duluth from Buffalo, the first one due to arrive at Duluth early Wednesday morning. The Juniata will arrive the following day.

The passenger schedule of this line began last Thursday when the steamer Japan left Buffalo for her trip up the lakes. The first trip of the Juniata on schedule did not begin until Saturday, May 18, and the steamer Tolnesta will not leave Buffalo with passengers until next Saturday.

One day after her arrival the Japan will leave Duluth with her first load of passengers on the down trip Thursday evening. The Juniata will follow the next evening and the Tolnesta will depart the following week. The Anchor line officials are looking forward to a big passenger traffic on the lakes this year.

OUTLOOK IS BETTER.

Masters From Port Arthur Say Bay is Nearly Clear.

Quite a number of steamers arrived at Duluth yesterday and today from the Canadian Head of the Lakes and it is reported by their captains that the water in Thunder Bay is now comparatively clear and there is little hindrance to navigation, although there are still some large ice fields outside the bay.

The steamer America of the Booth line left yesterday on her first trip to Port Arthur and should arrive there this afternoon. It is thought she will have no difficulty in getting into that port and delivering her passengers. She is expected to return to Duluth some time tomorrow after which she will undergo an inspection by the steamboat inspectors.

A special trip to Port Arthur will be made tomorrow by the Booth line steamer Easton. The boat will go right through to Port Arthur and will make no stops along the north shore. She will carry up some of the delayed freight and any passengers who wish to go right through. The Bon Ami will take the place of the Easton temporarily on the south shore run.

STRIKERS RETURN TO WORK

Old Men Taken Back at Ecorse and St. Clair Yards.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 20.—Louis Weyand, second vice president of the Boilermakers' and Shipbuilders' union, arrived here last night from Detroit with information substantiating the report that the striking shipbuilders at the Ecorse, Mich., and St. Clair yards of the Great Lakes Engineering company will return to work tomorrow morning, agreeing to submit their grievances individually to President Bisanto of the employers. The company, according to Weyand, has agreed to take all the strikers back without recognizing the Shipbuilders' union officially. It was on this point that the strike was precipitated.

More strikebreakers arrived at the Globe yards of the American Shipbuilding company last night and were escorted past the picket lines by the police. The American Shipbuilding company says it is confident of winning the controversy soon. Vice President Weyand will investigate the local situation at once.

REMAINS OUT OF PORT.

Compass Adjuster Will Do His Work on Lake Huron.

Capt. J. M. Felds, the veteran compass adjuster for the Pittsburg Steamship company and other fleets, has "chartered" Capt. J. W. Westcott's rowboat No. 8 at Detroit and will hereafter spend all of his time out of port. Capt. Felds was at Duluth about a month ago to adjust the compasses of the steamer Mataafa and is well known here.

He has engaged Jesse Hill of Port Huron, to row him where a short trip is necessary, and will go from vessel to vessel adjusting their compasses. Capt. Felds believes it is essential that the work be done in deep water, and so will spend the most of his time in Lake Erie and Lake Huron, as the water in Lake St. Clair is not of the required depth.

When the captain goes aboard a vessel, his rowboat will be towed alongside or otherwise cared for, and he will remain until his work on board is finished and will then make for the next ship. His little craft will carry a signal flag, and when a master sees it ahead, he will signal with his whistle if he needs the services of the compass adjuster.

AGAIN IN COMMISSION.

Tug Record Released From Drydock and Inspected.

After being out of commission for about a month the tug Record of the Union Towing company was released from drydock today and has gone into commission. She was badly injured early in the season while bucking the ice. She was inspected this afternoon by the government steamboat inspectors.

The tug James R. Sinclair which arrived in Duluth from Chicago Saturday is one of two boats at the Head of the Lakes which are equipped with fire pumps. She is splendidly equipped for fire fighting purposes having a pump that was formerly in one of the big Chicago fire tugs. The America is the only other tug which is equipped for fire fighting purposes.

The wreck report of the captain of the tug Buffalo was filed today at the local United States customs office. The wreck took place near Houghton on April 25, and resulted in the sinking of the tug.

MAY ABANDON STEAMERS.

Owners of Stranded Boats at Buffalo May Leave Them.

Buffalo, May 20.—Apparently no progress is being made toward the release of the stranded steamers Hurlburt W. Smith, and Nottingham at the foot of Michigan street, and it looks now as if these vessels would not go into commission this season. The work appears to have been practically dropped.

The workmen are taking out some sand and stone alongside the Nottingham, but at the present rate of speed the boats will never be floated. It is now said the wreckers will have to launch these boats. They must be backed up, put on ways and slid off into deep water. The latest report is that the owners will abandon them to the underwriters before the end of this week.

The boats belong to the United States Transportation company of Syracuse, which is practically controlled by Smith Brothers. Since the opening of navigation the underwriters have been under a penalty of $150 a day, and they won't stand this long, it is believed.

Saxon Is Released.

Sault Ste. Marie, May 20.—After part of its cargo had been jettisoned, the steamer Saxon was released from Caribou island and arrived here at noon today. The forepeak of the steamer is full of water and the bottom plates are badly damaged forward. The Saxon proceeded on her voyage to Lake Erie.

Are Removing Cargo.

Amherstburg, May 20.—It is not expected that wreckers will be able to patch the hole in the sunken steamer Whitaker so that pumps can be used, before Tuesday. The work of taking out the corn cargo continued yesterday.

MORTGAGE IS BURNED

Important Services Take Place at Temple Emanuel Sunday.

Eight Children Were Confirmed by Rabbi Dr. Lefkowitz.

Ceremonies in which eight children were confirmed, followed by a reception, and the burning of the mortgage on the church last evening, made yesterday one of the most important dates in the history of Temple Emmanuel, of this city. The services were all well attended, and the members showed much interest in the proceedings.

The confirmation service was held yesterday morning and was one of the most successful of its kind ever held at the Head of the Lakes. Each of the confirmants was given an address to deliver, prepared by Rabbi Dr. M. Lefkovitz. A most impressive part of the ceremony was the "silent blessing" of the children by the rabbi. Several musical numbers were also given during the service and were of a high grade, and much appreciated by those present.

The attendance was so great at the confirmation service that at 11 o'clock it was necessary to close the doors of the temple. The names of the confirmants are as follows: Norman Cook, 230 East Fourth street; Hugo Freimuth, 1306 East Second street; Samuel Gomber, 1912 Greyslon Road; Rachael Hammel, 1423 East Third street; May Klein, 613 East First street; Hazel Levin, 607 West Second street; Minnie Viener, 714 West Superior street; Alice Wetzler, 1023 East Second street. In the afternoon the parents of the children confirmed gave a reception in their honor. This was also well attended by members of the temple and others interested. The reception was given at the vestry room of the temple.

The event of great importance to the members of the temple took place at the evening service when the mortgage of six years' standing was burned amid impressive service. The mortgage on the temple amounted to $1,500, and had been hanging over the church since September of 1901.

At this service an excellent address as given by J. D. Zien, the president of the temple, who told of the history of the organization in Duluth. When Mr. Zien had completed his address he was presented with a beautiful loving cup by the members of Temple Emmanuel and by the Ladies Aid society. The presentation speech was made by B. Silberstein, who had the honor of being the first president in Duluth.

Following the address of Mr. Silberstein, Rabbi Lefkovitz delivered a short and impressive talk to his congregation.

The day was one of general rejoicing for the Jewish people of Duluth over the burning of the mortgage and the prosperity of the temple in general. It was a day for the exchange of gifts among the older people as well as among the children, the latter making their presentation to each other at the afternoon reception.

GOLDFISH IN PENNSYLVANIA STREAMS.

Philadelphia Record: Some of the streams in Fairmount park are inhabited by goldfish. Where they came from nobody knows, but they are big, fat fellows, with whom outdoor life appears to agree perfectly.

It is supposed that they are descended from some goldfish thrown into the stream by nearby residents who had tired of them as pets. It is not generally known either that the goldfish is a species of carp, with all the voracious and predatory instincts of that disreputable fish.

The wild goldfish are to be found in the pools at the bottom of dams and riffles and appear to be lazy, contented and healthy—rather surprising to such of us as imagine a goldfish fit only to inhabit a glass globe and to be fed by hand with specially prepared food.

Grand May Sale of White Waists

Thousands of Dainty White Waists at Prices Way Under Regular

The unusually backward spring has left the waist manufacturers with heavy stocks of waists for which there is but little demand, as the retailers have not unloaded their first purchases. All of these waist makers wish to dispose of their stocks before the closing of the manufacturers' season which is about three months earlier than the retailers, and in order to move their stocks effectually the manufacturers must have great price inducements. Quick to take advantage of market conditions, we secured hundreds of dozens of beautiful waists at prices much lower than their regular value.

EMPLOYERS' SIDE OF IT

Master Sheet Metal Workers Say No Settlement Was Made.

Offer to Compromise Differences With the Union Members.

To the Editor of The Evening Herald:

"In answer to the article in your paper of May 18, outlining the troubles of the sheet metal workers, and signed by Mike Harney, please permit us as employers of the sheet metal workers, the space required in your valuable paper to inform the public on our side of the case. We were in hopes that we would not be required to go into print with our troubles, but the remarks made by Mr. Harney in his communication, seem to demand an answer, which we will give as briefly as possible.

"When the men went on strike on May 1, a committee of nine contractors was selected to take charge of the work necessary to adjust matters with the several unions involved in the strike. The committee consisted of members of the Builders' exchange and others representing all of the crafts. This committee in turn appointed another committee of five to confer with a like committee from the unions, known as the board of governors. The two committees met in conference and at the end of three hours' debate, the representative from the sheet metal workers informed the representatives of the bosses that he was instructed to stand pat on all the demands the union made according to the schedule submitted to us. The conference ended with the settlement in sight. The following day some members from the strike committee of the Builders' exchange and several public spirited citizens decided that it would be well to appoint new committees from the contending forces and did so, but unknown to the representative from the employers of sheet metal workers of the original committee.

"A majority of the Master Sheet Metal Workers knew nothing of the new committee being appointed, but were, and are now, satisfied to stand by any settlement they could make with the union.

"With reference to Harney's question as to what the object of the conference was for it not to settle matters, we would state that there were a number of differences which we wanted settled, and that the committee from the union informed the committee from our side that he was not up there to make concessions, and that he would have to refer all differences, with the exception of several minor articles, to the union for their further consideration.

"The committee appointed from the employers of sheet metal workers certainly had in mind the settlement of our differences, but did not want to have a final settlement with the men until ratified by all of us.

"We herewith submit for publication a written statement by the committeeman, explaining his position in the matter. The same is a copy of a statement he has submitted to the union and to which we have received no answer. We have repudiated nothing, consequently we have no excuses to offer, flimsy or otherwise. All we want is, what Mr. Harney terms in his closing remarks, 'a square deal.' Now a few words more regarding what we want and which will bring about a speedy settlement. The union in its scale want the minimum rate of wages at 50 cents per hour. We are willing to meet them half way and pay 47½ cents per hour, 2½ cents per hour more than they were receiving last year. They allow us one helper (or one apprentice) to every two men. We want one helper or one apprentice to every man or mechanic. We want the chance and privilege to hire and employ men from the outside, which we certainly do not enjoy at the present time, for the reason that they will not pay the exorbitant initiation fee charged by the local union. We can secure good men that are also good union men in good standing to go to work, but before they can go to work the local union demands of them to pay the difference between what they paid to join the union in their own town and what this local charges, which is $42.50. For instance, a tinner coming here from some town in the East possessed of a union card for which he has paid $15, and is willing to deposit same with Duluth union No. 32 and go to work, before so doing is obliged to pay the local, No. 32, the difference between $15 and $42.50, which is $27.50, for the privilege of working in the Zenith City. The public can readily see the serious handicap we are up against. The union men will argue that any man should be willing to work in such a good town, as Duluth, where they pay such big wages, but at the same time they lose sight of the fact that it costs the newcomer just as much to live here as any of the others, which is their reason for demanding so much more per hour than mechanics in Minneapolis or St. Paul.

"In closing we will say that we have no idea that the fair-minded members of local No. 32 are intentionally working a hardship on the employers and we believe if the matter was left to them they would willingly leave the settlement of all differences to a board of arbitration. Get together, gentlemen, be reasonable and give us a square deal, as Mr. Harney writes about, thereby convincing us that you are not trying to make us do something that really does not help your case, but because you have the seeming power. Give us the right to run our business and help us to believe that we are free American citizens.

"MASTER SHEET METAL WORKERS."

The communication from the committeeman referred to above, is as follows:

"Owing to the fact that considerable controversy has arisen over the question as to whether or not a settlement was made between the master metal workers and the local union by the arbitration committee, selected by the Builders Exchange and board of journeymen of the trade alliance, I feel it incumbent upon myself as a delegate to the master sheet metal workers to state that no settlement was made by the above committee, and no one was authorized to give out any statement to that effect. The reason that no settlement was affected is very plain and is as follows:

"After the meeting was called to order on May 8 and during the time that the different committees were in separate conference Mr. Moore, your delegate, stated that the union to a man had agreed to stand by the rules as they now stood, and the only concession he would consider in any of the rules was the wage question, which he agreed to settle on at 47½ cents per hour.

"We took up in our conference several of the different rules and Mr. Moore was informed that we could not agree on rule No. 5 with reference to helpers, that we insist upon having one helper to each man. Mr. Moore said that he would not or could not concede to this, and that if we insisted on this he would call the conference off entirely.

"It was finally agreed that he would confer with the union as to the question at issue, and that we would go ahead at the meeting that day and take up only the rules wherein Mr. Moore had the authority to make any concession, and these questions would be finally settled upon at that time.

"The wage question and hours for helpers was taken up and settled and rules No. 3 and 10 agreed upon and made by both parties.

"The following day Mr. Moore asked the writer if the rules were satisfactory to the master sheet metal workers as they now stood, and also stated that if they were he would so inform the union, and that if they were not satisfactory he would inform the union to that effect, with the consequence that all further negotiations would be declared off. I asked Mr. Moore if the union was willing to allow us one helper to each man and would have rule No. 11 of 1906 incorporated in the rules of 1907-'08; also as to whether or not the later paragraph of rule No. 3 should apply to the rules to prevail during 1907-'08. I also asked Mr. Moore that should a settlement be made would the union insist upon each individual firm signing the rules in question. Mr. Moore stated that the union would not agree to making any of the above concessions, and that each firm's signature would be necessary to complete the agreement.

"I then informed Mr. Moore that it was settled upon by all members of the Executive committee that no agreement with any change that no agreement with any of the Unions would be signed by us, and that we had made all the settlement we could or would, and that he could so inform the union.

"I will further state that the question of initiation fee was taken up by Mr. Moore and myself, and that its evil as it is now enforced was thoroughly gone over, and as Mr. Moore could not concur with my views on the question, and as we could not agree further, this was finally laid over pending further instructions from the union. I did not at any time think that the settlement we agreed upon was final, and did not think that Mr. Moore expected that the differences taken up and agreed upon constituted a settlement in full. I will admit, gentlemen, that a mistake was made, but this applies to both parties, in that we did not do as the other contractors and employers did; that is, have a meeting and take up our grievances and settle matters as best we could, and what we could not agree upon, to have settled upon by the arbitration committee. On the contrary, we did not meet you before the matter was taken up by the committee, and Mr. Moore came up there instructed to stand pat on your rules originally presented to us.

"Now, gentlemen, it is needless to state that I would not settle on any propositions of this sort, and thoroughly expected to hear further from you, and have adjusted the rules Mr. Moore could not change. We are not asking you for anything, and have no grievances. We are willing to pay 47½ cents per hour as minimum rate of wages, and in return only ask that the rules as signed and agreed to by us in 1906-1907 be allowed to prevail during 1907-1908.

"Finally, gentlemen, I am requested by the master sheet metal workers to ask you to appoint a committee to meet a committee from our side to again take up this matter, and that said joint committee shall have full power to settle all questions in dispute; that if the above committee cannot settle matters as before stated to them, call together the arbitration board for a final hearing. I think, however, that all questions at issue can be easily settled by the employes and employers, without any further assistance.

The second practice of the year was held yesterday by the members of the Company A, Minnesota National Guard, and, although the weather conditions were not the most favorable, some good scores were made. HOW THE KISS WAS BORN.

Philadelphia Telegraph: "She laid her mouth to my mouth and made a noise which gave me pleasure."

In an epic of ancient India, which treats of the science of love, the origin of the kiss is thus described. According to the speaker, a woman was the discoverer.

Thanks to Prof. E. W. Hopkins of Yale university, we now know how the kiss came to be invented. Who the benefactor of mankind was does not appear. His name is buried among the mists of antiquity, so it is now too late for the young people who are packing Marriage License Clerk Goebel's office daily to erect a monument to his memory.

Like all great discoveries, the kiss was the result of an accident. It seems that among the ancient Hindoos the custom was when two friends met to get their noses close together and sniff. Once upon a time some young swain, upon meeting a pretty Hindoo maid got too close, and their lips met instead of their noses. The custom that produces the sniff was carried out with their mouths, and the young couple discovered a new sensation and liked it.

They told their friends, and the kiss was an established fact. Nothing has since been discovered to take its place, and despite the assertions of scientists that the modern kiss is full of microbes, everybody holds on to it.

All of this valuable information was given to the public yesterday by Prof. Hopkins in a paper entitled "The Sniff Kiss in Ancient India," which he read before the Oriental society.

"This sniffing," he said, "consisted of placing the nose near the person receiving the salutation and sniffing audibly. The discovery that this was the form rather than kissing as it is now practiced has cleared up one of the puzzles of Sanskrit. There is a word in Sanskrit, appearing often in the sacred Vedas, which has until recently been translated as 'kissing,' because it was found that it frequently meant an affectionate greeting. Yet it was also found that these books spoke of kissing out a candle and used a similar form of the word for a sneeze. This was all explained when it was discovered that the ancient Hindoos did not kiss, but sniffed.

"Kissing, however, was not unknown among them. It appeared much later than the sniffing, and now has entirely taken its place. In one of the late Vedas, we read of a man who declared: 'She placed her lips to mine and made a noise, which pleased me much.' Another form of chaste affection which the Hindus practised was licking with the tongue. The discovery of this habit has also cleared up the meaning of several words heretofore obscure."

HEREDITARY BARBERS.

Philadelphia Record: A wonderful family of barbers is that of Benjamin M. Youells, who lives at Easton, and who, although 87 years old, still wields the razor.

Of his nine children, all of whom are living, the three sons are barbers and two of his six daughters can handle a razor as skillfully as a man.

The other four daughters married barbers.

Nine of his eleven grandchildren are barbers, and his seven great-grandchildren say they will become knights of the razor.

FIT THE GROCER.

Wife Made the Suggestion.

A grocer has excellent opportunity to know the effects of special foods on his customers. A Cleveland grocer has a long list of customers that have been helped in health by leaving off coffee and using Postum Food Coffee.

He says, regarding his own experience: "Two years ago I had been drinking coffee and must say that I was almost wrecked in my nerves.

"Particularly in the morning I was so irritable and upset that I could hardly wait until the coffee was served, and then had no appetite for breakfast and did not feel like attending to my store duties.

"One day my wife suggested that inasmuch as I was selling so much Postum there must be some merit in it and suggested that we try it. I took home a package and she prepared it according to dirctions. The result was a very happy one. My nervousness gradually disappeared and today I am all right. I would advise everyone affected in any way with nervousness or stomach troubles, to leave off coffee and use Postum Food Coffee." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

EMPLOYERS' SIDE OF IT

Master Sheet Metal Workers Say No Settlement Was Made.

Offer to Compromise Differences With the Union Members.

To the Editor of The Evening Herald:

"In answer to the article in your paper of May 18, outlining the troubles of the sheet metal workers, and signed by Mike Harney, please permit us as employers of the sheet metal workers, the space required in your valuable paper to inform the public on our side of the case. We were in hopes that we would not be required to go into print with our troubles, but the remarks made by Mr. Harney in his communication, seem to demand an answer, which we will give as briefly as possible.

"When the men went on strike on May 1, a committee of nine contractors was selected to take charge of the work necessary to adjust matters with the several unions involved in the strike. The committee consisted of members of the Builders' exchange and others representing all of the crafts. This committee in turn appointed another committee of five to confer with a like committee from the unions, known as the board of governors. The two committees met in conference and at the end of three hours' debate, the representative from the sheet metal workers informed the representatives of the bosses that he was instructed to stand pat on all the demands the union made according to the schedule submitted to us. The conference ended with no settlement in sight. The following day some members from the strike committee of the Builders' exchange and several public spirited citizens decided that it would be well to appoint new committees from the contending forces and did so, but unknown to the representative from the employers of sheet metal workers of the original committee.

"A majority of the Master Sheet Metal Workers knew nothing of the new committee being appointed, but were, and are now, satisfied to stand by any settlement they could make with the union.

"With reference to Harney's question as to what the object of the conference was for if not to settle matters, we would state that there were a number of differences which we wanted settled, and that the committee from the union informed the committee from our side that he was not up there to make concessions, and that he would have to refer all differences, with the exception of several minor articles, to the union for their further consideration.

"The committee appointed from the employers of sheet metal workers certainly had in mind the settlement of our differences, but did not want to have a final settlement with the men until ratified by all of us.

"We herewith submit for publication a written statement by the committeeman, explaining his position in the matter. The same is a copy of a statement he has submitted to the union and to which we have received no answer. We have repudiated nothing, consequently we have no excuses to offer, flimsy or otherwise. All we want is, what Mr. Harney terms in his closing remarks, 'a square deal.' Now a few words more regarding what we want and which will bring about a speedy settlement. The union in its scale want the minimum rate of wages at 50 cents per hour. We are willing to meet them half way and pay 47½ cents per hour, 2½ cents per hour more than they were receiving last year. They allow us one helper or one apprentice to every two men. We want the chance and privilege to hire and employ men from the outside, which we certainly do not enjoy at the present time, for the reason that they will not pay the exorbitant initiation fee charged by the local union. We can secure good men that are also good union men in good standing to go to work, but before they can go to work the local union demands of them to pay the difference between what they paid to join the union in their own town and what this local charges, which is $42.50. For instance, a tinner coming here from some town in the East possessed of a union card for which he has paid $15, and is willing to deposit same with Duluth union No. 32 and go to work, before so doing is obliged to pay the local, No. 32, the difference between $15 and $42.50, which is $27.50, for the privilege of working in the Zenith City. The public can readily see the serious handicap we are up against. The union men will argue that any man should be willing to work in such a good town, as Duluth, where they pay such big wages, but at the same time they lose sight of the fact that it costs the newcomer just as much to live here as any of the others, which is their reason for demanding so much more per hour than mechanics in Minneapolis or St. Paul.

"In closing we will say that we have no idea that the fair-minded members of local No. 32 are intentionally working a hardship on the employers and we believe if the matter was left to them they would willingly leave the settlement of all differences to a board of arbitration. Get together, gentlemen, be reasonable and give us a square deal, as Mr. Harney writes about, thereby convincing us that you are not trying to make us do something that really does not help your case, but because you have the seaming power. Give us the right to run our business and help us to believe that we are free American citizens.

"MASTER SHEET METAL WORKERS."

The communication from the committeeman referred to above, is as follows:

"Owing to the fact that considerable controversy has arisen over the question as to whether or not a settlement was made between the master metal workers and the local union by the arbitration committee, selected by the Builders Exchange and board of journeymen of the change and board of journeymen of the trade alliance, I feel it incumbent upon myself as a delegate to the master sheet metal workers to state that no settlement was made by the above committee, and no one was authorized to give out any statement to that effect. The reason that no settlement was affected is very plain and is as follows:

"After the meeting was called to order on May 8 and during the time that the different committees were in separate conference Mr. Moore, your delegate, stated that the union to a man had agreed to stand by the rules as they now stood, and the only concession he would consider in any of the rules was the wage question, which he agreed to settle on at 47½ cents per hour.

"We took up in our conference several of the different rules and Mr. Moore was informed that we could not agree on rule No. 5 with reference to helpers, that we insist upon having one helper to each man. Mr. Moore said that he would not or could not concede to this, and that if we insisted on this he would call the conference off entirely.

"It was finally agreed that he would confer with the union as to the question at issue, and that we would go ahead at the meeting that day and take up only the rules wherein Mr. Moore had the authority to make any concession, and these questions would be finally settled upon at that time.

"The wage question and hours for helpers was taken up and settled and rules No. 3 and 10 agreed upon and made by both parties.

"The following day Mr. Moore asked the writer if the rules were satisfactory to the master sheet metal workers as they now stood, and also stated that if they were he would so inform the union, and that if they were not satisfactory he would inform the union to that effect, with the consequence that all further negotiations would be declared off. I asked Mr. Moore if the union was willing to allow us one helper to each man and would how is one helper to each man and would have rule No. 11 of 1906 rules incorporated in the rules of 1907-'08, also as to rule No. 3 should apply to the rules to prevail during 1907-'08. I also asked Mr. Moore that should a settlement be made would the union insist upon each individual firm signing the rules in question. Mr. Moore stated that the union would not agree to making any of the above concessions, and that each firm's signature would be necessary to complete the agreement.

"I then informed Mr. Moore that it was settled upon by all members of the Exchange that no agreement with any of the Unions would be signed by us, and that we had made all the settlement we could or would, and that he could so inform the union.

"I will further state that the question of initiation fee was taken up by Mr. Moore and myself, and that its evil as it is now enforced was thoroughly gone over, and as Mr. Moore could not concur with my views on the question, and as we could not agree further, this was finally laid over pending further instructions from the union. I did not at any time think that the settlement we agreed upon was final, and did not think that Mr. Moore expected that the differences taken up and agreed upon constituted a settlement in full. I will admit, gentlemen, that a mistake was made, but this applies to both parties, in that we did not do as the other contractors and employers did; that is, have a meeting and take up our grievances and settle matters as best we could, and what we could not agree upon, to have settled upon by the arbitration committee. On the contrary, we did not meet you before the matter was taken up by the committee, and Mr. Moore came up there instructed to stand pat on your rules originally presented to us.

"Now, gentlemen, it is needless to state that I would not settle on any propositions of this sort, and thoroughly expected to hear further from you, and have adjusted the rules Mr. Moore could not change. We are not asking you for anything, and have no grievances. We are willing to pay 47½ cents per hour as minimum rate of wages, and in return only ask that the rules as signed and agreed to by us in 1906-1907 be allowed to prevail during 1907-1908.

"Finally, gentlemen, I am requested by the master sheet metal workers to ask you to appoint a committee to meet a committee from our side to again take up this matter, and that said joint committee shall have full power to settle all questions in dispute, that if the above committee cannot settle matters as before stated to them, call together the arbitration board for a final hearing. I think, however, that all questions at issue can be easily settled by the employes and employers, without any further assistance.

SOLDIERS HOLD GOOD PRACTICE

Members of Company A. Do Good Shooting at Range.

The second practice of the year was held yesterday by the members of the Company A, Minnesota National Guard, and, although the weather conditions were not the most favorable, some good scores were made. The wind was blowing at a good rate of speed over the range, but the boys are all well pleased at the showing made.

The members of the company were also out a week ago yesterday, but at that time the weather was still more unfavorable. Out of a possible fifty points the scores made by the men were as follows:

	200 yds.	300 yds.
Capt. Franklin	35	36
Private Aronson	32	30
Private Johnson	29	33
Private Amundson	41	12
Corporal Nelson	43	39
Corporal Rabidaux	41	37
Private Moran	34	38
Sergeant R. Leo	34	39
Sergeant Bentson	42	37
Lieut. E. Frick	39	36

HOW THE KISS WAS BORN.

Philadelphia Telegraph: "She laid her mouth to my mouth and made a noise which gave me pleasure."

In an epic of ancient India, which treats of the science of love, the origin of the kiss is thus described. According to the speaker, a woman was the discoverer.

Thanks to Prof. E. W. Hopkins of Yale university, we now know how the kiss came to be invented. Who the benefactor of mankind was does not appear. His name is buried among the mists of antiquity, so it is now too late for the young people who are packing Marriage License Clerk Goebel's office daily to erect a monument to his memory.

Like all great discoveries, the kiss was the result of an accident. It seems that among the ancient Hindoos the custom was when two friends met to get their noses close together and sniff. Once upon a time some young swain, upon meeting a pretty Hindoo maid got too close, and their lips met instead of their noses. The custom that produces the sniff was carried out with their mouths, and the young couple discovered a new sensation and liked it.

They told their friends, and the kiss was an established fact. Nothing has since been discovered to take its place, and despite the assertions of scientists that the modern kiss is full of microbes, everybody holds on to it.

All of this valuable information was given to the public yesterday by Prof. Hopkins in a paper entitled "The Sniff Kiss in Ancient India," which he read before the Oriental society.

"This sniffing," he said, "consisted of placing the nose near the person receiving the salutation and sniffing audibly. The discovery that this was the form rather than kissing as it is now practiced has cleared up one of the puzzles of Sanskrit. There is a word in Sanskrit, appearing often in the sacred Vedas, which has until recently been translated as 'kissing,' because it was found that it frequently meant an affectionate greeting. Yet it was also found that these books spoke of kissing out a candle and used a similar form of the word for 'to sneeze.' This was all explained when it was discovered that the ancient Hindoos did not kiss, but sniffed.

"Kissing, however, was not unknown among them. It appeared much later than the sniffing, and now has entirely taken its place. In one of the late Vedas, we read of a man who declared: 'She placed her lips to mine and made a noise, which pleased me much.' Another form of chaste affection which the Hindus practised was licking with the tongue. The discovery of this habit has also cleared up the meaning of several words heretofore obscure."

HEREDITARY BARBERS.

Philadelphia Record: A wonderful family of barbers is that of Benjamin M. Youells, who lives at Easton, and who, although 87 years old, still wields the razor.

Of his nine children, all of whom are living, the three sons are barbers and two of his six daughters can handle a razor as skillfully as a man.

The other four daughters married barbers.

Nine of his eleven grandchildren are barbers, and his seven great-grandchildren say they will become knights of the razor.

FIT THE GROCER.

Wife Made the Suggestion.

A grocer has excellent opportunity to know the effects of special foods on his customers. A Cleveland grocer has a long list of customers that have been helped in health by leaving off coffee and using Postum Food Coffee.

He says, regarding his own experience: "Two years ago I had been drinking coffee and must say that I was a most wrecked in my nerves.

"Particularly in the morning I was so irritable and upset that I could hardly wait until the coffee was served, and then had no appetite for breakfast and did not feel like attending to my store duties.

"One day my wife suggested that inasmuch as I was selling so much Postum there must be some merit in it and suggested that we try it. I took home a package and she prepared it according to directions. The result was a very happy one. My nervousness gradually disappeared and today I am all right. I would advise everyone affected in any way with nervousness or stomach troubles, to leave off coffee and use Postum Food Coffee." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

CONFERENCE FOR DULUTH

Swedish Baptists Will Hold State Meeting in City.

Three Hundred Strangers Expected Here to Attend Gathering.

The forty-ninth annual conference of the Swedish Baptist church of Minnesota will be held in Duluth, June 20, 21, 22, and 23.

The sessions will be held in Bethel Swedish Baptist church, Ninth avenue east and Third street, of which Rev. Hjalmar Henrickson is pastor.

Arrangements are being made now for the conference and for the entertainment of the delegates and visitors who will be here during the meetings. It is expected that fully 300 members of the Swedish Baptist church from outside the city will be present.

The officers of the conference are: President, Rev. O. Bedien of Minneapolis, vice president, Rev. P. G. Nilson of Brainerd; corresponding secretary, Rev. F. Lovene of Maynard; recording secretary, Rev. Bennett Ericson of Cambridge; treasurer, Rev. C. Hedberg of Minneapolis.

Among those who will be here to attend the conference are Rev. E. R. Pope, Rev. O. A. Williams, E. Bjorkquist, missionary; Sunday School Missionary C. E. Westh, Sunday School Missionary E. L. Lindblad, Rev. C. A. Saljquist, formerly a missionary to China, Rev. M. Larson of St. Paul, Rev. C. E. Oberg of Worthington, Rev. O. L. Lindberg of Red Wing and Rev. Andrew Blomgren of Isanti, who will deliver the annual conference sermon.

FORMER PASTOR PREACHES.

Rev. C. Silene Conducts Services at First Swedish Baptist Church.

Rev. C. Silene of Preston, Wash., formerly pastor of the First Swedish Baptist church in the West end, preached the sermon in that church at the morning services yesterday. His text was "Happy is he who trusts in the Lord." He urged his hearers to put their faith in God if they would be happy, and lead the right kind of lives.

The sermon was listened to with interest by a large congregation and at the close of the services many greeted the former Duluth pastor. Rev. Mr. Silene was pastor of the First Swedish Baptist church from 1890 to 1895.

Mrs. Hagberg sang two beautiful solos, one of which was composed by Rev. Mr. Silene, while he was pastor of a church at Austin, Tex.

SALOONS PROTECTED.

Lecturer at Y. M. C. A. Meeting Declares It is Unconstitutional.

"Christian Citizenship," was the subject of Oliver W. Stewart's lecture delivered yesterday afternoon at the meeting of men at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium. Mr. Stewart comes from Chicago and is a member of the legislature of the state of Illinois.

The greater part of Mr. Stewart's lecture was devoted to the saloon question which he maintains will soon become the vital political and social issue of future times. The license system was assailed by the speaker who holds that legal protection of saloons is unconstitutional.

Mr. Stewart declared that he did not favor violent methods in opposing the saloon business, such as have been employed by Mrs. Carrie Nation in Kansas and elsewhere, but he is of the opinion that the law should not protect the saloon men as it does.

It is Mr. Stewart's opinion that the nation will outgrow the saloons in time. He referred to the increasing spirit of brotherhood between men and stated that the era of universal peace is approaching. He maintains that in time the social and moral status of the nation will advance beyond the sordid things of life to such an extent that the saloon will be cast out and its votaries thrown aside in the march of progress.

What the Y. M. C. A. can do in the work of reaching a solution of the saloon question he said is to concentrate its efforts with other organizations, to withhold all possible patronage and strike at the cause rather than at the saloon itself. He commended the Y. M. C. A. for what has already been done by the organization toward this end.

BODY BROUGHT TO THIS CITY

Remains of Frank Marx, Drowned in Cloquet River.

The body of Frank Marx, the young man who was drowned in the Cloquet river, Friday afternoon, while working on a log drive, about thirty-five miles above Scanlon, was brought to Stewart's undertaking rooms in this city, yesterday. It has been discovered that the young man has relatives in La Salle, Ill., and also has a sister living at Cleveland, Ohio. The body will be held here until word from them is received.

The drowning was one of the most peculiar on record. Marx was wading across the river, at a point where he believed it to be very shallow. The water was scarcely up to his knees most of the way across, but there was a sharp drop about the middle of the stream, where the water was a little over six feet deep. Marx was not aware of this, and stepped off, sinking so quickly that he struck the bottom, and his feet became embedded in the soft mud, preventing him from rising. Companions who were working nearby did not see him go under, but saw his hat floating on the water. He was found standing bolt upright against the side of the sharp drop in the river bottom, with his head scarcely six inches under water. Life was extinct, and all efforts to revive him proved vain.

MUCH DISCUSSION

Over Mayor Busse's Action in Asking Resignation of School Board.

Chicago, May 20.—Mayor Busse has stirred up a great deal of discussion by his recent action, said to be unprecedented, of asking for the resignation of twelve members of the school board, who had been appointed by the previous Democratic mayor, Judge Dunne.

Four resignations have been received. Six trustees are talking of a legal fight and two have not been reached because they are absent from the city. Various reasons are assigned for the mayor's action in demanding the resignations. The one most commonly accepted, however, in the absence of the statement from the mayor himself is that the mayor wished to make certain the retention of E. G. Cooley, superintendent of schools. The board appointed by Mayor Dunne included many trustees alleged to be antagonistic to the present superintendent. There has been a good deal of talk, however, that certain of the trustees contemplated holding the election much earlier than usual for the purpose of ousting Mr. Cooley. Report has it that when this news reached Mayor Busse's ears he made the sudden determination to demand the resignation of trustees inimical to the present government.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Following a whirlwind popular subscription campaign of ten days, the members of the Young Women's Christian association of Pittsburg, Pa., have raised a building fund of over $300,000, thereby earning an endowment fund of $200,000 from H. C. Frick for the purpose of building a permanent home for the association in Pittsburg.

Eight young women were precipitated into the North Canadian river, twenty feet deep, at Wheeling Park, Okla., Sunday. Two of them, Miss Mamie Wing and Miss Mattie Dorns, were drowned. The others were rescued with difficulty.

Late Saturday night a satchel containing a bomb was found in a Sutter street car at the barn at Oak and Broderick streets, San Francisco. The fuse had been lighted, but the spark died out before reaching the powder. The United Railroads officials believe that the infernal machine was left in the car by a strike sympathizer.

Leonora Gazzanna, 22 years old, and Louis Messena, 19 years old, were probably fatally shot Sunday at Bessemer, Pa. The woman's husband is alleged to have done the shooting as the result of jealousy.

Two children of John Goodlin, one 15 months and the other 4 years old, were suffocated Sunday night at Scotthaven, N. C. A lamp left in the room where the children were sleeping had exploded, setting fire to the furnishings.

While canoeing in the Meramec river near St. Louis Sunday evening, Lee B. Adams, well known in business and club circles, was drowned. The canoe capsized.

SCHMITZ WANTS ANOTHER JUDGE

To Hear His Case, Alleging That Dunne is Prejudiced.

San Francisco, May 20.—District Attorney Langdon has been served by Mayor Schmitz's attorneys, Metson, Campbell & Drew, and John T. Barrett and C. H. Farrell, with notices of a motion for substitution of a trial judge on the ground that Judge Frank H. Dunne is disqualified by bias and prejudice. Accompanying this motion is a lengthy affidavit by Schmitz in which charges of an extremely sensational nature were made against Rudolph Spreckels, his associates in the bribery graft prosecution and Judge Dunne himself.

Among Schmitz's allegations are the following: That Mr. Spreckels and those who are with him, the financial guarantors of the bribery graft investigation and prosecution, long since exhausted the original fund of $100,000 pledged by Spreckels, and have expended nearly $1,000,000 in a municipal purification campaign; that the expenditure of this vast sum of money is by way of an investment from which actual moneyed returns are expected; that Spreckels and his prosecuting associates plan to overthrow the present municipal administration in order that they themselves assume the reigns of government and secure for themselves street railway and water franchises that will net them millions of dollars of the public money; that Judge Dunne is aware of this intent and purpose and is therewith in accord; that the conviction of Schmitz is desired as a means to these ends, and that it is the wish of Judge Dunne that a biased and prejudiced jury be selected to secure such conviction; that for that and various reasons set forth recently by Abraham Ruef in his application for a substitute for trial judge, it is impossible for Schmitz to have a fair and impartial trial at the hands of Judge Dunne.

FOREMAN OF LOG DRIVE DROWNED AT ESCANABA.

Escanaba, Mich., May 20.—M. Carr, foreman of the I. Stephenson company's log drive, was drowned in the Escanaba river early yesterday and his body has not yet been recovered. Carr was in a boat at the head of the drive and, in attempting to jump Chandler's falls, the boat capsized. Seven million feet of logs were passing in the stream where the body was lost and the rescue work was greatly hindered.

CELEBRATE FLAG DAY.

Friday, June 14, is Flag day, and as such it is becoming the practice, and a mighty good practice it is, to give it some special attention, and to make it more or less a day for reviving and stimulating patriotism, not only among the youth of the land, but among the grown folks, who need it not a whit less.

Usually the exercises in observation of the day are centered in the public schools, but as the schools of Duluth will have suspended for the summer before that time, that will not be practicable here this year.

However, the mayor can issue a proclamation calling attention to the day, and he says he is going to do it. There can be public exercises of a patriotic nature, and some of Duluth's patriotic citizens should attend to this at once. At the very least, everybody can display a flag, even if it is a very small one, for flags can be bought very cheaply nowadays.

At any rate, something should be done in commemoration of the fact that on June 14, 1777, congress officially declared what our flag should be, that the spirit of patriotism may be stimulated by a recollection of what the Red, White and Blue stand for, and what glorious rights and privileges have developed beneath the starry banner.

ABOLISHING RAILROAD TAXES.

The Elk River Star-News discusses, with evident approval, though without giving it absolute support, the theory of an "old time legislator" that it is a mistake to tax railroads or other public service corporations, on the ground that farmers and laborers pay all the taxes assessed against them.

This ingenious argument is advanced in the legislature every time it is proposed to increase railroad taxes and it must be admitted that it has a touch of plausibility about it that catches even men of some discernment.

It is perfectly true that whatever taxes a railroad is called upon to pay are paid by the people. It is also true that the people pay the taxes of every other public service corporation.

But it is equally true that a proportion of the cost of whatever people buy, whether they are farmers, laborers, merchants or professional men, is due to taxation.

When you buy a pound of steak from the butcher, you help him pay his taxes. When the butcher buys a pound of rice from the grocer, he helps pay the grocer's taxes. When a grocer pays a railroad the freight charges on a consignment of goods, he helps pay the railroad's taxes.

If the railroads didn't have to pay taxes, they could—if they would—make freight rates lower. If the grocer did not have to pay any taxes, he could—if he would—make the price of his pound of rice a trifle less. If the butcher did not have to pay any taxes, he could—if he would—reduce the price of that pound of beefsteak.

If there is any more reason for exempting railroads from taxation because of these facts than there is for exempting the grocer and the butcher, The Herald fails to see it.

This argument was made last winter in the Minnesota legislature against the Miller bill increasing the gross earnings taxes of the railroads from 4 per cent to 5 per cent. It was argued that the increase would have to be paid by the people anyway, and that therefore it shouldn't be made. The argument is just as strong in favor of abolishing all railroad taxation as it is in opposition to an increase in railroad taxes.

But if you are going to let the railroad go free from taxation, hoping that it will give its gain back to you through reduced freight rates, why not exempt the grocer and the butcher, hoping that they will give their gain back to you in the form of cheaper rice and cheaper beef?

In the first place, there is no assurance that the railroads would turn the benefit from exemption from taxation over to the people, and it is quite certain that none of those who made this argument against the Miller bill would ask them to do so. In the second place, taxation enters into the cost of everything you buy, and there is no more reason for trying to cut it out of the cost of freight transportation than there is for trying to cut it out of the cost of beef or rice.

DIET AND ENDURANCE.

Much interest has been taken in the experiments of Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale, in regard to the relative endurance of flesheaters and those that abstain from eating meat either wholly or in part, and some erroneous comments have been made on the preliminary statements issued as the result of them.

Prof. Fisher has engaged in a series of studies, of which this is the first, with the laudable aim of determining the conditions of maximum human efficiency, not only dietetic, but as related to hours of labor, housing conditions, etc. They are being carried on from a purely economic and practical point of view with reference to the labor power of nations, and not with reference to the views of any school of diet.

It has been stated that the experiments gave evidence that complete vegetarianism is conducive to greater endurance than moderate flesh-eating. This is not true. The experiments showed that differences in endurance, while they may have been partly a matter of flesh foods, were more largely a matter of high and low "proteids." It is practically impossible to reach a low-proteid diet without reducing the consumption of meat, although, on the other hand, it is quite possible to attain a high-proteid diet without the use of meat.

The first experiments, preliminary to these, related to mastication, and the subjects were allowed to eat whatever they pleased, but were required to thoroughly masticate their food. It was found that this reduced the desire for meat and increased the desire for low-proteid foods, besides increasing the endurance of the subjects nearly 100 per cent in five months.

In discussions of these experiments there has been much confusion between the terms "strength" and "endurance." The tests had no relation whatever with strength, but dealt entirely with endurance. Often strong men lack endurance, while men apparently weak possess lots of it. The experiments were made on subjects including athletes and men leading sedentary lives, and while, of course, the athletes were the stronger, they were not necessarily possessed of the greater endurance. For instance, on the test of holding out the arm, flesh-eating athletes made an average record of sixteen minutes, athletes abstaining from flesh averaged thirty-one minutes, while men leading sedentary lives, but abstaining from meat, made an average of sixty-two minutes. This is endurance. As to strength, very likely either of the classes of athletes could have mopped the earth up with those of the sedentary class.

There is little in the experiments to give encouragement to those who believe in absolute vegetarianism, but there is much encouragement to those that believe that the average individual decreases his endurance by eating too freely of meat.

REFORMING LITERATURE.

Dispatches from New York bring the intelligence that the Women's Christian Temperance Union is about to engage in a campaign against what might be called the literature of pernicious example. This includes not only literature that is strictly immoral, but novels wherein the heros and heroines are depicted as smoking and drinking with evident relish, unaccompanied by the author's condemnation of such practices.

This association has done a vast good in its fight for cleaner living and better morals, and it will do a lot more good before it is through, particularly in its fight against the literature of indecency. But when it goes to striking from the library shelves of the country all novels in which the heroes surround themselves with "curling wreaths of smoke from fragrant Havanas"—heroes smoke nothing but the finest Havanas—or in which the use of drink that is more or less strong is unaccompanied by suitable homilies against such evils, it is assuming a very difficult task.

What is the W. C. T. U. going to do with the classic novels written in days when drinking was considered a more gentlemanly and customary practice than it is now? What, for instance, will it do with the stories of Dickens, in which beer, ale and stronger liquors are consumed with such evident enjoyment and satisfaction as to induce almost anybody to try it for themselves?

Unless they interpolate paragraphs showing the evil results of such dissipation, it is hard to say what can be done, for the world is not going to be deprived of its Dickens.

NEGLECTED WARDS.

This country went into the war with Spain to free Cuba, and did it, amid its own applause and that of the world at large, for it was an event of most unustal chivalry.

But incidentally it appears to have enslaved the Filipinos, and it is a shame and a disgrace that these unfortunate brown men on their far-off archipelago should be permitted to suffer the galling chains of subservience that the tobacco and sugar trusts, which surely nobody loves in this country unless it be the United States senate, may remain in undisturbed possession of unlawful and unrighteous profits.

Probably few people in this country realize that the Filipinos are actually suffering because of the negligence of this country, and that the failure of the last congress to remove the duty on Philippine products, while continuing its embargo to keep other countries from trading in the islands, means actual deprivation for thousands. They are so far off, and the echoes of their sufferings are so faint, that we do not think of it. Yet it is a grave and shameful injustice, as the report of the Philippine commission, just published, clearly shows.

The commission says that there has been bitter disappointment through the islands at the failure of congress to furnish relief from the excessive duties now imposed by the Dingley tariff upon imports of tobacco and sugar products from the Philippines into the United States. The people had strong expectations that relief in this direction would be afforded, and it was the principal ray of hope which came to them in the midst of their losses from rinderpest, locusts, drought and low prices for their products. The news that the house of representatives had passed a tariff bill by three-fourth majority raised them to the heights of hope, from whence they were cast down into the depths of despair when the senate refused to take any action at all.

This is what the United States has done for the Filipines thus far: It has compelled the insular treasury to refund export duties which it collects on products imported into the United States for use here, a refund that goes wholly for the benefit of manufacturers of cordage and other users of hemp in this country; it has required all commerce between the United States and the Philippines to be carried in American bottoms, which will undoubtedly increase the cost of transportation by the granting of a monopoly; it has so changed the cotton schedule of the Philippine tariff as to increase the price of cotton goods in the islands for the benefit of cotton manufacturers in this country, because it shuts out cotton goods from other countries and enables American manufacturers to fix their own prices; it has imposed such heavy duties upon sugar and tobacco products as to constitute a total prohibition and to close the markets of this country to the Filipinos when they should have free access to them.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"It's astonishing how much timber is worth now as compared with the prices of five and six years ago," said T. P. Page of Mankato, Minn., at the McKay. "In most cases the price of lumber has doubled, and in several instances more than doubled, and timber has kept pace with lumber. Nine or ten years ago my father was one of a party of eight men who proved up on timber claims in Northern Minnesota. All had about the same amount of timber on them, and were considered as being of about the same value.

"It was a question with the men whether they should hang on to the timber and wait for a higher price, or dispose of their holdings at once. They were white pine lands, and therefore there was a ready market for the timber. Three finally decided to sell their timber a few months after proving up, and they did so, getting in the neighborhood of $2,500 each. The land at that time was located a considerable distance from a railroad, but there was a good driving stream near by.

"Within the next three years three other fellows had disposed of their holdings in the same way, at a somewhat higher price. One of these was my father. I think he got a little more than $3,000 for his timber. This left two of the original claim holders with their holdings still on their hands. They saw how the lumber market was going, and made up their minds to hang on a few years more, in order to get the highest possible price.

"Two years ago a fire ran over the land of one and destroyed two-thirds of his timber, and he sold the rest for $500. The other fellow was more fortunate, and got out last year for $6,000. Now their friends who sold early in the game are wondering, in the light of the experience of the last two, whether they were wise or foolish to sell so early in the game.

"Fifteen years ago Norway pine had very little market value. I can remember being up here at that time, and hearing discussions concerning government claims. The prospective homesteaders insisted on having white pine on their land, or else they wouldn't file at all. Some of the best Norway pine claims went begging. Now Norway pine is worth twice as much, or three times as much, as white pine was in those days. When one comes to think of the remarkable advance in prices, it is no wonder that there are so many rich lumbermen. All they had to do was to sound up a bunch of timber a few years back and then hang on to it for high prices."

"Automobiles are used for all sorts of strange purposes these days, and you are apt to find them anywhere, on the top of a mountain, plugging along over some muddy country road, fastened to a plow, or skirmishing along over the desert of Sahara," said A. L. Roberts of Milwaukee, Wis., at the St. Louis. "I was out to Goldfield, Nev., a couple of years ago, and rode across the alkali plains for seeral score miles in an up-to-date machine, so was not in the least surprised last fall when, in making one of the North Dakota towns, I was invited by a leading merchant to go goose hunting with him in an automobile.

"I have seen the machines put to so many strange uses that I could hardly be surprised, but I expressed surprise nevertheless, knowing by host rather expected it. You can bet, however, that I accepted the invitation, and I had no occasion to regret that I had done so. It was a novel experience, skimming over the country roads, or right across the prairie itself, in pursuit of flocks of geese. There were two machines, one containing hired help who were to act as drivers of the birds. Our outfit, carrying three men, would, on spotting a flock resting on the earth, circle around until we got in a dip in the prairie over which it was to be expected the birds would fly if frightened by some one coming from the opposite direction.

"As soon as we were located, the other automobile would clip down upon the flock, which usually would fly over us. Then we would open fire. If we saw the flock was swerving off in another direction, and not likely to come our way, we would hop into the machine and start her going full speed to head them off. Frequently we would get in range of them this way. After we were through shooting we would speed up and chase the flock across the prairie, keeping a safe distance behind.

"It is a fact that we could maintain pretty nearly the same speed as the geese themselves, and when they lighted again they would not be so far ahead but we could not spot them. It was the most exciting sport I ever indulged in, and before the forenoon was over I had eight geese to my credit. The party had thirty in all. You see you can cover a large amount of territory in an automobile, and thus stand a much better show of getting a good bag than if you were in a wagon or other rig drawn by horses. I expect that next thing we know the cowboys will be herding the cattle by the use of automobiles."

And Was Sidetracked.

Baltimore Sun: This year's spring weather was shipped to us by slow freight.

THE WEATHER.

It wasn't really much of a snow storm, but a few flakes of snow sifted down yesterday morning, just enough to make it truthful for you to say in your diary that on May 19, 1907, snow fell in Duluth. It was cold all day and cloudy, and this morning it was much of the same. Later, however, it warmed up materially, and though it remained partly cloudy, it was not a bad day at all. Last night's lowest temperature was 38 degs. and yesterday's highest was 44 degs. The weather man does not look for much change in temperature tonight and tomorrow, but he expects northeast winds, cloudiness and occasional showers.

A year ago today it was cold and cloudy, like yesterday.

The sun rose this morning at 4:26 and sets tonight at 7:42, making 15 hours and 16 minutes of sunshine. Just a month from tomorrow is the longest day of the year, after which the days begin getting shorter again.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Cool weather continues throughout most of the Northwest, attending the high pressure central over the Red River valley. Disturbances in Rocky mountain districts and off the New England coast caused light rains during Sunday or last night in Montana, Alberta, the plateau region, Northern Texas, Oklahoma, Eastern Kansas, Missouri, Ohio valley and North Atlantic states. The Rocky mountain low pressure is causing rising temperature in Saskatchewan, Eastern Montana and Western North Dakota."

Following were yesterday's highest temperatures as recorded by the weather bureau:

Chicago Record-Herald: "Take him for all in all," said the good man who was offering up the final prayer for the departed machine politician, "we shall not look upon his like again."

Not Much Spring Fever.

I ain't had much spring fever
This year, it seems to me,
An' I ain't been a-lookin' 'round
To find a shady tree
To lay in under, half asleep,
A snoozin' in the grass,
With nothin' else to do but watch
The clouds and worktime pass.

I ain't felt much like loafin'
An' lazyin' erround,
A-dreamin' of the places
Where fishin' kin be found;
Where all day long the riffles
Makes music out of sight,
An' sunfish fight for chances
To bite an' bite an' bite.

Art Johnson he went fishin'
Last week, down by the dam;
But Art is somethin' fonder
Of fishin' than I am.
He didn't come to supper,
An' so they took a dog
An' hunted him an' found him—
His clo's froze to a log.

I ain't had much spring fever
This spring, an' I don't seem
To hanker much fer loafin'
An' settin' 'round to dream;
There's something wrong this season,
An' mighty wrong, that's what,
With spring, because, by gravy,
I'd ruther work than not.

A Pertinent Question.

New York Tribune: Senator Rayner of Maryland is in favor of adequate salaries for school teachers, and at a reception he told a story about a teachers' meting in a district where the salaries were extremely low.

"A rich, portly banker opened the meeting with an address," he said. "The banker concluded his remarks with an enthusiastic gesture and the words:

"'Long live our school teachers!'

"'What on?' shouted a thin, pale, seedy woman in a black gown, slightly smeared with chalk marks."

"JOHNSON OF MINNESOTA."

Charleston, S. C., News and Courier: John A. Johnson was elected governor of Minnesota in 1904 by a small majority, his triumph being attributed to divisions among the Republicans. Two years later he was re-elected and carried all but four counties in the state, notwithstanding the Republican party at that time had apparently cemented its factional differences. His administrations as governor have been greatly popular and he is believed to be more strongly entrenched in the affections of the people, irrespective of party, now than ever before. The Democrats of Minnesota, it is said, are determined to present his name to the national convention next year, for president, and they expect to succeed in convincing the convention that their candidate can at least have the nine electoral votes of his own state in the electoral college.

Whether the delegates from any other state can promise so much for their favorite son, saving of course, the delegates from Southern states, is much to be doubted. Massachusetts Democrats might promise that Former Governor Douglass would carry his state, but what would the promise be worth in the light of recent political history? A Republican, it must be remembered, was elected to succeed Governor Douglass.

Nebraska's favorite son is a wonderfully eloquent orator, but it seems clear that a convention speech of his would need to be more than human to convince the delegates that the seven votes of Nebraska, which he lost when a candidate for president in 1900, would be polled in his favor in 1908.

John A. Johnson of Minnesota appears to be a unique figure among the Democrats of the United States. One is at a loss to explain the masterful prominence of this Democrat in that group of Northern states, frozen apparently as hard in Republicanism as are their lakes in ice in winter, except on the hypothesis that he is a man who attracts accessions from the masses to the Democratic ideas in spite of preconceived prejudices.

Any Northern man who is a candidate before the convention may expect, if nominated, to receive the votes of the Solid South, but who among them, except Johnson, may offer reasonable assurance that he can carry his own state. The delegates from Minnesota will be in the convention, and, as the saying is, "they will be there with the goods."

Minneapolis Tribune: Few who have studied the interesting public career of Governor Johnson will deny that the hoped-for leader who is some time to lead a united Democracy to victory must possess many of the qualities that have adorned it.

The personal charm of which we hear so much is least of these. The American people are no longer carried away by a superficial magnetism that does not cover more solid qualities. Men are no longer enduringly popular merely because we like them. There must be something approaching universal appeal to public confidence in addition.

This is the secret of Governor Johnson's political success in Minnesota. Want of it is the secret of Mr. Bryan's failure in the nation, in spite of increasing admiration and respect for his personal qualities. Governor Johnson has united factions, not by clever intrigue or adroit parceling out of patronage, but by making both sides believe in him. He has been hurt rather than helped by the tricks of political manipulation played in his name by the hangers-on of his administration.

Does anybody know whether to call Governor Johnson a radical or a conservative Democrat? The reformers seem to trust him and the conservation do not seem afraid of him. It was easy to maintain this strong position out of office. It is difficult to find out now whether he was a free silver man or a gold standard man.

But he has maintained it so far through a term of office in which positive declarations of public policy and positive acts of public service have not been wanting. We believe that the future leader of a united Democratic party, whoever he may be, will possess this power.

Minneapolis Journal: John A. Johnson is a man those Southern people have been wanting to see, and we warrant they will improve the opportunity so kindly given. He comes, it is true, to dedicate a monument to Northern soldiers, but he brings with him the saving grace, to the Southern man, of the Democratic faith. He comes, moreover, with the glamor of a presidential possibility. That is enough to make him a magnet for Southern eyes. Hope springs eternal in old Dixie—hope of a day when a new Moses of the North will arise and lead them out of bondage.

Johnson has been on the Democratic horizon for two years and more. He has lately loomed larger than ever. "Marse Henry" of Louisville, has proclaimed his ascendant star. The News and Courier of Charleston, S. C., hails him as "the only Northern possibility who can carry his own state." The South wants to know more about this lion of the North, and happily the Vicksburg pageant comes to furnish the opportunity.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Ely Miner: Some of our exchanges are poking some fun at the Republican legislature for raising the salary of the Democratic governor. This is rather a narrow view to take of the matter. Governor Johnson is worth $7,000 a year and so is every other governor of a state as important as Minnesota. Make salaries worth working for and good men will take the places.

Eveleth Star: One dollar and forty two cents to Duluth is cheap enough for any man, and the railroads are certainly reaping the benefits. It was a splendid move.

Brainerd Tribune: The long drawing card of the agricultural development of Northern Minnesota, in the opinion of the Itasca Iron News, is the nearness to the market. The News thinks that if real farmers are to be coaxed into coming into this section nothing will appeal to them quicker than to know that prices will always be higher here than in other agricultural sections because the consumer is right at hand.

Hallock Enterprise: Every legislature has an omnibus appropriation bill, the largest bill of all the session. We tremble to think of future generations when legislative omnibuses may give place to automobiles.

Argyle Banner: The little pronoun "I" is being very much overworked by homecoming legislators throughout the state. However, the little word has been subjected to just such usage before and although it may have been in political circles we cannot be brought to believe that such a usage is extremely good taste.

Roseau Region: Be kind to the personal property assessor who is around to see how much taxes you can stand. It's not his fault he visits you. It's the absurdity of the law that requires him to induce you to lie.

Little Falls Herald: The fact that members of the last legislature cannot run for governor next year because of raising the salary, is not likely to be a fatal blow to Minnesota.

Crookston Journal: That Governor Johnson will cut some figure in national lead a united Democracy to victory must possess many of the qualities that have adorned it.

The personal charm of which we hear so much is least of these. The American people are no longer carried away by a superficial magnetism that does not cover more solid qualities. Women Avoid Operations

MISS ROSE MOORE

When a woman suffering from female trouble is told that an operation is necessary, it, of course, frightens her.

The very thought of the hospital, the operating table and the knife strikes terror to her heart.

It is quite true that these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but a great many women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after an operation has been decided upon as the only cure. The strongest and most grateful statements possible to make come from women who by taking made from native roots and herbs, have escaped serious operations, as evidenced by Miss Rose Moore's case, of 307 W. 26th St., N. Y. She writes:-

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:-"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me of the very worst form of female trouble and I wish to express to you my deepest gratitude. I suffered intensely for two years so that I was unable to attend to my duties and was a burden to my family. I doctored and doctored with only temporary relief and constantly objecting to an operation which I was advised to undergo. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it cured me of the terrible trouble and I am now in better health than I have been for many years."

This and other such cases should encourage every woman to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before she submits to an operation.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. From the symptoms given, the trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised.

INDIAN LANDS TO BE SETTLED

Chippewa Reservations Will be Opened to Homesteaders July 1.

The registers of the land office at Duluth, Cass Lake and Crookston are in receipt of a bulletin sent out by the department of the interior, relative to the Chippewa Indian lands of the Mississippi, Red Lake, White Earth and Fond du Lac reservations. The lands are to be disposed of to actual settlers only, under the provisions of the homestead law.

The hour of 9 a. m., July 1, of this year, has been fixed upon as the time these lands will be opened for settlement and entry. Each settler is required to pay for the lands settled upon the sum of $1.25 per acre, to be paid in five equal annual installments at the end of the first, second, third, fourth and fifth years after the date of the homestead entry.

The schedule includes 229,297 acres of lands classified in the government records as "agricultural."

The Duluth district, in the Fond du Lac reservation, has a comparatively small portion of the total acreage involved, as the reservation includes only 2,666.87 acres. The Crookston district embracing the White Earth and a portion of the Red Lake reservation, has 210,942.25 of the total and the Cass Lake district with the Chippewa and Deer Creek reservations, includes 6,687.29.

JAPANESE GIRLS COME AS FREIGHT

Six Found in Heavy Boxes in Hold of Steamship Oanfa.

Port Townsend, Wash., May 20.—Six Japanese girls were found hidden in heavy boxes on the steamship Oanfa, which recently arrived at Victoria from the Orient. The discovery of the Japanese girls was made when the steerage was being fumigated, owing to an outbreak of smallpox. Soon after the sulphur was lighted, the officers heard a commotion in one of the freight compartments. Investigation revealed that the noise came from six heavy boxes, in each of which a girl was hidden.

Inquiry demonstrated that the shipment was consigned to K. Sesookien, a steerage passenger, who is alleged to be Taki Kaljoro, a procurer, who was deported from San Francisco two years ago. Through exchange of courtesies between British and American authorities, the six women and Sesookien were brought here Saturday night, and will be sent back to Japan on the Oanfa, which is scheduled to sail today.

"Especially the

For Bright's Disease, Albuminuria, Renal Calculi, Gout, Rheumatism and All Diseases Dependent Upon a Uric Acid Diathesis.

Samuel O. L. Potter, A. M., M. D., M. R. C. P., London, Professor of the Principles and Practice of Medicine and Clinical Medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of San Francisco, Cal., in his "Hand-Book of Materia Medica, Pharmacy and Therapeutics," in the citation of remedies under the head of "Chronic Bright's Disease," says: "Mineral waters, especially the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER of Virginia, has many advocates." Also, under "Albuminuria," he says: "BUFFALO LITHIA WATER is highly recommended."

George Halsted Boyland, A. M., M. D., of Paris, Doctor of Medicine, of the Faculty of Paris, in the New York Medical Journal, August 22, 1896, says: "There is no remedy as absolutely specific in all forms of Albuminuria and Bright's Disease, whether acute or chronic, as BUFFALO LITHIA WATER, Spring No. 2, accompanied by a milk diet. In all cases of pregnancy, where albumin is found in the urine, as late as the last week before confinement, if this water and a milk diet are prescribed, the albumin disappears rapidly from the urine and the patient has a positive guarantee against puerperal convulsions."

T. Griswold Comstock, A.M., M.D., of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have often prescribed BUFFALO LITHIA WATER in Gouty and Rheumatic conditions and in Renal Calculi, accompanied by Renal Colic, and always with the most satisfactory results. In Renal Calculi, where there is an excess of Uric Acid, it is especially efficacious."

GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT

Sentiment is Strongly in Favor of Scientific Road-Building.

Lack of Drainage Has Been One of Chief Obstacles.

The stimulus that has been given to the good road making movement in Minnesota, particularly in Northern Minnesota, by the interest that is being taken in the matter by commercial organizations and good roads associations augurs much for a vast improvement of the country roads during the coming years.

Not only is there a general sentiment for a more liberal policy in the matter of expenditure of public funds for the building of new roads and the maintenance of those already constructed, but the present tendency is strongly along the lines of improvement on a scientific basis.

Mr. Cooley, the state engineer, has been attending many meetings of good roads associations this past winter and spring and he has criticised some of the former methods in road building, claiming that public money has been wasted in many instances, that the roads were built in so unscientific a manner that it has required a great deal more money to keep them up and, even then, some of the highways are no good.

Mr. Cooley has laid the blame largely on lack of drainage, improper draining, also on the grading with unsuitable soil.

In St. Louis county there are a great many miles of roads through swamps. The Miller Trunk road, for instance, has one section that extends for about five or six miles through a swamp and portions of the road are almost impassable in the spring of the year.

The common method of road building in the Northern swamps has been to corduroy the road and cover the timber with about one and one-half feet of soil.

Where the ground is pretty wet the year around it is claimed that the corduroy has lasted very well and the timbers have remained sound for many years, but where the soil had alternating wet and dry periods the corduroy rotted out in a comparatively few years, and the condition of the road became very bad.

If it had been possible to drain all the swamps that the roads cross, there is no doubt but that the roads would be in much better condition than they are at present, but the cost of such drainage schemes has been prohibitive for the county board and, as a rule, the commissioners have tried to build the best roads that they could without drainage that they knew was really necessary. The drainage of some of the large swamps in St. Louis county that are now crossed by roads, would be a fine thing for the roads, but it would cost a great deal of money and, it is claimed, by the time the road appropriation had been spent to get the proper drainage, there would not be any money left for the road construction.

Use of Swamp Muck.

Concerning the use of the swamp muck, such as is dug out of the ditches alongside the swamp roads, there seems to be a difference of opinion among road builders. Some claim that it is a waste of time and money to throw the muck on the corduroy forming the foundation for the road.

Others claim that if the muck is used properly it is all right, and can be used to build up a good road.

One of Duluth's citizens, who has been for some years past more or less interested in road building in Northern Minnesota, claims that gravel should not be put on corduroy. He claims that the gravel will work through, or become washed away during the wet seasons. He claims that if the muck from the ditches is thrown on the corduroy first and left there, churned and cut up by the wagon wheels during the muddy seasons, that the muck will gradually work its way down around the timber so that it will make quite a firm bottom when dried out. This citizen then recommends that a top dressing of gravel be put on the muck. He claims that if that system of swamp road building is followed, together with proper ditching, that an excellent rod will result.

There is no doubt but that the graveled roads in the county are the best and that gravel or crushed rock are necessary if it is expected to construct a road that will last, but the gravel beds are not always found convenient to that part of the country where the material could be used to advantage. There are many swamp roads at too great a distance from the nearest gravel beds to make it practicable to haul the material from the pit to the road, and there is usually a dearth of rocks in the country adjoining the swamp. If gravel beds could be found at the edge of the swamps the question of good roads would be solved easily.

A new method of swamp drainage, where the low level prevented the running off of the water, is said to have been used with great success a short distance from the town of Alexander, in Franklin county, Iowa. It may offer a suggestion as to the drainage of some of the northern swamps.

Near the town mentioned, a public road traverses a depression which contains about seven acres. There was surface outlet, so a six-inch hole was drilled at the side of the road, to a depth of something more than 100 feet. A depression of ten feet in diameter and two or three feet deep was formed at the top and a screen was placed over the opening, which was cased in for an ordinary deep well. The surrounding land was connected by tile and, it is claimed, the moisture promptly disappeared and a fine meadow and dry road now take the place of the former impassable swamp.

PRESIDENT ATTENDS CHURCH IN VIRGINIA.

Charlottesville, Va., May 20.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt and Archie Roosevelt worshipped yesterday at Christ Episcopal church, less than a mile from Pine Knot, Mrs. Roosevelt's country home. The service began at 4 o'clock, and the Roosevelt party arrived promptly. The sermon was by Rev. J. J. Clopton of Casanova. At the close of the service, the president advanced to shake hands with the minister, and also turned to thank the choir for the music. Before entering his carriage, he held a reception, many of the congregation shaking his hand. With some of these the president chatted. Before returning to Pine Knot the party took an hour's drive.

The weather was the warmest of the season here. The morning was so sultry that the only jaunt the president took, aside from his trip to church, was to Plain Dealing farm.

IN PAPER BOTTLES

Milk is Now Being Delivered in City of Washington.

President's Bull Dog "Pete" is a Much Maligned Animal.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—The city of Washington, through its health authorities, is making a strong effort to adopt the general methods of milk inspection that have been pursued so satisfactorily in Rochester, N. Y.

The board of health some time ago secured the appointment of a milk commission, composed of the surgeons general of the army, navy and marine hospital service, the chemist of the agricultural department, and other government officials having special aptitude for the work, and these experts have been making a rigid investigation of the milk supply of the national capital.

Their report, which has just been made, has caused consternation to reign in the ranks of the local milk dealers. It handles the subject without gloves, and the milk drinking public is sitting up and taking notice. The report contains the following recommendations:

The branding of healthy and unhealthy cows.

The production and bottling of milk under government inspection.

The compulsory sterilization of all utensils and receptacles.

The classification of all milk.

The pasteurization of certin classes of milk.

The use of paper bottles in the delivery of milk.

The scaling of all bottles containing certified milk in such a manner that it cannot be tmpered with by unscrupulous employes.

Providing distinguishing colors for bottles containing milk of different classes.

All bottles containing certified milk to be kept in and sold only from dry refrigerators, thereby avoiding the packing of bottles in crushed ice.

The recommendation that paper bottles be used in the delivery of milk is already being carried out. Several months ago a local company began the manufacture of a paper bottle, on the assumption that its sanitary features would in time commend it to all users of milk.

This bottle is a cylindrical tube, made of spruce wood paper and having flanged caps for closing the ends. It is made on what is known as a tube winder, and this machine also saws the tube into convenient lengths at the rate of thousands an hour. The completed bottle is dipped in hot paraffine, and afterward baked in a sterilizing oven. The bottle is intended to be used but once. It is claimed for it that it has no effect whatever on milk, as the fluid does not come into contact with the paper, because the paper and the printing thereon is perfectly sealed in; that it will keep milk sweet and cold longer than glass bottles, and beside being clean, perfectly sanitary and a guaranty against contagion carried in an unwashed glass bottle from a disease-infected house, is cheaper for the milkman than the use of glass.

As many other food products are now delivered to the individual consumer in paper, the idea of the paper bottle as a universal receptacle for milk would appear to be a good one. As a member of the board of health said to your correspondent today:

"Milk should long ago have been delivered in a single service package. Innumerable other things served as food—butter, cheese, lard, cut meats, chipped beef, sausage, oysters, ice cream cakes, crackers, etc., are delivered in paper packages, which are never returned. The milk bottle, which goes from house to house, unquestionably spreads disease. Though every bottle may be washed before being filled again, all are washed in the same water and with the same brush. In my judgment the paper bottle has a valid excuse for its being."

Washington has suffered from a virtual epidemic of typhoid fever for several years, and it is the general opinion of the medical fraternity that the cause is directly traceable to the milk supply of the city.

It is significant of the temper of a community which suddenly awakes to the fact that for years it has been at the mercy of unscrupulous and ignorant purveyors of food products, that a movement is already under way to induce the next congress to amend the pure food law to the extent of including the recommendations of the milk commission above referred to.

A great deal of information and misinformation has recently appeared in the newspapers concerning President Roosevelt's bull dog, "Pete." According to the voracious accounts, this wicked animal treed the French ambassador, chewed up the coat tail of Secretary Cortelyou, breakfasted upon two or three newspaper reporters, and otherwise misbehaved himself.

The facts in the case are that "Pete" is a very well behaved bull dog, and that the only onslaught he has made upon a White House visitor was on a recent occasion when he caught a police inspector climbing over the back fence in the line of duty, and spoiled a portion of that officers raiment.

But "Pete" is not the only White House dog who has been erroneously portrayed in the newspapers. Twenty years ago, soon after her marriage, Mrs. Cleveland was presented with a handsome black French poodle, who bore the name of Hector. There were certain correspondents in Washington at that time who were compelled to fill a certain amount of space in their respective newspapers each night, and, when they were short of other interesting incidents concerning life at the capital in the summer time they devoted themselves to Hector. The ingenious stories which were sent out concerning this poor poodle marked the writers of the accounts as worthy to rank with Jules Verne in the matter of inventive genius. Column after column was written about Hector; he was described as being the very acme of doggish devilishness and yet he was as thorough well behaved poodle as ever came out of France. And so is with "Pete." He has a countenance that would stop a clock, and, although thoroughly English, he has never been guilty of chewing up French ambassadors nor has he shown the slightest disposition to ruin the clothing of American cabinet officers. Still his alleged attacks upon White House visitors will continue to be exploited unless the president and Secretary Loeb turn up more news than they have been giving out lately.

From all over the country are coming reports of despondency among the farmers because of the unusual backwardness of the spring season. From the neighborhood of Washington the truck farmers come to town with assertions to the effect that their potatoes and vegetable seeds are rotting in the ground. The annual cry that the Delaware and Georgia peach crops are ruined seems to have spread all over the country this year and the weather bureau is at a loss to predict what the near future of weather conditions will be.

Very naturally the old timer who recollects what the weather has been for the last half a century, has come to the front and, as a general rule, he insists that never in the past has such an unpropitious month of May been known. But, on the other hand, comes a man with a story of an infiitely worse season than this in the year of 1859.

"There is in the town of Wales, county of Erie, and state of New York," said the narrator of weather history today, "an old fashioned covered bride which spans a creek in that town and which bears, painted over the entrance to each end, this legend: 'Wales, N. Y., 1859. Hard frost June 5th.' That was the year when corn and all other grain were frozen down in the night and until after the fifth of June it won't do for these compilers of weather statistics to assert that this is the coldest spring ever known, because 1859 is the banner year today."

ROYAL INFANT

The popo was represented by Cardinal Rinaldini, the papal nuncio; King Edward by Prince Arthur of Connaught, Emperor William by Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern, Emperor Francis Joseph by Archduke Engene of Austria, and King Carlos of Portugal by the duke of Oporto.

ON GRANTS TOMB.

Gen. Kuroki Places Laurel Wreath With Much Reverence.

New York, May 20.—Twenty-eight years ago Gen. U. S. Grant, in his tour of the world, was the guest of the emperor of Japan. One of the officers assigned to attend him was a young colonel, who yesterday, as Gen. Kuroki of world renown, visited Riverside drive and there, with impressive Oriental ceremony, placed a laurel wreath upon the American's tomb.

To Gen. Kuroki, yesterday's pilgrimage was the chief event of the day of his stay in New York, and a part of his program which he repeatedly said must be carried out, no matter what feature was sacrificed.

As the general's party entered the tomb all removed their hats and Gen. Kurokia advanced towards the sarcophagus. When about fifteen feet away he bowed and then as he proceeded, step by step, he continued to bow low. When he reached the bier he stopped and an aide, ascending the several steps, placed a wreath in position. For several minutes the party stood in silence and then retracing their steps entered the automobiles and were driven back to the Hotel Astor.

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE TO HUNT COLORADO BEARS.

Glenwood Springs, Colo., May 20.—Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin, who arrived here Saturday, will start on a bear hunt in the muddy district today with Jake Borah as guide.

The muddy district is the famous bear country into which Borah had intended to take President Roosevelt two years ago, but at that time the snow was too deep and the bears were still in their winter sleep. The senator will hunt about ten days.

Duluth Takes Saturday and Sunday Games From Houghton.

Big Crowd and Much Wrangling at Sunday Game.

Duluth made it three straight from Houghton yesterday by winning one of the wierdest exhibitions of baseball, which it has been the misfortune of a Duluth crowd to witness at Athletic park. Thanks to Jack Nolan's questionable work with the indicator and the disposition of Kid Taylor and Jack Sundheim to do the questioning at every opportunity, the game was long drawn out and the only sweetness about it was the fact that Duluth won.

From the sixth inning on, the game was played under protest. In that period, Egan hit Goldsmith with the ball and the big fellow took first. While preparing to pitch to McCormick and watching first base, Egan balked. Nolan called the balk all right, but Goldsmith didn't move until after Egan had delivered the ball. Egan whirled so quickly and threw to the plate that Nolan didn't have a chance to stop him. Taylor claimed that Nolan should have sent Goldsmith down before the ball was pitched and a long discussion followed, during which Taylor assumed threatening attitudes towards the umps and generally disgusted the crowd by his actions. Smith went out into the field to take part in the discussion and Taylor rushed at him and wanted to mix things. There was nothing doing in that line, however. Finally Taylor protested the game and, after making the announcement, Nolan called for play to resume.

Nolan was right on the balk decision, but Taylor had some right to protest the game on the score of Nolan's work in general. He has been bad on balls and strikes all during the series, both teams suffering. Houghton seemingly the most. Nolan evidently wants to be fair, but he doesn't give the corners and the pitchers have had to split the plate in order to get anything. His decisions yesterday didn't serve to change the result of the game, for Duluth would have won anyway, but the spectators like to see both teams get a fair shake and it is up to Nolan to trim his lamps.

Too Much Wrangling.

The crowd had it in for Taylor and Sundheim yesterday, for they carried things too far with their protests on the umpire's decisions. There is no doubt but that they had a good reason for complaining at times, but they should have seen that their kicking didn't get them anything and they were only delaying the game to the extreme displeasure of the crowd. The people in the stands paid money to see a ball game, not a chewing match, and if Taylor had protested the game on the umpire's work in general and then let things slide, he would have won more favor with the crowd.

As to the game itself, it was a queer exhibition. The Duluth team didn't have to work very hard to win the game. An occasional hit did it, for the Houghton players were disposed to hand it over. Corner lot doesn't begin to describe the quality of their work at times, when they didn't seem to use their heads. Team play was entirely lacking and there are a few breaches, which Taylor will have to fill up before the Giants can hope to win games. Egan pitched a good game, as far as hits were concerned, for he allowed the Sox only three singles, one of them a bad scratch. His wildness was fatal, however, for of the three men he walked and two hit, three scored. In the eighth, with three men on, Nolan called a pretty good strike a ball and a man was forced in.

Haney Worked Well.

Old Jim Haney was sent to the hill by Smith and he showed that his south wing is just as good as in days of yore. Six hits, two of them scratches, were all the Giants could garner and, after the first inning, they didn't have a chance to score. The work of the Sox in the field after the first inning was excellent, for they didn't fall down on Haney once.

The Sox got away badly in the first inning and Smith came in for a vigorous roasting from the stands for the period of dumb play. Bitting, the first man up, popped one into the infield. It was Haney's ball, but Leighty and Summers started after it. Leighty stopped, but Summers didn't reach the ball and it dropped safely. Bitting stole second and went to third on Sundheim's grounder to Leighty. He scored when Solbraa rapped out a clean single over second. Solbraa stole second. Meyers hit one out behind second base, which Goldsmith should have nailed, but he misjudged it and failed to hold the ball when he did get it. Solbraa and Meyers pulled off a double steal, but the next two men went out.

Houghton handed the Sox their first run in the same inning. Summers fanned and Egan hit Tracey. Goldsmith hit to Taylor, who failed to handle the ball and Tracey raced to third. In trying to head him off, Solbraa threw to the fence, Tracey scoring and Goldsmith taking second. The next two men went out.

Houghton's Finish.

In the Duluth part of the sixth, Houghton's undoing took place. Tracey went out on a grounder to Egan. One of Egan's inshoots took Goldsmith in the slats and he ambled to first. Then came Egan's balk, Houghton's long kick, the protest and finally Goldsmith took second and the play went on. It had no sooner resumed than Big McCormick rapped one on the nose for a clean single and Goldsmith scored. An error by Bitting put Leighty on first and McCormick on second, but the next two men were out Saturday the formal opening of the season in Duluth took place. A parade was held before the game. Flaaten's band heading the procession of the two teams, the city officials and fans in carriages. At the park Assistant City Attorney McKeon, acting for Mayor Cullum, who was out of the city, made a short speech and threw the first ball of the game.

To celebrate the formal opening and show the 3,000 assembled fans that they can play ball, the Sox walloped Kid Taylor's Giants by a score of 5 to 3. Al Cummings was the boy who put the redskin emblem on the men from the Wolverine state, and he did it handily. The Giants got to him for hits that counted in the third and fifth, but in the other innings they couldn't bunch, nor hit with men on bases, and they took the count. Cummings had everything, and in pinches he used his head with great effect.

Neddie Rogers started the game for Houghton, and he worked along nicely until the fifth inning. Then the Sox fell on his delivery, and after four singles and two errors had put four across Rogers was chased to the bench. Miller, who took his place, let another in on a wild pitch, but then he settled and didn't give the Sox another chance.

Cummings placed himself in a hole by his wildness in the first inning. He fanned Bitting and passed Sundheim. Solbraa went out on a grounder to short, Bitting taking third. Meyers couldn't get out of the way of a wild one and went to first, stealing second. Gilmore fanned. In the Sox part of the inning Goldsmith was given a life by Sundheim's error after two were down and stole second, but died there when McCormick fanned.

Taylor singled in the second, but was caught in a double, and only three men faced Cummings. After two Sox were down, Sundheim made another booble and Roy walked. Cummings hit a hard one at Bitting, who couldn't handle it, and the stations were full. A grounder to Rogers was the best Summers could do.

Draw First Blood.

The Giants started the scoring in the third. Rogers hit to Cummings and Al threw wild, the pitcher being safe. He went ahead on Bitting's grounder to Fagin and scored when Sundheim rapped out a two-bagger. Solbraa scored Sundheim with a single and was caught trying to steal second. Meyers died on a grounder to Tracey. One-two-three for the Sox.

But three Giants faced Cummings in the fourth. After Leighty was down, Smith walked and went to second on Bitting's fumble of Fagin's grounder. Smith and Fagin tried a double steal, Gibson nailing Smiley at third. Roy singled, but Cummings couldn't do anything.

The Giants scored their last in the fifth. Gibson was safe at first on Fagin's error and was sent ahead by Rogers' sacrifice. He took another on Bitting's grounder to Fagin and scored on Sundheim's single. Sundheim tried to steal second, but fell before Smith's trusty arm.

Rogers' Finish.

The fifth saw Rogers' finish and the gaining of the victory for the Sox. Summers singled to start the fun and stole second. Tracey fouled out to Gibson. Goldsmith rapped out a long single and Summers scored from second, Goldsmith going to third when McCormick poked out another single. McCormick stole second and it was up to Leighty. He hit to Bitting, who threw for the plate to head Goldsmith off. Gibson dropped the ball and Goldsmith was safe. McCormick also scored during the confusion. Leighty took second on the play and scored when Smith singled and Gilmore threw wild for the plate. At this juncture, Rogers took to the bench and Miller began to fling. Smith, who had taken third on Gilmore's bum heave, scored Duluth's last run on a wild pitch. Fagin fanned and Roy went out on a fly to right, which Egan picked off his shoestrings. Tracey hit for two sacks in the sixth, but died at the second station and not another Duluthian saw first during Miller's term.

The Giants only sent six men up in the sixth and seventh, but they made things interesting in the eighth. Miller hit one to Summers, who made a great stop and threw low to first. Tracey failing to hold the ball. Bitting singled and Sundheim sacrificed both men along with Solbraa and Meyers coming up, the fans looked for at least one score. Jack Nolan and Al Cummings prevented it. Cummings pitched carefully to Solbraa and had the big fellow in a quandary. They were breaking beautifully and he wasted a couple in an effort to get the batter, landing in a hole with two strikes and three balls. He curved one in and it broke off the plate. Solbraa started for first, but Nolan opined it was a strike and sent him to the bench. Cummings passed Meyers evidently intentionally, and Gilmore fanned. The Giants went out without seeing first in the ninth.

MEET GOES TO SENIORS

Fourth Year Men Capture Majority of the Events.

Fred Ryan Wins Individual Prize for Most Points.

At the interclass field meet of the high school, held last Saturday, the seniors were easy victors, with a total of 57 points to their credit, while the juniors were second with 35, the freshmen third with 18 points, and the sophomores last with 7 credits.

The main features of the meet was the relay race between the four classes, in which the seniors won by a large margin, and the juniors, freshmen and sophomores came in in the order named. In the second lap, McDevitt made a big gain for the seniors, which Ryan increased materially in the third lap. McGonagle kept up the good work and came in a long distance ahead of his nearest competitor.

Fred Ryan, captain of the track team, made the greatest number of points of any individual in the meet, securing a total of 19 points, with three first, one second and a third. McDevitt came second with 15 points, while Starkey was a close third with 14 credits.

In the 100-yard dash, Starkey made a sensational run, which looked like a record-breaker, but owing to the fact that the stop watch refused to run the exact time could not be secured.

In this event Ryan and McGonagle came in almost together, but the second place was awarded to the latter.

McGonagle won the high jump, clearing the bars at 5 feet.

The only new mark that was established was in the running broad jump, where Ryan mutilated the former record beyond all recognition by a sensational leap of 20 feet and 3 inches. The former record for this event was 19 feet and 3 inches, which was made by McGonagle last year. He broke this record yesterday by passing through space to the extent of 19 feet and 7 inches, but Ryan proved too much for him.

In the mile event Clausen came in in the lead, but Pulford put up a game fight and came in a close second. Nolte drew third place. The 50-yard dash was won by Ryan, with Starkey almost on his heels and coming up fast. Duncan finished third. In the weights, McDevitt was in a class by himself, whining the 12-pound hammer throw, the shot put and the discus events. In the hammer throw he sent the hammer sailing for 91 feet 10 inches, with Falk and Dadgeon second and third respectively. McDevitt put the shot 40 feet 8 inches, which is just a few inches short of the record. Starkey was second and Nelson third. The discus throw was also cinched by McDevitt, with a pass of 91 feet 9 inches, only three inches under the record.

McKinley captured second place in this event and Jefferson third.

The standing broad jump has not been a part of the track meets for some time, but was held this year. Duncan landed first place with a leap of 9 feet 5 inches, while Ryan and Helmer in the order named.

The 880 yard run went to Clausen, the winner of the mile. Cant, though not in training came in second, and Pulford landed third place. In the 440 yard dash A. Taylor made a quick get away and showed the rest of the runners his heels for a few yards when even these passed out of sight. He came in a long way ahead of the bunch and Nelson and Merritt arrived shortly after.

Ryan captured the 220 yard dash with Starkey a close second and Feetham third. The hurdles were not run off, as none could be procured, and the pole vault was also called off for lack of a pole.

Prof. T. F. Phillips managed the meet and Mr. Joyce acted as official starter. The events were run off in quick order, and were handled very capable by those in charge.

The big meet with Blaine will be held next Saturday, and after the showing made at the interclass meet the Duluth boys feel confident of winning. Ryan can be counted on for the dashes as far as his wind holds, but he cannot enter all of them and win. Starkey is barred by his studies and another dashman is badly needed.

It is probable that McGonagle can show up the Superiorites at the runinng broad and the high jumps, while McDevitt should make a good showing at the weights as this is his strongest point.

Nelson Dewey will not enter the meet, but the Blaineites are practicing diligently and are going to work hard to beat their rivals. The meet will be the largest that has been held at the Head of the Lakes for several years, and a record breaking crowd is expected to turn out to witness the game.

FAVORITES NUMEROUS

Brooklyn Handicap Will be Run at Gravesend Today.

New York, May 20.—Thousands of New Yorkers journeyed down to Gravesend today to witness the running of the Classic Brooklyn handicap.

Fifteen horses are announced as probable starters for the $20,000 purse and the handicappers are at a loss to choose a favorite among a half dozen of these, so evenly are they matched. Accountant, the big money winner of last year; Tokalon, the Southern mare, who won the event last season; Go-Between, Dandelion, Superman, Salvidere, Nealon and Arcite are among those.

Superman, James R. Keene's commando colt, last Thursday stepped a mile and a sixteenth at Belmont park in 1:44 5-5, equalling the world's record for that distance. In this race he carried 112 pounds. The Brooklyn handicap is at a mile and a quarter, and in it Superman is asked to pick up only ninety-five pounds. Miller will ride him.

Accountant, Go-Between, Salvidere and Dandelion are looked upon as the horses most likely to force Superman to extend himself if he is to bring the rich prize to the Keene stable for the fourth time. Salvidere was a wonderful performer last year and though he has his first start of the season today he will have numerous supporters among the betters. Salvidere is asked to carry 100 pounds.

The rejuvenated Ruttling may be heard from. He has been trained on the track over which the race will be run and is thoroughly accustomed to it. Sewell, though speedy, is believed to like a shorter course. Arcite can go the route, but he is a slow beginner, and in a field like that which faces the starter today getting away at the flash of the barriers means much.

At all events no matter who may be the winner, it will be a hard fought race from the start.

CALUMET WINS ANOTHER.

Peggers Defeated Saturday by Score of 6 to 2.

Winnipeg, Man., May 20.—Calumeet won another from the Maroons Saturday, getting to Sawyer in the third inning for three runs and hitting him hard in the succeeding three innings. Newcombe was steady all through the game and Calumet's chances for a victory were never in danger. Score:

HIBBING WAS SNOWED UNDER

Kelleys Got Nineteen Hits in Terrific Swatfest Yesterday.

Hibbing, May 20.—Ninteen hits, seventeen runs, two pitchers batted out of the box after sessions of two innings each, and a third, the mighty Freeman himself, pounded for seven hits in one inning, seven tallies in one game and a final score of 17 to 6, tells the story of the defeat of the local semi-professional aggregation at the hands of the Kelley Hardware team from Duluth here yesterday.

The way the hardware men pounded up the local pitchers was a fright. Grogan, of the Lethbridge, Western Canada aggregation, was put on the firing line for the miners at the start and retired after the second inning after the Kelleys had landed on him for seven safe hits and put five men across the plate. Both, the ore diggers' pet slab artist, and, next to Freeman, the mightiest twirler of the iron range, was the next victim. Five more runs came over in the two innings while Booth was mixing them.

Then came Freeman. The range fans settled back in their seats and waited. The swatfest was over, they thought. These nail merchants couldn't hit Freeman that way, not much. The first man up let a couple of wild ones sail calmly past, got one strike called on him, and then crack—the little sphere was sailing way out into the gloaming. Two bases. The next man got a single, a three-bagger was a feature, and when the third man was out seven hits and seven runs were tallied for the Kelleys. Duluth got slightly tired of the base running stunt this inning and let up for the rest of the game, only three more tallies being made. Freeman pitched better ball as the game progressed and the ninth inning was a shut out for the Kelleys.

The score:

Kelleys	17	19	1
Hibbing	6	7	3

Batteries—Larson and Robinson; Grogan, Booth, Freeman and Carroll.

CULLED FROM THE SCORE BOOK.

Three straight to start on isn't bad at all.

The Sox continue to play the inside game that wins victories.

There are slips, but this is only the first of the season, and there are still some rough edges.

The knockers had a nice session in the first and second innings yesterday, but they quieted down when the Sox began to play ball.

There was some pretty poor baserunning on the part of the Giants yesterday. Taylor must get his men to use their noodles when on the sacks.

There are several points in the Giants' line-up which might be strengthened, notably the position behind the bat. Gibson doesn't get his gray matter working, and a catcher who doesn't think isn't worth two hairs from a rabbit's tail.

Al Cummings is pitching great ball this year. He had it on the Giants Saturday, and his performance in the eighth inning, when there were men on second and third, and only one out, was great.

Taylor made a mistake in trying to pitch Rogers through the game Saturday. It was Rogers' first time in the box this year, as he wasn't on the training trip, and four innings was his limit. In the fifth he weakened, and the Sox fell on him.

Leighty is playing a great game at short. Seventeen chances thus far in the series, without an error. He isn't hitting the ball, though, having but one hit out of twelve times up. Jimmy Fagin is playing good ball around the third sack, but he, too, is weak in his stickling, for he hasn't connected safely yet.

Nolan's work has been pretty weak all through the series and he will have to brace up. Saturday he called a third strike on Solbraa, which was a foot wide off the plate, and the base on balls he gave Smith yesterday was pretty bad.

The sooner players learn that spectators don't want to see prolonged arguments and altercations on the ball field, the better it will be for the game. Nolan showed his weakness yesterday when he failed to discipline Taylor, whose actions were objectionable. He had reason for complaint, but his tactics never get anything.

Houghton showed a streak of bonehead base running yesterday which furnished amusement for the fans. When Olson was caught between first and second in the fourth, the Duluth outfielders came in and everybody but Catcher Smith was around second. Haney, Tracey, Summers, Leighty and McCormick took part in the play, McCormick touching the man out.

Jim Haney has a young telephone pole which he uses at bat. Every time he connects the ball goes some and he cracked out a pretty single yesterday.

The Giants are evidently shy on sluggers, for Meyers, Sundheim and Solbraa are the only men who have thus far shown form with the club. Meyers is a healthy swatter and will bother the pitchers of the league some this year, while the outfielders will be kept busy chasing the ball.

Egan is a good pitcher. He was slightly wild yesterday, but he has everything and only for dumb balls behind him would have held the Sox to a smaller score.

After taking a beating from the Maroons Thursday, Roy Newcombe came back Saturday and beat the peggers out. The Aristocrats have been playing good ball in the Canadian city, and the scribes there are marking them for one of the leaders in the race.

Today and tomorrow, the Giants are the attraction again and then Frank Mullane's Aristocrats will come along for a series of six games.

MINNESOTA.

MILLION FOR OLD NORWAY

Norwegians Start Movement to Give Fatherland Birthday Present.

Bleak Mountains and Bogs to be Made Fruitful.

Minneapolis, May 20.—One million dollars was pledged to Norway at the Auditorium Saturday evening, in an outburst of patriotic enthusiasm among the 2,500 sons and daughters of Norway who had gathered there to do honor to Norway's glorious independence day. It is to be a gift to old Norway from her children in America, and it is to be presented during the centennial of Norway's independence, May 17, 1914. A committee to take charge of the work of raising funds was appointed, and the ball was started rolling in the most auspicious manner.

The idea was suggested by John W. Arctander, who made an eloquent address in the Norwegian tongue. He pictured the dreariness of the bare mountains and barren desolation of the many bogs and swamps, and the general backwardness of industrial development.

"We are a million of us here in America. Each one of us is earning $500 a year on the average, or, in other words, we are producing $500,000,000 a year for America and have been doing it for years. No one will begrudge it in the least if we send Norway a present on her hundredth birthday. I propose that we take steps tonight to begin the work of raising a fund of $1,000,000.

"One-quarter should be used in clothing the naked mountains, and helping in making them beautiful as well as profitable. Then another quarter should be used in draining those desolate swamps, which could produce the finest crops if they could be drained. The remainder of the funds should be used for industrial development or such other purposes as the committee may provide.

"I propose that a general committee be appointed here tonight, that under this general committee there be state committees, under these, again, county committees, and again city, village and township committees."

The plan was adopted by acclamations of the entire big audience as the entire body arose to vote in the affirmative.

The committee suggested by Mr. Arctander and approved by the meeting is as follows: Senator Knute Nelson, Alexandria; Former Governor C. N. Harried, Aberdeen, S. D.; Governor J. O. Davidson, Madison, Wis.; Consul E. H. Hobe, St. Paul; Consul P. H. Dade, Chicago; Olaf O. Searle, Minneapolis; Prof. H. G. Stub, Hamline; Prof. E. Kr. Johnson, St. Anthony Park; Prof. Sven Oftedal, Minneapolis; Prof. N. J. Lohre, Jewell, Iowa; Ludvig Arctander, Andreas Ueland and Henry J. Gjertsen, Minneapolis; Elder Samlagar of the Norwegian M. E. church; Dr. S. H. Schjoldernp, Laurits S. Swenson, Minneapolis; Nicolai Grevstad, Chicago, Rasmus B. Anderson, Madison, Wis., B. Amundson, Decorah, Iowa.

This committee is expected to get together as soon as possible to consider the general proposition, and either to constitute itself a general executive committee or to appoint another and probably a larger general body.

CONVENTION OF STATE FIREMEN

Topics on Which Papers Will be Presented at St. Cloud.

St. Cloud, Minn., May 20.—One of the largest state meetings to be held in Minnesota this year is scheduled for this city June 4 and 5. It is the annual meeting of the Minnesota State Fire Department association, an organization that includes in its membership all the paid and volunteer firemen in the state, estimated to number about 15,000.

The program of the meeting has been sent out by Secretary D. L. Kane of Minneapolis, and is full of features for the improvement of the fire service. There will be an address of welcome by Mayor Brown of St. cloud, and a response by C. O. Wright of Luverne; addresses by J. R. Bennett of St. Cloud, F. W. Lyons of Little Falls, Ruben Warner of St. Paul, T. D. O'Brien, state insurance commissioner; Edward Peterson, state fire marshal, and F. J. Watrous of St. Paul. Topics on which papers will be presented and discussed embrace the following:

"Is it preferable to have the chief and other department officers of volunteer fire departments appointed by the mayor, the council, or elected by the members of the department?"

"Should not cities and towns of more than five thousand maintain a paid fire department?"

"The duties of volunteer firemen in the case of apparatus and hose."

"Should the law giving 1-10 of a mill for a pension fund, enacted at the last session, for cities of more than fifty thousand, be extended to apply to all cities in the state?"

"Is it an aid to the efficiency of a volunteer fire department to offer a prize for first water at a fire?"

"What is the best and least expensive water supply for small cities and villages for fire protection?"

"The regular topics are not the only questions that can be presented on the floor of the convention; any member who has something to offer not down on the program or who desires information on any question will be given a full hearing.

"The officers of the association are: President, Henry J. Liperich of St. Cloud; first vice president, Nic Kleinschmidt of Mankato; second vice president, Paul Bolan of Cloquet; secretary, Capt. D. L. Kane of Minneapolis; treasurer, Capt. A. J. Myler of St. Paul; statistician, E. F. Kelley of Faribault.

Minneapolis can have the convention in 1910 for the asking. The convention of 1908 will be held at Mankato and that of the following year at Cloquet.

PROTEST IS PECULIAR

Greenbush, Minn., Commercial Club Objects to Automobile Service.

Sends Letter to Merchants Asking Them to Boycott Innovation.

Crookston, Minn., May 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—A circular letter has been sent out by the Commercial club of Greenbush complaining that a young man of that village is hurting the business interests of the town by putting in an automobile with which he hauls passengers to and from Roseau. There are three livery stables at Greenbush and the young man with his machine has taken away a lot of business from them, and the Commercial club in their circular protest against this and ask that the wholesale houses instruct their representatives to use the livery rigs in preference. Greenbush is at the terminus and heretofore the livery men of Greenbush have done a thiving business hauling traveling men to and from the surrounding towns. The new method of transportation, however, which has been introduced by the young man, is much more convenient, much quicker, much more comfortable and a great deal more economical than the old way and it was hailed with delight by all the traveling men who find it necessary to make this trip. In fact, several men who formerly went around by the way of Winnipeg and made the Roseau territory by driving from Warroad while on their Warroad and Rainy River trip have, since the automobile started, taken the route up through Greenbush.

In the meatime the young man is getting a great deal of favorable advertising and through this letter which the Commercial club is sending out every jobbing house will learn of the fact that there is such means of transportation between Greenbush and Roseau and will undoubtedly instruct its traveling men to use it.

CHARGES MADE AGAINST FUNKLEY

Rumored Attempt to Oust the Beltrami County Attorney.

Bemidji, Minn., May 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is rumored about the county that an attempt is on foot to have County Attorney Henry Funkley removed, and that papers are now in course of preparation, to be presented to the governor. What the charges will be is a matter of conjecture, as Mr. Funkley, who only assumed the office last January, has made an enviable record, hardly equalled by any prosecutor in the state. Within six weeks after assuming office he had apprehended Paul Fournier and James Wesley, charged with the Dahl murder, and their conviction, at the recent term of court followed. Both are now serving life sentences.

It is hardly believed here that the governor will take cognizance of the petition, as the charges are said to be preferred by disgruntled politicians for personal reasons, and nothing contained therein can possibly be construed as malfeasance.

PARSONS GIVEN YEAR.

Pleads Guilty to Charge of Forgery and is Sentenced.

East Grand Forks, Minn., May 20.—A. L. Parsons, the young man who was in the employ of R. L. Butler in this city for a short time during the winter, and who ended his service and his residence here at the same time after swindling Mr. Butler out of $118 through a bogus check scheme, and did the same trick at Crookston a day or two later, pleading guilty Saturday to forgery and was sentenced by Judge Watts to a year in the penitentiary. He had asked for a continuance of his case several times, in the hope that he could get money from friends to straighten out his crooked deals with the parties he had wronged. The money he secured here and also that he obtained in Crookston all went except a dollar or so within three or four days in dissipation.

WIFE BEATS OFF A GANG

Troubles Between Vincent Semrad and Muscoda Are Renewed.

Town Fails to Move Cabin From the Proposed Roadway.

Muscoda, Wis., May 20.—The troubles which have existed for many months between Vincent Semrad and the town board concerning the right to use a road through his land, has broken out afresh, and once more Mrs. Semrad has displayed Amazonian prowess by standing off with a club a gang of men sent to open the road. Once before she had recourse to a shotgun for the purpose of enforcing what she believes to be her rights in the premises, but this time a "big stick" was all sufficient.

About twenty years ago Semrad purchased a tract of 120 acres just outside the limits of this place and in the town of Muscoda. At that time farmers of the neighborhood when coming to town made a practice of short-cutting diagonally across one of Semrad's forties and he in a spirit of good neighborliness allowed them to do so for many years.

Some time ago the town board decided to have the land surveyed and platted, making the old "short cut" a town road. Semrad protested and asked the town to vacate its lands and pass around on the section lines. On their refusal to do so Semrad built a fence across the roadway. This the supervisors had torn down, but again it was rebuilt and this time Mrs. Semrad stood guard over it with a loaded shotgun and defied the men sent to pull it down. The supervisors, however, took advantage of a dark night and removed the fence.

Then Semrad determined to make his objection more impressive. Early last week he put men and teams to work moving his dwelling, a log house 24 by 36 feet, to the center of the road, which he proceeded to occupy. Then he was called away for a day or two on business, and during his absence the supervisors sent teams and men with orders to haul the house back to its original position. Mrs. Semrad, seeing the approach of the enemy, armed herself with a big club and defied the men to approach. Two or three rasher and less experienced than the others came too close to the woman on guard and retired with broken heads. Finally, after a council of war, the invading party decided to retire and Mrs. Semrad is holding the fort until her husband's return. When he does return the supervisors will attempt to serve upon him an order requiring him to vacate the land.

HEART MOVES

And Kellnerville Blacksmith is Sent to Milwaukee Specialist.

Manitowoc, Wis., May 20.—With his heart shifting from left to right, his health shattered and his life thought to be in danger, Benjamin Hendrickson, a blacksmith of Kellnerville, has been rushed to Milwaukee to be placed under the care of specialists, in the hope that he may be restored to normal condition.

Hendrickson is middle-aged and until recently had enjoyed robust health. Some time ago he complained of pain in his right side, near the lungs, and consulted a local physician. Making a careful examination the doctor was surprised to find that the man's heart was slowly but surely shifting from its normal position to the right side of the man's body. As a consequence of the shifting of the cardiac region, the lung on the right side has been affected and the physician here, believing the man's life in danger, ordered him to Milwaukee for treatment.

There is no apparent cause for the phenomenon, and there are few such cases recorded in medical annals. Cases have been known where the heart has been found on the right side, but this is usually found at birth.

PENINSULA BRIEFS

BIG OUTING BY FRENCH

Annual Celebration by Members of St. Jean de Baptiste Society.

Plans For Day Are Now in Course of Preparation.

Calumet, Mich., May 20.—The annual celebration of the Copper country members of the order of St. Jean de Baptiste will be held in Calumet this year on Monday, June 24. Plans for the celebration are already being made and the affair promises to be one of the biggest of its kind ever held in the Copper country. The various lodges in the Copper country for years past have joined together to make the occasion a more memorable one, and invariably the celebrationes are successful in every respect.

Last year the St. Jean de Baptiste societies gathered at Lake Linden and celebrated the day. The affair was well attended in that village and will be even more in Calumet. When it is remembered that there are practically 1,000 members of the order in the Copper country, it can better be realized that there will be something doing here on June 24.

The plans for the day are now in the course of preparation and promise to keep things going for the entire day. The visitors will arrive here in the morning and together with the local members will attend high mass to be celebrated at 9:30 o'clock at the St. Anne's church, Father Boisonnault having extended an invitation for this purpose.

The Calumet & Hecla band has been engaged to furnish the music for the parade, which will include the members of the lodges in Hancock, Houghton, Lake Linden and Calumet and also the American Foresters of Columet. The program for the day will be heard at the Tamarack park and among the speakers who will deliver addresses during the afternoon are Dr. Scallon, Justice Olivier of Hancock, and F. E. Prince of Lake Linden. There will also be musical selections rendered by the Calumet & Hecla band and by local musicians.

In the evening the band will be in attendance to render music for dancing, and as the weather promises to be favorable on June 24, it is expected that the park will be well filled with those who help make the celebration a big success.

Request of Wolverine Young Men for Site, is Granted.

The boys formerly held their gymnastic exercieses in the upper portion of an old barn which was recently destroyed by fire. They now intend to erect a structure of their own.

The building will be known as the "Athletic Club," and the members will be directed in their physical training by Charles Eskell. At a recent meeting the following officers were elected: President, John Trezise; vice president, Richard Stevens; assistant physical director, John Brown; physical director, Charles Eskell; secretary, Charles Symons; treasurer, Arthur Symons.

Some of the prominent members helping to frame a code of rules are: William Bastian, Arthur N. Chatel, Nels Nordstrom, Samuel Hibbard, Will Cornish, John Hosking, John Mitchell.

DAKOTAS

ABERDEEN TO BUTTE

Extension of the Milwaukee Road Will be Opened by Jan. 1.

President Earling and Party Go Over Route in Autos.

Aberdeen, S. D., May 20.—By Jan. 1 next, Aberdeen will be connected with Butte, Mont., and trains will be running through Aberdeen on the new transcontinental line. This is certain.

The above statement was made Saturday by President A. J. Earling of the Milwaukee railroad, and it is the first official announcement regarding the immediate extension plans of that road.

President Earling and a party of other officials left by special train for Glenham, and the end of the road at the Missouri river, where they will have automobiles in readiness to take them over the entire route as far as Butte, Mont. President Earling was asked what truth there is in the report that the road intended to abandon its extension plans for the present. His reply was as follows:

"If you care to you can quote me as saying that by Jan. 1 next trains will be running over the new extension between Aberdeen and Butte. I feel that except in the case of the greatest emergency, this is assured. We are determined to push the extension with all possible speed, and I believe the work is in the hands of men who are going to allow no obstacle to remain in the way of completing the road as fast as human brain and modern machinery can build it."

The party intends to inspect every mile of the route and prepare the way for the construction to be pushed more rapidly from both ends. President Earling said that Aberdeen will be one of the important junction and division points on the coast extension, and that the opening of the new territory will be of immense value to this city. He predicted that the population here will more tha ndouble in the next ten years.

GO TO OTHER FIELDS.

Four Resignations From Faculty of Valley City Normal.

Valley City, N. D., May 20.—Four members of the faculty of the state normal in this city have resigned. Prof. Craig has resigned to take advanced work at Chicago university. A. D. Weeks, who has been at the head of the English work for five years, will have a better position in the English department of the Agricultural college at Fargo. Dr. John M. Gillette, professor of history and social science for four years, has just accepted work at the state university at Grand Forks. Miss Floe Farlow has been elected to two positions this week—supervisor of primary practice in the State Normal school at Lewiston, Idaho, and a like position in the public schools at Tucson, Ariz. She will accept the Arizona position.

ROUSTABOUT ENDS LIFE.

Oliver H. Lee of Valley City Shoots Himself With a Rifle.

Valley City, N. D., May 20.—Oliver H. Lee, a roustabout in the Swanson livery barn of this place, committed suicide by shooting himself through the head. He was tending the barn and alone in the office at the time. He procured a 22 rifle, and, putting the muzzle under his chin, evidently pulled the trigger with his thumb. The bullet pierced the brain and caused instant death. He was a simple minded fellow of about 30 and was evidently suffering from acute alcoholism. His home is in Moorhead, Minn., but he has lived about Valley City more or less for the past two years.

WAS A BIG SUCCESS.

Grand Forks May Festival Successful in Every Way.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 20.—As a fitting climax to the highly successful May festival, given by the Grand Forks Oratorio society, Handel's "Messiah" was given at the Metropolitan Friday evening to a packed house. The house was sold out for the afternoon performance as well, the first time in the history of the Metropolitan for a matinee.

The Oratorio society will come out of the venture something like $500 ahead, besides the satisfaction of having made a most decided success of this the first of an event which will hereafter be an annual one, and one to be looked forward to with much anticipation. The soloists have delighted their audiences, and the chorus, under Prof. Stout, has been most flatteringly mentioned by critics. The Minneapolis Symphony orchestra will ever be remembered with pleasure, as this organization did much to make the festival a success.

YANKTON CITY ENJOINED.

May Not Interfere With Extension Plans of Phone Company.

Sioux Falls, S. D., May 20.—A temporary restraining order has been granted by Judge Carland in the case of the Northwestern Telephone Exchange company of Yankton against the city authorities of that place. The telephone company asks that a temporary injunction be granted, restraining the city authorities from interfering with the improvement and extension of its system.

It is contended by the city that the franchise of the telephone company has expired, and that it cannot extend its system until it has first applied for and secured a new franchise.

THREE ARE INDICTED.

Grand Jury Finishes Its Work at Pierre and is Discharged.

Pierre, S. D., May 20.—The grand jury which was called for the circuit court now in session in this city, was discharged after a little more than two days' consideration of matters presented to them. A number of cases were dismissed without action, not being considered of enough importance to bring them into court. The jury returned true bills in three of the cases brought before them, one being in the case of "Doc" Bridgeman, the negro being held here on a charge of jail breaking; another against H. J. Holbron on a grand larceny charge; and a third against J. W. Wright, on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. All of these were reported in court, and as all the parties were either in custody or out on bonds, their cases will come up for hearing at once.

THRILLING EXPERIENCE

Of a Resident of Northome With an Enraged Bear.

Northome, Minn., May 20.—Peter J. McLin, a well known resident of this place, had a thrilling experience with a bear a few days ago and narrowly escaped with his life.

McLin was out looking up some land north of here, when he encountered the bear. He fired his rifle at the animal, succeeding in breaking his shoulder, but not inflicting a fatal wound. The wound, however, served greatly to enrage the bear, which, with a bellow of pain, started after McLin. He kept on firing until the chamber of his rifle was empty, and although the bear had to hobble on but three legs its progress was so rapid that it was almost on McLin before he could reload. Dropping his useless rifle, McLin started to run. The bear rapidly gained on him, however, and just as McLin reached the bank of the Poplar river, the animal was upon him. Rising upon its haunches, it struck at him with its uninjured paw, ripping his coat entirely from his back and inflicting long scratches upon his neck and shoulders.

Without a moment's hesitation McLin plunged into the river and swam across, the bear still in pursuit. On the other side of the river was a bit of low land on which there was about two feet of snow on which a crust had formed. McLin clambered up the bank, and finding the snow would bear his weight, continued his sprint. The bear attempted to follow, but broke through the crust and wallowed about in the deep snow, which delayed its progress to such an extent that McLin speedily left it behind.

TO RECLAIM MUSKEG.

Railways Show How Easily Drainage Can be Done.

International Falls, Minn., May 20.—The drainage of the large areas of muskeg in this country, promises to be solved largely by the railroads.

Between this village and the town of Littlefork the extension of the M. & I. railroad, now being built, traverses some twelve miles of this high and rolling land, on which the water is held by the higher banks of the streams which are to afford them drainage.

In their eagerness to reach Littlefork, a town of wonderful water power possibilities, at the earliest possible moment, the railroad company, before the spring breakup, went to the expense of digging miles of ditches leading to the creeks tributary to the Little Fork and Rainy Lake rivers.

The hope that the ditches would make possible summer work is being fulfilled, as the greater part of the right-of-way is now so dry that the work is progressing without hindrance.

With the other railroads that will soon cross-section this country on account of the early importance of this town in a manufacturing way, the transportation companies bid fair to become large factors in the redeeming of the muskeg wastes.

A ST. PAUL GIRL IS ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

St. Paul, May 20.—Laura McLaughlin, 17 years of age was accidentally shot and instantly killed Saturday night by her brother, Charles McLaughlin, age 14 years, at their home on East Eighth street. The boy was handling a small target rifle. His sister was sitting at the table for supper in the same room. The cartridge in the gun suddenly exploded. The bullet struck the girl in the nose, plowing upward into the brain and caused instant death.

GROUND IS BROKEN FOR SOO EXTENSION.

St. Paul, May 20.—Ground has been broken on the 200 miles of extension of the Soo line from Brooten to Duluth. The final survey has been completed and the general contract held by the Foley Bros. & Larson company has been sublet. LUMBER COMPANY WINS

In Suit Brought Against Brown Company for Holding Logs.

Fergus Falls, Minn., May 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Among the important cases tried before Judge Morris in the federal court just closed is the case of the Rainy River Lumber company, which is a Canadian corporation, composed of Americans vs. the Rainy River Boom corporation, a Minnesota concern, composed of Canadians.

The Boom company claims $7,500 to be due them from the Lumber company, and is holding a large amount of logs until the amount is paid. The lumber company replevined the logs, and the case was brought into the federal court.

Judge Morris decided the case in favor of the Lumber company, holding that the defendant's logs were placed in the Boom company's enclosure by the Boom company, unnecessarily, and they had no right to charge for sorting the logs.

The case involves international law, and Congressman Steenerson of Crookston, who is attorney for the Rainy River Boom corporation, has decided to appeal from the decision of Judge Morris to the supreme court of the United States, where he believes the decision will be reversed.

SERIOUS CRIME

Charged Against George Linscott, Who is Bound Over to Circuit Court.

Escanaba, Mich., May 20.—After listening to one of the most revolting stories of abuse ever told in a court of Delta county, Judge Emil Glaser has held George Linscott, 42 years of age, to the circuit court for trial on a criminal charge preferred by his wife and his 12-year-old step-daughter. The bail bond for the defendant was placed at $1,000, and as Linscott is without funds he was taken to jail where he will be confined until the July term of circuit court. All of the details of several assaults alleged to have been committed by the unnatural father were given in court by the child, who at no time faltered, but gave her story in a straightforward manner. Different details were corroborated by the testimony of other witnesses and although Linscott offered a strenuous denial to all of the charges, his story had but little weight with the court when the testimony was completed he was promptly bound over to the higher court for trial.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

MINNESOTA.

MILLION FOR OLD NORWAY

Norwegians Start Movement to Give Fatherland Birthday Present.

Bleak Mountains and Bogs to be Made Fruitful.

Minneapolis, May 20.—One million dollars was pledged to Norway at the Auditorium Saturday evening, in an outburst of patriotic enthusiasm among the 2,500 sons and daughters of Norway who had gathered there to do honor to Norway's glorious Independence Day. It is to be a gift to old Norway from her children in America, and it is to be presented during the centennial of Norway's independence, May 17, 1914. A committee to take charge of the work of raising funds was appointed, and the ball was started rolling in the most auspicious manner.

The idea was suggested by John W. Arctander, who made an eloquent address in the Norwegian tongue. He pictured the dreariness of the bare mountains and barren desolation of the many bogs and swamps, and the general barrenness of industrial development.

"We are a million of us here in America. Each one of us is earning $500 a year on the average, or, in other words, we are producing $500,000,000 a year for America, and have been doing it for years. No one will begrudge it in the least if we send Norway a present on her hundredth birthday. I propose that we take steps tonight to begin the work of raising a fund of $1,000,000.

"One-quarter of should be used in clothing the naked mountains, and helping in making them beautiful as well as profitable. Then another quarter should be used in draining those desolate swamps, which would produce the finest crops if they could be drained. The remainder of the funds should be used for industrial development or such other purposes as the committee may provide.

"I propose that a general committee be appointed here tonight, that under this general committee there be state committees, under these, again, county committees, and again city, village and township committees."

The plan was adopted by acclamations of pleasure as the entire body arose to vote in the affirmative.

The committee suggested by Mr. Arctander and approved by the meeting is as follows: Senator Knute Nelson, Alexandria; Former Governor C. N. Harried, Aberdeen, S. D.; Governor J. O. Davidson, Madison, Wis.; Consul E. H. Hobe, St. Paul; Consul P. H. Gade, Chicago; Capt. O. Sverdrup, Minneapolis; Prof. H. J. Stub, Hamline; Prof. E. Kr. Johnson, St. Anthony Park; Prof. Sven Oftedal, Minneapolis; Prof. N. J. Lohre, Jewell, Iowa; Ludvig Arctander, Andreas Uelland and Henry J. Gjertsen, Minneapolis; Elder Sandaas of the Norwegian M. E. church, Dr. S. H. Schjellerup, Lauritz S. Swenson, Minneapolis, Nicolai Grevstad, Chicago; Rasmus B. Anderson, Madison, Wis.; B. Amundson, Decorah, Iowa.

This committee is expected to get together as soon as possible to consider the general proposition, and either to constitute itself a general executive committee or to appoint another and probably a larger general body.

Topics on Which Papers Will be Presented at St. Cloud.

St. Cloud, Minn., May 20.—One of the largest state meetings to be held in Minnesota this year is scheduled for this city June 4 and 5. It is the annual meeting of the Minnesota State Fire Department, an organization that includes in its membership all the paid and volunteer firemen in the state, estimated to number about 15,000.

The program of the meeting has been sent out by Secretary D. L. King of Minneapolis, and is full of features for the improvement of the fire service. There will be an address of welcome by Mayor Brown of St. Cloud, and a response by C. O. Wright of Luverne; addresses by J. R. Bennett of St. Cloud, F. W. Lyons of Little Falls, Ruben Warner of St. Paul, T. D. O'Brien, state insurance commissioner; Edward Peterson, state fire marshal, and F. J. Waltrous of St. Paul. Topics on which papers will be presented and discussed embrace the following:

"Is it preferable to have the chief and other department officers of volunteer fire departments appointed by the mayor, the council, or elected by the members of the department?"

"Should not cities and towns of more than five thousand maintain a paid fire department?"

"The duties of volunteer firemen in the case of apparatus and hose."

"Should the law giving 1-10 of a mill for a pension fund, enacted at the last session, for cities of more than fifty thousand, be extended to apply to all cities in the state?"

"Is it an aid to the efficiency of a volunteer fire department to offer a prize for first water at a fire?"

"What is the best and least expensive water supply for small cities and villages for fire protection?"

The regular topics are not the only questions that can be presented on the floor of the convention; any member who has something to offer not down on the program or who desires information on any question will be given a full hearing.

PROTEST IS PECULIAR

Greenbush, Minn., Commercial Club Objects to Automobile Service.

Sends Letter to Merchants Asking Them to Boycott Innovation.

Crookston, Minn., May 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—A circular letter has been sent out by the Commercial club of Greenbush complaining that a young man of that village is hurting the business interests of the town by putting in an automobile with which he hauls passengers to and from Roseau. There are three livery stables at Greenbush and the young man with his machine has taken away a lot of business from them, and the Commercial club in their circular protest against this and ask that the wholesale houses instruct their representatives to use the livery rigs in preference. Greenbush is at the terminus and heretofore the livery men of Greenbush have done a thriving business hauling traveling men to and from the surrounding towns. The new method of transportation, however, which has been introduced by the young man, is much more convenient, much quicker, much more comfortable and a great deal more economical than the old way and it was hailed with delight by all the traveling men who find it necessary to make this trip. In fact, several men who formerly went around by the way of Winnipeg have made the Roseau territory by driving from Warroad while on their way to and Rainy River trip have, since the automobile started, taken the route up through Greenbush.

In the meatime the young man is getting a great deal of favorable advertising and through this letter which the Commercial club is sending out every jobbing house will learn of the fact that there is such means of transportation between Greenbush and Roseau and will undoubtedly instruct its traveling men to use it.

Rumored Attempt to Oust the Beltrami County Attorney.

Bemidji, Minn., May 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is rumored about the county that an attempt is on foot to have County Attorney Henry Funkley removed, and that papers are now in course of preparation, to be presented to the governor. What the charges will be is a matter of conjecture, as Mr. Funkley, who only assumed the office last January, has made an enviable record, hardly equalled by any prosecutor in the state. Within six weeks after assuming office he had apprehended Paul Fournier and James Wesley, charged with the Dahl murder, and their conviction, at the recent term of court followed. Both are now serving life sentences.

It is hardly believed here that the governor will take cognizance of the petition, as the charges are said to be preferred by disgruntled politicians for personal reasons, and nothing contained therein can possibly be construed as malfeasance.

PARSONS GIVEN YEAR.

Pleads Guilty to Charge of Forgery and is Sentenced.

East Grand Forks, Minn., May 20.—A. L. Parsons, the young man who was in the employ of R. L. Butler in this city for a short time during the winter, and who ended his service and his residence here at the same time after swindling Mr. Butler out of $1H through a bogus check scheme, and did the same trick at Crookston a day or two later, pleading guilty Saturday to forgery and was sentenced by Judge Watts to a year in the penitentiary. He had asked for a continuance of his case several times, in the hope that he could get money from friends to straighten out his crooked deals with the parties he had wronged. The money he secured here and also that he obtained in Crookston all went except a dollar or so within three or four days in dissipation.

WIFE BEATS OFF A GANG

Troubles Between Vincent Semrad and Muscoda Are Renewed.

Town Fails to Move Cabin From the Proposed Roadway.

Muscoda, Wis., May 20.—The troubles which have existed for many months between Vincent Semrad and the town board concerning the right to use a road through his land, has broken out afresh, and once more Mrs. Semrad has displayed Amazonian prowess by standing off with a club a gang of men sent to open the road. Once before she had recourse to a shotgun for the purpose of enforcing what she believes to be her rights in the premises, but this time ea "big stick" was all sufficient.

About twenty years ago Semrad purchased a tract of 120 acres just outside the limits of this place and in the town of Muscoda. At that time farmers of the neighborhood were coming to town making a practice of short-cutting diagonally across one of Semrad's forties and he in a spirit of good neighborliness allowed them to do so for many years.

Some time ago the town board decided to have the land surveyed and platted, making the old "short cut" a town road. Semrad protested and asked the town to vacate his lands and proceed on to the section lines. On their refusal to do so Semrad built a fence across the roadway. This the supervisors had torn down, but again it was rebuilt and this time Mrs. Semrad stood guard over it with a loaded shotgun and defied the men sent to pull it down. The supervisors, however, took advantage of a dark night and removed the fence.

Mrs. Semrad determined to make his objection more impressive. Early last week he put men and teams to work moving his dwelling, a log house 16 by 36 feet, to the middle of the road which he proceeded to occupy. Then he was called away for a day or two on business, and during his absence the supervisors sent teams and men and moved the house back to its original position. Mrs. Semrad, seeing the approach of the enemy, armed herself with a big club and defied the men to approach. Two or three more and less experienced than the others came too close to the woman on guard and retired with broken heads. Finally, after a council of war, the leading party decided to retire and Mrs. Semrad is holding the fort until her husband's return. When he does return the supervisors will attempt to serve upon him an order requiring him to vacate the land.

HEART MOVES

And Kellnerville Blacksmith is Sent to Milwaukee Specialist.

Manitowoc, Wis., May 20.—With his heart shifting from left to right, his health shattered and his life thought to be in danger, Benjamin Hendrickson, a blacksmith of Kellnerville, has been rushed to Milwaukee to be placed under the care of specialists, in the hope that he may be restored to normal condition.

Hendrickson is middle-aged and until recently has enjoyed robust health. Some time ago he complained of pain in his right side, near the lungs, and consulted a local physician. Making a careful examination the doctor was surprised to find that the man's heart was slowly but surely shifting from its normal position to the right side of the man's body. As a consequence of the shifting of the cardiac region, the lung on the right side has been affected and the physician here, believing the man's life in danger, ordered him to Milwaukee for treatment.

There is no apparent cause for the phenomenon, and there are few such cases recorded in medical annals. Cases have been known where the heart has been found on the right side, but this is usually found at birth.

PENINSULA BRIEFS

BIG OUTING BY FRENCH

Annual Celebration by Members of St. Jean de Baptiste Society.

Plans For Day Are Now in Course of Preparation.

Calumet, Mich., May 20.—The annual celebration of the Copper country members of the order of St. Jean de Baptiste will be held in Calumet this year on Monday, June 24. Plans for the celebration are already being made and the affair promises to be one of the biggest of its kind ever held in the Copper country. The various lodges in the Copper country for years past have joined together to make the occasion a more memorable one, and invariably the celebrationes are successful in every respect.

Last year the St. Jean de Baptiste societies gathered at Lake Linden and celebrated the day. The affair was well attended in that village and will be even more in Calumet. When it is remembered that there are practically 1,000 members of the order in the Copper country, it can better be realized that there will be something doing here on June 24.

The plans for the day are now in the course of preparation and promise to keep things going for the entire day. The visitors will arrive here in the morning and together with the local members will attend high mass to be celebrated at 9:30 o'clock at the St. Anne's church, Father Boisonault having extended an invitation for this purpose.

The Calumet & Hecla band has been engaged to furnish the music for the parade, which will include the members of the lodges in Hancock, Houghton, Lake Linden and Calumet and also the American Foresters of Columbia. The program for the day will be heard at the Tamarack park and among the speakers who will deliver addresses during the afternoon are Dr. Scallon, Justice Oliver of Hancock, and F. E. Prince of Lake Linden. There will also be musical selections rendered by the Calumet & Hecla band and by local musicians.

In the evening the band will be in attendance to render music for dancing, and as the weather promises to be favorable on June 24, it is expected that the park will be well filled with those who help make the celebration a big success.

ABERDEEN TO BUTTE

Extension of the Milwaukee Road Will be Opened by Jan. 1.

President Earling and Party Go Over Route in Autos.

Aberdeen, S. D., May 20.—By Jan. 1 next, Aberdeen will be connected with Butte, Mont., and trains will be running through Aberdeen on the new transcontinental line. This is certain.

The above statement was made Saturday by President A. J. Earling of the Milwaukee railroad, and it is the first official announcement regarding the immediate extension plans of that road.

President Earling and a party of other officials left by special train for Glenham, and the end of the road at the Missouri river, where they will have automobiles in readiness to take them over the entire route as far as Butte, Mont. President Earling was asked what truth there is in the report that the road intended to abandon its extension plans for the present. His reply was as follows:

"If you care to you can quote me as saying that by Jan. 1 next trains will be running over the new extension between Aberdeen and Butte. I feel that except in the case of the greatest emergency, this is assured. We are determined to push the extension with all possible speed, and I believe the work is in the hands of men who are going to allow no obstacle to remain in the way of completing the road as fast as human hands and modern machinery can build it."

The party intends to inspect every mile of the route and prepare the way for the construction to be pushed more rapidly from both ends. President Earling said that Aberdeen will be one of the important junction and division points on the coast extension, and that the opening of the new territory will be of immense value to this city. He predicted that the population here will mora tha ndouble in the next ten years.

He was tending the barn and alone in the office at the time. He procured a 22 rifle, and, putting the muzzle under his chin, evidently pulled the trigger with his thumb. The bullet pierced the brain and caused instant death. He was a simple minded fellow of about 30 and was evidently suffering from acute alcoholism. His home is in Moorhead, Minn., but he has lived about Valley City more or less for the past two years.

WAS A BIG SUCCESS.

Grand Forks May Festival Successful in Every Way.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 20.—As a fitting climax to the highly successful May festival, given by the Grand Forks Oratorio society, Handel's "Messiah" was given at the Metropolitan Friday evening to a packed house. The house was sold out for the afternoon performance as well, the first time in the history of the Metropolitan for a matinee.

The Oratorio society will come out of the venture something like $500 ahead, besides the satisfaction of having made a most decided success of this the first of an event which will hereafter be an annual one, and one to be looked forward to with much anticipation. The soloists have delighted their audiences, and the chorus, under Prof. Stout, has been most flatteringly mentioned by critics. The Minneapolis Symphony orchestra will ever be remembered with pleasure, as this organization did much to make the festival a success.

May Not Interfere With Extension Plans of Phone Company.

Sioux Falls, S. D., May 30.—A temporary restraining order has been granted by Judge Carland in the case of the Northwestern Telephone Exchange company of Yankton against the city authorities of that place. THRILLING EXPERIENCE

Of a Resident of Northome With an Enraged Bear.

Northome, Minn., May 20.—Peter J. McLin, a well known resident of this place, had a thrilling experience with a bear a few days ago and narrowly escaped with his life.

McLin was out looking up some land north of here, when he encountered the bear. He fired his rifle at the animal, succeeding in breaking his shoulder, but not inflicting a fatal wound. The wound, however, served greatly to enrage the bear, which, with a bellow of pain, started after McLin. He kept on firing until the chamber of his rifle was empty, and although the bear had to hobble on but three legs its progress was so rapid that it was almost on McLin before he could reload. Dropping his useless rifle, McLin started to run. The bear rapidly gained on him, however, and just as McLin reached the bank of the Poplar river, the animal was upon him. Rising upon its haunches, it struck at him with its uninjured paw, ripping his coat entirely from his back and inflicting long scratches upon his neck and shoulders.

Without a moment's hesitation McLin plunged into the river and swam across, the bear still in pursuit. On the other side of the river was a bit of low land on which there was about two feet of snow on which a crust had formed. McLin clambered up the bank, and finding the snow would bear his weight, continued his sprint. The bear attempted to follow, but broke through the crust and wallowed about in the deep snow, which delayed its progress to such an extent that McLin speedily left it behind.

TO RECLAIM MUSKEG.

Railways Show How Easily Drainage Can be Done.

International Falls, Minn., May 20.—The drainage of the large areas of muskeg in this country, promises to be solved largely by the railroads.

Between this village and the town of Littlefork the extension of the M. & I. railroad, now being built, traverses some twelve miles of this high and rolling land, on which the water is held by the higher banks of the streams which are to afford them drainage.

In their eagerness to reach Littlefork, a town of wonderful water power possibilities, at the earliest possible moment, the railroad company, before the spring breakup, went to the expense of digging miles of ditches leading to the creeks tributary to the Little Fork and Rainy Lake rivers.

The hope that the ditches would make possible summer work is being fulfilled, as the greater part of the right-of-way is now so dry that the work is progressing without hindrance.

With the other railroads that will soon cross-section this country on account of the early importance of this town in a manufacturing way, the transportation companies bid fair to become large factors in the redeeming of the muskeg wastes.

The bullet struck the girl in the nose, plowing upward into the brain and caused instant death.

LUMBER COMPANY WINS

In Suit Brought Against Brown Company for Holding Logs.

Fergus Falls, Minn., May 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Among the important cases tried before Judge Morris in the federal court just closed is the case of the Rainy River Lumber company, which is a Canadian corporation, composed of Americans vs. the Rainy River Boom corporation, a Minnesota concern, composed of Canadians.

The Boom company claims $7,500 to be due them from the Lumber company, and is holding a large amount of logs until the amount is paid. The lumber company replevined the logs, and the case was brought into the federal court.

Judge Morris decided the case in favor of the Lumber company, holding that the defendant's logs were placed in the Boom company's enclosure by the Boom company, unnecessarily, and they had no right to charge for sorting the logs.

The case involves international law, and Congressman Steenerson of Crookston, who is attorney for the Rainy River Boom corporation, has decided to appeal from the decision of Judge Morris to the supreme court of the United States, where he believes the decision will be reversed.

East Grand Forks, Minn., May 20.—The Northern Pacific fast freight No. 153 was wrecked two miles east of Twin Valley, Minn., Friday evening. The scene of the wreck is about seventy miles east of here.

BAD CHECKS PASSED.

Duluth Man One of the Victims at Monticello.

Monticello, Minn., May 20.—Elgin Stokes, a young man well known here, went from here two or three years ago to Canada and took up a claim. He did well and sold out. He made a good deposit with the State bank of Monticello and drew on it until his funds were exhausted. He gave checks to several parties when he had no money in the bank. Carr, the commissary man, cashed one for $125. Ray Kreis of Duluth, cashed one for $25, and is that much poorer, plus the protest fee. A Mr. Kurtz of Buffalo is a victim for $10, and others have been other checks turned in. How much the young man got is not known but it is thought about $500. His whereabouts is unknown.

SERIOUS CRIME

Charged Against George Linscott, Who is Bound Over to Circuit Court.

Escanaba, Mich., May 20.—After listening to one of the most revolting stories of abuse ever told in a court of Delta county, Judge Emil Glaser has held George Linscott, 42 years of age, to the circuit court for trial on a criminal charge preferred by his wife and his 12-year-old step-daughter. The bail bond for the defendant was placed at $1,000, and as Linscott is without funds he was taken to jail where he will be confined until the July term of circuit court. All of the details of several assaults alleged to have been committed by the unnatural father were given in court by the child, who at no time faltered, but gave her story in a straightforward manner. Different details were corroborated by the testimony of other witnesses and although Linscott offered a strenuous denial to all of the charges, his story had but little weight with the court when the testimony was completed he was promptly bound over to the higher court for trial.

THREW ROCKS AT CAR.

Frank Young of Soo Arrested on a Serious Charge.

Calumet, Mich., May 20.—Because he was put off a through car of the Houghton County Street Railway company on Pine street, Red Jacket, it is alleged Frank Young of the Soo deliberately picked up some rocks and threw them through the windows of the car. One of the rocks, it is said, struck a lady passenger over the eye, cutting the optic severely.

Young is now an inmate of the Houghton county jail, having been committed in Justice Fisher's court to await trial in the next term of circuit court. Bail in the sum of $500 was demanded, and this not being forthcoming, Young was held in custody.

EX-MINISTER CONGER DEAD

Iowa Diplomat Who Figured in Siege of Chinese Boxers.

Pasadena, Cal., May 20.—Edwin Hurd Conger, United States minister to Peking during the boxer siege, died at his home here Saturday afternoon.

E. H. Conger was appointed to the diplomatic service from Des Moines, Iowa, in 1891, serving as minister to Brazil until 1893. He was again appointed minister to Brazil in 1897 and transferred to China in 1898, being in Peking during the Boxer siege. He conducted the negotiations for the United States following the capture of Peking. He was at the head of the commercial treaty with China of Oct. 8, 1902. In 1905 he was appointed ambassador to Mexico, resigning in August of that year.

Before beginning his diplomatic career, Mr. Conger was a farmer stockman and banker of Iowa. He was born in Knox county, Illinois, March 7, 1843, and graduated from Lombard university, Galesburg, Ill., in 1862. He served for three years in the Civil war, which he left as a major. He graduated from the Albany law school in 1866 and was married at Galesburg in 1869 to Sarah Pike. He practiced law there for two years before going to Iowa. He was elected state treasurer of Iowa in 1882 and served three years, when he was elected to congress, where he came into prominence which led to his appointment as minister to Brazil. Mr. Conger leaves a daughter.

SUPT. GILPIN IS HONORED

Elected President of State Association of County Superintendents.

S. W. Gilpin, superintendent of schools of St. Louis county, has been elected president of the County Superintendents' association, which held its annual convention at St. Cloud last week, and the next meeting of the association will be held in Duluth, according to the expression of those present at the convention. A committee has been appointed to take the matter up with the absent members and to determine later on the time and place for the 1907 convention.

The other officers elected were L. P. Harrington, McLeod county, secretary; Paul Ahles, Stevens county, treasurer.

The association discussed at some length the proposed legislation for a county board of education, a measure that is advocated by State Superintendent of Schools J. W. Olson.

The meeting of the association was followed by a banquet in which toasts were responded to by many of the county superintendents, including Mr. Gilpin of St. Louis county.

Woman's Watchword Is Modesty.

Whatever threatens woman's delicate sense of modesty, frightens her. For this reason many a woman permits disease of the delicate womanly organs to become aggravated because she cannot bring herself to submit to the ordeal of unpleasant questionings, offensive examinations, and obnoxious local treatments, which most physicians think necessary. Doubtless thousands of the women who have taken advantage of Dr. Pierce's offer of free consultation by letter have been led to do so by the escape thus offered from a treatment repugnant to modesty.

Any sick woman may write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., in perfect confidence; all letters of consultation being treated as strictly private and sacredly confidential, and all answers being sent in plain envelopes with no advertising or other printing upon them. Such consultation costs you nothing whether you take treatment from Dr. Pierce or not.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has been long hailed as a "God-send to women." It makes weak women strong and sick women well. It enables women suffering from "female weakness," prolapsus uteri, retroversion, anteversion, and other displacements of the organs distinctly feminine, to cure themselves right in the privacy of their homes. Pelvic catarrhal drains, painful or irregular periods, backache, frequent headaches, weak nerves, dragging-down pain or distress in the lower abdominal, or pelvic, region, gnawing sensation in stomach, dizziness, or faint spells, and kindred conditions and symptoms are cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is not a secret or patent medicine, against the use of which most people of intelligence naturally object, but is, in fact, the "Favorite Prescription" of a regularly educated and experienced physician in the treatment of woman's peculiar ailments and who is not afraid to publish all its ingredients, as he does, on its bottle-wrapper, attesting the correctness of the same under oath.

"Favorite Prescription" is the one medicine for woman's delicate ailments which contains neither alcohol nor harmful, habit-forming drugs, being a pure glyceric extract of curative principles found in our most valuable native, medicinal roots, as attested by many of the most eminent medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native American medicinal roots and is perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the female system.

As a powerful invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. For over-worked, "worn-out," run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the uterus. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this PROVEN REMEDY OF KNOWN COMPOSITION.

"The Blood is The Life."

Science has never gone beyond the above simple statement of scripture. But it has illuminated that statement and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge. When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also clouded, the mind and judgement are effected, and many an evil deed or impure thought may be directly traced to the impurity of the blood. Foul, impure blood can be made pure by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It enriches and purifies the blood thereby curing, pimples, blotches, eruptions and other cutaneous affections, as eczema, tetter, or salt-rheum, hives and other manifestations of impure blood.

In the cure of scrofulous swellings, enlarged glands, open eating ulcers, or old sores, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has performed the most marvelous cures. In cases of old sores, or open eating ulcers, it is well to apply to the open sores Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve, which possesses wonderful healing potency when used as an application to the sores in conjunction with the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" as a blood cleansing constitutional treatment. If your druggist don't happen to have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock, you can easily procure it by inclosing fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post. Most druggists keep it as well as the "Golden Medical Discovery."

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, the same being attested as correct under oath.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One to three a dose. Easy to take as candy.

DOMINATES INDUSTRY

Government Report on Standard Oil Monopoly Published.

Severe Arraignment of Methods Made by Commissioner Smith.

Washington, May 20.—That the history and present operation of the Standard Oil interests "show throughout the past thirty-five years, a substantial monopolization of the petroleum industry of the country, a deliberate destruction of competition and a subsequent control of that industry by less than a dozen men, who have reaped enormous profits therefrom," largely through abuse of transportation facilities, is charged in a report just submitted to President Roosevelt by Commissioner of Corporations Herbert Knox Smith.

Part one of the report was made public yesterday, and other parts will follow. Certain information acquired is withheld for the present, in accordance with instructions of the president, who feels that its publication might interfere with the prosecution of the government's suits against the Standard Oil company and its subsidiary companies.

The report contains the net results of a study of the petroleum business during the year 1904.

It is the first official statement of the operations and methods of the Standard Oil company, by which the report states, through "scandalous railway discriminations and other unlawful devices, it has secured and maintained an "exclusive domination of the petroleum industry."

It is stated that in 1904 the Standard and affiliated concerns "refined over 84 per cent of the crude oil run through refineries, produced more than 86 per cent of the country's total output of illuminating oil; maintained a similar proportion of the export trade in illuminating oil and transported through pipe fields nearly nine-tenths of the crude oil of the older fields and 98 per cent of the crude oil of the mid-continent field."

The report says that the monopoly enjoyed by the company does not rest on the ownership of the source of the oil supply which amounts to about only one-sixth of the total, but "that its growth and present power rest primarily on the control of the transportation facilities."

After the railroad rebate was abandoned, the report continues, the company was able to "establish a system of secret, or open discriminations of rates in its favor throughout practically the entire country. Having established its monopoly of the pipe line business, the company substantially refuses to act as a common carrier."

The report adds that the Standard controls not only the wholesale, but also the retail trade in oil.

In conclusion, the report says it is apparent that the dominating position of the Standard Oil company in the oil industry has largely been secured by the abuse of transportation facilities. First, by flagrant discriminations obtained from railroads; second, by a refusal to operate its pipe line system so as to extend to independent interests the benefits to which they were both morally and legally entitled, while at the same time the Standard has prevented such independent interests from constructing lines of their own.

FLAG DAY SET FOR JUNE 14

Patriotic Societies Planning to Lead Celebration Then.

Friday, June 14, is the date which has been set aside as flag day this year, according to a proclamation recently issued by Col. Ralph E. Prime, president of the American Flag association, and an effort will be made to have Duluth observe the day in conjunction with other cities throughout the country. Unfortunately Duluth's public schools will close a week before the date which has been fixed by the association, as that upon which Old Glory is to be honored, and it will be, as a result, rather difficult to secure any concerted action along this line. Every flag in the city is expected to be floating from the top of its staff on the morning of the day, however, and it is possible that the G. A. R. and the recently organized auxiliary will hold special services in memory of the day.

It is possible that Mayor Cullum will issue a proclamation, reminding the citizens of the significance of the day.

COUNTRY HOME THAT IS UNIQUE

Is Being Built for Percy A. Rockefeller in Connecticut.

New York, May 20.—Percy A. Rockefeller, son of William, and nephew of John D. Rockefeller, is building a country home in Connecticut which is unlike any other ever planned. Perhaps the most extraordinary feature of it is a confined air space in the walls, forming a non-conductor of heat, cold or moisture. The air space, it is said, will make the house warmer in winter, cooler in summer and dryer all the year round than any other man's home, rich or poor.

This unique building is just outside of Greenwich, overlooking Long Island sound. It is near the estate of the owner's father, William Rockefeller.

In the three stories and basement are about sixty rooms, including more than a dozen for servants. There are ten bathrooms and innumerable closets. In the basement are boiler room, a room for the motor that runs the elevators, a laundry and a big space for carriages, besides room for the storage of coal and everything else not provided for above.

The owner has lavished money to obtain one particular result—absolute safety from fire. The walls of the house have not a piece of wood in them. They are made of hollow terra cotta blocks. Altogether there are 57,000 square feet of these walls—that is, more than 800 tons.

On the outside there is an eight-inch thickness of the hollow blocks, then comes the confined air space of four inches, and then the inside thickness of terra cotta. Thus, in effect, there are two walls four inches apart, constructed of material through which moisture cannot be absorbed. It is said that if all the windows and doors were closed on a hot summer day, air being introduced only through the basement, the temperature would be from 15 degs. to 20 degs. lower inside than without.

On the outside the terra cotta walls are to be covered with stucco and on the inside with plaster. The floors and all other parts of the house are to be equaly indestructible by fire. Mr. Rockefeller hopes to "move in" late in the summer or early in the fall.

FEARS BODY IS STOLEN.

Grave of Doctor is Opened and Corpse Is There.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 20.—Because of the joking remark of a member of a secret society to which their relative had belonged, the mother and sister of Dr. Plineus Kratsch, who died last August, had his grave in Union cemetery opened, to ascertain if his body was still there.

A few weeks ago, in conversation with friends, Mrs. Jungman, sister of the deceased doctor, casually remarked: "I wonder how my brother looks after being placed in his grave?"

"Oh, don't worry about that," the joker replied. "He is no longer in his grave. By this time the doctors have already cut him up."

The sister did not take the remark seriously, but upon repeating it to the mother of the dead man, the latter became much exercised. Worry over the thoughtless remark caused the older woman to lose sleep and was fast undermining her health. Finally the family decided to have the grave opened, and a permit was secured for this purpose. When the grave was opened the body was found just as it was when it had been placed in the grave.

STOCK COMPANY A HIT.

Long Players Please Two Audiences at the Metropolitan.

The Frank E. Long Stock company opened a week's engagement at the Metropolitan yesterday afternoon, when an audience of large dimensions was pleased with a clever production of the interesting little comedy, "Our Country Cousins."

A notable feature of yesterday's performance was the number of women in the audiences. The Long Stock company's productions are designed for women and children as well as men, and no smoking will be allowed, as it was during the burlesque season now ended.

Miss Nana Sullivan, who made a very favorable impression when the Long company was at the "Met" last season, is still the leading lady of the organization, and she made a substantial hit with yesterday's audiences.

Other members of the company including Mr. Long, were acceptably cast in "Our Country Cousins." The specialties introduced during the intermissions were a big hit.

A change of bill will be announced later in the week.

NEW BILL AT BIJOU.

The new bill, which will open at the Bijou this evening, will include: Don Leno's Ten Happy Youngsters, Louis Morrison and Rosa Rosa, May Seavey, Don Leno, La Maybelle Meeker, Howley and Leslie, Isadore Silver, illustrated song, "San Antonio"; moving pictures.

NO FAVORITES IN GREAT RACE

All Horses in Fine Form For Brooklyn Handicap.

New York, May 20.—All avenues and lanes lead today to Gravesend where the great Brooklyn handicap was scheduled to be run this afternoon for a purse of $20,000. Fifteen of the best horses in training were carded to face the starter in this classic event over a course of a mile and a quarter. Thirty thousand people were expected to witness the race. A heavy rain last night and threatening weather today indicated a course of heavy going. Early books today showed no favorite for the race.

Light exercise gallops were given the contestants in the early hours today, but the clackers who fringed the rail took no time of this, as the horses were only put through light paces. All the horses showed in good form, though several scratches were likely unless the track dried out. The horses which were to make their bid for the ribbon this afternoon were said by the trainers to equal or excel the fields in the Brooklyn handicap races of the last one or two years. All the horses were carefully trained, and bookmakers made no favorites.

As the race is the first big mile and quarter handicap of the year, the question of endurance was one difficult to calculate and gave the race today an element of increased doubt. The starters included the best three-year olds in training, and they were to meet horses of the older class who have established their claims for speed and endurance.

It was the youngster against the old campaigner today in the Brooklyn handicap, and the contest was an open one.

WONDERFUL DANCER

Is Victim of Art---Dies at Close of a Song.

New York, May 20.—Pretty Helen Lamera, the wonderful young dancer who appeared with Fritzi Scheff in "Mademoiselle Modiste," is dead, a victim of her passion for dancing. Her mother, Mrs. Emily Hannebeck, removed the remains from the family home to Fresh Pond, L. I., where they were cremated in accordance with her last wish.

Dr. Lee Cook, brother-in-law of the pretty dancer who in private life was Helen Hannebeck, said that her dancing caused her death.

"She was the most wonderful toe dancer in America," said Dr. Cook. "In her work she made no effort to save herself and the terrible strain caused a spinal affection which developed into cerebro-spinal meningitis. This caused her death."

Shortly before her death, Miss Lamora became delirious and broke out into Fritzi Scheff's song "The Kiss." She died with the last words of the refrain on her lips.

INDIANS GET MONEY.

Agent Finishes Payment of Over $30,000 to the Chippewas.

Ashland, Wis., May 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Indian Agent Campbell, accompanied by Chief Clerk Rodman, have returned from Grand Portage and Grand Marais, Minnesota, where they completed the payment of between $30,000 and $40,000, which by special act of congress, about two years ago, was voted to the Indians. Congress voted about $80,000 to the various tribes of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, due them under old treaties. The amount the Indians asked for, was $130,000. The amount due the Indians of the La Pointe agency, was between $30,000 and $40,000. The claim was originally taken up by a firm of Washington lawyers who secured a written contract to get 10 per cent commission in case the Indians won. After several years' work, they had failed to accomplish anything, when Mr. Campbell visited Washington, interested Indian Commissioner Jones, Senators Quarles and Spooner, and Congressmen Brown, Jenkins and Morris, and they steered the bill through congress.

POLICE COURT AFFAIR IS TO BE APPEALED.

Hudson, Wis., May 20.—The New Richmond police court case will be appealed to the supreme court. Judge Helms of this district decided that the police court was not legally established and therefore did not exist, while Judge Vinje of Chippewa county holds just the opposite view. As the matter now stands, it is a question of which has jurisdiction in New Richmond—the police justice or the justice of the peace.

KING SERVES HIGH-BALLS.

New York Herald: Americans who have attended the recent courts of their British majesties have been vastly pleased to find that the king has added to his menage at Buckingham palace an expert concoter of cocktails and other seductive American mixed drinks. That he is a genuine artist in his line is declared by a New Yorker, who, to use his own phrase, has "sampled the goods." The king himself has not dared for years to to imbibe mixed drinks of any kind, and cocktails, whose acquaintance he first made when he visited America long years ago, must remain for him merely a memory. The innovation, therefore, affords further proof of King Edward's desire to leave nothing undone that will strengthen the bonds of amity between the two countries. And as a man of the world he knows that the right sort of drinks are great promoters of friendly feeling.

But it is not alone to the convivial tastes of his transatlantic guests that he appeals. On the buffets of Buckingham palace on court nights are now always to be found many favorite distinctively American dishes. The American debutante may revel in ices and ice creams, prepared and served in identically the same fashion as at the swellest American restaurants. And even on the bleakest March nights, at a palace function, she can obtain the iced drinks so dear to her heart.

THE H IN PITTSBURG.

Life: Among the illustrations few from over seas invited to lend luster to the dedication of the Carnegie institute in the phonetically reformed city of Pittsburg was Maarten Maartens, more familiarly known to his friends as Dr. Joost Marius Willem Van der Poorten-Schwartz. We trust that Dr. Van der Poorten-Schwartz was properly impressed with the orthographical operation that deprived the old fashioned "Pittsburgh" of its final foolish coronant. But Mr. Carnegie didn't do it. The "Pittsburg crowd"—whose taste in institutes runs to Keeley's rather than Carnegie's—brought that "h" to New York with them long ago. It would be impossible to spell the sort of time they have here without it.

IS FRIDAY UNLUCKY?

Chicago News: Is Friday unlucky? Gladstone, Beaconsfield, Washington, Bismarck, Fahrenheit and Spurgeon were born on Friday. Henry VIII. gave Cabot his commission which led to the discovery of North America, Columbus actually discovered the continent and the Pilgrim Fathers landed at Plymouth Rock on Friday. Once more: The first newspaper ad and the first newspaper printed by steam power (the London Times) appeared both on a Friday; while the stamp act was repealed in England on the same day of the week. With Charles Dickens Friday was an especial favorite.

S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES

No skin disease can exist without an underlying cause, and in most instances that cause is either a humor in the blood or an excess of fiery acids in this vital fluid. These humors and acids get into the blood, generally because of an inactive and sluggish condition of those members whose duty it is to collect and carry off the waste and refuse of the body. This unhealthy matter is left in the system to sour and ferment, and soon the circulation becomes charged with the acid poison. The blood, in its effort to rid itself of this foreign matter, begins to throw off the humors and acids through the pores and glands of the skin. These coming in contact with the delicate tissues and fibers with which the skin is so abundantly supplied produces irritation and inflammation on the surface, and Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Psoriasis, Salt Rheum, or some other troublesome and disfiguring skin disease is the result. External applications, while they soothe the itching, and are beneficial in keeping the skin clean, can never cure skin affections, because they do not reach the blood where the real trouble is located. A thorough cleansing of the blood is the only permanent cure for skin diseases. S. S. S., the greatest of all blood purifiers, is the best treatment. It cures by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the circulation so that the skin, instead of being irritated and diseased by the exuding acrid matter, is nourished and soothed by a cooling, healthy stream of blood. S. S. S. goes down to the very bottom of the trouble, removes the foreign matter and thereby permanently cures every form of skin trouble. Do not expect to cure a blood disease with local applications alone, but begin the use of S. S. S., and when you have removed the cause the skin will be free from disease. RAMSEY STREET DOCK AGAIN

Protest Against Present Approach May Tie Up Construction.

The margin of $69 over the amount of the council appropriation, which was the lowest bid for the Ramsey street dock, may result in a tie-up on the matter for another year, or at least a delay in its completion.

At the meeting of the board of public works this morning O. H. Simonds of the West Duluth Land company appeared before the board and asked that it defer the awarding of the contract to Adam McAdams, the lowest bidder, for one week. Mr. Simonds believes that the dock should be located as at first planned, with the approach through Ramsey street instead of along Forty-ninth avenue west. As a result he has asked the city engineer to prepare comparative estimates of the two projects and they show that the dock with the Ramsey street approach would cost about $1,000 more than the dock with the Forty-ninth avenue approach.

According to Mr. Simonds, the Ramsey street approach is the desirable one, and, if the money is secured, he is of the opinion that it will be worth more to West Duluth to have the approach along Ramsey street. He has arranged, he says, with the National Iron company to bear a portion of the expense of the dredging to the dock, which will be necessary, and it will be almost imperative for them to have the approach along Ramsey street. The Northern Dredge company is also planning to locate its dredge yard below the proposed city dock at this point and a sand dock will also be located there. These companies are said to be willing to stand the expense of the dredging.

Whether the council will be willing to increase the appropriation by another $1,000 or not, is a matter of considerable doubt as the permanent improvement fund is none too large to take care of the more necessary improvements this season, and if the protest against the Forty-ninth avenue approach is strong enough it may tie up the construction for this season.

The council appropriation amounted to $3,200, and Mr. McAdams' bid for the dock was $3,269.

MANSFIELD FACES JURY

Is Accused of Forgery in the Second Degree.

Indictment Based on Alleged Attempt to Defraud Philip Mahlburg.

The trial of C. H. Mansfield, who is accused of forgery in the second degree, was begun in the district court this morning, with County Attorney J. H. Norton representing the state, and M. H. McMahon and W. E. Whipple defending Mansfield.

The state's case, as outlined to the jury by Mr. Norton, was as follows:

Mansfield come to Duluth a short time prior to Jan. 7 last, and opened an office in the Burrows building, where he is said to have represented himself to be in the bonding business. He advertised in the local papers for persons who had $50 to invest in a small manufacturing plant and received several replies, among these being Philip Mahlburg and a man named Robertson.

Mansfield is said to have induced Mahlburg to enter into a partnership with him under the firm name of the Mahlburg-Mansfield Manufacturing company, to manufacture an artificial albumen to be used as a substitute for eggs in cooking. Mahlburg, it is claimed, was to put up $500 and Mansfield was to put in an equal amount.

It is claimed that Mansfield accompanied Mahlburg to the American Exchange bank, where the latter deposited his $500 and Mansfield deposited a draft against Webster, Doan & Co. of New York City, a concern, which the police afterwards found out to be fictitious, it is alleged.

Mansfield is claimed to have returned to the bank later in the same day and to have drawn out Mahlburg's money on a check purporting to be signed by Mahlburg, but which, it is claimed, was a forgery. Mahlburg, suspecting something wrong, visited the bank and conferred with the police. Detective Terry arrested Mansfield as he was about to get aboard a train at the union depot in Superior the same afternoon.

After Mansfield was brought back to Duluth he was questioned to some extent in the office of the chief of police, in the presence of a number of persons, including Mahlburg. At the suggestion of the chief, Mansfield is said to have restored Mahlburg his money, with the exception of a little less than $50, taking a receipt therefor.

The state claimed that Mansfield had practically arranged a similar deal with Robertson, but that it had not been carried out to such an extent.

Chief of Police Troyer was the first witness called by the state. He testified concerning Mansfield's arrest and the examination had at police headquarters when Mansfield was brought back from Superior.

According to Chief Troyer's testimony, Mansfield claimed that his draft would be honored, as the concern he drew it on was a responsible one and was backing him. He further claimed, so the witness said, that he had a wealthy uncle in the bonding business who would make good the amount of the draft if there was any question about it.

TO RENEW CASES.

The Government Will Begin New Action Against the Fertilizer Trust.

Washington, May 20.—The government has decided to renew the cases against the so called fertilizer trust in the United States court at Richmond, Va. About a year ago the government secured the indictment and arrest of a large number of persons residing in different parts of the country on a charge of violating the Sherman anti-trust law, and sought to secure the removal to Nashville where suit was begun of such defendants as resided outside of the state of Tennessee. The Virginia defendants, however, contended that before they could be removed from the state they should be given a preliminary hearing to determine the sufficiency of the evidence upon which their removal was asked. The court sustained the government on this point, but on the appeal being taken, the United States supreme court, about two months ago found against the government, but without prejudice to its case, and ordered that the defendants be discharged. The department of justice has now decided to try the individual defendants in the states in which they reside.

The defendants pleaded guilty.

SCHMITZ TRIAL IS DELAYED A DAY.

By request of the prosecution, the hearing was delayed one day in order that counter affidavits may be prepared against Schmitz's motion for a change of judge.

HIS NERVE PAYS HIM.

How French Adventurer Enjoys Best of Everything for Nothing.

Los Angeles Times: In the little half-way world that lies between the Upper Ten and Lower Five, they call him something in French that means "Little-Mister-Live-On-Your-Nerve."

And he is one of the quaintest little chaps in the world. He literally lives on his nerve.

He isn't a grafter; he isn't a thief; he isn't crooked. No crimes. He just drifts placidly along without working. He dines well, goes to the theater, gets into society and pays for nothing. It takes some study and brains.

During the recent season of grand opera at the Auditorium—the San Carlo company—"Little-Mister-Live-on-Your-Nerve" was one of the few who were able to go every night—which he did without paying.

"Ooee, easy," he said, when asked about it. "I go up to ze door an' ze man he stop me. 'Where are you go?' he say. I jus' make believe I do not un'stan'. I shrug my shoulders, so, and raise my eyebrow, so, and throw out my hands zis way, and begin to jabber French ver' fast.

"He look kind of amaz', but he don' say no'ting more. I walk right by him and go into ze show. Next night he stop me again, but zis time I scowl and stamp my foot and brush him aside, ver' impatient. I suppose he think I am a member of ze company. After that he don' say no'ting ever any more. I go every night."

The fact of his being there every night probably fooled the doorkeeper. Nervy says he has been into many shows the same way, by just pushing by the doorkeeper in a business-like way.

"Little-Mister-Live-on-Your-Nerve" has the heart of a child. So puffed up did he get over this triumph that he could not resist going on pretending to be an opera singer.

He was invited by a member of an old Spanish family to go down into Mexico as his guest. The Mexican family felt quite haughty with pride over his visit.

"Ooee," he says ruefully, "I got in ter'ble scrape. One night zey have beeg company and ask that I should sing. I do not know what to do. I cannot sing as good as a crow. At last I think the beeg idea. I tell them that I study one opera at a time and only like to sing from ze opera that I am studying at that time. They ask me, somewhat disappointed, which opera it is I am studying, and I tell them La Boheme. I say that because it is not ze well-known opera.

"I say in grand way, 'If you had the music of La Boheme, then I would sing to you.'

"Imagine my astonishment when one of the senoritas jump up and say: 'Oh, I am so glad, for I am studying La Boheme myself, and I will bring you the music.'

"I was so scare, you never know how I was scare. I feel the damp cold sweat on my forehead. I was caught fine.

"Pretty soon ze girl comes back with ze music and hands it to me. I hem and stammer and get ver' much rattle. I tell them that it is so soon after dinner that I cannot yet sing. I take the music and beat time with my fingers over the notes in accomplished way. Somehow I find excuse to slip out and go away ver' soon. They never see me again."

Another story is told of "Little-Mister-Live-on-Your-Nerve."

He went to a fashionable cafe with a fair damsel. They ordered everything on the menu card, and "Mister-Live-on-Your-Nerve" several times became very severe with the waiter because the menu was not quite up to his fastidious appetite.

Not a sou was in his pocket. But he dined like a king—a very haughty king. Even inwardly, he probably did not have a qualm to disturb him. He lives for the minute.

In the end, he picked up his check, which had a figure on it that looked like the national debt.

Bowing the maiden magnificently out before him, he picked up the check, and, with a glare of offended dignity at the waiter, announced that he would pay the check himself at the cashier's window; he had some complaints to make.

He advanced upon the cashier excitedly, making impossible complaints against the waiter, hoping to have his check escape notice in the general confusion.

"You haven't paid yet," the cashier reminded him, timidly.

"Little - Mister - Live - on - Your-Nerve" leaned over and signed his initials in the most magnificent manner on the check.

"We don't trust—we would like—" stammered the cashier.

"What?" glowered the apparent millionaire, "You don't trust me? Very well, I shall never visit this place again. The idea, to be held up like a beggar! I never carry money, sir. Am I, therefore, a beggar?"

The cashier gave a startled look at the check, and began gasping out apologies.

"Very well," said the mollified magnate. "I will overlook it this time."

With that he marched out, leaving the cashier staring at the check.

SUGAR TO REND ROCKS.

Red Wing Quarry Uses Granulatee and Chemicals on Explosive.

Red Wing Republican: Granulated sugar has other uses than the sweetening of one's coffee for breakfast. L. M. Gray has discovered at a quarry work which he is doing at the back of Barn bluff, that it is an excellent substitute for dynamite and powder. In fact it beats them in many directions.

Have you noticed that during the past week or ten days that the concussions which were so noticeable from the explosions, caused by the drillings at the bluff have ceased? So true is this that it has been a common question on the streets: "Has the work at the quarry stopped?" And thereby hangs a tale.

During his recent trip to Mexico, C. E. Sheldon, while on his way South, met a gentleman who has large interests in the clay business and in speaking with him of the pottery interests, he referred to a new method of exploiting clay which he had discovered by simpler and safer combination in the way of an explosive than is found in dynamite or powder.

On further inquiry, Mr. Sheldon ascertained that the ingredients of this new explosive, which his friend told him of, consisted in large measure—more than half—of granulated sugar. This, mixed with certain chemicals, had been discovered and patented recently and from the patentee, the St. Louis firm, of which his tourist friend was a member had obtained the right to use it. While they were somewhat skeptical of its value at first, after having given it a thorough trial, they have become thoroughly convinced that it was remarkable, both in the results achieved, the greater safety found in its use and in the economy of expenditure, as its cost is les sthan half, which was made necessary under the old methods in the use of gun powder. Mr. Sheldon was at once interested, and was given the address of the patentee.

On arriving home he addressed a letter to the discoverer of this new explosive and from him obtained the reply restating practically all that his friend had told him about the merits of the discovery. This he filed away for future use.

A few days after he met Mr. Gray and in discussing the quarry work, which he has been doing this winter on the river side of Barn bluff, the danger from the dynamite, which has already resulted in injury to quite a number of men, and the violence of the concussion of the charges, which has disturbed the whole community, both day and night, he asked Mr. Gray whi he did not use the new explosive which had been found. Mr. Gray made further inquiries in regard to it, although naturally very suspicious of the great claims made for this new compound, so simple in its nature, and so largely made up of an article whose only use has heretofore been associated with the sweeting the world's food.

The upshot of the matter has been that Mr. Gray has obtained from the patentee the recipe for making this explosive and the right to use it. During the last ten days dynamite and powder have been done away with and this new substitute has been used in tearing away the bluff. It has proved a success beyond all expectations. Mr. Gray is an enthusiast about it. He says it costs far less money, does better work and there is little danger in its use. This is the reason why we no longer hear the intonations caused by a blast of dynamite from the bluff during the night time and can lay down to pleasant dreams without fear of being disturbed by the rattle of the dishes in the pantry.

The ingredients are prepared in the morning at the bluff for the day's work. Mr. Gray buys a barrel of sugar and according to the recipe obtained from the patentee mixes it with other chemicals and it is used like other explosives in drills. A fuse is attached to the material and the charge is made. There is an explosion, but it is much more gentle than is obtained from dynamite and is much more effective in its results.

It is certainly a wonderful discovery to know that a new explosive, 50 per cent of which is made up of granulated sugar, can be used successfully, eliminating noise, a large snare of danger, and saving a marked amount, both in time and money in its use, and withal obtaining much better results than were had under the old system.

Mr. Gray feels very grateful to Mr. Sheldon for making that trip to Mexico, and meeting his friend so opportunely, and the whole community ought to extend to him a vote of thanks for finding the man who discovered the discoverer of added use of granulated sugar, which now makes it a factor, not only in making the world sweeter but safer.

The new explosive is sure to come into large use, and will doubtless be utilized in many ways not yet planned on.

BETTER THAN SWEARING, ANYWAY.

Rear Admiral Mead, who has just retired, was talking one night at a dinner in Portsmouth about the power of discipline.

"In my youth," he said, "I knew a first mate in the merchant marine who, though an excellent officer, was dreadfully profane. When anything went wrong he would volley forth oaths and curses in a shocking way. Once, though, he shipped with a very strict religious captain, and the first time this captain chanced to witness one of the mate's swearing bouts he gave the young man a good dressing down.

"'You are a first-rate officer,' he ended; 'but remember, no more swearing. Not another oath aboard my ship.'

"Well, the mate bore the captain's warning in mind. Then one afternoon it happened that the boatswain made an inexcusable error in carrying out an order. When the boatswain confessed the fault he had committed, the mate turned red with rage. He opened his mouth. Everybody looked on him expectantly, waiting to hear some remarkable oaths; but then the captain hove in sight.

"The mate, seeing the captain, remembered his orders about profanity. But his rage had to have a vent of some sort, and striding up close to the culprit, he roared in the man's face:

"'You naughty, naughty boatswain!'"

SYSTEMATIC PREPARATION.

Chicago News: The make-up man with his box of grease paints arrived at the courthouse and hurried to an anteroom, where the woman friends of the prisoner were impatiently tapping their feet and calling down maledictions on the head of the tardy artist.

Immediately on reaching the room he began unpacking his pencils, paints, brushes and other tools and materials. As he proceeded to lay on the cosmetics with bold, skillful strokes, he continued to protest his innocence of any intention to injure the cause of the defense by being behind time.

When at last he had finished the women started for the mirror to take turns at looking to see if all was right.

The first women who looked uttered a shriek of dismay and fell backward in a faint.

The second did likewise.

So did the others.

Feeling sure that there had been some dreadful mistake, the make-up man looked hurriedly at his instruction sheet and then screamed with terror.

It was one of the days when the women were all to look on the verge of collapse and through a mix in the dates he had made them all look hopeful and confident.

Rushing from the room, he ordered the court to delay the session until the dreadful error had been remedied.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Trade in Wheat Falls Off With Prices Fluctuating Widely.

Chicago, May 20.—There was a noticeable falling off of trade in the wheat pit at the opening today, but prices still fluctuated widely. There were no Liverpool cables, but an advance on the curb at Minneapolis and cold weather were sufficient to send up prices following Saturday's sharp decline. Much of the buying seemed to be for the purpose of covering short lines. July opened 7⅛@7c to 1⅝@7⅝c over Saturday at 97¼@98c and advanced to 99⅛c, following which, quotation dropped back to 98⅛c. September opened 1⅝@1⅝c up at 99@$1.00⅜, and December 29@31½c advanced to $1.00½@1.02. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 630 cars against 599 last week and 191 a year ago.

The market ruled nervous all day, July selling between 99⅜ and 97⅜c, whiel December dropped to 99⅜c and closed such damage in the above total. Neither can we anticipate injury to the spring crop from bugs or weather, beyond the probabilities of the most abnormally unfavorable season the country has experienced in years. The Canadian crop is admittedly short, so that European requirements will fall quite heavily upon the United States next year, with a moderate amount from reserves available for export. The loss in farm production this year will be large. The hay crop in many Western states will be short, as are a failure south of Nebraska, and it will devolve upon the Central and Northwestern states to supply for their localities and Nebraska. Snow says there is not a possibility of more than 60,000,000 to 65,000,000 bushels in Kansas and conservative people in Nebraska claim 25 per cent damage already from bugs. Foreign news is again bullish. Southern Russia suffers from extreme heat. Hungary and other Danubian countries suffering drouth. The statistics are bearish. Weather promises warmer in the Northwest and this may give further temporary setback to wheat prices, but on any dips Logan & Bryan believe the buying side will be profitable for those wno take hold quickly.

Corn—Estimate for tomorrow is 133 cars. Market was helped on the buying side by the strength in wheat.

Minneapolis—H. V. Jones returned from Kansas this morning and gave out the following statement on the winter wheat crop: "We have refrained from making any statement on the wheat yield in the United States until such time as a maximum total might be announced with the assurance that the figures would stand as approximately final for the maximum of production. We would place this maximum for winter wheat, after study of condition in the fields since April 7, at 325,000,000 bus, or 170,000,000 less than last year. There is no reasonable ground for placing spring wheat production above last year, government figures being 240,000,000. Using that total for spring production, the best the United States can do is 565,000,000, of which 50,000,000 will be macaroni, leaving the net crop of spring and winter 515,000,000, or considerably less than the country's requirements. And it is by no means certain the spring crop will equal last year. Texas and Oklahoma are a failure and Kansas will produce the smallest crop in years. Indeed, there is a chance the Kansas crop may prove next month to be almost a failure, in which case the winter yield would drop close to 300,000,000. Kansas will not exceed 60,000,000 at best, if it all heads, but it is doubtful if this happens.

The plant is going backward fast under drouth that preevnted a start in the spring, frost that has done more damage than is now realized and bugs that threaten a new outbreak in the state in northern counties. The contest is moved, therefore, to Nebraska where drouth has already weakened the plant. The green bug is well over the state, but it is too early to make a deduction for that state on account of insect damage, and we have not included such damage in the above total. Neither can we anticipate injury to the spring crop from bugs or weather, beyond the probabilities of the most abnormally unfavorable season the country has experienced in years. The Canadian crop is admittedly short, so that European requirements will fall quite heavily upon the United States next year, with a moderate amount from reserves available for export. The loss in farm production this year will be large. The hay crop in many Western states will be short, as are a failure south of Nebraska, and it will devolve upon the Central and Northwestern states to supply for their localities and Nebraska. Snow says there is not a possibility of more than 60,000,000 to 65,000,000 bushels in Kansas and conservative people in Nebraska claim 25 per cent damage already from bugs. Foreign news is again bullish. Southern Russia suffers from extreme heat. Hungary and other Danubian countries suffering drouth. The statistics are bearish. Weather promises warmer in the Northwest and this may give further temporary setback to wheat prices, but on any dips Logan & Bryan believe the buying side will be profitable for those wno take hold quickly.

Corn—Estimate for tomorrow is 133 cars. Market was helped on the buying side by the strength in wheat.

DECLINES IN STOCKS

Heavy Selling by Houses With Important Grain Connections.

Close Active and Weak at Near the Lowest Point.

New York, May 20.—Opening prices of stocks showed general recessions of a fraction from Saturday's level. The Pacific railroad stocks led the decline, Northern Pacific losing 1¾, Union Pacific 1¼, Great Northern preferred 1⅛, and St. Paul and Great Northern ore certificates about a point. American Smelting and Canadian Pacific were down ¾. Consolidated Gas sold at an advance of 3.

Heavy selling carried the market down sharply. Union Pacific slumped 3⅛ to 140; Smelting, 3; Reading, 2½; Northern Pacific, 2⅝; Brooklyn-Rapid Transit, 2⅝; Great Northern preferred and Sloss Sheffield Steel, 2¼; Wheeling & Lake Erie, Lead, Locomotive and Sugar, 2; Iowa Central preferred, 1¾; Pennsylvania, Amalgamated Copper, Pressed Steel Car and Great Northern ore certificates, 1½; Southern Pacific, Canadian Pacific and New York, Chicago and St. Louis, 1⅜; Erie first preferred and second preferred, Atchison, Delaware & Hudson, Kansas City Southern, Kansas & Texas, New York Central and Anaconda, 1 to 1¼.

Heavy selling in stocks were attributed to houses with important grain market connections, the bear operations in stocks being coupled with operations on the long side in which the prices rallied sharply, but receded again to about the previous low level. Declines of a point or more were quite general. The market became dull when prices steadied. Bonds were heavy.

Prices ruled steady between 12 and 1 o'clock with some of the leaders a large fraction above the lower.

Another decline of prices occurred in the middle of the afternoon in which the average value of levels was carried considerably below that of the forenoon. The most acute weakness in the morning developed in Union Pacific, Reading and Smelting. At the low point Smelting was down five, Union Pacific 3⅝ and Reading 3½.

The market closed active and weak. Prices drifted to a still lower level in the final hour, but former losses were not widely extended. That in American Smelting reached 6¼. Union Pacific 5, North American 4½, Reading 3⅝, Amalgamated Copper, 3⅜, Great Northern preferred 3, Canadian Pacific, Colorado & Southern, National Lead and Steel Pommon preferred 2½, Central Leather preferred 4¾, and Great Northern Ore Certificates, Pennsylvania and Hide & Leather preferred 2.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Today's session was one of continued weakness. Extreme high prices of wheat and fear of investigation of certain railroads encouraged the bears to sell the general market. On every flash of strength selling orders were numerous. On the whole the market acted extremely dumpy throughout. There was news of special importance, but sentiment is decidedly bearish and we believe that this market is liable to drag still lower.

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market today was very weak, and there was a good deal of liquidation. There was a very unsettled feeling and many stop orders were reached. Traders took the bear side and sold heavily. All day the market showed signs of weakness and there was no rallying power. The close was at lowest prices. We do not see anything to put the market up on at present and the rallies are mainly shorts covering.

New York Money.

New York, May 20.—Close: Money on call, steady, 2¼@3½ per cent; ruling rate, 2½ per cent; closing bid, 2 per cent; offered at 2½ per cent. Time loans, dull and steady; sixty days, 3¾@4 per cent; ninety days, 4 per cent; six months, 4½@4¾ per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 5 per cent. Sterling exchange closed strong with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.86.85@4.86.90 for demand, and $4.84@4.84.05 for sixty-day bills; posted rates, $4.84½ and $4.87½; commercial bills, $4.83¾@4⅞. Bar silver, 65⅞c. Mexican dollars, 50¾c. Government bonds, steady; railroad bonds, easy.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 20.—The cotton market opened barely steady at an advance of seven points to a decline of 2 points, the gains being on the near positions on covering and dull support while the later months were affected by the favorable weather reported over the week end. Prices eased off to a net decline of 3 to 7 points of the call under realizing and selling by local bears who expected that better weather would be followed by improved crop accounts, but offerings were very well absorbed at the edecline and the market rallied later on a continuation of bull support, outside buying and covering, with July leading the upward movement an dshowing a net gain of about 8 points during the middle of the morning while the new crop was net unchanged to 3 points higher. Trading was active and the tone nervous.

Cotton spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 12.15; middling gulf, 12.40. Sales 7,300 bales. Futures closed steady. Closing bids: May, 10.92; June, 10.91; July, 10.95; August, 10.91; September, 11.00; October, 11.15; November, 11.17; December, 11.22; December, 11.25; February, 11.38; March, 11.44.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Gay & Stirgis: There is no question but what these stocks are selling below their intrinsic values, but values don't count in this kind of a market. People who would ordinarily be buying this market at this level argue: "What is the use in buying stocks if the United States government is going to rip all corporations up the back, in fact of a depression in business, failure of the wheat crop, presidential election coming on, possible shipments of gold, and tightening of the money market?" It is a very peculiar state of affairs, and one which the big men have never been up against, and they themselves do not know how to fathom.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: There seems to be no special reason for the heavy liquidation today, but tired holders are gradually selling their stocks and the buying power is extremely limited. We advised for several days past the sale of stocks as we believe that we are going to have a long dull period, with a good many factors to unsettle the market. The news from Shannon is very good and we consider the buying exceptionally good. Mohawk, we consider decidedly high in comparison with Copper Range and Quincy.

NEW CARS ARE HERE

Seven of the Fifteen Double Truck Cars Ready for Service.

Woodland Line Likely to Get the First Three.

The Duluth Street railway company has received seven of the new double truck cars, the first instalment of the fifteen which have been ordered for service on the company's lines here. The cars have been in the process of unloading from Northern Pacific flat cars at Thirty-seventh avenue west, since Friday last.

Up to this noon four of the new cars had been unloaded and run into the barn at Twenty-sixth avenue west. It was expected that the remaining three would be unloaded by noon tomorrow.

The arrival of the cars follow closely General Manager Herbert Warren's statement made a few weeks ago that the new vehicles would reach Duluth inside of sixty days. The remaining eight cars will be shipped as fast as they are turned out at the Twin City Rapid Transit company's car works at St. Paul.

The cars have arrived in Duluth all equipped for service, but have been taken to the shops of the local street railway company for some little adjustment before being put into actual service.

Owing to the fact that the Great Northern Power company is not quite ready to furnish power to the street railway company all of the new cars cannot be put into service immediately except as they may be used in place of some of the older cars while the latter are placed in the shops for repair or for painting and varnishing.

It is probable that the Woodland line will get the first three new cars.

As the cars are each six inches wider than the double truck cars that the company has had in service, there are about four or five blocks of the line on Central avenue, in West Duluth, where two of the new cars will not pass each other. Immediate steps, it is understood, are to be taken to reconstruct the tracks so as to obviate the difficulty. Because of the condition stated, the company, it is said, will not run the new cars west of Twenty-sixth avenue west until the track construction is completed.

The new cars are an improvement over the first double truck cars that the Duluth Street Railway company installed in its service. They are about two feet longer and, as stated, six inches wider. The additional length is specially appreciated in the rear vestibule, which is much deeper than on the other double truck cars, and which will carry a great many more people.

The aisles are wider and the cars have a roomier appearance than the other cars.

The new cars have the rattan covered side and cross seats and the interior finish is quite handsome. The registers are much larger than the old style, and the conductors will record both the cash and the ticket fares.

It is claimed that the new cars are of the very best type of street railway vehicles that are in present use in this country. They have every known modern convenience in the way of motors and air-brakes, for power and safety in operation.

The cars were unloaded from the flat cars by sonstructing a temporary track up an incline of ties and connecting with the spur track to the street railway line at Thirty-seventh avenue west.

Mr. Purdy will return to Washington in about a week.

FORECAST OF COUNCIL

Alderman McEwen Would Turn Incinerator Into Power Plant.

Plans to Cut Superior Street Through Point of Rocks.

At the council meeting this evening, Alderman W. E. McEwen will introduce a resolution asking the city assessor to submit a report as to the cost and feasibility of converting the incinerator at Fourteenth avenue west into a power plant, from which to furnish steam for drills and rock crushing plants, located on the Point of Rocks, with a view to eventually removing the troublesome and dangerous cliff from the face of the map and cutting Superior street through to Eighth avenue west.

Just how practical this scheme is cannot be determined until the report called for has been received, but it is said to have been tried with success in other cities, and Mr. McEwen is confident that a favorable report will be submitted.

The burning garbage in the incinerator will be used, as the larger part of the fuel for the power plant so that its usefulness along these lines will not be at all impaired. The only additional expense would be that in all probability a slightly larger amount of coal would have to be used with the garbage, in order to generate sufficient heat for the power plant.

There is a stretch of several blocks between the incinerator and the proposed scene of operations, but it is claimed that with double return pipes and other accessories for long distance steam transportation, there will be but little loss in this way.

Two committee reports, one from the finance committee and one from the joint committee made up of the finance and harbors, parks and roads committees of the council will also be features of this evening's meeting.

The joint committee is the one to which the mayor's communication regarding the issuance of $50,000 park bonds was referred and it is practically certain that it will submit and ordinance directing the issuance of the bonds as recommended.

The finance committee will make a report which will largely determine the council's policy in regard to improvements throughout the city this year. They were asked to report last week on the condition of the permanent improvement fund in order that the council might plan a definite course of campaign regarding the improvements needed this season.

The committtee on streets, alleys and sidewalks will probably report in favor of an appropriation of about $3,000 for cutting a slice off the Point of Rocks and removing the rock to the lake shore along St. Croix avenue where the lake is said to be making rapid encroachments on the unstable material of which the avenue is built. The committee, with which the city engineer and the aldermen are interested, made a thorough investigation both of the Point of Rocks and St. Croix avenue last week, and it is stated upon good authority that they will recommend the appropriation.

A number of big sidewalk resolutions are pending and may go through this evening.

WEST DULUTH

FINED FOR SPEEDING

Dr. Confer Drove Too Fast on Central Avenue.

Said Couldn't Hold the Animal, But Had to Pay.

Dr. S. C. Confer, the West Duluth veterinary, was arraigned before Judge Windom, in municipal court this morning, charged with fast driving. The doctor was driving one of his horses up and down Central avenue, Sunday evening, at a breackneck pace and, according to the officer who arrested him, he disregarded utely his efforts to make him slow up. He drove down Central avenue, turned around and was coming back at a rate decidedly exceeding the speed limit when arrested.

"What do you plead?" asked the judge.

"Well, you see, your honor, the horse got away from me and I couldn't hold him; that is all there is about it. I was going too fast all right, but I couldn't hold it."

"Get out," interrupted the court. "I don't believe any horse ever got away from you like that."

"Yes it did," maintained the doctor. "You see, this horse is a bad actor."

"Yes, I suppose he would be a bad actor until you were trying to sell him. Then he would be a good actor, wouldn't he?" asked the court.

"Well, you see I ain't tryin' to sell him just now, your honor," explained the doctor. He was released upon the payment of $5 and costs, amounting to $7.

William Boyd, the man who was in the rig with Dr. Confer when they were arrested, was to have been arraigned on a charge of interfering with an officer, but failed to appear. Dr. Confer said that he thought that if he would appear that would do for Boyd, too. Boyd's case was continued until this afternoon.

The Cow Nuisance.

The action of the Commercial club in passing a resolution requesting better means of caring for stray cows in West Duluth, will be brought to the attention of the council at its session tonight. It is not expected the Ramsey street pavement matter will come up tonight, as the examining of the petition has not yet been completed.

Tennis Club Meeting.

This evening, at the office of L. A. Barnes in the Woodward block, the tennis enthusiasts of West Duluth will meet to reorganize the West Duluth Tennis club. The club was allowed to lapse last year and the meeting this evening is for the purpose of bringing it into active existence again. All prospective members are urged to be present. It is probable that grounds will be secured at Fifty-first avenue west, and courts constructed for the use of the club.

PRESIDENT TAKES A RIDE.

Charlottesville, Va., May 20.—While President Roosevelt was at breakfast this morning a heavy shower came up lasting for an hour. At 10 o'clock the clouds broke and he started for a horseback ride in the direction of Glendower, unaccompanied. Mrs. Roosevelt and Archie remained indoors during the morning.

MAHONEY IS CONFIDENT

Reiterates His Innocence of Murder of Mitchell Boy.

Did Not Know Until Arrested of Search for Him.

Chief of Police Troyer, Sheriff Bates and Special Agent C. A. Pond of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road, returned from Minneapolis last evening with Daniel P. Mahoney, who has been arrested on suspicion for the murder of Fred Mitchell, a 12-year-old boy, who was found near Burnett station, Sept. 6, last, with his throat cut from ear to ear. It is claimed that the boy was maltreated in a terrible manner before he was killed.

Shortly after the commission of the crime, the grand jury returned an indictment charging "John Doe" with the murder, and Mahoney is now being held on that indictment.

The police department was notified by telephone Saturday that Mahoney had been arrested in that city by Detectives Nary and Howard on information furnished by a man who formerly knew Mahoney.

Mahoney did not deny his identity.

On the way back to Duluth Mahoney told the officers that he did not know that a search was being made for him. His statement is borne out by the fact that he has not attempted to change his name.

He told that officers that since his detention and examination here last fall, shortly after the murder, that he left Duluth on an ore boat for Chicago and that he has been drifting about through the Middle West ever since, working at common labor. Previous to his arrest Mahoney had been working in St. Paul. When taken into custody he had just spent his last cent for drink and expected to ship from Minneapolis, shortly, on some railroad job.

DANIEL P. MAHONEY.

Mahoney denies absolutely any connection with the crime and states his belief that the real murderer will be found before long. He claims that the fact he quit his job on the railroad work at Burnett the morning following the murder had no significance, as he had intended quitting at that time.

The authorities claim to have additional damaging evidence against Mahoney which they did not possess at the time he was first held on suspicion and was released. They are not giving any publicity as to the nature of the evidence, which they say was discovered after Mahoney left Duluth.

For months past a vigorous search has been under way all over the country for Mahoney, although he seems to have been unconscious of that fact.

A chance remark of Mahoney's to a fellow workman, to the effect that he served in the Spanish-American war, gave the authorities a clue to his antecedents, and by taking the matter up with the war department, and communicating with authorities in the East, it was found that Mahoney was a native of Massachusetts and came West in 1900, since which time he has held no communications with his relatives, a mother, brother, and two sisters, who still live in Massachusetts.

Rewards approximating $2,000 have been offered for the arrest and the conviction of the murderer of the Mitchell boy.

Mahoney was photographed and measured today before being taken to the county jail.

The following description of Mahoney was sent out by the authorities, in their effort to locate him: Age, 27; ht. 5 ft. 10½ in.; weight, 170; medium build; medium complexion; brown hair; gray eyes; brown mustache, if any; nationality, Irish-American; occupation, laborer, usually following railroad construction work; has sailed on salt and fresh water and was a soldier during the Spanish-American war. Frequents lower class of saloons and lodging houses and drinks to excesss as long as he has money; not known to write or receive letters, and for certain reasons is believed to be using his own name, and entirely unconscious of any effort being made to locate him; he worked on various railroad extra gangs since 1905, and is known to have spent some time in Buffalo, N. Y., also Kansas City, Mo., and other cities in the Middle West.

THEY'RE ALL LIKE THIS.

"People think that, because I am a woman," said Mrs. Hetty Green, "I can be imposed on; but usually they find out their mistake." She was talking about a lawsuit wherein she had disputed her lawyer's bill, and this topic naturally led her to the topic of woman's trustfulness.

"There is a case in point," said Mrs. Green, smiling grimly, "about a young and pretty school teacher. She once asked her class for an original definition of the word 'wife.'

"'A wife is a rib,' said one little girl.

"'Wives are guiding stars,' said another.

"'A comforter,' said a third.

"'An inspiration,' said a fourth.

"Altogether the definitions were rather prosy and commonplace, but finally a child of 11, smiling archly, said:

"'A wife is a person for a man to find fault with when things go wrong.'

"'Good!' cried the pretty teacher, laughing. 'Good! That is the best definition of all. The best, the truest.'

"But that afternoon, on the way home from school, the little girl whose definition had so pleased, tripped demurely up to the teacher and said:

"'Are you not going to marry that tall, handsome young man I see you with nearly every night?'

"'Yes,' said the teacher.

"'Well, then, if my definition of a wife was true—'

"'Ah, but dear, with us nothing will ever go wrong.' He says so himself.'"

THE IRISH NATIONALISTS REJECT BILL OFFERED BY BRITISH GOVERNMENT

National Convention Held at Dublin Unanimous on Matter.

Strong Resolution Presented by John Redmond is Adopted.

Nothing Can Satisfy the People Short of Home Rule.

Dublin, May 21.—The Nationalist convention, called to decide whether the Irish bill introduced in the house of commons May 7 by the chief secretary for Ireland, Mr. Birrel, was acceptable to the people of Ireland, assembled at noon today in the round room of the historic Mansion house. It became known immediately that the measure, as a result of yesterday's meeting of the Irish leaders would be rejected, and that a resolution, to be introduced by John E. Redmond, chairman of the Irish parliamentary party, settling the fate of the bill, had been prepared.

The floor of the rotunda was packed with delegates from many societies and constituencies representing every part of Ireland. The Irish members of parliament were present in full force, and many of the Catholic clergy were conspicuous on the platform.

Seated beside Mr. Redmond were the American delegates, John O'Callaghan,

MANUFACTURERS HOLD MEETING

National Association Meets in New York for Annual Session.

New York, May 21.—The National Association of Manufacturers of the United States began the regular session of its twelfth annual convention here today. President James W. Van Cleave of St. Louis presided, and introduced as the first speaker Dr. Charles P. Neill, commissioner of labor in the department of commerce and labor. Dr. Neill spoke on "Certain Aspects of the Child Labor Problem." He asked the assistance of the association in the investigation he was making into this subject.

"The impression appears to prevail in certain quarters that this investigation has been arranged to bolster up certain preconceived ideas," said Dr. Neill. "That impression is erroneous. Our sole aim is to learn the facts, and no effort will be made to present harrowing details for sensational purposes. I shall seek simply to get the truth, and so far as our bureau is concerned, we do not care who may be hurt. START ON LONG VIGIL

Ten Land Seekers Are Camped at Cass Lake Land Office.

Will Remain Until Opening of Land on June 12.

Cass Lake, Minn., May 21.(—Special to The Herald.)—"I will be sure of it this time," were the words of Olaf Olson of Cass Lake, who, with a bundle of blankets and other necessary supplies, at 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning took a position in front of the United States land office to await the opening to settlement of a valuable tract of land in the Big oFrk country, which will not take place until June 12.

The action of Olson came as a surprise to the many who have been waiting for the opening of these lands and in less than two hours ten eager and determined land seekers had positions next to Olson. The men are determined to undergo almost any hardship rather than give up their positions, and in order to hold them they will be obliged to live there day and night until 9 a. m., June 12, when applications will be received. The land to be opened is township 66, north, of range 24, west, of the fourth P. M.

Kittle O. Kittleson, aged 45, a prominent resident of Pequot, Minn., died here yesterday morning after suffering for several months from tuberculosis. The deceased leaves behind him a considerable amount of property. His remains will be taken to Pequot Wednesday for interment.

Train on New York Central Crashes Into Another Wreck.

One Man Instantly Killed, Two Others Badly Hurt.

Little Falls, N. Y., May 21.—In the wreck of the Buffalo-Cleveland special westbound from New York city on the New York Central railroad today, one man was killed and two were critically injured.

Jus tas the special was approaching Little Falls, an eastbound freight train, running on the track paralleling that of the special, was derailed by a pile of stones. All four of the tracks were covered with the wreckage of the train, and the train hands on the freight declare they did not have time to flag the express before it plunged into the wreckage.

Baggageman Findley who was in the buffet car, was thrown out out and cut in two by the wheels. Fireman Maher was pinned down in the cab of his engine, while hot coals from the boiler set his clothing on fire. He was badly burned, and is in a critical condition, as is Engineer Hyde, who was scalded by escaping steam.

None of the passengers were seriously injured.

COMMITTEE OF SEVEN RESIGNS

Refuses to Take Any Part in Government of Frisco.

San Francisco, May 21.—The "committee of seven," appointed by the five commercial organizations of San Francisco to take over some of the power of Mayor Schmitz with the latter's consent for the purpose of bringing about some order in municipal affairs in consequence of a general disorganization and lack of harmony in the city government, resulting in the sensational graft exposures, resigned last night. The reason assigned by the committee for withdrawing was that it had been unable to secure co-operation of Rudolph Spreckels and Francis J. Heney, who are the head of the graft investigation.

This action was taken after a meeting which lasted nearly the entire afternoon and at which Governor Gillette sought in vain to dissuade the members from taking the step they did. The committee was to have acted in an advisory capacity to the mayor and the latter had promised to carry out whatever it recommended.

The case of Mayor Eugene E. Schmitz on trial upon a charge of extortion will proceed today. The prosecution filed last night the affidavits in answer to the ones submitted by Schmitz in applying for a change of venue. The affidavits of the prosecution contain among other things a deposition from Judge Dunne denying that he had referred to Mayor Schmitz as a grafter. Formal denial is made also by Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Heney that a conspiracy exists among Rudolph Spreckels and others to convict Schmitz. The selection of a jury will follow the settlement of a change of venue.

LAKE STEAMER NAOMI IS BURNED TO WATER'S EDGE EN ROUTE TO MILWAUKEE

One Passenger and Four Coal Passers Lose Their Lives.

Fifty Passengers Rescued by Passing Steamers in Night Clothes.

Captain Remains Until Clothing Nearly Burns From Body.

Fifty passengers on the Crosby line steamer, Naomi, bound from Grand Haven to Milwaukee Monday night, had a narrow escape from a horrible death, while in the middle of Lake Michigan. The steamer caught fire while most of them were in their berths and swept through the vessel as though it was made of tinder. Most fortunately for the passengers two vessels were passing close at hand at the time, and all but one was rescued safely, although many were attired in their night clothes and saved nothing. Four of the coal passers were caught in the hold and could not escape and were probably cremated by the flames.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 21.—Four coal passers were burned to death, and one passenger, J. M. Rhoades of Detroit, was fatally burned when the Crosby line steamer Naomi, formerly the Wisconsin, was burned to the water's edge early today in the middle of Lake Michigan. Fifty passengers and all of the crew, except the four coal passers, were taken off in small boats by the steamer Stratford, and the Naomi's sister ship, the Kansas, which was en route from Milwaukee to Grand Haven. The loss on the Naomi, which was in command of Capt. Thomas Traill, is estimated at $225,000. After the passengers and crew were rescued, a barge which had been attracted to the scene by the fire, put a line on the burning hulk and is now towing her into port. She is about ten miles outside the piers at present.

The fire started in the vicinity of the kitchen, between decks, and spread so rapidly that the whole ship was a seething furnace before the crew could get the fire apparatus working. Fire swept the whole length of the ship and the upper works burned like tinder. It is considered miraculous that the passengers all escaped. Many of them were taken off in their night clothes, while scarcely any one was more than partially clad.

The fire was not discovered by any of the Naomi's crew, but was first seen by the lookout on the steamer Kansas, which was proceeding in the opposite direction from Milwaukee to Grand Haven. The Kansas made directly for the Naomi, and in the meantime the pasengers of the ill-fated boat were being awakened.

Capt. Thomas Traill was the last man to leave the steamer alive and his clothing was almost burned off him.

The four coal passers, who perished, were below in their bunks and are believed to have been penned down there by the flames. They are believed to have shipped from Milwaukee.

Officials of Nova Scotia Offer Liberal Bounty for New Pest.

Halifax, N. S., May 21.—Alarmed at the extent of the brown tail moth throughout Nova Scotia and the danger to the agricultural business of the province, should the pest become general, the provincial government has issued a notice stating that a bounty of 3 cents will be paid for each specimen of the moth secured.

The agricultural officials have organized school children's corps, which have been trained to gather the insects.

The Annapolis valley, one of the largest apple producing centers in the world, which yields annually almost 300,000 barrels of the fruit for export to Europe, has recently been invaded by the pest, where it has assumed the position of a serious menace to the prosperity of the inhabitants of the district, who depend almost wholly upon the revenue derived from their apples for a livelihood.

MANY HEADS WERE BROKEN

In Rioting Which Followed Assassination of Police at Odessa.

Odessa, May 21.—Fifty-three people were taken to the hospital suffering from broken heads or limbs, or otherwise dangerously injured as a result of the outbreak of the Black Hundred here yesterday, following the assassination of three police officials at the central police bureau by the explosion of an infernal machine. In addition about 100 persons were less seriously injured. The victims include women, children and students. It is alleged that, out of revenge for the assassination of the three officers whom the Jews had nicknamed the "heroes of the anti-Jewish riots," the police turned the Black Hundred loose, armed with clubs and rubber sticks. Jews were brutally beaten in the streets, and many houses in the Jewish quarter were looted and their occupants terribly beaten. The disorder lasted for several hours, the police making no attempt to suppress it. Further outrages are expected.

ASKS $250,000 A YEAR, AS ALIMONY

Mrs. Howard Gould Wants That Sum With Her Separation.

New York, May 21.—Developments of an interesting character are expected to follow the serving of the summons in the separation suit brought against Howard Gould by his wife, formerly Kathryn Clemmons, the actress. The bill of particulars, which has been drawn up, is a voluminous affair and charges, among other things, abandonment and cruel and inhuman treatment. Mrs. Gould, it is stated, will also ask the court to grant her $250,000 a year alimony.

A sensational feature is the allegation of conspiracy in connection with the case. This feature has already been investigated by Police Commissioner Bingham, as some members of the detective bureau are said to be involved. District Attorney Jerome has taken cognizance of the rumors in this regard and will call on Commissioner Bingham today to learn whether the case as it stands at present warrants an inquiry by his office.

Defense Exercises Peremptory Challenge on Ranchman Fisher.

But Three Talesmen Now Remain of Special Panel.

Boise, May 21.—John Whitlock, a nurseryman who was born in Tennessee and who came to Idaho several years ago from Nebraska, was under examination as proposed juror No. 6 when the Haywood trial was resumed at 9:30 a. m. today. The early hour was not attarctive to the curiosity seekers, with the result that when the proceedings began there were less than a score of spectators present.

Clarence S. Darrow, acting as leading counsel for the defense, asked and received permission of the court temporarily to pass the examination of Whitlock. He then announced that the defense would use its sixth peremptory challenge to excuse John Fisher, at No. 10. Fisher is the rancher and fruit grower of whom it was testified yesterday that he had declared Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone "should be strung" if they had a part in the Colorado crimes charged against the union. After the exercise of this challenge, both state and the defense had four left with only nine members of the special venire of 100 to draw upon.

James Aflor, a teamster, was called to the vacancy at No. 10, but was quickly excused after saying he had an opinion that only the strongest sort of evidence could remove.

One after another, the remaining few talesmen went down because of opinions, until Levi Smith, the ninety-seventh member of the special panel, was reached. Smith said he was a railroad employe and declared he had never formed nor expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused.

NURSE FOR THE PRINCE

Queen Breaks the Spanish Record for Nursing First Born.

Madrid, May 21.—From a source regarded as unquestionable it is learned that the necessity for abandoning her intention to nurse her child caused the queen of Spain her first moment of grief since her marriage. She resisted as long as possible, but finally yielded when she was told that the realization of her wishes would risk the health of the prince as well as her own. She is now consoled by the knowledge that she established a record for queens of Spain, having nursed her first born for ten days, instead of having engaged a nurse beforehand, as has always been done heretofore. The nurse is described as a splendid brunette of 23 years. She will begin her duties at noon today. She will wear the traditional uniform of royal wetnurses, a costume of red velvet, trimmed with gold lace, white silk stockings and low patent leather shoes with silver buckles.

"When reading the newspapers he must have details of all the world's happenings and often asks questions. He never has to be told a second time.

Bemidji, Minn., May 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—"We, the jury, find that John Johnson came to his death by being shot through the head with a shotgun in the hands of a person to the jury unknown."

The above verdict was rendered yesterday by the coroner's jury impanelled to inquire into the cause of death of John Johnson, whose body was found in a badly decomposed state in Gull lake, last Thursday.

The post mortem developed that Johnson had been shot with a twelve gauge shot gun, the charge entering below the left eye, lodging in the brain. About twenty-five No. 4 shot were found in the brain and lodged under the scalp, also the wad from the cartridge. The hair along the left side also showed powder burns. In addition, the skull had been broken with a club or other instrument, there being a fracture above the upper teeth ,and the lower jaw was also broken. This, the coroner explained, could not have been caused by the shot, but was made

Dublin, May 21.—The Nationalist convention, called to decide whether the Irish bill introduced in the house of commons May 7 by the chief secretary for Ireland, Mr. Birrel, was acceptable to the people of Ireland, assembled at noon today in the round room of the historic Mansion house. It became known immediately that the measure, as a result of yesterday's meeting of the Irish leaders would be rejected, and that a resolution, to be introduced by John E. Redmond, chairman of the Irish parliamentary party, settling the fate of the bill, had been prepared.

The floor of the rotunda was packed with delegates from many societies and constituencies representing every part of Ireland. The Irish members of parliament were present in full force, and many of the Catholic clergy were conspicuous on the platform.

MANUFACTURERS HOLD MEETING

National Association Meets in New York for Annual Session.

New York, May 21.—The National Association of Manufacturers of the United States began the regular session of its twelfth annual convention here today. President James W. Van Cleave of St. Louis presided, and introduced as the first speaker Dr. Charles P. Neill, commissioner of labor in the department of commerce and labor. Dr. Neill spoke on "Certain Aspects of the Child Labor Problem." He asked the assistance of the association in the investigation he was making into this subject.

"The impression appears to prevail in certain quarters that this investigation has been arranged to bolster up certain preconceived ideas," said Dr. Neill. "That impression is erroneous. Our sole aim is to learn the facts, and no effort will be made to present harrowing details for sensational purposes. I shall seek simply to get the truth, and so far as our bureau is concerned, we do not care who may be hurt. I wish to say also that I have not the slightest doubt that the members of this association are just as anxious to prevent abuses in the matter of child labor as anybody, and I appeal to you for hearty co-operation in this direction."

Of Brutal Murder of John Johnson at Gull Lake.

Johnson Was Shot in the Head and Then Clubbed.

Bemidji, Minn., May 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—"We, the jury, find that John Johnson came to his death by being shot through the head with a shotgun in the hands of a person to the jury unknown."

The above verdict was rendered yesterday by the coroner's jury impanelled to inquire into the cause of death of John Johnson, whose body was found in a badly decomposed state in Gull lake, last Thursday.

The post mortem developed that Johnson had been shot with a twelve gauge shot gun, the charge entering below the left eye, lodging in the brain. About twenty-five No. 4 shot were found in the brain and lodged under the scalp, also the wad from the cartridge. The hair along the left side also showed powder burns. In addition, the skull had been broken with a club or other instrument, there being a fracture above the upper teeth ,and the lower jaw was also broken. This, the coroner explained, could not have been caused by the shot, but was made

THE VENIRE EXHAUSTED

Haywood Trial Postponed to Thursday for More Talesmen.

Boise, Idaho, May 21.—The special venire of talesmen in the Stunenberg murder trial was exhausted this forenoon and Judge Fremont Wood, at once adjourned the trial until Thursday afternoon to permit Sheriff Shad Hodgin to gather another venire of sixty men.

Of the last three talesmen two were opposed to capital punishment, and the third had a strong fixed opinion as to the guilty or innocence of William D. Haywood, the prisoner at the bar.

The court made the order for the new special venire and the trial went over until Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The state has filed the names of seven additional witnesses.

The jury as it now stands is as follows: Seat 9, vacant; Thomas B. Cossal, fire insurance and real estate agent; Isaac Bedell, farmer; Samuel S. Gilman, farmer; Daniel Clark, farmer; George Powell, farmer; John Whitlock, nurseryman; George H. McIntyre, farmer; Lee Scrivener, farmer; Levi Smith, superintendent of construction; A. U. Burns, no present occupation, and Samuel Russell, farmer.

LESTER PARK

To Have a Very Interesting Attraction.

M. G. Parrotti's war and historical museums from Washington, D. C., is to occupy one of the pavilions at Lester park. Mr. Parrotti was formerly an officer in the German navy. He is a man of means, and has the finest collection in America of genuine relics and uniforms from all over the world. Groups in life size from the Civil and Revolutionary wars, American presidents, generals, foreign rulers and celebrities. The admission charged to this museum at Washington was 50 cents, but L. A. Gunderson, owner of the pavilions, who made the arrangements to have the museum brought to Duluth had it strictly understood that the admission fees here should be no more than 10 cents. He had a higher object in view than that alone of establishing a profitable enterprise; it was his intention to open a museum of art, affording to all an opportunity for instruction, amusement and recreation, without risk of coming in contact with anything or anybody that is vulgar or offensive. The exhibit is now here and will be ready for the public Decoration day, the grand opening day of the park.

NEW RAILROAD DEAL IS APPARENTLY BREWING

Right of Way Through Superior is Condemned.

Is Coincident With Incorporation of Thunder Bay Line.

What is believed to be the forerunner of a big deal in railroad circles came to light today, when condemnation proceedings were begun in the superior court of Douglas county, by Luce, Powell & Luce, acting for the Wisconsin & Northern Minnesota Railroad company, covering a right of way from South Superior to the end of Connor's point, near the Interstate bridge. The route outlined follows very closely that of the Wisconsin Central right-of-way from South Superior, almost due north to the corner of North Eleventh street and Spruce avenue. At that point it turns east to Connor's point, running to the Interstate bridge. The distance covered is about six miles.

Nothing is known of the Wisconsin & Northern Minnesota Railroad company and nothing could be learned in Superior today. Lyman C. Powell of Luce, Powell & Luce is the secretary of the company, but he refused to give out anything of its organization or plans.

The filing of the papers starting condemnation proceedings and the publication of the articles of incorporation of the Duluth-Thunder Bay Railway company are coincidental, and some connection may be seen between them. The articles of incorporation of the Duluth-Thunder Bay company state that the company is organized to construct and acquire railroad in the state of Minnesota and elsewhere and the first main line is to be constructed from South Superior to the northern extremity of Cook county. The route outlined by the Wisconsin & Northern Minnesota company in the condemnation proceedinggs is so like that which would be followed by the Duluth-Thunder Bay company in the construction of the proposed line, that there is little doubt but that the two companies are closely allied.

Charles E. Wales, one of the incorporators of the Duluth-Thunder Bay company, was seen at the Spalding today, but he refused to say anything for publication just at present.

"We are not ready to say anything about our plans just at present," said Mr. Wales. "I am waiting for information and have absolutely nothing to give out for publication. You are of course at liberty to publish such facts as are on record in the courts and elsewhere."

Mr. Wales is a Minneapolis man.

NO SUPPORT TO MARKET

Coppers Are Weak and Prices Have Big Slump.

Trading Active—Small Holders Throw Shares on Market.

Copper stock went all to pieces in the market today.

After the first hour of trading, there was no support at all and the prices went off rapidly.

Trading on the local curb was more active today than it has been for a long time. The general weakness of the regular list caused the holders of smaller stocks, tired of waiting for a sick market to get better, to dump their stock on the market.

There was heavy trading in Greene-Cananea, North Butte, Amalgamated, Superior & Pittsburg and Globe Consolidated. Blocks of stock which have been suffering from a chronic inertia of late, were dumped on the market, probably at prices away below what was paid for them by the sellers.

North Butte opened at $89, declined to $5.50 and closed at $86 bid and $86.25 asked. Amalgamated opened at $81, advanced to $81.37½, declined to $8.37½ and closed at $88.12½ bid and $88.37½ asked. Anaconda opened at $61, declined to $59 and closed at $59.62½ bid. Butte Coalition opened at $26.25, declined to $25 and closed at $25 bid and $25.50 asked. Calumet & Arizona opened at $171, declined to $166 and closed at $166 bid and $8 asked.

Greene-Cananea declined from $15 to $14 and closed at $14.87½ bid and $14.50 asked.

Superior & Pittsburg sold at $17.37½, declined to $16.87½ and closed $16.75 bid and $17 asked. Globe Consolidated went off from $12.50 to $12 and closed at $12 bid and $12.25 asked.

Keweenaw sold at $10.12½ and $10 and closed at $9.87½ bid and $10 asked; Warren sold at $7.50 and $7.75 and closed at $7.62½ bid and $7.87½ asked; Denn-Arizona at $9.75 and $9.87½ and closed at $9.75 bid and $10 asked; Carman at $4, declined to $3.75 and closed at $3.50 bid and $4 asked. Butte & Superior at $3.12½ and closed at $3 bid and $3.25 asked; Copper Queen of Idaho at $1.37½ and closed at $1.25 bid and $1.37½ asked, and Calumet & Montana at 75c and closed at 80c asked.

Hancock was inactive and closed at $8.75 bid and $9 asked. Calumet & Sonora $13 bid and $15 asked, and Cliff at $3.62½ bid and $3.87½ asked.

Black Mountain sold at $5.75 and closed at $5.75 bid and $6 asked.

FREIGHT RATES ARE ATTACKED

Railroads Charged With Favoring the Standard Oil Company.

Washington, May 21.—A series of hearings was begun before the interstate commerce commission involving the freight rates on petroleum and its products, particularly in the territory of the Central Freight association. The allegation is made by the complainants that they are discriminated against in rates given them by the carriers in favor of the Standard Oil company. It is further stated that when the railroads come into competition with the water carriers they give reduced rates, but if their competitor is a pipe line owned and controlled by the Standard Oil company the rates are increased to a point where they become unjust and discriminatory.

Several cases were assigned for hearing today, all of them involving practicaly the same point. The complainant in each case was the National Petroleum association of Cleveland, Ohio. Two other important cases brought by the association against various railroads were adjusted satisfactorily to all parties, the commission announcing the settlement of the cases yesterday. In those cases the carriers reduced their freight rates in accordance with the petition of the complainant.

The cases which came up today were against the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway and others, alleging unreasonable rates on petroleum from Chicago, Peoria and Milwaukee to St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth. The rate fixed by the railroads of 20 cents per hundred pounds was declared to be unreasonable and discriminatory. In another case against the same defendants the present rate on petroleum of 27 cents per hundred pounds from the same points to Omaha, Sioux City and Sioux Falls, also was attacked.

WEDDED PAIRS ON STAGE.

Chicago Tribune: Armete Noveli, the Italian actor, who is the latest of the imported stars to cast effulgence in this country at $2 per effulgence, brings his wife with him as his leading woman. H. B. Irving, who has sailed back to England after a campaign in this country that was so successful so far as appreciation, and frosty so far as currency was concerned, had his wife as his leading woman. Forbes Robertson, another English star, who is in this country, has his wife to play his leads.

And it is right here that there is a big difference between the actor from the other side of the bounding billow and the actor of our land. Maxine Elliott, Virginia Harned, Mary Mannering and a lot of other actresses have husbands with whom they could be acting. All of them at various times have acted with thase husbands. At present, however, the husband heads one company while the wife heads another. In England, in most of the companies, especially in those headed by actor-managers, the public sees the husband and wife in the same play for the one price of admission. With us there are two profit sheets.

Beerbolm Tree's wife is an actress. She often plays with him. Arthur Bouchier's wife is an actress. She leads in his company. So it was when Charles Kean dominated the English stage. With the Kembles it was the same. Mr. and Mrs. Kendal became known together. Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft acted in the same company. The instances are innumerable.

With us see what a difference a few dollars make. While E. H. Sothern is starring with Julia Marlowe his wife, Virginia Harned, is starring alone. While James K. Hackett is starring in "The Walls of Jericho" and has as his leading woman an importation from dear old Lunnon, his wife, Mary Mannering, is starring in Mr. Young's latest play, "Glorious Beauty."

At one end of the country is Nat Goodwin playing "The Genius." He is supported by Edna Goodrich. His wife, Maxine Elliott, under management other than that of Goodwin, stars in "Her Great Match."

Before Julia Marlowe and Robert Tabor, her husband, were divorced they played much in the same company. Richard Mansfield and his wife, Beatrice Cameron, used to play together, but Mrs. Mansfield has not been on the stage for several years. Arnold Daly's wife is an actress, but she has not played in this company for a long time.

Blanche Walsh who has been Mrs. William Travers for several months, has her husband in her company. Guy Bates Post, whose wife was an actress, insisted that she retire from the stage. This she was nothing loath to do.

Dion Boucicault, whose record of more than 400 written and produced plays stands as the high water mark in the stage of this country, used to act with his wife. She was cleverest in soubrette roles. H. V. Esmond, whose most popular success was "When We Were Twenty-one," is the husband of an actress. They act together most of the time. Frank Moulan and his wife, Maude Lillian Berri, accept no engagements except joint ones.

Robert Mantell follows the English fashion of having a leading woman, Marie Booth Russell, who in private life is Mrs. Mantell. Charles B. Hanford's leading woman is his wife. She is Marie Drofnah. She made her last name out of her own head, simply by reversing the letters in her husband's name.

The husband-managers on this side of the pond are almost as numerous as the husband-co-stars on the other. Henrietta Crossman is managed by her husband, Maurice Campbell. Mrs. Fiske is managed by her husband, Harrison Grey Fiske. Lloyd Bingham helps Amelia Bingham perform her managerial duties. And there are many others.

COULDN'T SINK.

New York Times: Discovering yesterday afternoon, after repeated efforts to drown himself, that he floated like a cork, an obese German, bent on suicide, decided to try to end it all by some other method than that of immersion. His efforts at suicide in Atlantic Basin moved the dock loungers to unfeeling mirth. The unhappy Teuton, who appeared to weigh about 300 pounds, walked to the end of Porto Rico Line pier, and, with a last look around, jumped into the water.

"It's all over," he said, as he took the leap.

But it was not the end. Coming up from the dive, the fat man floated face upward. Again and again he tried to dive under the surface, but his body merely rolled over, and the end of each attempt found him floating with his face upward.

He was trying for the fifth time to sink, when Watchman William Walsh jumped in, tied a rope around him, and hauled him ashore.

There is no want ad. printed in The Herald to-day which does not strongly interest at least ten people—and there are some that will strongly interest thousands.

SMALL BOYS STEAL WIRE

Park Point Line Loses Nearly All Its Ground Wire.

Youngsters Sell It for About One-Third Actual Value.

A theft of several hundred pounds of ground wire on the Interstate Traction company's line on Park Point tied up traffic on the lower end of the line completely and caused the company considerable expense before it was able to resume its service below the White City grounds this spring.

The wire was taken during the winter months while the company was not operating its cars farther than Oatka park, and its loss was not discovered until a few days ago, when one of the cars run on its first trip of the season beyond the White City grounds became "dead" and assistance had to be summoned to push the vehicle back to a point where there was a circuit.

An investigation started by the company's officials developed the fact that a gang of small boys residing on Park Point, of ages ranging from 10 to 16 years, had taken up and sold the ground wire between the canal and the southern terminus of the line. It happens that the company when it relaid its tracks last year put in a double ground wire connection from the canal to Oatka where the single track begins, and the loss of the largest portion of the wire was not noticed until the investigation was made.

Below Oatka, where the company has a single track, there was only one ground wire connection and, when the wire was removed, the line became "dead."

The wire, which is claimed to have been of special make, valued at 40 cents per pound, is said to have been sold by the boys to local parties for 13 cents per pound.

Owing to the youth of the parties committing the theft, the traction company officials were loth to cause any trouble about the matter, but the theft is of such magnitude and has caused it so much inconvenience and expense that it was finally decided to turn the case over to the authorities, steps in the matter having already been taken by the juvenile court officers.

Most of the boys involved are claimed to come from good families and their parents are very much put out over the action of their boys. It is understood that negotiations have been started looking toward a settlement of the case by the parents paying for the wire taken and the expense of installing new ground wire.

A great deal of indignation has been expressed against the parties who bought the wire from the boys, one of whom is said to be engaged in the gas engine manufacture and the other is alleged to be a second-hand dealer on St. Croix avenue. One of the men, it is claimed, said he understood the wire had been picked up by the boys at the location of the Fearson Boat Construction plant that burned some time ago.

Parents of the boys insist that any person with an ordinary amount of intelligence would have surmised that something was wrong by reason of the large quantity of wire offered for sale, and the low price asked.

The ground wire is used to connect the rails of the street car line to complete the circuit. It is heavy copper wire, and is not insulated.

Johnson has a wife and two children residing in West Duluth.

An exciting runaway occurred on Superior street last evening shortly before 6 o'clock when a horse attached to a buggy containing Seth Mandom, son of A. M. Marshall, and C. W. Andrews, became frightened and started in a wild dash down the street, running from Twenty-fifth avenue east to Fifth avenue west where it was stopped. During its course it struck two automobiles belonging to C. H. Bagley and W. S. Bishop, damaging them slightly. The young men fortunately escaped unhurt.

Held to Grand Jury.

Archie Belanger and Mrs. Martin Fink were arraigned and given an examination before Judge Windom yesterday afternoon on an adultery charge. Several witnesses were put upon the stand who testified that Mrs. Fink had been a frequent visitor to Belanger's rooms and had on several occasions spent the night there. Sergeant Fritz testified as to arresting the couple, partially clad, in Belanger's apartments last week. Judge Windom bound them over to the grand jury, fixing Belanger's bail at $1,000 and the woman's at $500.

Government Starts Action.

The United States government has started suit against Charles J. Johnson of this city for the recovery of special taxes imposed for the manufacture and sale of a certain "juniper ale." It is claimed that Johnson agreed to pay this special tax but has never done so. The government is seeking a judgment in the sum of $400. The case will probably be tried at the July term of the federal court.

Judge Goes to Winona.

Judge Page Morris left last evening for Winona, where he opened the regular term of federal courts today. The judge will probably be absent from Duluth continually from now until the latter part of June, except for part of one day on June 1, when he will return to Duluth to hear eighteen naturalization cases. From Winona he will go to the Twin Cities to hold court.

EXPLANATION.

Rochester Herald: A Rochester clergyman was reminded one day recently, at Keewatin, Ont., Typhoid fever of the use of scientific terms which the people did not understand. A deputation waited on him with the request that in the future, when he used such terms, he would explain them.

On the following Sunday he used the term hyperbole and added: "As agreed on, I beg to explain this word. Were I to say that at this moment the whole of my congregation are sound asleep it would be hyperbole, but if I say that one-half are asleep that is no hyperbole, but the truth.

The next day the deputation again called to say that the minister need not explain technical terms. The people would learn their meaning from a dictionary.

BERLIN POSTAL TUBES.

The Berlin postal authorities are revolutionizing the conveyance of letters and parcels.

The idea on which they are experimenting, says the Chicago Tribune, is to have an underground tube with a large enough circumference to admit a man in a stooping posture. These tubes are to connect the central postoffice with the principal stations and with the district offices.

Two sets of rails are built in this tube or tunnel, one over the other, not side by side. The upper set of rails is supported on the sides of the tube, thus practically dividing it in two. Small carriages, running on two wheels, are automatically driven by electricity along these rails.

No locomotive is used nor is there any attendant with the carriage. As many as six of these carriages can be run together for conveying letters and parcels from the arrival station to the central postoffice and thence to the various districts, or vice versa.

By this means letters can be delivered in any part of the city in less than a fourth of the time formerly required. So far the scheme is not beyond the experimental stages, but it promises to be a success and to banish from the streets the mail van, with all its poetry and romance.

WHERE CAIN KILLED ABEL.

Tit Bits: While cycling around Kettering I was startled to see what appeared to me to be two men fighting in a field. On reaching the field I dismounted and climbed over the fence to see what it was, and discovered it was a stone statue representing Cain slaying Abel. It is unique. Cain has one knee pressing Abel to the ground, and one arm uplifted ready to startke. The statue must be hundreds of years old, and is supposed to be on the exact spot where the murder was committed.

WEST DULUTH

SHORTAGE NOT FELT

New West Duluth Residents Able to Find Homes.

Goodly Number of People Are Building Own Houses.

People moving into West Duluth and desiring to rent houses here are rejoicing over the fact that the shortage of houses, which was feared some months ago, has not materialized to any great extent. Little trouble is being experienced by those desiring to rent homes, for the different real estate men seem to be able to supply all demands. At the time the shortage was feared, it was thought the inrush of men for work at the plant of the Carbolite company would take up all the available houses and some would then remain unsupplied, but the plant has not yet begun work and the houses for rent are being secured by others coming into town.

The closing of the Merrill & Ring sawmill caused a number of men to move from West Duluth and those houses have been snapped up quickly by others coming in. West Duluth has experienced a healthy influx of new residents this spring and thus far, all have been accommodated with houses.

The amount of building going on in West Duluth, while it may not be of the proportions of a boom, is very pleasing to those who have the welfare of West Duluth at heart. A good many people have purchased lots and are building their own homes.

DAMAGES REDUCED

Jury Awards Robert Richardson $200 for Personal Injuries.

Damage Case Against Mining Company Settled for $2,000.

Robert Richardson's damages against H. F. Davis & Co. for injuries alleged to have been received in being struck or pushed against a curb by one of the company's wagons, were shaved from $500, the amount awarded him at the first trial, to $200, by a verdict returned in the district court this morning. The case went to the jury late yesterday afternoon and an agreement was reached during the night.

Mr. Richardson was a city employe, and was engaged Oct. 13, 1902, in repairing a sidewalk on Michigan street. It was claimed that his truck containing tools was in the street next the curb, and that when Richardson reached over to get some tools, a wagon belonging to H. F. Davis & Co. bumped his truck, catching him between the truck and the curb and injuring his leg and other parts of his person. He demanded $1,500 damages.

The first trial resulted in a verdict of $500 in his favor. The defendant concern secured a new trial ,which resulted in a smaller amount of damages.

By direction of the court, the jury in the civil action of W. G. Joerns, administrator of the estate of Charles Gasper, deceased, against Thomas Jackson, returned a verdict of $150.70 against Jackson. The suit involved a claim of the estate against Jackson on a grocery bill that he owed Gasper. There was no contest and the verdict represented the full amount of the claim as shown from the books.

TO SPEND $100,000

State Authorizes That Expenditure in Aid of Drainage.

Part of it for Counties, Balance for State Lands.

St. Paul, May 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—An expenditure of $100,000 was authorized by the state drainage commission today in aid of overflowed and swamp lands. Part of it is in aid of counties provided for in the drainage laws passed at the last session of the legislature and the balance is for the drainage of lands owned by the state. This amount will be increased by the usual assessment for private lands benefited, which will bring the total amount to $300,000.

Throughout the state it is estimated that about $500,000 is being invested in drainage ditches and overflowed lands.

The amounts set aside for counties are as follows: Roseau, $31,003.32; Kittson, $10,000; Marshall, $2,500; Beltrami, $2,143; Koochining, $15,750; Itasca $6,000; St. Louis, $10,000; Aitkin, $5,000.

For the aid of counties now constructing private ditches and which will be paid for by assessment against the lands benefited, the following sums were voted: Aitkin, $8,000 a year for two years; Polk, $3,000; Norman, $3,000; Wilkin two ditches, $6,000; Traverse $5,000; Steele, $5,000; Wabasha, $3,000; Nicollett, $7,500; Todd, $6,000; Wadena, $2,000.

Before making any appropriation it was decided to investigate the drainage of Heron Lake and the construction of a cut-off in Stevens county. On June 26 the commission will visit Roseau and look over the drainage work now being done there.

With the aid provided by the last legislature the commission expects the heaviest expenditure for reclamation work during the next two years in the history of the state. Some ditches are contemplated that rival the Chicago drainage canal in size and importance.

WEST END

FALL FROM CAR FATAL

John Wold Meets His Death in Railroad Yards.

Other News of the West End of the City.

Yesterday was a day fraught with accidents for the West enders. One of them was fatal.

John W. Wold, employed switching in the Northern Pacific yards on Garfield avenue, lost his balance and fell from the top of a box car, striking on his head.

His neck was broken by the fall and he died on the way to the hospital.

Several of his fellow workers saw the unfortunate man pitch forward from the runway on the car top and immediately rushed to his assistance.

The force of the fall jammed Wold's head on to his body and it was plain to be seen that life was practically extinct when he was carried to the street and put in an ambulance.

Another accident which occurred in the West end yesterday afternoon resulted in the wounding of the young son of John M. Branscombe of 602 Garfield avenue.

Young Branscombe was playing with a little .22-caliber rifle when the weapon was accidentally discharged. The bullet entered the calf of the right leg, making a painful but not serious wound. It was dressed by Dr. Davis and the boy declared to be in no great danger.

DECISION IS PROTESTED.

Members of Epworth League to Have Two Spreads.

Considerable amusement has been caused among the members of the Epworth league of the First Norwegian-Danish Methodist church by the discovery that after the judges had announced that the side captained by Miss Millie Olsen had won out in the contest conducted all winter through the medium of literary sessions, perhaps the other side should have secured the honor.

Every two weeks during the winter, the young people gave interesting musical and literary programs at the church, which were much enjoyed by all. The league was divided into two sides, one captained by Miss Olsen and the other by A. B. Anderson. On one occasion, one side would furnish the entertainment and on the next, it was the other's turn.

The sides vie with each other to give up the most interesting programs and those of the greatest length. The success of the entertainments was attested by the great interest taken. There is considerable musical and literary talent among the young people, which was developed, and the interest in the contest was keen.

Last week, it was announced by the judges that Miss Olsen's side had won on points and the others conceded and announced their willingness to pay the forfeit, to be a banquet for the winners. Then an enthusiastic Anderson adherent made some discoveries which led him to protest the decision of the judges.

Now Miss Olsen, acting for her side, is loath to accept the honor of a banquet from the others, and declare that her side as well will entertain. So there are two spreads in store for the members of the Epworth league.

Are Buying More Land.

More land in the southwestern part of the city is about to change hands. Bids for property in the vicinity of the tract bought Saturday by H. O. Field of New York from the Summit company are said to be about closed. While the parties who are said to be after the other tracts are not Mr. Field or his associates, so far as can be learned, it is thought that all are acting for the same interests. The tract bought by Mr. Field includes more than 1,000 acres.

Bids Are too High.

Judging by the action taken by the board of public works when a number of bids for construction of several new cement sidewalks were opened yesterday, the contractors are bidding too high on public improvements. Bids were opened for new walks on Fifth and Broadway streets and Baxter and Hammond avenues. Dixon & Lowry, the only concern heard from, offered to take the contract for six-foot walks for $1.04 per lineal foot and on eight-foot walks at $1.39 per lineal foot. Some contracts were let a year ago for similar work at prices ranging from $9 to 98 cents. The board declined to accept the bids until they can be fully investigated.

Will Condemn Land.

The Wisconsin & Minnesota Railroad company filed papers yesterday afternoon, which will begin condemnation proceedings, covering property from South Superior to Winter street and from Winter street to Connor's point, a distance of five miles. The papers were filed with the clerk of United States circuit court. It is not known to just what use this land will be put, but it is rumored that it is the first step toward the establishment of an independent terminal.

Expect Visit of Duluthians.

The Superior council chamber will present a lively scene this evening, as the Duluth aldermen have sent word that they would pay a visit to the meeting. The license in question is that of Paul Hendricks, an Allouez saloonkeeper.

Car Line Extension.

No Agreement Reached.

No agreement has been reached as yet by the property owners on Hammond avenue as to the kind of pavement to be used on the avenue between Belknap and Twenty-first street. CONCERNING WOMEN

"Why is it," inquired the average man, "that with all the progress that the world and women are making in so many ways that the bugbear of gossip is not overcome by her?"

"For the same reason, I expect," said the feminine person addressed, "that the fact still remains that when you want to get the true inwardness of what 'they say' you guilefully lead the subject up to some man and he gently and in true manly way tells you how it happened and just when he began to show little symptoms of uneasiness and just when she began to buy too many silk pettiskirts for their income, and when the necessity for fine furnishings and after theater supper took hold of both of them, and when he began to show an uncanny interest in other things and when she—

"I think you are mistaken," said the average man rather stiffly, "people ought to be careful what they say."

"There isn't a doubt to it," agreed the feminine person. "Nobody will ever argue that question. People ought to be very careful what they say."

"It's just the little word here and the one added to it there, that flies around and does an unlimited amount of harm," said the self appointed lecturer with dignity.

"I should say so," said the person as her eye wandered off uneasily. "I just hate gossips."

"They do a great deal of harm," said the temporary lord of creation virtuously.

"I should say they do," said the agreeable lady.

"Why just the other day," said the man who pointing a moral, "I was just talking to John Grisham. You know he has just been trying to get himself together after this last sinking of stocks and—

"Yes," said his listener with vivid interest.

"His wife who didn't quite understand about how things were going, insisted upon—"

"She is such a ninny, anyhow," said the defender of gossip.

"Starting immediately for Chicago or Paris or somewhere to buy an unlimited amount of hats and cloaks, and dresses, and things made by people who—"

"And I know for a fact that she brought home eight pairs of long gloves and you know how much they cost, and three hats that were $80 a piece," said she who had to find some man to tell her the interesting details of life.

"And so John told me," continued the man.

"And Emily Smith told me," recounted the girl.

"And I heard along the street, went on the careful person.

"And they do say," finished up his listener.

"But I don't believe half of it's true," admitted the man.

"People do get things so crooked," corroborated the feminine portion of this sketch, "that it's not really safe to believe an eighth of what you hear, but then it is funny that things like that should get around."

"And that," said the man drawing a moral lesson, "is the way happy homes are broken up."

"Yes, isn't it awful," lamented the virtuous she. "If only people wouldn't gossip."

"They ought not to," said the average man. "It does a lot of harm."

"I should say it did," admitted the lady.

What Retail Markets Offer.

California cherries, 50 cents a lb.
Strawberries, 20 cents a box.
Cabbage, 5 cents a lb.
Bananas, 8 cents a lb.
Corned beef, 12 and 15 cents a lb.
Pork tenderloin, 28 cents a lb.
Pickled pigs' feet, 10 cents a lb.

Painting the lily and trying to improve the strawberry are necessary and useful employments compared to thinking an improvement possible for redish, purplish black cherries. There is nothing under heaven so nice as black or dark red California cherries. Sorrow is forgotten, there is no such thing as trouble when one is confronted with a pound of cherries, and there is absolutely no one in sight to look hungry while you eat them. The seeds of a grape are a bother, but the little hard heart of a cherry but adds to its charm. That such a small thing could contains such an ecstatic mouthful of luciousness is a wonder beside which the marvels of electricity and wireless telegraphy and such other things sink into insignificance. But cherries are not a thing to be lightly talked about. They should enter into a personal experience and then the thing is really too wonderfully delightful to speak of except in whispers of ecstatic wonder. The first of the California cherries are in the market.

There are also pigs' feet—pickled.

The Offending Hand

By Annie Hamilton Donnell.

Jeffy felt better about that hand when he kept it in his pocket. He couldn't see how black it was—it had looked very black when he shut it up there, two hours ago. He remembered it now with a little shudder. That nursery soap and water a little tempered with heat might possibly have made it look less guilty had not occurred to him—did not occur to him now.

Of course nobody had seen when he slid his white nightgown over his little trousers and waist. How else could he keep his hand—that hand—in his pocket, he meant to, all night? Jeffy felt better about it there. In a sense it was in prison, where hands that—that—you know—ought to be incarcerated for their sins. In a sense he seemed to be making reparation. Not exactly to Elizabeth—no-o, but still—Jeffy twisted about under his little white covers miserably. That hand hurt him—maybe because it was cramped and stiff, maybe not. Maybe because—that. Jeffy wondered if Elizabeth ached there.

Of course, Elizabeth was to blame—still, she was very little. All at once, lying there in the dark, Jeffy remembered how very little Elizabeth was. Her head just came to the edge of the dining-room table; you're pretty little when you have to stretch up on tiptoe to see what there is going to be for dinner. Perhaps when you were as little as that you'd have meddled with your big brother's things—you might have.

Elizabeth was very little and Jeffy was her big brother. Jeffy was seven. He had always rather domineered over Elizabeth, but he had never done—that before. Oh, no, no, I tell you! Never!

"Does it show, I wonder?" the little boy in bed thought, among the other thoughts.

"I'm going in and see," he said with a little premonitory shiver of dread.

Elizabeth, because she was so very little, slept beside mother's bed in her dainty white crib. Jeffy could see the whiteness of it shining faintly through the dark. He crept toward it very quietly. On the edge of it nestled Elizabeth snugly, just her small, serene face in its mellow radiance. Jeffy could see it distinctly.

She was lying on that cheek. He could not see it at all. The other cheek was fair and sweet, with a dimple in as though a dream-angel had been there and kissed it a minute ago, and that were the print of the kiss. The "big brother" stood looking at it with a strange impression that Elizabeth was turning the other cheek also. He flushed all over his little guilty face.

Somewhere downstairs a step sounded and disturbed Elizabeth in her sleep. She threw up both small hands, then with a restless little heaving of round body and white covers, turned over on her pillows.

"It shows!" gasped Jeffy, and fled back to his own room in horror. He had seen little parallel red creases in Elizabeth's cheek—that cheek. He did not for a moment doubt their origin.

"It shows!—it shows!" he groaned in the awful loneliness of night. Perched on the side of his bed with his little lean bare legs a-dangle, he thought about what the Bible said—Jeff's thoughts did not quote verbatim:

"If thy right hand strikest thy sister, cut it off an' cast it into Hell Fire," he repeated under his breath "an' there shall be gnashing—an' there shall be gnashing."

He shuddered. The precise significance of gnashing puzzled him a little, but it meant something awful—awful! An' cut it off meant—oh, oh!

"Er-r-r!" softly shuddered Jeffy thinking how hot hell fire must be. You were to cast it into Hell Fire, where there would be gnashing—if it ever struckest thy sister. The Bible said you were. And it had struck her, it had struck Elizabeth.

The darkness seemed to grow darker, the stillness stiller in Jeffy's room. The little figure on the bedside swayed unsteadily—swayed again—fell backward on the quilts. Jeffy was very tired. It tires you to—to—what does it tire you to do? Yes—oh, yes, that. An' it makes you tireder still to—to-o feel—sorry—so awful sor—

Some one seemed to be speaking in the room, but there was no one there. Jeffy could see, for it had grown light, as if many lamps had been lighted. Or else it was one great lamp, the sun. Could it be morning? The voice called out and now it seemed to be his own voice calling him.

"Come, Jeffy, time to go," is said, brusquely. "The sooner you get it over with the better. I suppose you know that?"

"Y-yes," shivered Jeffy, answering himself, "I've got some o' my clothes all on. I'll be ready in a minute."

"Well, be spry about it. You're going to the One With Spectacles, I suppose?"

"Yes, to the One With Spectacles. He was the kindest one. When Elizabeth had the croup he came and when mother was sick. He was the one that always smiled. But now—of course now he wouldn't smile."

It was too early for office hours, but the One With Spectacles was at home. He put out his hand to Jeffy and smiled—but that was before he knew.

"Why, Jeffy, this you?" he said. "What can I do for you?"

Jeffy stretched out his right hand and shut his eyes.

"Cut it off an' cast it into hell fire," he said rapidly. "It would be over soon if you kept your eyes shut an' never budged."

The One With Spectacles started a very little, but recovered himself the next instant. He proceeded to examine the small hand gravely.

"It does look pretty black," he said in a professional tone. "Been offending you, has it?"

"Oh, no, Elizabeth—please hurry! I'd rather you'd do it f-fast," trembled the little voice.

"You are sure you want it done? Better think twice. You won't be able to cut your meat, you know."

Jeffy knew.

"Or write in your copybook—or play ball—"

Or play ball—oh! But the small right hand did not waver.

"I know," Jeffy said.

"It'll be pretty hard to button your buttons, of course—"

"Cf course."

"And it takes two hands to whittle. Still, if you say so—"

Jeffy nodded. Something was the matter with his voice. It would not go.

"Well, then, steady! It's going to hurt, of course—now then."

The hurt of it woke Jeffy. Something awful seemed to have happened and it required a little time to realize what it was. Then he remembered. His hand—oh, how it ached! He shuddered as he drew it painfully out of its cramped prison, and it made him rather faint to look at it—

"Why!" Jeffy laughed aleud in his relief. Why, the little caloused brown right hand was there! It felt numb in some parts and throbbed in others, but there it was! Not cut off—nor cast out. You could pinch it and wriggle it—you could cut meat with it, whittle with it, button buttons—anything! The One With Spectacles was only a dreadful dream.

In mother's room next door, Elizabeth was singing to herself. Her little, thin, clear voice piped up joyously. Elizabeth sounded happy. Jeffy sat up on the bed—he had slept all night outside the covers, slanting across them—and listened eagerly. Then if Elizabeth was happy, she—she wasn't unhappy. She hadn't laid anything up. Perhaps if he were to go in there now and say: "Elizabeth, I'm sorry—I'm sorry—I'm sorry"—perhaps if he were to do that, she would forgive him. You couldn't tell till you tried.

Jeffy tried. He slid softly to the floor and softly across the floor—to Elizabeth. She was sitting with her little bare feet out between the bars of her crib, swinging them to the time of her music. Jeffy caught the glints of morning sunshine in her yellow hair and thought how beautiful they were—how beautiful Elizabeth was. Before he got to her his heart had her in its arms hugging her.

"Elizabeth, I'm sorry—I'm sorry—I'm sorry, Elizabeth!" he cried. The gay little song ended suddenly and the gay little singer whirled about.

"So's me," Elizabeth smiled.

Simple Methods of Doing Dry Cleaning

By ELIZABETH LEE.

The problem of removing spots and stains is one that confronts housekeepers at this time of the year, for carpets that have been used all winter generally show a few spots of grease, etc., and leather chairs that have been dimmed by constant usage lack their usual lustre. A review of the linen closet often reveals specks of iron mould and other damages, while the question of removing the ravages from one's personal wardrobe is often a formidable one when a thorough overhauling is attempted, for paint, mildew and kindred stains are, as a rule, brought to light.

It goes without saying that stains should be removed when freshly made, for the longer they are allowed to remain the more difficult will be the process of taking them out. Tea and coffee spots will readily respond if held perfectly tight while a second person pours boiling water through them. Once set, however, even strong boiling water will not remove these stains. Javelle water will be necessary. This can be bought so cheaply at the drug store that unless a large quantity is required it is not worth the while making at home. It is generally believed that buttermilk will remove mildew, but this has not been my experience. Indeed, there is no other stain quite so difficult to remove as mildew. Javelle water will be efficacious if the stain is slight or of not long standing, and a half lemon dipped in salt, well rubbed in, and the article kept in the sun for some time, is a second well known remedy. Many washings are, however, necessary after either treatment. Iron rust may be removed by the same means, or, if the stain is very persistent, dip in boiling water and rub with a little salts of lemon (tied in a rag) as one would soap. Wash thoroughly in warm water and the spot will no doubt have disappeared.

Amateur embroiderers would do well to remember that nothing but washing—and several are often required—will remove lead pencil marks, and, therefore, they should be careful not to use them in their work.

There are various ways of removing grease spots, the method depending largely upon the fabric to be secured.

Liquids that will dissolve the grease are generally used for the purpose, as ether, gasoline, benzine or naphtha. A common mistake is to pour the liquid on the spot to be removed, supposing the quantity aids the process. This should never be done, as it invariably leave a mark. A cloth dipped in the liquid should be used in a circular motion, or one toward the centre, and a folded rag should always be placed under the stain so as to receive the grease as it dissolves. Pouring cold water on a grease spot freshly made is excellent, as almost every bit of grease can be scraped off, but, of course, this is not practicable with all fabrics. A good remedy for such soils on fine cloth is to cover the spot with French chalk and then hold it over a hot iron. The heat will melt the grease and the chalk absorbs it. Fuller's earth mixed into a paste with alcohol and placed over the spot is a similar and equally good remedy. Notwithstanding the number of widely known remedies, grease spots have a great trick of reappearing, especially on skirts, and for a thorough cleansing of a soiled woolen garment, whether dark or ages from one's personal wardrobe is often light, there is surely nothing to equal soap bark. Five cents' worth, boiled a few minutes in a gallon of water, strained and reduced when lukewarm, will wash a skirt perfectly. No soap or any chemical whatever is used, but after all the dirt has been rubbed out the warm rinsing water should contain a little borax.

Lard or unsulted butter will remove wagon grease. The spot will require washing with soap and water afterward, and to restore color apply a cloth dipped in chloroform.

A scraped raw potato placed over a grease spot on a carpet will cause it to disappear if left on for several hours, and a little ammonia and water will take out sewing machine oil stains.

Plaster stains, often so difficult to remove from new floors, will respond if washed with vinegar, using a scrubbing brush when necessary.

In cleaning leather chairs benzine should first be used. If this dulls the leather somewhat, the beaten white of an egg will soon restore it, while for greasy wall paper there is nothing better than blotting paper and a hot iron.

Grease stains on wooden floors may be removed by scrubbing with hot water, soap and soda. Common sand laid over the spot first will help in taking out the spots. Shiny looking elbows of sleeves and the hip part of skirts will be removed if rubbed with a rag dipped in ammonia and water.

Black veils and black lace may be cleaned by washing in a bath of alcohol.

To restore black lace dip in black tea and press while damp between two strips of new black crinoline. This supplies color and sufficient stiffening.

Each season sees improvements along the line of dry cleaning and an up-to-date professional has given the following recipe as the very best solution that can possibly be made for cleansing all white or delicately colored materials, calling for dry cleaning, such as silks, velvets, laces, feathers, ribbons and gloves. You take one quart of naphtha, two tablespoonfuls of chloroform, two tablespoonfuls of sulphuric ether, and five drops of ammonia. Mix, and wit ha clean rag apply this solution freely, rubbing as necessary or immerse, if the article to be cleaned is not too large, and go through general washing motions. This done, take clean fluid and rub again. Wipe with clean cloths and hang up to dry.

How to Dress and Pose for Natural Looking Photograph

When one considers in what a stiff and self-conscious way one usually sits for a photograph it is not strange that the picture is frequently unsatisfactory. Photography nowadays is carried to such an art that the most exquisite effects may be gained and the most commonplace type of woman look like a poet's dream. This is charming, in a sense, but not altogether satisfactory from the likeness point of view, and it is the photograph that might be sent to a stranger to convey the idea of one's real looks which one wishes to attain.

No matter how skillful the photographer is he cannot do this unless aided by the sitter, and it should be the effort of every woman before a camera to be responsive to the demands upon her. If she is this she will "look natural" and pleasant without being told to do it, and will avoid the frozen smile that ruins more than one picture.

To put into precise words what this responsiveness consists of is a trifle difficult, but intelligence has much to do with it, and a sincere desire to get the effect the photographer is aiming for. If a woman is thinking of helping the operator she will forget herself in a great measure, and the greatest difficulty of self-consciousness has been overcome.

To pose like a tragedy or comedy queen before a camera is bound to be unsatisfactory in the end, and it is a mistake to dress uncommonly or extravagantly for a picture. For such costuming detracts from the familiar characteristics of the sitter, and again the picture is spoiled. If a woman will remember that a photographer knows much more about the business than she does, and that it is for the credit of his reputation that he shall turn out the best possible results, she may be more willing to do and dress as he tells her than to follow her own ideas.

One of the best photographers in this country has gone back to France after working a year in New York.

"I am hurting myself here," she said in explanation. "I have more sittings booked than I could get through in six months, but, ye gods, the objects! They know so much more about the work than I do. One woman, for example, came to me yesterday, bringing a French evening frock that she insisted upon wearing. It was smart and expensive, but it was about as much suited to her individual style as it would have been to a heathen Chinese. If she had taken a soft, simple gown with straight lines she would have been charming, and I could have turned out an artistic picture. As it was, she refused any but the robe she had brought and I am obliged to do eight pictures of that, making her look a sight, each one signed with my name. I can't afford that."

Don't, if you are short and stout, ask the artist to make a picture of you full length. e will if you insist, but he knows he is doing a great wrong thereby. Nothing is more graceful and pleasing in a picture of a stout person than a sitting at half length, the figure so turned as to hide the stoutness. If a woman is slim and angular she should not forget that a full length figure will make her appear more slim and angular. Then the pretty bust picture is her only hope, and she should insist on having none other. One thing bear in mind when you visit the studio—bring along your home expression.

Babies' Christening Service Simply Celebrated at Home

By ROSANNA SCHUYLER.

One of the pretty customs of other countries, not so frequently observed in this, is the christening of a baby. This celebration may be extremely charming an dat the same time simple and inexpensive, and the presence of immediate relatives and the god parents makes a small gathering of friends whom one is glad to have about.

Baptism in church seem to lack a little of the privacy and intimacy of those celebrated at home, and as a baby is supposed to be named at the age of six weeks, there may be objections to taking it out of doors so soon. Therefore the service is read in the drawing room and an impromptu at noon are good times for the celebration of this service. It should on no account interfere with the baby's nap. The baby does not appear until all is ready.

The drawing room should be decorated with simple flowers, and at the proper season none is prettier than those from the field—such as buttercups, daisies, clover and the like. The font should stand at one end of the room and for this a small table, covered with a white linen cloth on which is a small glass bowl, should serve admirably. The bowl should be smothered in white flowers.

The mother receives the guests and with the father precedes the baby, nurse and god parents to the font when the service is to be read. It is the godmother who names it, and when the minister is to take the child in his arms the godmother takes it from the nurse and gives it to hini, at the same time pronouncing the names. She later takes it from him to give back to the nurse.

Baby is allowed to stay only a few minutes after the service is over, for excitement is not good for him.

Breakfast or luncheon should be announced at once, and served from a buffet or table, as at a reception.

There may be singing during the service if one cares to have it and in this case a "baby" song should be chosen.

WHY HE GOT DEGREES.

Providence Journal: Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton, was deploring the promiscuous giving of honorary degrees.

"Our universities have learned of late," he said, "to distribute honorary degrees judiciously. But in the past—"

He smiled.

"Well, in the past, I met an uncouth person at a dinner, and, being told by an acquaintance that he had three degrees, I asked why it was.

"'Well,' said my friend, 'the third was given him because he had two, the second because he had one, and the first because he had none.'"

ENTIRE FAMILY'S SKIN AFFECTIONS
Mother Suffered Six Years with Eczema—Baby Cured of Heat Rash—Father, Mother, and Child Have Scalp and Hair Troubles.

ALL GIVE THANKS TO CUTICURA REMEDIES

"My wife had eczema for five or six years. It was on her face and would come and go. We had read so much about Cuticura Remedies that we thought we would give them a trial. We did so, and it has now been about four years, and she has never had a sign of eczema since. She also used them both about a year ago for her scalp. She had very thin hair and Cuticura helped her hair greatly. I myself used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment some time ago for falling hair. I now have a very heavy head of hair and it does not fall out. We used Cuticura Remedies for our baby, who was nearly bald when young. She has very nice hair now. She is very fleshy, and we had so much trouble with heat that we would bathe her with Cuticura Soap and then apply Cuticura Ointment, it would dry the heat up so much quicker than anything else. We give thanks to the Cuticura Remedies. Mr. H. B. Springmire, 323 So. Capitol Street, Iowa City, Ia., July 16, 1905 and Sept. 16, 1906."

CONCERNING WOMEN

"Why is it," inquired the average man, "that with all the progress that the world and women are making in so many ways that the bugbear of gossip is not overcome by her?"

"For the same reason, I expect," said the feminine person addressed, "that the fact still remains that when you want to get the true inwardness of what 'they say' you guilefully lead the subject up to some man and he gently and in true manly way tells you how it happened and just when he began to show little symptoms of uneasiness and just when she began to buy too many silk petticoats for their income, and when the necessity for fine furnishings and after theater supper took hold of both of them, and when he began to show an uncanny interest in other things and when she—

"I think you are mistaken," said the average man rather stiffly, "people ought to be careful what they say."

"There isn't a doubt to it," agreed the feminine person. "Nobody will ever argue that question. People ought to be very careful what they say."

"It's just the little word here and the one added to it there, that flies around and does an unlimited amount of harm," said the self appointed lecturer with dignity.

"I should say so," said the person as her eye wandered off uneasily. "I just hate gossips."

"They do a great deal of harm," said the temporary lord of creation virtuously.

"I should say they do," said the agreeable lady.

"Why just the other day," said the man who pointed a moral, "I was just talking to John Grisham. You know he has just been trying to get himself together after this last sinking of stocks and—

"Yes," said his listener with vivid interest.

"His wife who didn't quite understand about how things were going, insisted upon—"

"She is such a ninny, anyhow," said the defender of gossip.

"Starting immediately for Chicago or Paris or somewhere to buy an unlimited amount of hats and cloaks, and dresses, and things made by people who—"

"And I know for a fact that she brought home eight pairs of long gloves and you know how much they cost, and three hats that were $60 a piece," said she who had to find some man to tell her the interesting details of life.

"And so John told me," continued the man.

"And Emily Smith told me," recounted the girl.

"And I heard along the street, went on the careful person.

"And they do say," finished up his listener.

"But I don't believe half of it's true," admitted the man.

"People do get things so crooked," corroborated the feminine portion of this sketch, "that it's not really safe to believe an eighth of what you hear, but then it is funny that things like that should get around."

"And that," said the man drawing a moral lesson, "is the way happy homes are broken up."

"Yes, isn't it awful," lamented the virtuous she. "If only people wouldn't gossip."

"They ought not to," said the average man. "It does a lot of harm."

"I should say it did," admitted the lady.

What Retail Markets Offer.

California cherries, 50 cents a lb.
Strawberries, 20 cents a box.
Cabbage, 5 cents a lb.
Bananas, 8 cents a lb.
Corned beef, 12 and 15 cents a lb.
Pork tenderloin, 28 cents a lb.
Pickled pigs' feet, 10 cents a lb.

Painting the lily and trying to improve the strawberry are necessary and useful employments compared to thinking an improvement possible for redfish, purple black cherries. There is nothing under heaven so nice as black or dark red California cherries. Sorrow is forgotten, there is no such thing as trouble when one is confronted with a pound of cherries, and there is absolutely no one in sight to look hungry while you eat them. The seeds of a grape are a bother, but the little hard heart of a cherry but adds to its charm. That such a small thing could contains such an ecstatic mouthful of luciousness is a wonder beside which the marvels of electricity and wireless telegraphy and such other things sink into insignificance. But cherries are not a thing to be lightly talked about. They should enter into a personal experience and then the thing is really too wonderfully delightful to speak of except in whispers of ecstatic wonder. The first of the California cherries are in the market.

There are also pigs' feet—pickled.

The Offending Hand

By Annie Hamilton Donnell.

Jeffy felt better about that hand when he kept it in his pocket. He couldn't see how black it was—it had looked very black when he shut it up there, two hours ago. He remembered it now with a little shudder. That nursery soap and water a little tempered with heat might possibly have made it look less guilty had not occurred to him—did not occur to him now.

Of course nobody had seen when he slid his white nightgown over his little trousers and waist. How else could he keep his hand—that hand—in his pocket, he meant to, all night? Jeffy felt better about it there. In a sense it was in prison, where hands that—that—you know—ought to be incarcerated for their sins. In a sense he seemed to be making reparation. Not exactly to Elizabeth—no-o, but still—Jeffy twisted about under his little white covers miserably. That hand hurt him—maybe because it was cramped and stiff, maybe not. Maybe because—that. Jeffy wondered if Elizabeth ached there.

Of course, Elizabeth was to blame—still, she was very little. All at once, lying there in the dark, Jeffy remembered how very little Elizabeth was. Her head just came to the edge of the dining-room table; you're pretty little when you have to stretch up on tiptoe to see what there is going to be for dinner. Perhaps when you were as little as that you'd have meddled with your big brother's things—you might have.

Elizabeth was very little and Jeffy was her big brother. Jeffy was seven. He had always rather domineered over Elizabeth, but he had never done—that before. Oh, no, no, I tell you! Never!

"Does it show, I wonder?" the little boy in bed thought, among the other thoughts.

"I'm going in and see," he said with a little premonitory shiver of dread.

Elizabeth, because she was so very little, slept beside mother's bed in her dainty white crib. Jeffy could see the whiteness of it shining faintly through the dark. He crept toward it very quietly. On the edge of it nestled Elizabeth snugly, just her small, serene face in its mellow radiance. Jeffy could see it distinctly.

She was lying on that cheek. He could not see it at all. The other cheek was fair and sweet, with a dimple in as though a dream-angel had been there and kissed it a minute ago, and that were the print of the kiss. The "big brother" stood looking at it with a strange impression that Elizabeth was turning the other cheek also. He flushed all over his little guilty face.

Somewhere downstairs a step sounded and disturbed Elizabeth in her sleep. She threw up both small hands, then with a restless little heaving of round body and white covers, turned over on her pillows.

"It shows!" gasped Jeffy, and fled back to his own room in horror. He had seen little parallel red creases in Elizabeth's cheek—that cheek. He did not for a moment doubt their origin.

"It shows!—it shows!" he groaned in the awful loneliness of night. Perched on the side of his bed with his little lean bare legs a-dangle, he thought about what the Bible said—Jeff's thoughts did not quote verbatim.

"If thy right hand strikest thy sister, cut it off an' cast it into Hell Fire," he repeated under his breath "an' there shall be gnashing—an' there shall be gnashing."

He shuddered. The precise significance of gnashing puzzled him a little, but it meant something awful—awful! An' cut it off meant—oh, oh!

"Er-er-r" softly shuddered Jeffy thinking how hot hell fire must be. You were to cast it into Hell Fire, where there would be gnashing—if it ever struckest thy sister. The Bible said you were. And it had struck her, it had struck Elizabeth.

The darkness seemed to grow darker, the stillness stiller in Jeffy's room. The little figure on the bedside swayed unsteadily—swayed again—fell backward on the quilts. Jeffy was very tired. It tires you to—to—what does it tire you to do? Yes—oh, yes, that. An' it makes you tireder still to—to-o feel—sorry—so awful sor—

Some one seemed to be speaking in the room, but there was no one there. Jeffy could see, for it had grown light, as if many lamps had been lighted. Or else it was one great lamp, the sun. Could it be morning? The voice called out and now it seemed to be his own voice calling him.

"Come, Jeffy, time to go," is said, brusquely. "The sooner you get it over with the better. I suppose you know that?"

"Y-yes," shivered Jeffy, answering himself, "I've got some o' my clothes all on. I'll be ready in a minute."

"Well, be spry about it. You're going to the One With Spectacles, I suppose?"

"Yes, to the One With Spectacles. He was the kindest one. When Elizabeth had the croup he came and when mother was sick. He was the one that always smiled. But now—of course now he wouldn't smile."

It was too early for office hours, but the One With Spesetacles was at home. He put out his hand to Jeffy and smiled—but that was before he knew.

"Why, Jeffy, this you?" he said. "What can I do for you?"

Jeffy stretched out his right hand and shut his eyes.

"Cut it off an' cast it into hell fire," he said rapidly. "It would be over soon if you kept your eyes shut an' never budged."

The One With Spectacles started a very little, but recovered himself the next instant. He proceeded to examine the small hand gravely.

"It does look pretty black," he said in a professional tone. "Been offending you, has it?"

"Oh, no, Elizabeth—please hurry! I'd rather you'd do it f-fast," trembled the little voice.

"You are sure you want it done? Better think twice. You won't be able to cut your meat, you know."

Jeffy knew.

"Or write in your copybook—or play ball—"

Or play ball—oh! But the small right hand did not waver.

"I know," Jeffy said.

"It'll be pretty hard to button your buttons, of course—"

"Cf course."

"And it takes two hands to whittle. Still, if you say so—"

Jeffy nodded. Something was the matter with his voice—it would not go.

"Well, then, steady! It's going to hurt, of course—now then."

The hurt of it woke Jeffy. Something awful seemed to have happened and it required a little time to realize what it was. Then he remembered. His hand—oh, how it ached! He shuddered as he drew it painfully out of its cramped prison, and it made him rather faint to look at it—

"Why!" Jeffy laughed aloud in his relief. Why, the little caloused brown right hand was there! It felt numb in some parts and throbbed in others, but there it was! Not cut off—nor cast out. You could pinch it and wriggle it—you could cut meat with it, whittle with it, button buttons—anything! The One With Spectacles was only a dreadful dream.

In mother's room next door, Elizabeth was singing to herself. Her little, thin, clear voice piped up joyously. Elizabeth sounded happy. Jeffy sat up on the bed—he had slept all night outside the covers, slanting across them—and listened eagerly. Then if Elizabeth was happy, she—she wasn't unhappy. She hadn't laid anything up. Perhaps if he were to go in there now and say: "Elizabeth, I'm sorry—I'm sorry—I'm sorry"—perhaps if he were to do that, she would forgive him. You couldn't tell till you tried.

Jeffy tried. He slid softly to the floor and softly across the floor—to Elizabeth. She was sitting with her little bare feet out between the bars of her crib, swinging them to the time of her music. Jeffy caught the glints of morning sunshine in her yellow hair and thought how beautiful they were—how beautiful Elizabeth was. Before he got to her his heart had her in its arms hugging her.

"Elizabeth, I'm sorry—I'm sorry—I'm sorry, Elizabeth!" he cried. The gay little song ended suddenly and the gay little singer whirled about.

"So's me," Elizabeth smiled.

Simple Methods of Doing Dry Cleaning

By ELIZABETH LEE.

The problem of removing spots and stains is one that confronts housekeepers at this time of the year, for carpets that have been used all winter generally show a few spots of grease, etc., and leather chairs that have been dimmed by constant usage lack their usual lustre. A review of the linen closet often reveals specks of iron mould and other damages, while the question of removing the ravages from one's personal wardrobe is often a formidable one when a thorough overhauling is attempted. Ink, paint, mildew and kindred stains are, as a rule, brought to light.

It goes without saying that stains should be removed when freshly made, for the longer they are allowed to remain the more difficult will be the process of taking them out. Tea and coffee spots will readily respond if held perfectly tight while a second person pours boiling water through them. Once set, however, even strong boiling water will not remove these stains. Javelle water will be necessary. This can be bought so cheaply at the drug store that unless a large quantity is required it is not worth the while making at home. It is generally believed that buttermilk will remove mildew, but this has not been my experience. Indeed, there is no other stain quite so difficult to remove as mildew. Javelle water will be efficacious if the stain is slight or of not long standing, and a half lemon dipped in salt, well rubbed in, and the article kept in the sun for some time, is a second well known remedy. Many washings are, however, necessary after either treatment. Iron rust may be removed by the same means, or, if the stain is very persistent, dip in boiling water and rub with a little salts of lemon (tied in a rag) as one would soap. Wash thoroughly in warm water and the spot will, no doubt have disappeared.

Amateur embroiderers would do well to remember that nothing but washing—and several are often required—will remove lead pencil marks, and, therefore, they should be careful not to use them in their work.

There are various ways of removing grease spots, the method depending largely upon the fabric to be scoured.

Liquids that will dissolve the grease are generally used for the purpose, as ether, gasoline, benzine or naphtha. A common mistake is to pour the liquid on the spot to be removed, supposing the quantity aids the process. This should never be done, as it invariably leave a mark. A cloth dipped in the liquid should be used in a circular motion, or one toward the centre, and a folded rag should always be placed under the stain so as to receive the grease as it dissolves. Pouring cold water on a grease spot freshly made is excellent, as almost every bit of grease can be scraped off, but, of course, this is not practicable with all fabrics. A good remedy for such soils on fine cloth is to cover the spot with French chalk and then hold it over a hot iron. The heat will melt the grease, and the chalk absorbs it. Fuller's earth mixed into a paste with alcohol and placed over the spot is a similar and equally good remedy. Notwithstanding the number of widely known remedies, grease spots have a great trick of reappearing, especially on skirts, and for a thorough cleansing of a soiled woollen garment, whether dark or light, there is surely nothing to equal soap bark. Five cents' worth boiled a few minutes in a gallon of water, strained and reduced when lukewarm, will wash a skirt perfectly. No soap or any chemical whatever is used, but after all the dirt has been rubbed out the warm rinsing water should contain a little borax.

Lard or unsalted butter will remove wagon grease. The spot will require washing with soap and water afterward, and to restore color apply a cloth dipped in chloroform.

A scraped raw potato placed over a grease spot on a carpet will cause it to disappear if left on for several hours, and a little ammonia and water will take out sewing machine oil stains.

Plaster stains, often so difficult to remove from new floors, will respond if washed with vinegar, using a scrubbing brush when necessary.

In cleaning leather chairs benzine should first be used. If this dulls the leather somewhat, the beaten white of an egg will soon restore it, while for greasy wall paper there is nothing better than blotting paper and a hot iron.

Grease stains on wooden floors may be removed by scrubbing with hot water, soap and soda. Common sand laid over the spot first will help in taking out the spots. Shiny looking elbows or sleeves and the hip part of skirts will be removed if rubbed with a rag dipped in ammonia and water.

Black veils and black lace may be cleaned by washing in a bath of alcohol.

To restore black lace dip in black tea and press while damp between two strips of new black crinoline. This supplies color and sufficient stiffening.

Each season sees improvements along the line of dry cleaning and an up-to-date professional has given the following recipe as the very best solution that can possibly be made for cleansing all white or delicately colored materials, calling for dry cleaning, such as silks, velvets, laces, feathers, ribbons and gloves. You take one quart of naphtha, two tablespoonfuls of chloroform, two tablespoonfuls of sulphuric ether, and five drops of ammonia. Mix, and wit ha clean rag apply this solution freely, rubbing as necessary or immerse, if the article to be cleaned is not too large, and go through general washing motions. This done, take clean fluid and rub again. Wipe with clean cloths and hang up to dry.

How to Dress and Pose for Natural Looking Photograph

When one considers in what a stiff and self-conscious way one usually sits for a photograph it is not strange that the picture is frequently unsatisfactory. Photography nowadays is carried to such an art that the most exquisite effects may be gained and the most commonplace type of woman look like a poet's dream. This is charming, in a sense, but not altogether satisfactory from the likeness point of view, and it is the photograph that might be sent to a stranger to convey the idea of one's real looks which one wishes to attain.

No matter how skillful the photographer is he cannot do this unless aided by the sitter, and it should be the effort of every woman before a camera to be responsive to the demands upon her. If she is this she will "look natural" and pleasant without being told to do it, and will avoid the frozen smile that ruins more than one picture.

To put into precise words what this responsiveness consists of is a trifle difficult, but intelligence has much to do with it, and a sincere desire to get the effect the photographer is aiming for. If a woman is thinking of helping the operator she will forget herself in a great measure, and the greatest difficulty of self-consciousness has been overcome.

To pose like a tragedy or comedy queen before a camera is bound to be unsatisfactory in the end, and it is a mistake to dress uncommonly or extravagantly for a picture. For such costuming detracts from the familiar characteristics of the sitter, and again the picture is spoiled. If a woman will remember that a photographer knows much more about the business than she does, and that it is for the credit of his reputation that he shall turn out the best possible results, she may be more willing to do and dress as he tells her than to follow her own ideas.

One of the best photographers in this country has gone back to France after working a year in New York.

"I am hurting myself here," she said in explanation. "I have more sittings booked than I could get through in six months, but, ye gods, the objects! They know so much more about the work than I do. One woman, for example, came to me yesterday, bringing a French evening frock that she insisted upon wearing. It was smart and expensive, but it was about as much suited to her individual style as it would have been to a heathen Chinese. If she had taken a soft, simple gown with straight lines she would have been charming, and I could have turned out an artistic picture. As it was, she refused any but the robe she had brought and I am obliged to do eight pictures of that, making her look a sight, each one signed with my name. I can't afford that."

Don't, if you are short and stout, ask the artist to make a picture of you full length. e will if you insist, but he knows he is doing a great wrong thereby. Nothing is more graceful and pleasing in a picture of a stout person than a sitting at half length, the figure so turned as to hide the stoutness. If a woman is slim and angular she should not forget that a full length figure will make her appear more slim and angular. Then the pretty bust picture is her only hope, and she should insist on having none other. One thing bear in mind when you visit the studio—bring along your home expression.

Babies' Christening Service Simply Celebrated at Home

By ROSANNA SCHUYLER.

One of the pretty customs of other countries, not so frequently observed in this, is the christening of a baby. This celebration may be extremely charming and at the same time simple and inexpensive, and the presence of immediate relatives and the god parents makes a small gathering of friends whom one is glad to have about.

Baptism in church seem to lack a little of the privacy and intimacy of those celebrated at home, and as a baby is supposed to be named at the age of six weeks, there may be objections to taking it out of doors so soon. Therefore the service is read in the drawing room and an impromptu at noon are good times for the celebration of this service. It should on no account interfere with the baby's nap. The baby does not appear until all is ready.

The drawing room should be decorated with simple flowers, and at the proper season none is prettier than those from the field—such as buttercups, daisies, clover and the like. The font should stand at one end of the room and for this a small table, covered with a white linen cloth on which is a small glass bowl, should serve admirably. The bowl should be smothered in white flowers.

The mother receives the guests and with the father precedes the baby, nurse and god parents to the font when the service is to be read. It is the godmother who names it, and when the minister is to take the child in his arms the godmother takes it from the nurse and gives it to him, at the same time pronouncing the names. She later takes it from him to give back to the nurse.

Baby is allowed to stay only a few minutes after the service is over, for excitement is not good for him.

Breakfast or luncheon should be announced at once, and served from a buffet or table, as at a reception.

There may be singing during the service if one cares to have it and in this case a "baby" song should be chosen.

WHY HE GOT DEGREES.

Providence Journal: Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton, was deploring the promiscuous giving of honorary degrees.

"Our universities have learned of late," he said, "to distribute honorary degrees judiciously. But in the past—"

He smiled.

"Well, in the past, I met an uncouth person at a dinner, and, being told by an acquaintance that he had three degrees, I asked why it was.

"'Well,' said my friend, 'the third was given him because he had two, the second because he had one, and the first because he had none.'"

ENTIRE FAMILY'S SKIN AFFECTIONS

Mother Suffered Six Years with Eczema—Baby Cured of Heat Rash—Father, Mother, and Child Have Scalp and Hair Troubles.

ALL GIVE THANKS TO CUTICURA REMEDIES

"My wife had eczema for five or six years. It was on her face and would come and go. We had read so much about Cuticura Remedies that we thought we would give them a trial. We did so, and it has now been about four years, and she has never had a sign of eczema since. She also used them both about a year ago for her scalp. She had very thin hair and Cuticura helped her hair greatly. I myself used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment some time ago for falling hair. I now have a very heavy head of hair and it does not fall out. We used Cuticura Remedies for our baby, who was nearly bald when young. She has very nice hair now. She is very fleshy, and we had so much trouble with heat that we would bathe her with Cuticura Soap and then apply Cuticura Ointment, it would dry the heat up so much quicker than anything else. We give thanks to the Cuticura Remedies. Mr. H. B. Springmire, 323 So. Capitol Street, Iowa City, Ia., July 16, 1905 and Sept. 16, 1906."

IT USED TO BE that a woman would clutter up the whole kitchen in baking one batch of pies.

In bringing the material together and "clearing up" she took steps enough to send her to bed.

The pies are just as good as they ever were, but work is lighter, spirits correspondingly brighter and the kitchen kept in spick-and-span order with little trouble.

The Elwell and Hoosier Kitchen Cabinets hold everything you need in cooking and are the most convenient places to work at ever devised.

In hardwood and at different prices at our store.

We invite you to come in and inspect our splendid showings of these fine Cabinets.

MOTHER-IN-LAW CAUSED TROUBLE

Walter Konzak Acquitted of Assault by Jury.

Walter Konzak was tried this morning in municipal court on a charge of wife beating, the complaint being sworn out by his wife, who claims that he beat and bruised her seriously on May 8, last. The jury was out only about ten minutes before bringing in a verdict of not guilty.

It was apparently a case of too much mother-in-law, or at least in interference, whether merited or not, upon the part of Konzak's mother. She kept watch of her daughter-in-law's actions and, according to the statements of the defense, she learned of several flirtations which she had been carrying on with men and promptly informed her son of his wife's indiscretions.

Konzak paid no attention to it at first, but finally, according to his wife's testimony, he confronted her with some of his mother's findings, tied her feet with a rope, threw her to the floor, beat her with a rope's end, and then choked her so hard that the prints of his nails showed on her throat after the operation.

Konzak denied the beating from the start, though admitting that his mother's investigations had brought to light some questionable facts about his wife's behavior. The jury retired about 11:30 and and returned a verdict ten minutes later. Edwin J. Kenny represented Konzak. The couple have been married but a short time.

ARMY AND NAVY UNION ELECTS NEW OFFICERS.

Washington, May 21.—At the national convention of the regular army and navy union here last night Capt. J. B. Morton, Washington, was elected national commander; Capt. James P. Lockwood of Chicago, senior vice, and Dr. John H. Grant, Buffalo, junior vice commanders, respectively; Michael J. Hackett, Washington, adjutant general, and C. J. S. Arey of Chicago, special inspector general.

The next convention will be in Chicago. A message of good will was sent to President Roosevelt.

SALOON TILL WAS RIFLED

Thieves Gain Entrance in Mysterious Manner and Escape.

Frank Berry's saloon at 420 West Superior street was robbed last night after closing hours, and about $34 in change was taken from the till. The thieves covered up their tracks so well that it was impossible to tell where they effected an entrance and the saloon employes think that the men must have adopted the daring expedient of hiding behind a counter or some piece of furniture while the bartender was locking up for the night and then commencing operations after his departure.

The front doors were locked and were found locked this morning, with no trace of any tampering with the locks. The fire escape showed no evidence of having been used to gain an entrance. The back door, however, which is usually secured by placing a heavy stick of wood against it, was unfastened, the block of wood being pushed aside. This could only have been moved from the inside.

The loss was not discovered until the opening hour this morning, when the register was opened, as nothing was broken about the place, and the money had been extracted from the cash drawer of the register without breaking the lock. About $100 was left in the cash drawer by the thieves who seem to have overlooked it in the hurry of the search.

EMIGRANTS OBJECT

To Being Measured by Bertillon System on Their Departure.

Copenhagen, May 21.—The authorities throughout Scandinavia began to measure emigrants by the Bertillon system with instructions from the government, issued at the request of the United States. The proceedings were resented by the emigrants who declared they were not thieves or criminals, but citizens, and thought they were going to a free country. A number demanded the return of the money they had paid for transportation, and it was given to them.

SLIDE OF LAND KILLS MINER

Sakri Korvala, Old Resident of Ely, Loses His Life.

Ely, Minn., May 21.—(Spesial to The Herald.)—Sakri Korvala, a miner, employed in the Pioneer mine, was killed yesterday morning, about 11:30 o'clock. He was working in one of the passages of the mine when the earth caved in and buried him under its weight. His body was recovered early yesterday afternoon.

Kovala was an old resident of Ely. He was unmarried.

AUSTRIAN SHOT IN DRUNKEN ROW

In McKinley Saloon and Urik Podkalmak Held for Murder.

McKinley, Minn., May 21.—As the result of a drunken row over a silver dollar in Mike Ganda's saloon here, Mike Stanish, an Austrian, aged 35, is dead, and Arto Stavoich, another Austrian, has a severe wound in the left arm. Stanish was shot and killed instantly.

Urik Podkalmak also an Austrian, was arrested and taken before Justice Salmon, who held him to the grand jury on a charge of murder in the second degree. The story of an eye witness of the tragedy is that Stanish entered the Ganda saloon shortly after midnight and laid two silver dollars on the bar. A number of his countrymen who were loitering around stepped up and drank with him, the price of the round coming to less than $1. Stanish picked up the change and placed it in his pocket, leaving the other dollar on the bar. While the Austrians were standing around conversing in their native tongue, Podkalmak came into the place, and, it is said, he picked up Stanish's coin and stowed it away in his pocket. A member of the party noticing this, informed Stanish and he demanded his money. After some talk, Podkalmak returned the money.

Later the talk was renewed and became bitter, and finally Arto Stavoich broke into the argument and, according to accounts, dealt Podkalmak a severe jolt on the jaw with his fist which sent Podkalmak reeling through a window. Then, it is alleged, Podkalmak whipped out a 44-calibre revolver and, aiming at Stavoich, shot him in the arm. Stanish, fearing for his life, hastened to get beyond the danger line, but before he could do so, it is alleged, Podkalmak trained the gun on him and sent a bullet crashing into his skull, just back of the right ear. Stanish fell prostrate to the floor, face downward, and never uttered a sound.

Podkalmak rushed from the saloon, but was captured some time later by Village Marshal Grange in a field on the other side of the town.

TWO HARBORS COUNCIL

Condemns Many Sections of Sidewalks After Thorough Inspection.

Two Harbors, Minn., May 21.—At the regular council meeting last evening fifty-six sections of sidewalk were ordered condemned. The inspection made by the committee was a most thorough one, and it is expected that when the new walks are constructed the appearance of the streets will be considerably changed. Louis Homl was awarded the contract for burning at the dumping ground, his bid for the season being $95.

There were seven applications for renewals of liquor licenses.

A. R. Coleman, assistant engineer at the water and light power plant, was appointed chief engineer temporarily to succeed W. C. Irlon.

Bids were opened for a 25-horse power electric motor to run the rock crusher. The lowest bid was that of the Crowley Electric company of Duluth for $505.86. Bids were also opened for a road roller. About a dozen were received, the bids ranging from $1,800 to $3,000. Both these were laid over for a week.

W. C. Irlon, chief engineer of the water and light plant, left Two Harbors about a month ago after telling his friends that he was going to Michigan to visit a sick relative. He has not been seen or heard of since, and it is generally believed that he will not return. He took all his personal effects from both his home and the power station.

About forty delegates will be present. Their purpose is to form a compact district organization, engage a district lecturer, and take a greater hold in political affairs. The present officers of the society are J. E. Isola of Eveleth, president, and T. Hatter of Virginia, secretary. New officers will be elected at the forthcoming meeting.

KILLED ON THE TRACK.

H. Forthwist, While Drunk, Meets Death on Iron Range Road.

McKinley, Minn., May 21. — The mangled remains of H. Forthwist, about 38 years old and father of several children, were found strewn along the Duluth & Iron Range track, near the depot, yesterday.

Coroner H. G. Seeley of Biwabik was notified and he came here and took charge of the remains. The verdict of the coroner's jury was accidental death.

Forthwista nd a companion were drinking heavily in various saloons around McKinley the previous night and the town marshal made them get off the streets. Deceased was watchman for the extra crews that are working out of this village. The dead man's widow and three children reside on a homestead near Tower.

T. F. BERRINGER LEAVES.

Goes From Ely to Portland, Or., to Estimate Timber.

Ely, Minn., May 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—T. F. Berringer, a well known mining man and timber estimator, left yesterday for Portland, Or., to look over and estimate timber lands in that vicinity, belonging to the estate of his late brother. Mr. Berringer for several years has been a resident of Ely, looking after the interests of his brother and Mr. Sibley, who are the lee owners of the Sibley mine here. Although regretting Mr. Berringer's departure, his many Ely friends wish him all prosperity in his new home, where his family will follow in a short time.

The dwelling house of Mrs. Fred Thomas was badly damaged by fire last night. The firemen did excellent work in saving the building, as it was a long run, being on the far outskirts of the city.

MATHIESEN SUSPECTED

afterwards. In all the skull is broken in seven or eight pieces.

The finding of the body of Johnson marks another chapter in the annals of crime in Beltrami county. The murder, with the possible exception of the Dahl case, is one of the most fiendish in the history of crime in Northern Minnesota. The murdered man was an industrious, hardworking individual, who spent his time between improving his homestead in Roseau county during the summer and working in the woods during the winter months. The fact that he was thrifty was his undoing. The $400 certificate of deposit, representing his savings furnishes ample motive for the crime.

Suspicion naturally falls on his companion, Peter Mathiesen, who worked with him, and his representation that Johnson had gone to Crookston and would not return naturally strengthens this suspicion. Should the authorities succeed in locating Mathiesen and he can be identified as the man who cashed Johnson's certificate, the case will be speedily cleared. It is believed that Mathiesen has gone West, and the local authorities are now in communication with officers in the Pacific coast cities.

STEAMER NAOMI BURNED

the screams of the dying men in the hold were heard, but that it was impossible to reach them.

Among the rescued passengers are the following from points outside of Michigan:

James Avery, Tuline, S. D.; Miss Lulu Hanley, Waupaca, Wis.; William Guy, Port Washington, Wis.; William Sherwood, Fargo, N. D.; A. E. Buckford, Green Bay, Wis.; R. F. Payne, Beaver Dam, Wis.; Henry M. Brown, 436 Broadway, Milwaukee; James Darling, 661 Twenty-ninth street, Milwaukee; Perry Hunter, Bremen, Ind.; Gus Behm, 353 Brady street, Milwaukee; Mr. and Mrs. Pringle, Milwaukee; Joseph Heine, 71 East Twelfth street, New York; Mr. and Mrs. P. V. Sanborn, 622 Market street, Kenosha, Wis.; C. F. Schaddy, Milwaukee; Samuel Waterman, 192 Water street, New York; A. Haviland, Bundy, Wis.; G. W. Kellard, Fond du Lac, Wis.; Mrs. J. H. Vansee and daughter, 304 Main street, Racine, Wis.; John Rogers, Minneapolis; C. G. Lachines, Milwaukee.

J. M. Rhoades, Detroit, the only one of the passengers who was seriously injured, was hurried to a hospital at Grand Rapids, as soon as the rescued passengers arrived here. He died there a few hours later. Mr. Rhoades was a lumber expert for the Detroit branch of the Diamond Match company.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 21.—Word was received at the office of the Crosby Transportation company in this city today, confirming the story of the burning of the steamer Naomi, but denying that any lives were lost. The first report stated that three members of the crew were lost, but a later message said that every member of the crew had been accounted for and that all the passengers were saved. No details of the burning of the steamer have been received here, further than that the Naomi was thirty miles from Grand Haven when the fire broke out. The steamer Kerr, a freight boat, assisted the steamer Kansas of the Crosby line, which happened nearby, in the transfer of the passengers, all of whom were taken back to Grand Haven. An effort will be made to tow the Naomi back to Grand Haven. The Naomi was en route from Grand Haven to Milwaukee.

Capt. E. G. Crosby, general manager of the Crosby Transportation company, which owns the steamer Naomi, says that the loss is fully covered by insurance both on the steamer and her cargo. The cargo westbound, the captain says, is usually light. The steamer will be rebuilt as soon as possible. Capt. Crosby says that if the coal passers, whose fate seems in doubt, reached the ballast tanks, they will be perfectly safe, as the heat could not get to them.

SCHOONER BUFFALO LIBELED

Diver Wanless Wants Pay for Damage Done by Vessel's Anchor.

The schooner Buffalo, now in the Duluth harbor, has been libeled by John B. Wanless, the Duluth diver, who demands $2,000 for damages alleged to have been done Nov. 27, last year, to gas and water pipes which he was laying for the city in the bed of the canal.

A contract was made with the city of Duluth by Wanless on May 16, 1906, for connecting Park Point and the city proper with mains. When the work was practically completed and before the city had inspected it the Buffalo left port and before entering the canal, dropped anchor. The anchor broke and damaged the mains to a large extent.

Deputy United States Marshal G. J. Mellory served the libel papers upon the boat yesterday and she cannot leave port until the master places a bond which he is expected to do today.

BEACON NOW LIGHTED.

Keeper of Stannard Rock Reaches His Post at Last.

Word has been received in Duluth that Stannard Rock lighthouse is now in commission after being dark ever since the end of the season last fall. This is the latest date the beacon has gone into service in its many years' history. It was due to the great amount of ice about the base of the light that the light was not in commission three or four weeks ago.

Several attempts had already been made to reach the lighthouse by Keeper Chalmers and his assistants, but they had been unable to surmount the ice at the base of the lighthouse. The last attempt has been successful, however, and the beacon is now lighted every night.

REACHES PORT ARTHUR.

Steamer America Takes Passengers to That Point and Returns.

The steamer America returned this morning from her first trip to Port Arthur. She reached that port in safety and delivered her passengers and cargo of freight. A good list of passengers was brought up from the Canadian Head of the Lakes on the America.

The steamer Pontiac, of the Booth line, left on a special trip with passengers and freight for Port Arthur this morning and it is expected that regular trips can be made to that port hereafter. The Easton will make a through trip and will not stop at any of the north shore points.

At Chicago and Cleveland.

Chicago—Agents with vessels to charter found the grain trade a hard proposition owing to the slack demand. Two or three steamers went over unplaced. Rates were nominally 1¾ cents on corn.

Cleveland—The rate on small coal cargoes to Milwaukee is 50 cents and boats of that class are scarce. Leading shippers, however, will not pay an advance as they have a good supply of contract tonnage. The movement of coal is very heavy and many steel steamers are loading for the head of Lake Superior. There is a big fleet of ore carriers at this end of the route and boats are bunched at some ports. Ore cargoes are offered freely and shipments will be heavier this week.

THE IRISH NATIONALISTS

secretary of the United States Irish league; T. B. Fitzpatrick, treasurer of the league, and Patrick J. Timmins, a members of the executive committee of the league; a venerable man who is pointed out to everyone as John Parnell; Richard Croker, whose close cropped beard is now completely white, and several bishops.

Mr. Redmond, who presided, was greeted with great cheering when he rose to speak. His first words were:

"The heart of every Irishman in the world goes out to John Dillon in the hour of his great affliction."

A resolution of sympathy with Mr. Dillon in the loss of his wife was adopted, as was another for the widow of Michael Davitt, who died since the last convention, and recalling Davitt's imprisonment for Ireland's sake and the good he bore in raising the Irish peasant from a serf to a freeman."

Telegrams of greeting from many Irish societies in America and elsewhere were read. Mr. Redmond then read the resolution on the Irish bill:

"That this convention, representative of Irish national opinion, especially places on record its sound conviction that nothing can satisfy the national association of Ireland or bring peace and contentment to our people but a measure of self government which will give the Irish people complete control of their domestic affairs.

"That, while we have never waivered in our belief that it is impossible to produce any logical or workable scheme for the extension and development of popular power and responsibility in Ireland short of the concession of home rule, in accordance with resolution of the national directors of the fifth of February, 1907, and with the public declarations made from time to time on our behalf, we have been willing to give fair consideration to any scheme prepared by the British ministers which in their opinion would be 'consistent with and lead up to the larger policy,' to which they are pledged;

"That, having considered the Irish counsel bill, introduced by the government, we declare that it is utterly inadequate in its scope and unsatisfactory in its details and should be rejected by the Irish nation, and we regard the production of such a measure by a British government pledged to home rule as confirmation of the position we have always taken—that any attempt to settle the Irish problem by half measures would be entirely unsuccessful and we call upon the Irish party to oppose the bill in the house of commons and press upon the government with all their strength and power, to introduce a measure for the establishment of a native parliament with a responsible executive power over all purely Irish affairs, and at this crisis in the fortunes of Ireland, we invite all the Nationalist forces of the country to unite in support of our representatives in parliament, and enable them to effectively press for the speedy and genuine settlement of the Irish question."

Continuing, Mr. Redmond first denied the claim that he and his colleagues were committed to the bill. On the contrary, he declared, the framers of the measure had refused his advice as to the only safe basis on which the proposed council could be formed. The Irish members of parliament were not committed to any part of the bill or to the government. They had voted for its introduction in order to fulfill their promises and so that the government's proposals might be submitted to the convention.

Summarizing his views Mr. Redmond asserted that the Birrell bill was not workable and therefore would end in a disgrace and disaster; its failure would be used as an argument against Ireland's capacity for self-government and its operation would result in the demoralization of the Nationalist party and the existing unity, which was Ireland's strongest weapon.

Mr. Redmond criticised the details of the financial and other features of the bill as being inadequate when compared with the great power given to the lord liutenant. Government by committee, he said, was unheard of. Knowing the constitution of the British parliament, he knew it was useless to hope to secure satisfactory amendments to the measure.

In conclusion, Mr. Redmond said:

"The Liberal party must drop the Roseberite idea and must come back to the standard of Gladstone. People talked of an alliance of the Irish party with the Liberals. The Irish party is independent. It can have an alliance with no English party that does not put home rule in the front of its platform."

After Mr. Redmond had concluded his remarks, speeches seconding the resolution were matle, A. J. Kettle, a veteran home ruler, was the first speaker, after which John O'Callaghan of the American branch of the Irish league aroused the enthusiasm of the delegates.

"Do you think," he asked, "that the task of Mr. Bryce in America is going to be made any easier because his colleagues have thrown in the face of the Irish people this measure which you will throw in the faces of his colleagues with contempt?"

Continuing, Mr. O'Callaghan, amid great applause, assured the delegates that so long as England gives the Boers more home rule than the Irish, the Irish-American will prevent the alliance with the United States which England greatly desires.

Father David Humphreys, another speaker, proved to be a disturbing element.

"Catholics and Nationalists are the same," he said.

The bill is directed against the Catholic church. It would drive the priests out of the schools and let in the devil. In two generations it would change Ireland into France."

Father Humphrey's speech was interrupted by many cries of dissent, whereupon he shouted that the convention was "packed with Redmond's creatures," and Mr. Redmond compelled him to take his seat for insulting the convention.

Joseph Devlin and Mr. Fitzpatrick of the American branch of the league, spoke, deprecating sectarianism.

Several other speakers followed, chief among them being Frank O'Connell, an Australian member of parliament, who assured the convention of the sympathy of all Australians for home rule, and T. P. O'Connor, M. P., who explained the reasons why the Irish members of parliament distrusted the ministry. He admitted that he had hoped for a time that it might have been amended into an acceptable form, remarked that the Irish members had warned the government that the people would reject such a measure, and said that if all the cabinet ministers were as honest as the prime ministers, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, more would be done for Ireland.

Dr. Timmins of Boston, Mass., the next speaker, scored Father Humphreys for the statements he had made to the convention.

During the delivery of the last few speeches, the delegates were clamoring for a vote on the resolution and finally, at 3 p. m., put the question. There was a tremendous chorus of ayes, and when he asked for those who were opposed to its passage, there was no response.

Then the convention rose, cheered heartily, and the delegates streamed from the hall, leaving only few to transact minor business.

RAILROADS

EXTENSION OF THE SOO

Duluth Line Said to Have Been Abandoned Altogether.

Rumored Road Has a Traffic Agreement With Northern Pacific.

Reports regarding the stopping of work on the Duluth extension of the Soo road have been the cause of a good deal of speculation locally as to the plans of the Soo in this connection. Officials of the road, in giving out the information that nothing more would be done this year toward extending the line to Duluth, allowed it to be understood that later on the original plans would be carried out, but it is now claimed that construction work has been abandoned altogether, for several years at least, as the result of an agreement with the Northern Pacific whereby the latter road will handle all the Soo business into Duluth.

Extending the Soo to the Head of the Lakes would cut extensively into the business of both the Northern Pacific and Great Northern, and these roads are naturally opposed to the appearance of a rival upon the field. The Northern Pacific has a line running from Little Falls, Minn., to Morris, Minn., and it is understood that it has offered to sell the branch to the Soo at a very reasonable figure, on condition that the Duluth extension work be abandoned, and including in the terms of the agreement a contract for handling the Soo business to the Head of the Lakes. The branch in question crosses the main line of the Soo at Glenwood, Minn., and Soo business could readily be transferred at Glenwood and turned over to the Northern Pacific at Little Falls, giving almost a direct haul to the Head of the Lakes. Glenwood is only a few miles north of the point where the extension of the Soo to Duluth was to leave the main line.

Of course, there has been no official announcement that action in this direction will be taken, but the fact that the Soo has apparently decided to abandon work on the Duluth extension, temporarily, at least, lends color to the story. Possibly the work is merely being suspended while the proper amount of consideration is being given any proposition the Northern Pacific may have had to offer, or is yet to offer, and if no satisfactory agreement can be reached, work on the extension will be taken up again. The Morris extension of the Northern Pacific is said to be of no material benefit to the road, because virtually the same territory is tapped by the Great Northern.

SETTLEMENT IN SIGHT.

Morgan May Reach Agreement With Pere Marquette Security Holders.

New York, May 21.—According to the Herald today interests identified with J. P. Morgan and company have admitted that it is not unlikely a settlement may be arranged within a week with the Pere Marquette security holders. Negotiations toward this end have been under way in this city for the last three weeks between George W. Perkins, chairman of the company's directorate and Frederick H. Prince of Boston.

The main features of the arrangement hinged on the government securities made by the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton. When the two railroads were placed in the hands of a receiver in December, 1905, fault was made in the dividend payments, and the Morgan interests began an action to annul the lease of the Pere Marquette by the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton. Several groups of Pere Marquette's stockholders at once formed committees to protect their interests.

When the Morgan group recently made a compromise with William A. Bedford, Jr., and his associates, regarding the Chicago, Cincinnati & Louisville railroad, it was said that the next settlement would be with the Pere Marquette stockholders.

New Car Coupler.

To meet the requirements imposed by the operation of interurban, urban and elevated trains, a new type of car coupler has been invented. No adjustment is required in its operating, except the alignment of drawbars. Backing the cars together engages and firmly locks the couplers, and, as there are no loose parts to be inserted in the coupler, a car cannot, it is said, be left with the coupler in inoperative condition. The whole arrangement is automatic.

TWO WOMEN ACCUSE PASTOR.

Swear Out Warrants Charging That Preacher Slandered Them.

St. Louis, May 21.—Mrs. Matilda Ridenour and Mrs. Dora Murray of Webster Groves, a fashionable suburb of St. Louis, have united to prosecute Rev. A. L. Pritchett, former pastor of the Wellston Park Methodist church, whom they charge with slander, in warrants that have been issued at their instigation.

Mrs. Ridenour alleges that her friendship with Mrs. Murray was almost broken by remarks that the preacher made to her and to Mrs. Murray. She says that he talked to each about the other in uncomplimentary terms.

She also represented to the prosecuting attorney that the minister came near disrupting her home by writing love letters. Harmony was eventually restored in the household. It is said that Mr. and Mrs. Ridenour will sue for $3,500.

SHOULD BE RESPECTED

Old Soldiers Don't Like Ball Games on Memorial Day.

Think More Respect Should be Shown for the Day.

Members of the G. A. R. and the auxiliary organizations are making a protest against the desecration of Memorial day. The old soldiers hold this day more sacred, if anything, than any other day in the year and they do not like to see it used as a holiday, such as the Fourth of July, for the playing of games and sports in general.

Playing baseball games seems to be one of the special evils which the veterans would like to see abolished on Memorial day and they have started a movement which would bring about this end. Although the laws of Minnesota do not prohibit the playing of ball games over half a mile of the place where memorial services are being held, the veterans think that more respect should be shown the day and the memory of the dead soldiers.

At Houghton, Mich., the citizens have taken hold of this matter and it has now been announced that there will be no league games on Memorial day. The managements of the Calumet and Houghton teams have been approached and have promised to call off their games for that date. The opening of the season at Houghton was to have taken place on Memorial day, but owing to the revolt against the desecration of the day by the citizens and military organizations it was decided to postpone the games.

In order that the people of Duluth and the surrounding country know where the law stands in this matter, it has been requested that that portion referring to Memorial day be published. It is as follows:

"Section 1. That the desecration of 'Memorial day,' the thirtieth (30th) day of May of each year, by the playing of games of ball, cricket, football, and other like games, or by horse racing, bicycle racing, automobile racing, or any other sports calculated to attract attention to such games or sports and away from the memorial character of said day, within one-half mile of the place where memorial exercises are in progress, is hereby prohibited and made unlawful during the hours from 10 o'clock in the forenoon to 3 o'clock in the afternoon of said day, and all saloons and other places where intoxicating liquors are sold, shall be closed on said day between the hours of 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 3 o'clock in the afternoon, in all cities, villages and towns where memorial exercises are held.

"Sec. 2. Any person guilty of a violation of section 1 of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and punishable accordingly."

Owing to the location of the baseball park and the time of calling the game, the league contest will not interfere in any way with the Memorial day services, but some of the corner lot games will probably be suppressed.

MONKS REVEL IN CONVENT.

Father John of Cronstadt Under Russian Government Probe.

St. Petersburg, May 21.—Rumors of worldly goings-on in the convents and monasteries of the Russian Orthodox (Greek) church have been so precise and persistent that the government has been forced to take notice of them. By direction of Premier Stolypin an imperial commission has begun an investigation.

Even Father John of Cronstadt, the wonder-working Russian priest, is drawn into the net. In some way not at present known he has become associated with a convent of nuns outside this city. He collected large sums for it, often visited the sisters and was generally responsible for it in the eyes of the public. The convent confessor, Father Vladimir, a nominee of Father John, suspected of numerous irregularities in the convent, has been lodged in a monastery prison pending inquiries by the holy synod.

It seems that while here he made a clean breast of his share in the proceedings and implicated Father John.

The prioress, Mother Angelina, is believed to be a woman of great talent but of an adventurous past. According to the penitent Father Vladimir she was not as strict as she was supposed to be. He tells stories of merriment within the convent walls that are well nigh incredible.

The question the synod is now investigating is whether Father John participated in any improprieties.

DAYS FOR COREY ARE NUMBERED

As Head of United States Steel Corporation Says Rumor.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 21.—The days are numbered for W. E. Corey as president of the United States Steel corporation, if indications are to be considered. There is a growing sentiment among some of the big men in the greatest corporation in the world that it is hardly dignified for such a corporation to have at its titular head a man of the character of Mr. Corey. There was a disposition when his name first became mixed up with that of an actress to overlook the matter and not to interfere with the man's private affairs, but the situation has become so notorious that it is now of international interest. Mr. Corey has gone abroad on his wedding trip, presumably to be gone two or three months, but it is doubtful if he will ever return to occupy the position he holds now. Just what steps will be taken to eliminate President Corey is probably not known, even to those directors and large interests who have come to the conclusion that he must go, but doubtless some diplomatic arrangement will be made, and that, too, while he is abroad, which will result in his quiet resignation. While the sentiment against Corey is not so strong as it was against former President Schwab, it is nevertheless strong enough to cause action in the near future.

While Mr. Corey is the president of the United States Steel corporation, he is, after all, only the nominal head of the same, and his duties and powers are confined almost entirely to the manufacturing operations of the company, with which line he is considered an expert. He has, as president, had little or nothing to do with the finances or other branches of the concern. While Mr. Corey was regarded as an able man in the position he held, it is felt that he is not indispensable, and that there are other experts and able men in the corporation that could well and easily occupy the same position. Incidentally, the name of Henry C. Frick, has been mentioned as one who would make an ideal president, both as to ability and his dignified character. It is doubtful, however, if Mr. Frick could be induced to accept the position, as his own personal interests are so large as to require much, if not all, of his time. E. H. Gary has also been mentioned as a possible successor, but Mr. Gary does not even claim to be an expert in the steel manufacturing line, and his present position of chairman of the board is not only of greater power and influence than the presidency, but much more to his natural ability and business talent. There are several other officers of the corporation, particularly Vice President Gayley and Vice President Dickson, whose names are also mentioned as possible successors to Mr. Corey.

FIGHTS SEED OIL COMBINE

Woman Central Figure in Ruthless War of Oklahoma Ginners.

A Pretty Brunette Shows Old Market Experts a Few Tricks.

Guthrie, Okla., May 21.—Recent developments have brought to light the fact that the central figure in the fight against the so called cotton seed oil trust now being waged in the two territories is a woman who is at the head of the Eastern Oklahoma independent cotton ginners and known throughout the entire new state as one of the most consistent opponents of the trust in the Southwest.

Several years ago Mrs. Frank Sarber of Guthrie became an active buyer of cotton on the streets here. With her father she was a partner in cotton gins at Guthrie, at Ripley and several other points in Eastern Oklahoma and she soon learned the difficulty of operating against the trust cotton seed oil mills which, as a rule, owned and controlled a string of gins throughout their respective territories. She remained active as a cotton buyer until today she is the most active buyer in the Guthrie market and during the season she is a familiar figure also in Stillwater, Cushing, Ripley, Coyle, Chandler, Agra, Stroud and other cotton centers in this locality.

Her most successful season as a buyer, however, was during last summer and autumn, when she began an unrelenting campaign for the purpose of proving that the buyers for the trust gins could not control the market locally no matter with what persistence they attempted it. Her rule for several weeks was to raise the price of cotton 10 cents every morning, maintaining that she would keep it up until the price was staple enough to suit all growers of the fleecy crop.

At the start this campaign was limited only to the Guthrie market, but meeting with success she broadened her operations and set the pace in Cushing and other Eastern Oklahoma towns later in the season. On one occasion she bought every load of cotton marketed in Cushing in one day, outbidding her trust opponents on every load. Her father was in Ripley, paying prices that she had dictated, and to him the local buyers in Cushing wired, informing him that his daughter was ruining the market in that town. But the father did not interfere. The result was that they bought such a volume of the cotton that while their profits per bale were not so large as otherwise, yet the amount they handled made the season the best the independent gins have had since Oklahoma became a cotton producing section.

The cotton was waged merrily here during the season. The ruling price one day was $3 per 100 pounds for seed cotton. Mrs. Sarber promptly opened the next day by paying $3.10. During the day it advanced to $3.30 and she had purchased nearly every load that came to town. By night it had fallen to $3.15 and on the next morning when the trust gins opened the market at $3.05 she immediately placed it at $3.15 and again controlled the market, the price remaining at that figure during the day.

The campaign conducted by a woman buyer soon gave the markets where she operated an importance throughout the entire section of country and it resulted in the farmers often hauling their crop past several buying points to reach a marke twhere she was dictating the prices. To Guthrie came growers not only from this county of Logan, but also from Payne and Lincoln, southern Noble and northern Oklahoma. This condition of affairs made it necessary for the owners of gins in all portions of eastern Oklahoma to meet her rises in order to keep the product at home and, as a consequence, the entire eastern Oklahoma market became the best in the territory.

Such a campaign as this was a surprise to the other buyers, who had been accustomed to an agreement on the price of cotton and making the price for an entire section of the territory, wring it out to whereever the buyers had gins located. As a result they were always at sea, wondering what the woman buyer would do next in advancing the price. And she enjoyed the war immensely. She has become an excellent judge of the grade of cotton and when she pulls a handful of the fleecy staple from a farmer's wagon she can tell in a moment the grade of the cotton and the price she can afford to pay.

One of her deals of last summer of which she was particularly proud resulted in a victory over one of the pioneers in the cotton business in Oklahoma, by which she sold to him all the cotton she had on hand for that day and cleaned up a margin of several hundred dollars. She learned in some manner that he was offering a price greater than she had paid for her holdings, and, meeting him on the street, she closed out to him everything she had on hand for that day. Later he learned that he had been misinformed regarding the true export price for cotton early in the day, and he awakened to the fact that the error had cost him several hundred dollars and that he had been outgeneraled by his woman opponent.

Successful in thus being able to control the price of cotton and make the independent gins also independent financially, Mrs. Sarber began looking for larger game and the result was the organization of the independent cotton ginners of Eastern Oklahoma. It was ascertained that the owners of the trust gins were strong all along the line, at cotton seed oil mills, at compresses and in some instances with the railroads, and an organization of the ginners became necessary to protect their interests not against the growers but against the trust and the result is today over fifty gins in Eastern Oklahoma are represented in this independent organization.

Still not satisfied and wishing a mill where they could obtain a better price for their cotton seed, Mrs. Sarber and her confederates, including the owners of all the gins in the independent cotton organization, launched a campaign to build an independent cotton seed oil mill. A charter was obtained with $50,000,000 capital stock and a fiercer fight than ever was in progress. At first the independents chose Cushing as the location of the mill; immediately the trust ginners bought ground at Cushing to locate a mill also and to fight the independents.

It was then that Mrs. Sarber became the central figure in the fight which has resulted in a federal investigation of the cotton seed oil trust and the Society of Plato, the alleged fraternal organization, to which dealers in cotton and cotton products belong, especially the owners of cotton seed oil mills. Already there were two big oil mills in Guthrie, but Mrs. Sarber switched the scene of operations of the independents from Cushing to this city and announced the intention of locating the independent mill here. Personally she is soliciting stock subscriptions from the business men of Guthrie and the first day out she obtained four $500 subscriptions and ten $100 men on her list.

She has announced that the mill will be built. The merchants of Guthrie, remembering her cotton-buying campaign of last summer, when the prices she offered brought the growers here from a distance of fifty miles and made trade good, are subscribing for the stock in the mill, although she finds that many of them have been told by trust representatives that it will not be a paying proposition and "that three mills in one town cannot be made to pay." They are subscribing, nevertheless, as they have confidence in the woman who is conducting the campaign.

Mrs. Sarber, now called the "cotton queen," is a handsome brunette, very prominent in social circles and is a talented musician. She became a cotton buyer and later a cotton enthusiast by associations with her father, who has been a local cotton dealer for a number of years. She found that she liked the business, then later that it was difficult to secure business with the trust dictating prices, and she then began her campaign against it.

TWO VINITA BANKS

Short $19,000 by the Alleged Defaulting of Their Cashiers.

Muskogee, I. T., May 21.—Because of the alleged defaulting of cashierss, two national banks of Vinita have lost approximately $19,000. W. P. Phillips, cashier of the First National bank at Vinita, has been indicted at Nowata because it is alleged he was short in his accounts to the amount of $8,600. Phillips went to Mexico, his friends making good the shortage and even business men in Vinita did not know of the affair until the report of the grand jury was made public.

J. F. Quillian, casher of the Vinita National bank, is under guard at his home and ill from the effects of carbolic acid taken with suicidal intent immediately after Bank Examiner Hale began an investigation of the condition of the bank. It is stated that the bank examiner found a deficit of $10,000.

Relief from Rheumatic Pains.

"I suffered with rheumatism for over two years," says Mr. Rolland Curry, a patrolman, of Key West, Fla. "Sometimes it settled in my knees and lamed me so I could hardly walk, at other times it would be in my feet and hands so I was incapacitated for duty. One night when I was in severe pain, and lame from it, my wife went to the drug store here and came back with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I was rubbed with it and found the pain had nearly gone during the night. I kept on using it for a little more than two weeks and found that it drove the rheumatism away. I have not had any trouble from that disease for over three months." For sale by all druggists.

PROPOSED PARK BONDS.

The proposal made at a meeting of the park commission yesterday afternoon, when members of the city council and several citizens were present, that the city issue $50,000 in bonds for park purposes, is worth thinking upon.

It has two sides, of course. On the one side is the great value of parks in municipal life, the fact that Duluth has not nearly so much park area as it should have, and the further fact that now is the time to buy the sites for additional parks if they are ever to be bought, while property is comparatively cheap but likely at any moment to increase very materially in value.

On the other side is the fact that the city is now encumbered by a rather large bonded indebtedness, though a large share of this is due to municipal water and lighting plants that are self-sustaining. This makes it necessary to consider the plan very carefully before action is taken.

Duluth needs more parks, and now is the time to buy the ground on which they are to be located. The question for the people of Duluth to consider, therefore, is whether they want to go into debt for them. One good argument in favor of the plan is that beyond question the increase in the value of property purchased now will far more than offset the cost of issuing and paying interest upon bonds.

The Herald will be glad to hear from citizens who have ideas upon this subject, for it is eminently worthy of the consideration of every public-spirited resident of the city.

IRREPRESSIBLE POLITICS.

It's all very well to protest against inflicting the presidential campaign upon the people a year before the time is ripe for it, but it is so much wasted breath. You can no more prevent ambitious candidates from sidling into the race track and hitching their lightning rods up in conspicuous places than you can stop their equally ambitious friends from talking them up and beginning to lay the wires for their presidential booms.

The presidential campaign is on right now, and it is going to be on, with very little cessation, until a year from next November, when it will be off for about three years more. Taft, impelled by his friend and mentor the president, is at least a tacit candidate for the Republican nomination. Fairbanks of Indiana is, with more or less dignity, hustling, through his friends of the reactionary class, for delegates. Cannon is standing by not without some evidences of expectancy, and Foraker, hopeless as his cause must be, views the growth of Taft sentiment in Ohio with no attempt whatever to conceal his resentment.

On the Democratic side there is less doing. Bryan is still much before the public eye, a position that he has not abandoned for some years, though probably it is not entirely a situation of his own choosing. While Governor Johnson of Minnesota is sensibly saying nothing and sawing wood, the elements of availability that surround him are appealing to an ever-widening circle in the Democratic party.

Unless, by some unexpected accident, matters should so shape themselves that the choice of both of the great parties should be definitely fixed in the near future, these conditions will continue until the conventions are held next year, after which the presidential battle before the people will be on in real earnest. In the meantime the situation will shift, no doubt, many times, and no man can tell what the intervening months may bring forth.

One thing that is certain to perpetuate presidential politics is that a number of the states have elections this year, and nearly all of them will have more or less bearing upon the politics of 1908. Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Maryland, South Carolina, Mississippi and Kentucky elect governors this fall. All of these states have Democratic governors now except New Jersey and Massachusetts, and the Democrats have hopes of gaining these states as well this year.

So those that long for a seasonable interval of quiet between campaigns may as well resign themselves to the fact that the presidential campaign is on, and accept the situation with such grace as they may be able to command.

CORN AS FOOD.

The United States department of agriculture is considering ways and means of teaching us to make a larger use of corn as human food, instead of letting so much of it go to our stock, and the enterprise is undoubtedly meritorious.

It is stated on good authority that while practically all of the wheat grown in this country is consumed by human beings, less than one bushel of corn in fifty is converted into a table article. A bulletin issued by the department informs us that cornmeal has three times as much oil as wheat flour and is much more nutritious, while the corn products are much more digestible than is generally supposed. Again, and perhaps more important still to a large element in the population, corn is cheaper and is more readily converted into palatable food than other cereals.

Corn and corn products, while staple articles of diet in parts of the South, are only incidentals on the tables of most Northern homes. Corn pone and hoe cake, properly made from meal properly ground, are among the best articles of diet provided in the Southland, with its fatal addiction to fried foods. "Johnny cake," otherwise known as corn bread, is a Northern staple, but it probably does not make its appearance on the average table oftener than twice a month.

Hominy and "grits," forms of prepared corn, are more or less common, but not a single variety of food products made from corn is half so common as the most infrequent variety of food derived from wheat. Even oats, unsatisfactory and indigestible and poor in nutrition as they are, will be found more frequently in the average household.

Some years ago the department of agriculture sent a man from Iowa, who gained the name of "Hoe Cake Murphy," on a tour of the world to initiate the natives of various benighted lands into the delicacies of corn products. His trip was successful, and it has resulted in an increase in the foreign demand for corn. Now, however, the department has discovered that this country needs such missionary work quite as much as most foreign lands, and therefore it is considering plans for a corn campaign throughout the United States.

Most of our corn now goes to the hogs, and we eat it in the form of pork, providing we like pork and our stomachs will let us consume it. Corn in the form of hominy, cornbread, hoe cake or pones is certainly much more easily digested, probably more nutritious, and easily more economical than when eaten in the form of pork.

Corn is good, wholesome, nourishing and digestible food, providing it is properly prepared, and that proviso applies to every article of food that requires cooking. There is nothing so good that bad cooking will not make it evil and dangerous.

THE POINT OF ROCKS.

It was a wise decision the city council made last night to spend $1,500 of the city's money to put the Point of Rocks in a safe condition.

It would have been a very poor piece of economy to postpone this action for the sake of saving the money. The city can hardly afford to perpetuate a condition so full of danger, for the evil results of which it might be held responsible in the personal injury courts.

Besides, those whose business compels them to pass this dangerous spot are entitled to the protection of the city, which should make the place safe if it permits people to pass by it.

It has been evident to all who have passed that way for several years that there was grave danger from the overhanging rocks, and the danger has increased steadily as crevices widened and the precarious situation of partially loosened rocks became still more precarious.

The city is extremely fortunate that no serious accidents have occurred, and that up to this time no human lives have been sacrificed.

THE WHEAT SITUATION.

Many still seem to be laboring under the impression that the backward spring in the Northwest is mainly responsible for the boom in wheat prices, when as a matter of fact the conditions affecting the market are more or less world wide. The Northwest has still an excellent chance of raising a good crop of wheat, and if it does it is pretty certain to get good prices for it, which means additional prosperity for this section, though necessarily at the expense of other wheat-growing regions.

The real occasion for the advance in the price of wheat is that there is a well-founded belief that this year's crop of wheat will fall below the world's demand. This is based on authoritative reports from all wheat-consuming countries except France, and even in France a prolonged drought has given rise to fear of a short crop. The yield of wheat in Russia will be very far below the average, while in Germany, Hungary and Roumania the anticipated shortage is something like 40 per cent. In parts of Bulgaria it seems likely to be 80 per cent. Germany, which has lately sold wheat destined for the famine-stricken districts of Russia, is now making large purchases of Argentine and Australian grain, for which Italy and the United Kingdom are competitors.

As the supplies from India are small, it is said that the United States may look forward to being the dictator of the prices in the world's wheat market for some months to come.

The New York Sun points out the following facts as bearing on the situation: In 1905 the world produced 3,337,400,000 bushels of wheat. To this aggregate, considering only countries that have a surplus for export, Australia contributed 65,626,000 bushels, Roumania 100,000,000 bushels, Canada 113,022,000 bushels, Argentina 150,745,000 bushels, Russia about 560,000,000 bushels, and the United States 692,979,000 bushels. This year it seems likely that Russia, Roumania and Hungary will have no wheat to export, and that the only competitors of this country will be British India, Canada and Argentina.

If our supplies are also short, as they seem certain to be, we shall be able to do much less than in 1905 to remedy the world's shortage, and it might even be that we shall consume all we raise.

Indeed, it is becoming evident that this country will not much longer be an exporter of wheat, and that wheat-consuming nations will soon have to look elsewhere for their supplies. The Sun says that the day seems fast approaching when in normal years the whole of our wheat crop will be needed for home consumption. A Duluth grain man with a wide and comprehensive knowledge of conditions lately stated that in ten years this country will cease exporting wheat, and that he would not be surprised to see it happen in five years.

The Long Prairie Argus says that in the report of the committee which investigated the Duluth board of trade it "finds no mention of the fact that the board refused to admit the Farmers' exchange to membership." That is not strange, since it is distinctly not a fact

"A man who can appreciate a humorous situation, even though it results from a predicament he may find himself in, gets a lot more enjoyment out of life than a man who cannot appreciate such things when the joke is on him, and by the same token a man who is at all interested in the various sides of human nature doesn't get so tired of his work as the fellow who has no such interest," said C. H. Bird of Chicago at the Spalding.

"Nowhere is this shown more clearly than with the commercial travelers. We run up against some pretty hard propositions once in a while, and if we aren't careful, are apt to get either pretty mad or pretty discouraged; but if we can see the funny side of things, and get any amusement out of observing human nature, we find our business more pleasant than would otherwise be the case. There are all sorts of people in the world, and I guess the commercial traveler is in about as good a position as any one else to find this out for himself.

"It has been my experience that the higher up a man is in public life, where he has reached his position through merit alone, the better and more decently he will treat everybody with whom he comes in contact, including the man who is trying to sell him something, even if that man is only a book agent. A person might just as well be a gentleman. It pays better in the long run.

"When I run against a man for the first time and try to sell him something, it doesn't take me long to size him up. Usually, the less importance he is in the world, and the smaller his stock of goods, the worse he will treat me. The little toads seem to think it cute to act curt when a traveling man comes around, and give him the cold turn down merely for effect, not knowing they are hurting themselves more than any one else by doing this.

"If I ever get in business, it will be my policy to treat all salesmen with respect and consideration, and give them enough of my time to find out what they have to offer, and whether it will be to my interests to handle anything they have to sell. I will always be ready to listen to a man, even though I think I have all the stock in his line I need. The dealer who does this not only earns the friendship of the traveling men and puts himself in a position to get the best there is in the way of bargains, but he is continually hitting upon ideas that can be worked out with profit to himself. The little two-by-fours who as good as kick the salesman out of their stores, get the worst of the deal right along, and, as their attitude in such matters usually is a criterion by which their general characters and business abilities may be judged, generally is a safe bet that they always will be true of two-by-fours, with slight chance of building up a business institution of respectable size. Of course, there are exceptions, but very few, comparatively speaking."

"A good many people do not know that rice is grown in the United States," said N. L. Hunter of Cleveland, Ohio, at the Lenox. "In Texas immense crops of the cereal are harvested every year. As a matter of fact, the state has a larger acreage of rice fields than any other one section in the world, and this acreage is being increased right along. Lands hitherto supposed to be valuable only for pasturage are being plowed up and put into rice, and the crop in found to be a very profitable one.

"The cereal is grown for the most part along the gulf coast, where conditions are particularly adapted to growing it. And the rice fields are not the only attraction. I visited a brother of mine for six months on his farm on the gulf coast of Texas, and fell quite in love with the country. It is a country of almost perpetual summer. Thanks to the gulf breezes, the summer heat is not oppressive, and the nights are always comfortable.

"I saw cotton growing there for the first time in my life, and had the pleasure of picking figs from the trees. The cattle industry is still an important one through that region, in spite of the many rich farms. My brother is not restricted to one crop a season, or two, but he makes his land return him a dividend every three or four months. He raises strawberries in connection with other things, and markets them in January and February. Think of having all the strawberries you want, freshly picked in January and February. I lounged around and ate so much that I gained twenty pounds.

THE WEATHER.

Early this morning the sun shone brilliantly, and the outlook was for a fine day, but a little later clouds obscured the sky, the wind acquired a touch of chilliness as it veered toward the east, and at times conditions even threatened showers. Still, it was by no means unpleasant, and the temperature was mild. The weather man expects northerly winds and showers tonight and tomorrow, which sounds suspiciously like a northeaster, except that the wind is not expected to be strong.

A year ago today it was cloudy, foggy and raining.

The sun rose at 4:25 this morning, and sets at 7:46 tonight, making 15 hours and 18 minutes of sunlight.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Light rains fell during Monday or last night in North Atlantic states and the Northwest due to slight barometric depressions, central off the New England coast and over the Rocky mountains. It is also somewhat warmer from Kansas northward to Manitoba. Rising pressures in extreme Eastern states and the plateau region are attended by cooler weather in those districts. Temperatures are generally moderate. The easterly movement of the Alberta and Utah disturbances will doubtless cause rain northeasterly winds and cool temperature in this locality tonight and Wednesday."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Walker Pilot: It took over a column of type to tell of the birth of a son to the queen of Spain. A two line local in the Pilot has chronicled the arrival of several Walker youngsters whose future probably contains as much happiness as that of the young prince.

Virginia Virginian: Dollar wheat. That sounds good to the many farmers in the Northwest who were unable to dispose of their wheat last fall owing to the shortage of cars on the Western railroads.

Virginia Enterprise: The graduate looks longingly ahead to the intervening weeks, and plans for a brilliant future. But nobody knows what is in him until he gets down to hard work and mines the claim.

Hibbing Tribune: What the Republican party wants next time is a governor who can run; most anybody can hang on behind.

Albert Lea Tribune: Many kind things are being said of Frank B. Kellogg in his work for the rounding up of the Harriman railroad deals and the mention of his name for attorney general of the United States has been heartily seconded by many Minnesota papers. He is a brilliant lawyer and has won his spurs by hard and persistent work.

Hallock News: It gives us pleasure to correct a misstatement made in these columns two weeks ago. We stated that Prof. Frank L. McVey, appointed as a member of the state tax commission, is a Democrat. This is wrong. He is and always has been a Republican, and we cheerfully make the correction. This also prompts us to state that Governor Johnson is in this connection entitled to special credit for forgetting politics long enough to appoint two excellent Republicans to one Democrat on an important commission like this.

International Falls Press: People who live in the country and country towns may find it a little dull for amusement but it is conceded by all that the country people breathe pure air, eat wholesome food and sleep at night, have cooler heads and better judgment than the people of a crowded city.

Mankato Free Press: Who's the fellow that has delivered Minnesota to Taft without the people being consulted? Who's who?

Warren Register: A few Northern Minnesota papers are advocating state division. Nothing is likely to ever come of it, for a variety of reasons. It is true that Minnesota is considerably larger in area than many of the other states of the union, but if it were cut in two each state that resulted would be among the smallest. While there would be an additional set of state officers to be chosen and many other new political jobs to scramble for, besides another state capitol to erect, it is not quite plain wherein any part of the state would be benefited by division. In Texas, the largest of all the states, there is practically no sentiment in favor of cutting that vast empire up into several states.

WATTERSON'S DARK HORSE.

Kansas City Times: But who is this "dark horse?" Why keep him under cover? If he is the right sort he will improve with the exercise he would get in coming into the open. Let no one despise Mr. Watterson's claim. The colonel is from Kentucky, and all Kentuckians are good judges of running stock.

Washington Star: If Mr. Bryan will withdraw, Mr. Watterson has a dark horse, sound of wind and limb, which he will enter for the presidential stakes and guarantee that he takes them. He does not name him, but as a proposition is interesting and guessing a high privilege, the Star will make a guess. What is the matter with the Hon. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois? What Democrat dares say that he is not all right?

New York Sun: The Wattersonian method of locating a candidate at least has the merit of novelty. If Mr. Bryan would really care to see one, if he is genuinely interested, Mr. Watterson will gladly show him a guaranteed Democratic eligible for 1908. No names are mentioned. All is fascinating mystery. Geographically, Mr. Watterson stakes his man out in the true fashion of the ancient parchment key to buried treasure:

"He does not live east of the Alleghanies nor south of the Potomac and the Ohio."

Mr. Bryan has but to say the word and an experienced guide in coonskin cap, a Democratic Daniel Boone, awaits him at Louisville. We suspect, however, that Mr. Bryan will answer in kind, and since riddles are getting popular speak thus:

My first is in Bull, but not in calf;
My second's in Roar, but not in laugh;
My third is in Yap, but not in chump;
My fourth is in Ache, but not in bump;
My fifth's in Noddle, but not in pate,
My whole is the name of my candidate."

Should this prove too difficult of solution Mr. Bryan will simplify matters and still preserve the delightful pleasantry of the puzzle department—by proclaiming the presence of a true and tried candidate who is bounded on the north by South Dakota and the Initiative, on the east by Iowa and the Referendum, on the south by Missouri and Anti-injunction, and on the west by Wyoming and Government ownership of railroads.

Washington Post: A deal of speculation is indulged as to the personality of Mr. Watterson's 'dark horse, who comes from west of the Alleghanies and north of the Ohio. He also voted for Bryan in 1896. "North of the Ohio," we take it, eliminates the South, including the former slave states of the trans-Mississippi. As nothing Democratic can exist between the Mississippi and the Pacific that is north of Mason and Dixie's line we may also rub that vast region out of the calculation. Thus we may search for Mr. Watterson's dark horse in the four states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin, since Don Dickinson of Michigan, doesn't count in Democratic circles.

Boston Transcript: Col. Watterson won't tell the name of the Democrat who he "knows could be elected president." Why so modest, Colonel?

Mankato Free Press: The man of mystery—the fellow who wore a mustache three years ago. Who is he? Watterson knows and he is keeping the secret to himself. Who is a good guesser? The Louisville editor has sprung a political puzzle, and the b'hoys are trying to solve it.

New York World: Governor Johnson of Minnesota, who carried that state as a Democrat by 26,823 votes in 1906, where Roosevelt in 1904 carried it by 161,464, meets the Watterson geographical conditions. But so do something like a million others.

Philadelphia Telegraph: There are not many Democrats who could be accredited by the public with all the high qualities attributed to him by the Courier-Journal, and a sharp course of elimination might readily reveal the names of the very few who could be held as sizing up to the requirements of the situation, but Col. Watterson is evidently enjoying his little excursion into the region of the occult and it would be an ungracious act to interfere with his pleasures. When he gets good and ready he will no doubt enjoy much satisfaction in revealing the winning name of his candidate to the readers of the Courier-Journal and to the Democratic public. Meanwhile outsiders can amuse themselves in a guessing contest if inclined. Puzzle—to find Watterson's unknown.

CUT DOWN THE ROCKS

Council Makes Appropriation for Purpose After Debate.

Volk Franchise for Suburban Trolley Line is Discussed.

The council last evening:

Appropriated $1,500 to cut down the Point of Rocks and $750 to place the rock on St. Croix avenue.

Discussed the Volk street car franchise and received a communication from A. C. Volk & Co.

Ordered a report on the feasibility of making a power plant out of the garbage incinerator for the purpose of cutting down the Point of Rocks.

Discussed the Piedmont avenue street car extension.

Ordered the big sewer system on Park Point constructed.

Ordered the Pringle Gas company's mains condemned.

Directed estimates for the Wrenshall road work by the city engineer.

Received a report on the condition of the permanent improvement fund.

Directed an examination and estimate on the cost of enlarging the Garfield avenue water mains by the water and light board.

After a heated discussion, the council last evening appropriated $1,500 to be expended in cutting down the Point of Rocks as recommended by the engineer, and $750 for placing the rock on the lake front along the exposed places on St. Croix avenue at the foot of Morse street and just below the ice house, where the lake is making serious inroads upon it at every storm.

The engineer's recommendation called for an expenditure of $2,000 on the Point of Rocks and $1,000 in placing the rock on St. Croix avenue. Aldermen Wilson and Getchell led the opposition to this move and wanted the motion providing for such an appropriation amended so as to cut the appropriation in half. They pointed out that the expenditure of $2,000 might not make the rock any safer than at present, and Alderman Wilson recommended that half that amount be expended there, with instructions to the city engineer to report any further need when this had been expended.

"The reason this thing comes up every spring," said Mr. Wilson, "is not so much because we are convinced that there is danger there as because we feel that something might happen and not one of us dare to oppose a move to remove danger.

"We ought to make a small appropriation at this time, enough to make it safe, and then the proposition ought to be put up to the conference committee. If they fail to make an appropriation to secure the safety of the point the responsibility will rest where it belongs. Now the council is ground between two mill stones, the lack of funds and the fear of responsibility should anything happen at the Point of Rocks."

A compromise was finally suggested by Alderman McEwen whereby three-fourths of the amount recommended in the report of the committee should be spent on the work of removing dangerous portions of the Point of Rocks and in guarding St. Croix avenue from the inroads of the lake.

In response to the recent agitation started by Alderman Poubister of West Duluth in regard to knocking out the Volk street car franchise for a line between West Duluth and New Duluth, the following letter was received from the real estate company last evening:

"The firm of A. C. Volk & Co. are now and at all times have been ready to assign said franchise to the Duluth Street Railway company or to any other responsible company if they would agree and guarantee to build the line, and this we are willing to do without any profit to A. C. Volk & Co.

"We would also add that negotiations which will result in the building of this line are in a fair way to be completed at an early day. The greatest difficulties we are encountering are that none of the bridges are capable of sustaining the weights of cars and the county road is not graded to permit building a line. It would be well for the members of the council to take up this matter of repairing the bridges and grading the roadway and suggest some method whereby this could be done."

City Attorney Fesler stated in most positive terms that the franchise could not be revoked and that it was foolishness to attempt such a move. The provisions of the franchise which call for the road being graded by the city ninety days before the line is commenced have not been complied with and this releases the company from all other obligations. Mr. Fesler said he had not the slightest doubt that if he could convince the real estate company that he represented a company which would put the line through at once, he could get the franchise gratis from A. C. Volk & Co.

Alderman Poubister was rather inclined to believe that the franchise could be knocked out in spite of the opinion of the city attorney, and instead of withdrawing his motion held it over for another week while he looked into the matter more fully.

The assurance in the letter that negotiations which would result in the building of the line were in a fair way to be completed, was received with pleasure by the council.

As a result of two motions introduced by Alderman W. E. McEwen last evening the garbage question is hovering over the council again and may be taken up within the next two or three weeks in earnest.

One of the motions provided for a report by the city engineer on the expense and feasibility of converting the city incinerator at Fourteenth avenue west into a power plant by placing a boiler over the garbage burning chamber for the generation of steam, a report on the extra amount of coal which would have to be burned with the garbage under these conditions, a report on the practicability of carrying this steam to the point of rocks where it is to be used on drills and rock crushing plants, and a report upon the comparative cost of securing the same power from the Great Northern Power company.

Mr. McEwen, in support of his motion, outlined a most elaborate scheme. He pointed out that a recent decision by Judge Dibbell had made it possible for the city to sell such rock, and proposed a garbage commission, composed along the same lines as the water and light commission, to take charge of the proposed rock crushing work at the Point of Rocks and to gain what revenue it could from the rock quarrying business at this point. This would have the effect not only of getting the rock out so as to open Superior street through the Point of Rocks, but would accomplish it practically without expense. The cost of street improvements would also be greatly reduced, according to the alderman's plan, by the resulting cheapness in the cost of rock crushing.

The plan also includes the systematic collection of garbage under the direction of the garbage commission, a small fee to be charged to the citizens for the privilege of having their garbage carted away. This might be done either by contract or by day labor under the management of a capable department manager.

In view of carrying out this portion of the plan the health officer was directed to report to the council at its next meeting regarding the cost of ten sanitary garbage wagons.

It was unofficially intimated at the council meeting last evening that the Piedmont avenue street car extension, from Third street to Twenty-fourth avenue west, was very likely to be looked upon very favorably by the street car company and might, in fact, become a reality before very long.

The city engineer reported that the West Fourth street extension, proposed by Alderman W. E. McEwen, was impractical on account of the grades, but that the Piedmont avenue extension was thoroughly practical and should be made. Alderman Kennedy then introduced a resolution providing for a plat of the grades on Piedmont avenue along the line of the proposed extension. He stated after the meeting that there was every reason to expect that, if the grades were shown to be practical, such an extension would be made.

This permanent improvement fund is decidedly poverty stricken, according to the report of the finance committee last night. As far as can be seen now there will be $9,960.41 to the credit of the fund at the so-called "June settlement" in August, while about $11,100 is to be paid out of it before that time. The deficit may not cause much trouble, however, as certain bills may be held until the November settlement, but last night's appropriation for the Point of Rocks is likely to leave it still further in the hole. Improvements to Mesaba avenue, the Lester river bridge, London road and Grand avenue west, aggregating $34,250, are much needed but cannot be considered, according to the committee's report.

On a motion by Alderman Staples the water and light board was directed to report on the cost of replacing the six-inch main on lower Garfield avenue by a twelve-inch main, and upon some way by which the fire hydrants need not be used for sprinkling purposes and should be confined to fire use only.

Alderman Getchell introduced a motion calling for estimates by the city engineer on certain road and dock work which would be necessary for the completion of the Wrenshall road within the city limits. It was passed.

The board of public works reported that they had examined the petition for the Park Point sewer system and found it conformed to the requirements of the charter. The council then ordered the work done. This is the biggest sewer job of the year. It will cost $19,759.85, according to the engineer's estimate and will extend from Pine street to St. Charles street on Minnesota avenue. The hydraulic sewer ejectors will be used along the line of the sewer.

The board of public works reported that R. B. Jennings had been selected to officiate as city electrician at a salary of $125 per month, his duties to commence June 1 next.

On a motion by Alderman McEwen the mayor was directed to appoint a committee of five of which he is to be chairman to arrange for the annual meeting of the Minnesota Municipal and Commercial leagues to be held here in July, and to work with the Commercial club in making their stay here a pleasant one.

Mayor George E. Buis of Grand Forks, with his delegation of councilmen from the Dakota town were present at the council meeting last evening, and spoke several minutes at the request of President Troesman. He assured the council that the city of Grand Forks entertained the friendliest of feelings toward Duluth and while the larger portion of its business was now going toward the Twin Cities he felt that it would soon swing to Duluth. He pointed out that Duluth did not advertise as much as she ought and that she should be one of the big centers for the manufacture of farm machinery, taking this business away from Minneapolis. That the city would do this when the steel plant was put in operation here, he said, was probable. He closed his talk with a hearty invitation to the Duluth councilmen to visit Grand Forks.

Alderman W. E. McEwen responded eloquently in a speech where he promised the Dakota mayor that Duluth would fully come up to his expectations for the future and that with increased railroad facilities and magnificent shipping facilities, she would soon usurp the position now held by the Twin Cities as the distributing point for the richest farming district in the world.

The council directed the city attorney to proceed with an action to condemn the Pringle water and gas mains, ignoring the proposition to lease them. The mains line in First alley from Fifth avenue west to First avenue east.

The ordinance providing for the extension of the fire limits from Second alley to Second street between Third and Fifth avenues was given its second reading and passed last evening. This ordinance is designed to protect the new courthouse site.

The council voted to accept the invitation extended to them by President Crumpton of the Superior city council to attend their meeting this evening and they will take the 7:30 train across the bay.

THE SKIN

Is It Not Humiliating to Show a Face Marked with Skin Disease.

It seems to be one of the penalties of skin disease that it usually appears where everybody can see it. If not at first, it sooner or later reaches the hands and face.

Perhaps you have dosed your stomach in an effort to find a cure. If so, you have been a victim of error. Real skin disease is SKIN disease—a disease confined to the skin, and the general health may not be affected. If the general health is affected at all, it is because the victim was lured on by internal treatment. Don't worry your stomach any more. Don't smear yourself with nasty salves.

"I tried the family doctor for a long time without results, and tried ever so many remedies, but all failed," writes Mrs. George Valentin of Pinckneyville, Perry county, Ill. "Then a friend asked me to try D. D. D., and thanks to the D. D. D. Co. my limb is all healed up."

The only way to cure the skin is THROUGH the skin, and in order that the healing agents may penetrate perfectly, the remedy should be a liquid, not a salve. This is now pretty well understood in medical science and the claims of the original and the true scientific remedy for eczematous diseases—D. D. D. Prescription—are now recognized.

You can get D. D. D. Prescription as well as D. D. D. soap, that mild cleanser, from the Lyceum Pharmacy, in this town. Apply a few drops of the prescription and INSTANTLY the itch is gone. A single trial will prove it—that itch gone!

A Guilty Conscience

By the strenuous protestations of honesty made by a certain furniture store in this city one cannot help wondering if their conscience is worrying them. First they tell you they are honest because they mark their goods in plain figures. Well, this store has marked its goods in plain figures for 21 years. Then they tell you they do not sell you a $40.00 article for $25.00. Well, to our own certain knowledge they have never been accused of this by any one. Then, too, when Kelly quotes a price they fall over themselves trying to get a price to put in the paper a few cents less than our price. Quite a compliment to the leadership of this store. It is strange how the attitude of a store will change when they cease to be the "Leaders."

GAMES TODAY.

Calumet at Winnipeg.

Kaiser, the long boy whom the Sox chased to the bench last Friday, came back at Smith's men yesterday and gained the first victory of the season for Houghton by a score of 3 to 2. That is, he did his part, but he was ably assisted by Jimmy Fagin, who performs around the third sack for Duluth, and likewise by John Sundheim, who came to the fore with a stinging two-sacker in the third. Kaiser started out badly, for a wild pitch let in a run in the second, and he started another man around the circuit in the third. But after that the Sox didn't get a look at the money. Kaiser was working like a windmill before a nor'easter, and the Sox stood up in order and were blown down. Josie Krick was the only Duluth boy who attempted to start anything, for he had the temerity to beat out a slow one to Bitting in the eighth. The three men following him frowned on such efforts, however, and went the way of the many before them.

Krick had the unenviable distinction of being the first Duluth pitcher to lose a game this year. At that, he did some great work, for he was worked into a hole several times by errors behind him and the Giants' sticking. He contributed to the victory of the men from Michigan by missing a bunt in the third inning, but it was a hard chance. That error and Jimmy Fagin's bum chuck gave the Giants too much of a start on the right side for the weak sticking of the Sox to overcome.

The Giants showed much better form than they did in the preceding three games. They fielded cleanly after the third inning, and Sundheim's timely two-sacker did irreparable damage to the cause of the Sox. Little Bitings at short was all to the good, and he stowed away some hard chances. Fagin was the principal offender behind Krick. He took unto himself three of the quintet of bungles with which the Sox are credited, and one of them counted in the run-getting.

Jack Nolan's work was again to the bad in several cases. The game was an easy one to umpire, in a way, for most of the men went down with no chance for an error on the umpire's part. But on balls and strikes he was away off several times.

The first three men on both sides went down in the first inning, but in the second the Giants and Jimmy Fagin started things. Solbraa opened it up with a hit and Meyers, who followed him, laid one down. Fagin fielded the ball and threw to first. It was a terrible heave and Tracey's best stretching couldn't put him within several feet of the ball. While he was back by the fence chasing it, Solbraa scored and Meyers landed on third. The next three men went down. The Giants allowed the Sox to even in their part of the second. McCormick opened with a single. Leighty rolled a slow one at Kaiser, who picked it up and pegged at Bitting to head McCormick off. Bitting dropped the ball and everybody was safe. Smith sacrificed sending both a base ahead and then Kaiser threw one to the stand, McCormick scoring. Leighty was nailed at third on Fagin's sacrifice and Roy fanned.

Cinch the Game.

The Giants cinched the game in the second. Kaiser went down at the opening and Bitting bunted to Krick. Josie made a good try, but the ball got away from him. Olson singled and Bitting went to third, both scoring on Sundheim's two-bagger a minute later. The next two men went down. The Sox scored their last run in the same inning. Krick walked and Summers went out on a foul bunt on his third attempt. Tracey died on a foul to Olson, but Goldsmith was there and drove one past Sundheim, putting Krick on second. McCormick popped one to center field, which Taylor tried to get. He dropped the ball, Krick scoring and Goldsmith landing on third. Deighty's fly to Meyers ended the inning.

After that, there was nothing doing either way. The Giants put men on second and third in the fourth, on first and second in the sixth and again on second and third in the seventh, but nobody could touch the Krick boy for the required swat to put them across the rubber and six big nothings were registered for the Giants. They didn't need anything else, for Kaiser had the Sox on a bat and swung them whereever he would. Only two of Smith's men saw first base during the last six innings. McCormick walked in the sixth, but he tried to steal and was out by a little better than four city blocks. In the eighth, Krick beat out a slow one, but died on first.

The detailed score follows:

PROSPECTS ARE BRIGHT

Outlook for Coming Winning Crews in Duluth Was Never Better.

Duluth Will Go After Five Events at White Bear.

When two eights, a four, and some working boats can be gotten out in such weather as Duluth has been enjoying for the last six weeks, it speaks well for the interest in rowing in the Duluth Boat club.

That is what was accomplished Sunday afternoon in spite of the rough, choppy water, and the bitterly cold wind, and it shows that the men who are working out in the boats do not belong to the class of "fair weather" sportsmen, but are in to win if it can be done. There is apparently no difficulty about getting them out to practice, and they seem to be eager for work in spite of the weather and water conditions.

It is admitted by the coaches, who are generally pretty slow to deal out praise, that the boats are running better this spring than they ever have at this season of the year, and if things continue to go smoothly the Duluth club will be represented by some crews they need not be ashamed of, at the regatta on White Bear lake in July.

Duluth this year, is planning to go after the junior and senior eights, the junior and senior fours, and the "bantam" four.

Only three senior men are out this year. They are Church, who stroked last year's winning eight; Haroldson and Skelton. These three men with five others to be picked from the junior squad, will probably make up the senior eight.

The junior eight is temporarily constituted as follows: Pierce, stroke; Rockwell, seven; Crawford, six; Totman, five; Joseph Pierce, four; Dinham, three; Nelson, two; and MacDowell, bow. This lineup is subject to change at any time, however, and none of the men are certain of their positions in the boat, as a dozen others are working to displace them.

The four rear men in the junior eight have been trying out as a junior four, but at least one other junior four will be formed, and the coaches will probably make several shifts before the crews are made up to their liking.

Great things are hoped for the "bantam" four, made up of Higgins, Dennis, Walker and Horak. This crew will probably enter the class for 145 pound crews, and they should be heard from.

Trial races are being held between the junior eight, and an eight composed of the three senior men, the four "bantams" and one other junior, or one of the coaches. Three short dashes were tried Sunday morning, and it was just about an even break between the two crews. Each crew won one dash, and the third was about an even break. This gives the Duluth crews something they have never had before—practice in racing. Hitherto they have simply gone against time or there were not enough men to man another boat in such a way as to give a crew a good tryout.

The men are still a little ragged in their form, but there is no lack of "beef" in any of the boats, and for the short stretches that they "get together" the boats are "reeling good," in the language of the men themselves.

The first race will probably be held on May 29, between the junior eight and an eight made up of the "bantams" the three senior men and one of the juniors. This will be followed by a smoker, which will mark the formal opening of the club for the season.

SUPERMAN IS WINNER

James R. Keene Horse Captures the Classic Brooklyn Handicap.

Wins by Length Over Beacon Light in Heavy Going.

New York, May 20.—Through serried lines of cheering thousands, Superman, the sturdy 3-year-old son of the great Commando, carrying the colors of James R. Keene and ridden by Jockey Miller, flashed under the wire the winner of the Brooklyn handicap yesterday afternoon over a course fetlock deep in mud at the Gravesend track.

Twenty-five thousand persons saw the mud-splashed Keene horse held back until the stretch and then sent out in front to win in decisive fashion from a field of eleven starters.

Beacon Light, ridden by Jockey Lowe, was second, a length behind Superman, and Nealon, carrying the colors of C. E. Durnell, was third. Superman covered the course of a mile and a quarter in 2:09.

Brooklyn handicap day brought out a great crowd. The roadways to Gravesend were crowded and when the call for boots and saddles was sounded for the big event, the grand stands, club houses and lawns were swarming with eager spectators. An all night downpour of rain flooded the track and there were sheets of water shimmered in the sunlight.

Six horses were scratched because of the heavy going, while Okenite and Good Luck were added starters, their owners believing that they had a chance in the wiry racing lane for the $20,000 purse.

Up past the grand stand the eleven contestants paraded, their riders in flashing colors. Beneath the stand hundreds of men stormed the bookmakers to get bets on the race. At the starting line the horses fretted and pranced, and the immense crowd waited for the drop of the starter, Mars Cassidy's flag, which seemed an age, but in reality it was only a few minutes.

Out in front shot Superman, followed by Okenite and Go-Between, and a flying field in the muck and mire. Not wishing to set the pace in the heavy going, Miller held Superman in check, and Okenite, rushing up, took the lead at the quarter with Superman running in steady even strides close behind and Beacon Light a short distance away. Butling and Go-Between, the strong favorites for the race, hung in their tracks and fought it out with the others. Okenite took the lead in the flight past the cheering grandstand and Jockey Preston carried him at his top speed.

Around the first turn the horses ran in a storm of splashing mud. Okenite was first at the half with Superman surrendering the place to Nealon and Beacon Light. The Keene horse never varied his machine like stride and little Miller held him in tight rein. On they ran with no relative changes in their positions to the mile where Okenite, fast tiring, was followed close by Beason Light, Nealon and Superman. Into the stretch they raced and Miller, touching Superman with the whip for the first time, sent his mount in front. Okenite bravely tried to follow, but gave up while Beason Light and Nealon, the only possible contenders, were whipped in a final burst of speed.

Superman was in no danger, for his big swinging strides carried him well out in front, and he sped by the judges' stand an easy winner, with Beacon Light second a length away, and Nealon third. There were cheers for the horse, a horseshoe of flowers for the jockey, a rushing following for the betting ring, and the Brooklyn handicap, the third in twenty years to be won by a three-year-old, was over.

COURT NAMES ADMINISTRATOR

James Butchart Will Settle Estate of Frank Miller.

John Butchart of Hibbing has been appointed general administrator of the estate of Frank Miller, deceased, by an order of Probate Judge Middlecoff signed yesterday afternoon. There were two applicants for the appointment but the court considered neither, as he thought they had too close a connection with the estate.

Frank Miller, the deceased, was a homesteader near Chisholm, who was shot and fatally wounded by John Regan last fall. Regan was accused and tried for manslaughter, but was acquitted.

John Schmitz, who lived with Miller, and Frank Miller, who was no relation of the deceased, although the names were similar, asked to be appointed general administrator. Schmitz claims to have had some property on the Miller homestead. Frank Miller was appointed special administrator, but is claimed to have neglected or refused to attend to the duties.

Before Miller died he claimed Schmitz owed him $77. Matters were further complicated by a suit of Schmitz against the living Frank Miller, the former claiming that Miller, as special administrator, took some of his clothes from his homestead.

UNANIMOUS FOR ISSUE

Meeting Develops Strong Sentiment for Park Bond Issue.

Plans for Expenditure Discussed in Detail—Playgrounds Feature.

A rather small but decidedly enthusiastic crowd of citizens gathered in the council chamber yesterday afternoon at the meeting called by Alderman W. E. McEwen of the finance committee of the council to discuss the proposed issuance of $50,000 of park bonds. As predicted by The Herald last evening the sentiment of the meeting was unanimously in favor of the issue of the bonds and the committee could have desired no stronger expression of public opinion upon the subject than that which was given at the meeting yesterday.

B. Silberstein's talk was perhaps about as forceful and expressed the opinion of those present as well as those of any. Mr. Silberstein said in part:

"I have noticed when traveling, that the first thing a stranger notices when he enters a town are its churches, its schools, and its parks. Nothing impresses him more powerfully than fine churches, handsome school buildings, and beautiful parks. Money spent for these is not gone. It is an asset, worth all and more than you spend on it.

"I happened to be one of the twelve men who voted to tear down the old high school building and build a new one, the structure which we have now. There was much objection at that time to the expenditure of the money. Yet who would say today that it was unwisely expended? It is known throughout the country as the finest high school building in the states.

"There can be no objections, gentlemen, to this bond issue. As the mayor has said, we are on the eve of great prosperity. The land can never be purchased as cheaply as it can today. It is a valuable asset no matter what you do with it. In the years to come the people of this city will look upon a fine park system such as you have an opportunity to inquire now, as the finest asset of the city and will remark upon the wisdom of the men who secured it for Duluth.

"As to the increased cost of maintenance and the increase in expenses of a bigger system, remember that where expenses grow, if the money is wisely spent, business will grow. It is like a business house. If I increase my expenditures my business will grow, if I cut them down my business will dwindle away. You must go forward. Duluth is going to be a great city. Others will share in the expense of maintenance in the near future. The sum of $50,000 will be enough for a starter. We don't need to appropriate the whole $300,000 at this time, but $50,000 is necessary and, as a citizen and a taxpayer, I ask the council to consider the issuance of these bonds now, if there is any fair market for them, to sell them at once."

Need of Playgrounds.

The great need for playgrounds for the children was brought out with great emphasis by all of the speakers and when Chairman McEwen called upon President Luther Mendenhall of the park board for his plans for spending the money, should the issue be made, he replied that the first thing would be playgrounds, the second the acquiring of the land about Lester river, so kindly offered to the city a week ago, and third if there was any of fund left, the improvement of park property already secured.

Bishop James McGolrick also spoke feelingly for the children's playgrounds and commended in the highest terms the new lake shore park and its projectors. Bishop McGolrick has plans for the institution of a band stand somewhere in this park, and would keep a band there during the summer months, paid by the subscriptions of public spirited citizens.

President Mendenhall rather questioned the advisability of the bond issue at the present stage of the money market and suggested that if the issue was made and no sale effected, it would hurt the city's credit in other fields and might put a damper on the plans of some manufacturer who was planning to establish himself here. He referred to the difficulty which was experienced in disposing of the recent $375,000 water and light bonds.

Chairman McEwen explained, however, that the money market had improved materially since the water and light bonds were introduced and that they were issued under very unfavorable conditions. He said that he thought there would be very little trouble in floating an issue of park bonds, such as were contemplated.

Distribute Money Fairly.

Mr. McEwen then stated that he did not think that the committee would want to recommend such an issue of bonds to the council unless they had some assurance that the money would be spent with equal regard to all parts of the city. He did not think that they could conscientiously recommend such an issue if a majority of it was to go to the purchase of lands about Lester park.

In reply to this the mayor stated that it was not part of the plan to spend more than one-fourth or one-fifth of the present issue on the Lester park property. The citizens who made the offer to the city had promised to hold the land for an indefinite period, at the disposal of the city at any time at the present very low price, and any further purchase which may be desired could be made at later dates.

A. B. Siewert pointed out the necessity for playgrounds in the central part of the city and recommended the block known as "Mendenhall's field" as a very suitable spot for such a playground.

The mayor said that his plan for park systems included the purchase of at least one new block in the West end, with running water in it, so that a swimming pool could be provided for the boys and a fine playground established, and the selection of a similar plot of land in West Duluth. The improvements of Fairmount park is also to be attended to, according to the mayor's idea, and playgrounds in the middle of the city are also to receive their share of the returns from the bonds.

An attempt was made to lay before the meeting the condition of affairs regarding the way the city's present park property was distributed. The result of reports from Secretary Helm of the park board and the mayor seemed to indicate that while the greater portion of the money spent in improvements had been spent in the eastern and centrally located parks, most of the land for those parks had been donated, while expenditures for purchasing new property had been much more generous in the western portion of the city than in the eastern portion. Of the 300 acres now included in Duluth's park systems Lester park has thirty acres, five squares in London addition amount to about twenty acres, and these with the land for Cascade park and for Portland square were all donated. In the West end, Lincoln park with fifty acres and Fairmount park with forty acres were purchased at an aggregate cost of almost $150,000.

On behalf of the Commercial club of West Duluth David Sang submitted a motion favoring the bond issue, which was read by the chair. Mr. Sang said that the club favored spending the whole $50,000 for purchasing park and playground property, and this sentiment was warmly applauded.

Alderman Getchell also spoke for West Duluthians and said that they wanted the bonds issued, wanted the land at Lester park purchased, and playgrounds established all over the city.

Chairman McEwen closed the meeting with a request that when the park board came to consider the expenditure of the proceeds of the bonds they should not forget the needs of the city for a park at Fond du Lac and suggested Chambers' grove as "the prettiest spot in Minnesota."

Several other citizens were called for speeches and they all eulogized the playground proposition and boosted the bond issue.

CURED BY IMAGINATION.

Dundee Advertiser: It is conceded by scientists that imagination has much power as a curative agent. A concrete example occurred in the experience of Sir Humphry Davy. A man suffering from paralysis went to him to be treated by electricity. When the patient had seated himself, Davy, as a preliminary, placed a small glass thermometer, beneath his tongue to take his temperature. The sick man thought that this was an instrument for curing him, and declared that he felt it run through all his system. Davy, curious to see what lasting effect the imagination would exert, did not undeceive the man, but sent him away, telling him to return daily to have the treatment repeated. The man did as he was told, and daily sat in a chair with the end of a little thermometer tucked beneath his tongue. In a few days the paralysis was completely cured by the patient's own imagination.

S.S.S. HEALS OLD SORES

An old sore or ulcer is only a symptom, an outlet for the impurities and poisons which are in the blood, and as long as this vital fluid remains in this impure, contaminated state the place will never heal. The application of salves, washes, powders, etc., may cause the spot to scab over, but a fresh outpouring of diseased matter from the blood starts it again, and thus it goes on, gradually growing worse and slowly affecting the entire health of the sufferer. There are many ways in which the blood becomes contaminated and poisoned. A long spell of sickness breeds disease germs in the system, the failure of the eliminative members to remove the refuse and waste matter of the body, the excessive use of mineral medicines in certain diseases, all infect the blood with morbid matter and germs which sooner or later is manifested by a sore that refuses to heal. Persons with inherited blood taint are very apt to be afflicted with sores and ulcers. The taint may lie dormant during young, vigorous life, but when middle age is reached or passed and the natural energies begin to grow weaker, the tissues in some weak point break down and a chronic sore is formed and kept open by the constant drainage of impure matter from the blood. If the cause is not removed the sore will continue to grow worse by eating deeper into the flesh, festering, discharging, and slowly undermining the constitution. S. S. S. heals old sores by going down to the very bottom of the trouble, driving out the impurities and building up the entire circulation. When S. S. S. has removed the cause the blood becomes rich and healthy, the sore begins to heal, new flesh is formed, and soon the place is cured. Do not depend on external applications, which do not reach the blood, but begin the use of S. S. S. and remove of the cause, and then the sore must heal. DEMAND BY TWIN CITIES

That Next Democratic National Convention be Held at St. Paul.

Circular Letter Sent to Members of the National Committee.

St. Paul, Minn., May 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—A circular letter signed by the mayors and the presidents and secretaries of the commercial clubs of the Twin Cities has been addressed to the fifty members of the Democratic national committee making a bid for the next Democratic national convention. The letter reads:

"Minneapolis and St. Paul, through their respective mayors and Commercial clubs, hereby announce St. Paul's candidacy for the next national Democratic convention. St. Paul has recently completed a magnificent $400,000 fireproof auditorium with a seating capacity of over 10,000, which would make admirable headquarters for the convention.

"The Twin Cities will unite in entertaining the guests and the hotel accommodations are ample to take care of the delegates and all who will attend the convention. The Twin Cities are ideal places in which to visit either winter or summer, and their reputation as entertainers is universally recognized. In point of location we submit that no city is more favorably located than the Twin Cities and their railroad facilities are such that direct communication is had with almost every section of the United States.

"There are also polical reasons why St. Paul should be especially favored in the matter of selecting a city in which to hold the next national Democrat convention. The three cities, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth each have Democratic mayors, and the chief executive of the state is a Democrat, the Honorable John A. Johnson.

"We appreciate that a considerable sum of money will have to be expended in properly entertaining the convention and are confident that the Twin Cities will, when the time is opportune, be able to satisfy your committee of their ability to raise such sum as may be necessary. We assure you that should your committee accept the invitation of St. Paul, anything and everything will be done to make your convention a success.

"We trust that we may have your support in our endeavor to secure this convention for St. Paul."

STANDARD TO BE SUED

For Violating Law Prohibiting Discrimination in Price of Oil.

St. Paul, May 21.—J. C. Bartles, president of the Bartles Oil company of St. Paul, and two merchants said to be from Stillwater and St. James, respectively, yesterday took steps preliminary to formal proceedings against the Standard Oil company on charges of violating the law passed by the last legislature, prohibiting discrimination in the price of oil sold in the state.

It is said that the Standard company sells a brand known as Perfection in the larger cities, and a brand known as Water White through out the state; that the brands are identical in quality, but that the oil sold in points outside the cities is greatly higher in price.

Under the law, complaints must be formally filed with the secretary of state, who in turn, transmits them to the attorney general, by whom prosecutions are to be conducted.

Mr. Bartles called on Secretary of State Schmahl to enter complaint, but the secretary told Mr. Bartles that he would first have to secure the services of an attorney to draw up the complaint according to legal procedure when it would be filed. That, it is said, is being done.

DEER RIVER WEDDING

On Wednesday Evening, to Which Three Hundred Are Invited.

Deer River, Minn., May 21.—The wedding of Andrew Morrisey, proprietor of the European hotel, to Miss Jennie Carr Wednesday evening, promises to be one of the biggest social events of the season. Three hundred invitations have been sent out and it is expected that a large number will be present. The ceremony will take place at 6 o'clock in the evening, at the European hotel. After the ceremony a ball will be given.

Mr. and Mrs. James Quigg, who are numbered among the earliest residents of Deer River, left on Saturday for Minneapolis, where they will make their home.

Mrs. David Ham of Duluth, accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Commings of Coleraine, have arrived on a week's visit to Mrs. D. Hilbreth. The two were neighbors near Charles City, Iowa, thirty-five years ago, and this is their first meeting in thirty years. Mrs. Ham is on her way to Iowa to make her future home.

FARMER LOSES HOME.

House Destroyed While Neighbor Burns Over His Hay Land.

Moorhead, Minn., May 21.—Peter Tufton, who resides at Kragness, Clay county, Saturday was burning off his hay land, on section 12, when there came a sudden change in the wind and the fire got away from him and got over on to section 7 in Marken township. A house of six rooms owned by John Shank of Illinois caught fire and was totally destroyed. There was no one living in the house at the time. By the hardest kind of work the other buildings on the Shank farm were saved, and the fire quenched.

ROMANCE OF CHAUFFEUR

Six Months Ago Penniless Bachelor, Now a Wealthy Bridegroom.

Inherits Fortune, Marries Lady Love and Tours World.

St. Paul, May 21.—Six months ago a penniless bachelor, today a wealthy bridegroom on a honeymoon around the world, is the unique experience of E. H. Hudson, who was married Sunday in St. Paul to Miss Martha Sickelsteel.

Hudson was chauffeur for James McIntyre of Winnipeg, and went with him to St. Paul a year ago. Six months ago he received a large inheritance from an aunt in England. Feeling that his happiness was not yet complete, he stayed in St. Paul, and Sunday his good fortune was made still greater when he married the American girl of his choice.

The Hudsons left after the wedding for Hudson's old home in England, from which they will return by the way of the Orient and Japan.

ADVERSE DECISION

Rendered in Case of Telegraphers Marr and Dolphin, Who Appealed.

Minneapolis, May 21.—The long delayed report to the Order of Railroad Telegraphers on the appeals of Lewis K. Marr and M. M. Dolphin against their expulsion was submitted to the convention yesterday. The report is wholly adverse to the expelled men. The committee recommended that the directors' action in expelling Marr, who was formerly secretary of the board of directors, be approved by the grand division, it being found by the committee that Marr received a fair trial. It was recommended that the officers in the cases be sustained and that the expulsion of Dolphin by President Perham be approved.

On the cases of the two local divisions in Philadelphia whose charters were revoked and whose membership was transferred to the grand division, the committee did not report, holding that the matter was not properly brought before it. It was moved that the report of the committee be approved, but no vote was taken in the morning session.

WRECK ON COPPER RANGE.

Engine and the Caboose Leave the Track, Injuring Fireman.

Houghton, Mich., May 21.—Fred Quinn, a Copper Range fireman, was quite badly burned in a wreck which occurred on that road at 3 o'clock Sunday morning about a mile west of the Michigan smelter, near Houghton. The train consisted only of an engine and caboose and was bringing back to Houghton the crew of the night rock train which had completed its run. At the point where the mishap occurred the sand in the embankment had run out from under the track, leaving the rails insufficiently supported.

When the engine, which was running at a good rate of speed, struck this bad place in the railroad, it jumped and did not stop until it had slid about sixty-five feet down the embankment. Fireman Quinn was burned by escaping steam and Conductor Dickens received some slight bruises. The engineer was uninjured.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 21.—A runaway horse attached to a carriage containing C. F. Golling and Edward A. Wilbur plunged Saturday afternoon through the door of the Little Hungary saloon, Oneida and Market streets. WISCONSIN

DOG LED BOY TO SAFETY

Eddie Fink Would Have Perished But for His Pet.

He Had Been Lost in the Woods Three Days.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., May 21.—Eddie Fink, 9 years old, who was lost in the woods three days and for whom many persons have been hunting, found his way to Broederville, near here, and from that village his parents at Little Jump were telephoned that their son was alive. He lost his way while hunting for cows and had it not been for the fact that he had the company of his dog, he say he would have given up in despair. It was the dog that led the way to Broederville.

That his friends here might not regret that his marriage was not solemnized in this city, J. L. Anderson sent a check to his sister, Ida Bjork, to cover the cost of a celebration in his honor. The check was the first intimation of his marriage, the ceremony having been performed in Chicago a month before the announcement was made to his friends here. The bride was Miss Louise Nelson.

NEW INDUSTRY IS PROFITABLE

Marinette and Menominee Dealers Find Cedar Business Good.

Marinette, Wis., May 21.—Since the lumber industry along the river and bay has been dwindling away, one of the industries which is taking its place and one which is equally remunerative to those engaged, is the cedar product business.

During the palmy days of Marinette and Menominee as lumber cities, the cedar industry was considered of small importance, but today in Menominee there are seven companies dealing in cedar with six large cedar yards, where a total of 500 men are given employment.

In Marinette there are five companies operating, with two large cedar yards. In Marinette the sawmills are still crowding out the cedar industry, but the latter industry is growing steadily and the number of yards in the city will increase.

This year the Menominee River Boom company will drive a total of 37,550 ties, 37,000 posts and 45,607 poles, in addition to their usual lot of sawlogs. This is only about one-third of the total amount of cedar products used in the two cities as a large fleet of the smaller schooners are kept busy the whole summer bringing in posts, poles and ties from up the shore and a great quantity of the products come in by rail.

Telegraph and telephone companies are buying heavily, and this is raising the prices on poles. The demand for the goods is so strong that dry poles and posts can not be secured and the dealers are forced to ship green ones.

ROMANTIC MARRIAGE OCCURS AT MARINETTE.

Marinette, Wis., May 21.—A marriage of considerable romance was celebrated here Saturday when Hans Enquist, a wealthy ranchman from Oregon, married Miss Caroline Wichman. Enquist, who had made much money in the West, went to Sweden on a visit and there met Miss Wichman and both fell in love with each other. The girl promised to come over later, and did so, coming to friends here where the ceremony took place. The bride will remain with friends at Norway, Mich., for a short time until Enquist builds a home on his ranch.

La Crosse, Wis., May 21.—Promised a job with the corporation as a consideration of dropping the case, John A. Redburn was persuaded to discontinue his suit against the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway company. The trial of the case had already been started in circuit court and considerable evidence had been taken.

Mrs. Pettibone, wife of A. W. Pettibone of this city, has donated $5,000 to the La Crosse public library to be used in improving the children's department.

UPPER MICHIGAN

BIRD FROM THE ARCTIC

Genus of Bird Killed Near Bad River is Fixed.

Ascertained to be What is Known as Trumpeter Swan.

Marquette, Mich., May 21.—The genus of the bird killed by Edward Yashinski, a resident near Dead River, some weeks ago, and stuffed and mounted by Max M. Stierle, which for some time remained a mystery, has been fixed. It is what is known as the trumpeter swan, a rare species, breeding chiefly within the Arctic circle. When the bird was first brought to him Mr. Stierle sent a description of it to Professor M. Peel, head of the ornithological department of the state museum at Lansing. Professor Peel wrote in reply that he was unable to place it. Mr. Stierle, who has made a somewhat exhaustive study of ornithology himself, then examined all the books on the subject that he could secure, and has finally succeeded in placing the bird as noted above.

The bird weighed in life about forty pounds and had a breadth of wing of something over six feet. It is pure white in color, with a long graceful neck, and a bill about the same length as the head. The front toes are fully webbed and the hind toe without a membrane. The bill is surmounted by a black knob at the base of the upper mandible and has a black nail at its tip. Since the swan was killed by Mr. Yashinski, two more have appeared in the Chocolay bayou.

Twelve bands are expected and fifteen or more lodges will be represented by large delegations. All of the lodges affiliated with the grand body, with the exception of one in Detroit, are located in the upper peninsula. The society has had a good growth since the last grand lodge session and reunion in Negaunee.

A SHORT CALENDAR.

Only Nine Criminal Cases on the Docket at Marquette.

Marquette, Mich., May 21.—The regular spring term of the circuit court opened yesterday. The calendar is an unusually short one, comprising but thirty-three cases. Nine of these are criminal, three on issue of fact, trial by jury; nine on issue of fact, trial by court, and twelve in chancery. There are four cases for violation of the liquor law, and one each for bastardy, assault to do great bodily harm, embezzlement, burglary and larceny, in the criminal docket, which will be taken up first.

The only action in which the crime alleged was perpetrated in this city, is that against David Moran and Peter Murray, charged with having entered and stolen a revolver and $100 from the saloon of Peter Boyer, No. 109 West Baraga avenue, about six weeks ago. Entrance was gained through a back window, the entire frame being removed. The men were arrested at Negaunee on the following day by Chief Tom Gribbin, on request of Chief Manning. The revolver was found in their possession. Murray subsequently confessed to the crime and implicated Moran.

BRAKEMAN FALLS FROM CAR.

Lee Hoopes Fatally Injured in an Accident at Bessemer.

Ishpeming—Andrew Johnson, who was well known at Ewen, was found dead on the road near Holt's branch, about four miles from that place Thursday last, he having perished the previous day. He was about 50 years of age and unmarried.

The same day Martin Maker of Kenton found the body of a man lying by the roadside not far from that place. He is said to have been a stranger in the district.

Sault Ste. Marie—The school years is finished at Fort Brady, and the soldiers are now ready for the summer maneuvers. Through the lateness of the spring they have been able to do no marching thus far. The yearly shoot at the rifle range at Rexford is now in progress. Companies I and M are at the scene. The entire distance of thirty miles was covered in heavy marching order.

St. Ignace—For no other apparent purpose than wilful mischief, some person with a rifle aimed at the long distance telephone wire near Newberry and severed it with a bullet. The line was out of commission for thirty-six hours and during that time the whole upper peninsula west of Newberry was cut off from telephonic communication with lower Michigan and Eastern points.

Menominee—Charles Hansen, clerk of Menominee county has left Menominee for Christiana, Norway. The trip is more than a visit to the shores of a land upon which he had not trod since boyhood. It marks a home-coming and the uniting of father and son, after a separation of many years.

DAKOTAS

SHOOTING IS MYSTERIOUS

Heustis of Williston Probably Fatally Shot in Target Gallery.

Believed That the Gun Was Fired Without Human Agency.

Williston, N. D., May 21.—Ralph W. Heustis, while putting up electric lighting fixtures in a shooting gallery here, was probably fatally wounded by a 22-caliber bullet from a target rifle that no one was seen to touch.

Chief of Police Smith, who was in the gallery when Heustis was shot, says no one had handled a gun, and he believes that the shot was fired without human agency.

All the witnesses assert that no one was seen to touch any of the rifles that were on the counter, but it is suggested as a possibility that one of the boys present may have accidentally discharged a weapon without realizing that he had his hand on the trigger.

Director of Defunct Minot Bank May Have to Settle.

Minot, N. D., May 21.—It is rumored in Minot that at the June term of the federal court to be held at Fargo, a case will come up for trial that will be of more than passing interest to a number of people in this city. Close upon the successful fight with ex-President Haskamp of the defunct Minot National bank, which resulted in Haskamp's anteing up the small sum of $38,000, Receiver Swords commenced suit against E. B. Page of Leeds, N. D., who will be remembered as one of the directors of the bank, and who sold the institution to Cashier Jake Erickson for himself and his friends at $1.25 a share, taking the funds of the depositors to pay himself and leaving the bank busted. It is alleged that this act of Page's was what really caused the failure of the bank, and now he is asked to make good.

CHANGE OF VENUE

Asked in Case of Mrs. Kaufmann, Charged With Murder.

Sioux Falls, S. D., May 21.—The case of Mrs. Emma Kaufmann, wife of Moses Kaufmann, a wealthy brewer, charged with the murder of Miss Agnes Polreis, her young domestic, was called for trial before Judge R. G. Smith of Yankton, in the state circuit court yesterday afternoon. Judge Frank R. Aikens of the attorneys of the defendant, filed application for a change of venue, alleging that because of the state of the public mind in Minnehaha county, the defendant would be unable to secure a fair trial here.

The evidence in support of the application was not all in when court adjourned for the day.

FARMER FOUND DEAD.

Man Who Rents Place Finds the Owner Lying Dead.

Cavalier, N. D., May 21.—Friday a man by the name of Dyer, having recently rented the farm of Patrick O'Connor, one mile south and one mile west of Hallson P. O., and about thirteen miles southwest from Cavalier, proceeded to move on to the farm to take possession for the season.

On entering the house Dyer found O'Connor lying dead on his bed. Dyer immediately drove to town and notified parties here that he had found O'Connor dead in his house.

There was nothing to indicate that O'Connor had not died a natural death, and in view of the fact that it is believed that he has been indulging freely in strong drink for some time past, it is supposed that death was partly due to over-indulgence in liquor. One liquor bottle recently emptied was found near by.

TWO SETTLERS INJURED WHILE FIGHTING FLAMES.

Jamestown, N. D., May 21.—In a prairie fire, which started about sixteen miles northwest of Steele, Peter Syeverson and George Johnson were badly burned. One of Mr. Johnson's horses is dead and the others are severely burned. Sam Stephenson is said to have lost his barn and several hogs, and there was some other property destruction. The blaze is said to have originated from a spark from the stove pipe of a claim shack.

BISMARCK WILL BE DRYER THAN EVER.

Bismarck, N. D., May 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Bismarck is now about as absolutely dry as it is possible for it to be. With one accord the local drug stores have decided to refuse to sell liquor to anyone, regardless of what affidavit the party may be willing to sign, and even the doctors will have to get along without the use of alcoholic ingredients in their prescriptions, should they desire to use such.

THE FIRE LADDIES WILL COMPETE FOR $500 PURSE.

Oakes, N. D., May 21.—The firemen are active in their preparations for the coming of the state tournament which meets in Oakes on June 25, 26 and 27. While the program is not definitely known as yet, the boys are busy and will soon be able to announce their best attractions. A $500 purse has been hung up as a prize for the company that shows the most skill in the hose and hook and ladder runs, and a loving cup will be awarded to the best band attending the band tournament here on the same dates. This contest will be open to any bands in the state.

LONG TIME SECLUDED.

Brother Andrew Leaves Monastery for First Time in Forty Years.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 21.—A unique character passed through Milwaukee Sunday. To the world, in which he has been a recluse for forty years, he is known as Brother Andrew. To the world in which he lived before he entered the Trappist monastary a generation ago, he is known as Henry Gillespie.

Brother Andrew was on his way from Chicago to Tomah, Wis., to visit a sister. For the last forty years he has been in unbroken seclusion within the walls of the Trappist monastary at Dubuque, Iowa. This monastary is one of two such institutions in the country. Because of the illness and death of a sister, Brother Andrew was given a leave of absence of five days to attend the funeral and visit relatives.

It was only through the intercession of the mayor of Dubuque, a close personal friend of the abbot, that Brother Andrew was permitted to leave the monastary and go to Chicago. Upon his entrance once more to the outside world he put off the garb of the monk and donned the same broadcloth suit in which he applied to the monastary for admission. It was this suit which he had on while on his way from Chicago to Tomah.

PRESERVE PROSPERITY, IS CRY OF GOVERNMENT.

Chicago, May 21.—There will be no decrease in the prosperity of the country or recurrence of the panickly conditions in Wall street if the administration can prevent it, says a Washington dispatch to the Chicago Tribune. All branches of the government, taking their cue from the president, are acting energetically and harmoniously to maintain the existing satisfactory state of affairs.

The president himself, in the speech he will deliver at Indianapolis next week, will address himself to reassuring the public as to the value of railroad securities. He proposes to let bygones be bygones and only endeavor to secure reforms to prevent a continuance of evil practices.

Secretary Cortelyou is following the market with the closest attention and is prepared to furnish treasury support.

Secretary Wilson has sent experts to Kansas and Oklahoma to investigate damage to the wheat crop.

In the department of commerce and labor, Secretary Straus made arrangements for increasing immediately after the beginning of the fiscal year investigations into trade conditions abroad.

State Still Introducing Testimony in Mansfield Forgery Case.

Defense Objects to Some of State's Line of Evidence.

Testimony for the state is still being introduced in the C. H. Mansfield forgery case. Shortly before the noon recess today the jury was excused while the attorney argued over the admission of a certain line of evidence that the state claims is material as tending to show intent on the part of Mansfield to defraud Mahlburg and Robertson, the two men with whom he is alleged to have formed companies to manufacture an artificial albumen to be an egg substitute in cooking.

Mr. Mahlburg, who deposited the $500 in the American Exchange bank, which Mansfield is claimed to have taken out the same day on a forged check, was one of the witnesses examined this morning.

He related his transactions with Mansfield, his story being along the line of the explanation of the state's case as outlined by County Attorney Norton yesterday.

When Assistant Cashier McGregor of the City National bank was called by the state with the intent to show that Robertson gave Mansfield a signed check with the space for the amount left blank, the defense objected, and it was at that point the jurors were excused while the argument was made concerning the admissibility of the testimony.

That Mansfield is fairly well versed in court procedure and is closely watching every turn in his case, is shown by the frequent conferences he has with his attorneys and questions that he suggests for the cross-examination of the state's witnesses. Mansfield told the authorities that he has traveled over the country selling bonds.

UNITED STATES THE LEADER

Of the World in the Manufacture of Shoes.

Washington, May 21. — The United States as a leader in the manufacture of shoes and the great increase in value of every kind of boots and shoes, are interesting points brought out in a report issued by the censusu bureau today relating to the manufacture of boots and shoes, leather and leather gloves and mittens for 1905. It shows that there were 1,316 establishments engaged in the industry, having $122,526,093 capital, 145,524 wage-earners, wages amounting to $69,059,680, cost of material amounting to $197,,363,465 and products valued at $320,107,458.

All of these items, except the number of establishments, show increases for the five year period since the twelfth censusu. Capital and value of products increased at practically the same rate. The number of establishments decreased about 18 per cent since 1900.

Hides to the number of 17,581,613, costing $89,126,593, reported by 669 establishments, represented 46.6 per cent of the total cost of materials. The use of hemlock and oak bark extract for tanning has increased greatly. Sole leather formed more than one-half of the value of all leather manufactured.

At the census of 1905 there was an important concentration of the industry in the Eastern states. Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Wisconsin, New York and New Jersey reported products valued at over $20,000,000; their combined total of $171,764,248 was 68 per cent of the total for the United States.

Leather gloves and mittens were made in 339 establishments. Their total capital was $10,705,599; they manufactured products valued at $17,740,385. There were 3,370,146 dozen pairs of gloves, mittens and gauntlets manufactured, valued at over $17,000,000, an increase since 1900 of 16 per cent in number and almost 7 per cent in value. Kid and leather gloves imported in 1905 aggregated $4,727,484.

FOREIGNERS ARE COMING

Record Breaking Number Arrive on Steamer From Port Arthur.

Four Are Deported Because of Dread Disease, Trachoma.

William H. Dean, United State immigration inspector, received his first boatload of passengers from a Canadian port since the season of navigation opened this spring. The steamer America from Port Aruthur brought in the largest number of foreigners which has ever come to Duluth on a single boat since the local immigration office was instituted three years ago.

Owing to the delay in opening the passenger business between Port Arthur and Duluth, the number of passengers waiting to come down has been steadily increasing, and when the Amercia finally came in this morning she was crowded with passengers of all descriptions. Among them were sixty foreigners, and it is said that there are more waiting at Port Arthur for the next boat.

The number of foreigners this morning included practically all nationalities. There were Englishmen, Austrians, Hungarians, Swedes, Norwegians, Italians, Germans and Scotch. It was a lively scene at the dock while the passengers were being inspected and inspector Dean had his hands full for some time.

Four of the foreigners were barred from entering the United States and were sent back to Port Arthur. They were found to be suffering from the dread disease, trachoma. Those deported were Herbert Davis, an Englishman, and Nick Moutojigo, Mike Rukovino, Joe Ncleock, all Austrians.

One of the foreigners who came in on the America was a Swede, who has been living at Superior for the last twenty-one years, but had never taken out naturalization papers, and was confronted by Mr. Dean and informed that he would be obliged to pay the regular head tax. His name is Charles Moberg and he is 51 years old. He first came to this country in 1886.

After watching the rigorous inspection through which the foreigners now have to undergo, four Italians, who have been living in the United States for some time, and who had purchased tickets for Port Arthur, decided that they did not care to risk being barred from this country, when they wished to return, and cashed in their tickets before the steamer Easton left the dock for Port Arthur.

Another boat load of foreigners will be brought in Thursday by the steamer Easton an don Friday more will come on the America, so that the inspector is looking forward to a busy week.

TO RAISE FUND TO FIGHT UNIONS

Manufacturers Propose to Spend $1,500,000 for Principles.

New York, May 21.—A fund of $1,500,000 to be expended in fighting "industrial oppression" in the next three years was called for by President James W. Van Cleave of the National Association of Manufacturers at their annual convention today. President Van Cleave appointed a committee of thirty-five manufacturers to find a way to raise the money.

Mr. Van Cleave announced his plan at the conclusion of his annual address, in which he declared the principles of the association to be to maintain the open shop, to oppose the boycott, limitation of apprentices and limiting of output, and to oppose dictation by labor unions. He also declared that the manufacturers must combat the newer issues caused by the determination of labor unions to terrorize the president, congress, judges and juries.

President Van Cleave added:

"We want to federate the manufacturers of this country to effectively fight industrial oppression. The president ought to have fully $500,000 a year for the next three years. We should certainly provide ways and means to properly finance the association, to federate the employers of the country and to educate our manufacturers to a proper sense of their own duty, patriotism and self interests."

President Van Cleave then appointed a committee to confer with him tonight as to ways of raising the money. On this committee, among others are Elliott Durrand and C. H. Smith, Illinois; C. C. Hench and David H. Parry, Indiana; H. F. Miles and William E. Tallmage, Wisconsin.

ROBBED IN DAYLIGHT

Daring Thief Snatches Hand Bag From Range Woman.

Act Was Committed on Third Avenue West About 10:30

One of the most daring cases of purse snatching which has occurred in Duluth for some time, occurred this morning about 10:30 o'clock. Mrs. J. C. Beatty, a Biwabik woman, who is visiting friends in this city was the victim. Mrs. Beatty was going up Third avenue west to a friend's house when the robbery occurred. The robber, whom Mrs. Beatty describes as about five feet six inches in height, and about 19 years old, followed her up the avenue on the opposite side of the street, and just as she got to Third street crossed quickly over and made a grab for the brown hand bag which she carried. Mrs. Beatty had no desire to part with her property so quickly, however, and hung on. She would have succeeded in keeping her hold on the bag had not the handle come off, but it broke after a moment of tugging and the thief ran down the alley back of the Methodist church.

The bag contained a smaller brown purse containing six-$5 bills and a D. & I. R. pay check for over $100 made out to J. C. Beatty. The police are anxious that any one attempting to cash such a check be apprehended.

Mrs. Beatty says that the purse snatcher weighed about 160 pounds, had a round face, a light complexion, and wore a blue serge suit and a soft cap. She reported the matter to the police at once, and men were put to work on the case, but without results up to 3 o'clock this afternoon.

It is thought that the thief saw Mrs. Beatty open the purse in one of the stores on Superior street and then followed her up the avenue. The commission of such a crime in broad daylight in the central part of the city where assistance might arrive at any moment is one of the most daring exhibitions of criminal nerve on record.

POSTPONE UNTIL 1908

Plan of Certain Presbyterians on the Temperance Question.

Powerful Influence, However, Wants the Matter Settled.

Columbus, Ohio, May 21.—The whole temperance question which is agitating the Presbyterian general assembly may be postponed and be decided by the council of the federation of the churches which is to meet in New York in 1908, the general assembly to act in 1909 in accordance with the decision of the council of churches. There is, however, an undoubted powerful influence in the assembly anxious to thrash out the question now. Moderator Roberts being with this element and, therefore, the matter may be settled one way or the other when the report comes up as scheduled on Wednesday. The standing committee on temperance is understood today to be in favor of postponing the fight until the meeting of the council of the churches.

The fight has brought W. C. Lilley of Pittsburg, to the assembly today. He is chairman of the permanent committee on temperance and was in conference with Rev. S. E. Nicholson, state superintendent of the Anti-saloon League of Pennsylvania, and others as to the plans to be followed in the coming fight. Friends of the Anti-saloon league are said to be somewhat alarmed at the outlook today, one of them admitting that if the matter be brought before the assembly it will decline to recognize the league.

Rev. S. E. Nicholson, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league in Pennsylvania, who is charged by the temperance committee of the Presbyterian church with having "thrown them down" in regard to the local option bill to be presented to the Pennsylvania legislature, has issued a statement giving his version of the now celebrated "Pittsburg conference," which resulted in the formation of the interchurch temperance federation, and precipitated the fight now on the Presbyterian general assembly.

He contends that the conference had no official church character; that it had no authority; that the plan for an interchurch federation was not adopted, but approved for reference to the church bodies represented, and that even if approved, it is open to grave objections; that no opportunity was given for fair and impartial consideration, and that the conference had no official authority to decide whether the league is an ecclesiastical or a non-ecclesiastical body. Mr. Nicholson claims that the Pennsylvania league board is composed of men officially representing thirteen ecclesiastical bodies, and is therefore a church federation.

NEW YORK CLIMBERS.

New Broadway Magazine: When all has been said there is no city on earth where merit is so quickly recognized and rewarded as in New York. A boy enters the service of a railroad corporation and at the age of 28 he is general manger of a great traction system. True, he has a distinguished lawyer and statesman for an uncle, but he starts at the bottom, and his promotion is due to his own exertion. Such is the career of Oren Root.

H. H. Vreeland, a brakeman without pull, raises himself on a short period to the presidency of the Metropolitan Railway company. Within two generations all the spectacular fortunes of New York have been made from nothing.

Reward of merit comes quickly in other fields. Charles E. Hughes, a comparatively obscure lawyer, is selected to conduct an important investigation in which the whole country is interested. Without having previously held office, a very novice, he is made a governor.

PRAISE FOR THE CREW

The Naomi's Passengers Say Great Bravery Was Shown.

Bodies of Coal Passers Found in the Burned Steamer.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 21.—Clad in nondescript garments and suffering from the frightful experiences they had undergone on the burned Naomi, many of the passengers of the boat returned to this city. They tell graphic and thrilling tales of their dangers and are unanimous in praising the coolness and bravery of the Naomi's crew.

J. Darling of Milwaukee, state agent for the Hartford Boiler Insurance company of Milwaukee, escaped with his clothes drawn on over his night shirt. Describing incidents of the fire he said:

"I saw a Mrs. Klein of Hart, Mich., in hysterics and seized her as she was about to throw herself overboard. Just about that time they brought Rhoades on deck; Mrs. Klein is a trained nurse, and I ordered her to look after the burned man. I spoke harshly and in an instant the little woman dropped on her knees by the side of the suffering man, and from that moment until he was placed on the ambulance, she never left him.

"I never saw a braver lot of men and women in my life."

Arthur Jones, an attorney from Detroit, lost everything he had except his clothes. "What we suffered," he said, "as we stood there on the stern of the boat watching the fire creeping towards us in spite of the most heroic efforts of the crew to beat it back, nobody can tell. Through it all no braver men ever walked than the steward, Phillp Rossbach and Purser William Hanrahan of the Naomi. Brave almost to a fault and as cool as if in port, they worked like heroes caring for the passengers. It was these men who went down to the lower dack with smoke and flames all around them and handed up the body of Rhoades, whose picture still haunts me."

Sol Waterman of New York, joined in the tribute to the steward and purser. "Braver men never lived and if ever a Carnegie medal was given in the right place it should be given to them," he said, and continued. "Never will I forget the picture of those poor fellows in the forecastle who were burned. The Naomi was a mass of flames. Suddenly the four men who had been asleep in the forecastle thrust their heads from the port holes and called for help. The captain of the freighter we were on, ordered a life boat to go to their ald. The boat went but the men were unable to squeeze their bodies through the ports. We could hear them calling pitifully for help and see them through the flames, but the lifeboat crew came back and reported it could not reach them. The captain ordered the boat to return and get the names of the men. Then we could hear the questions and answers as the men told their names and the names and residences of their families and friends. Finally one man called out 'goodbye, I'm gone' and fell back into the flames."

The names of the men are as follows:

MINER,
STANTON,
Unknown.

There is a possibility more bodies may be found in the hold. The bodies will be buried in Grand Haven this afternoon.

MILK PEDLER'S TRICK.

Philadelphia Bulletin: "Of course, in this city," said a milk inspector, "the milk is pure, but I've been in some towns where impure milk dealers have played some funny dodges on me.

"You know how I work? Sneak along the streets, hold up a milkman, and take a sample right out of the can? Well, it has been a common thing when a milkman has known me by sight for him to pretend to trip on seeing me coming, fall headlong and upset his can of milk all over the pavement.

"Yes, that trick worked the first time and I wasted a lot of pity on the man that played it."

BUSINESS SHOWS LARGE GROWTH

President Fish Issues Annual Report of Bell Telephone Companies.

President Frederick P. Fish of the American Telephone & Telegraph company, which controls the Northwestern, the Duluth, and several other telephone companies operating in the Northwest, has just issued his annual report for 1906, showing that the Bell telephone companies have a total of 3,068,833 telephone stations in the United States at the close of 1906 as against 2,528,715 at the close of 1905. There were in use for exchange and toll service 7,468,905 miles of wire including 1,688,987 miles that were added during the year. These figures do not include the mileage of connecting companies.

Last year the Bell companies handled an average of 16,940,000 connections per day, a rate of about 5,455,000,000 per year, which averages sixty-four telephone calls for every man, woman and child in the United States.

The Bell companies expended for construction in 1906 $79,366,949, as against $50,780,906 in 1905. Since 1900 the companies have expended $288,914,255 in construction work.

During 1906 the Bell companies spent $32,814,568 for maintenance and renewal of plants, independent of the expenditures for new construction. The expenditure was from the earnings of the properties and was charged to expense. The report shows that as a result of the expenditure the plants are in better condition than ever before, and could not be duplicated for less than $70,000,000 in excess of their cost.

The gross revenue of the Bell companies in the United States was $114,000,000 in 1906, and President Fish believes that the financial results will be even better in 1907.

OLD RESIDENT PASSES AWAY

Cornelius A. Field Dies at His Home Early This Morning.

Cornelius A. Field died at his home at 127 East Third street about 4 o'clock this morning after an illness of several weeks. He was 82 years of age at the time of his death. Mr. Field has been engaged in the real estate and insurance business in Duluth for over twenty years, coming here in 1886, and he was widely known and highly respected by his numerous friends here.

His wife, Maria Dewey Field, died June, 14, 1903, five months after the celebration of their fifty-ninth wedding anniversary. Their early married life was spent in Montpelier, Vt., where Mr. Field was for twelve years engaged in business. He later served as postmaster at Hanover, N. FARMER'S WIFE SEEKS DIVORCE

Mrs. Lena Howard Claims Cruel Treatment by Julius Howard.

Lena Howard has instituted divorce proceedings against her husband, Julius Howard of Aitkin county, after a wedded life of less than a year. According to the complaint filed in the district court, they were married in Duluth Oct. 25 last and went to live on Howard's farm.

Mrs. Howard bases her petition on charges of extreme cruelty and abuse. She claims that her husband forced her to feed and water the cattle and stock, chop and carry the wood, and do the cooking for four men in a logging camp, although he knew that she had been ill for some time prior to their marriage.

She alleges, also, that Howard called her vile names and made false charges concerning her conduct with others, that he seized her and threw her into the house on one occasion, causing her great pain and anguish. In the complaint Howard is alleged to be a man of ungovernable temper and his wife claims she is afraid to reside with him, as he has threatened to kill her.

Howard is claimed to be the owner of an 88-acre farm in Aitkin county with numerous buildings and with cattle and personal property worth at least $5,000. Mrs. Howard claims that he has refused to deliver to her wearing apparel and other personal property that belonged to her before marriage.

Mrs. Howard alleges that before her marriage Howard promised to join the Catholic church, but after marriage he told her he would not under any circumstances join that church.

Mrs. Howard asks for a divorce, her maiden name and alimony.

SUES BOND COMPANY.

Lakeside Land Company Claims Failure in Building Contract.

The Lakeside Land company has instituted two damage suits against the Bankers' Surety company of Cleveland, Ohio, to recover on bonds alleged to have been furnished by F. E. Johnson, a local contractor, for the faithful performance of his building contracts with the plaintiff company.

In one case in which it claimed that a mistake was made in the bond, the Lakeside Land company demands $60.70 and costs, the amount being for material which the Scott-Graff Lumber company furnished Johnson and for which, it is alleged, he did not pay. The claim was paid by the Lakeside company to secure its property from a lien.

In the second suit the Lakeside Land company asks for a judgment of $114.65, which it claims to have paid for material furnished Johnson to prevent a lien on its new buildings.

INSURANCE TALK WARM

Board of Education Fails to Renew Yearly Contracts.

Lively Discussion Results in Plans for Special Meeting.

The presentation by President C. L. Codding of the report of the committee on administration and finance precipitated a lively discussion of insurance and the merits of certain local agencies, at the adjourned meeting of the board of education held at the Central high school last evening.

The arguments were over the question of whether the insurance on the Duluth school buildings should be given to one local agency which had done good service to the board in the past, or be split up among the thirty-nine odd other agencies doing business here.

An air of expectancy pervaded the board of education room when Dr. Codding announced the introduction of the regular report of the committee on administration and finance, and the several insurance men who were occupying seats in the "gallery" began to sit up.

Dr. Codding of the committee on administration and finance presented the report. He said that the members of the committee had held informal conferences about the matter of securing insurance on the Duluth school buildings for the next year, and that Directors Hendricks and LeTourneau had agreed with him that the proper thing to do was to award the business for another year to the Manley-McLennan agency, which had written the board's insurance for the past five years and which was a good friend in a time of need. This agency agreed to furnish insurance at a rate as low as last year, and President Codding said the committee recommend that the board give Manley-McLennan agency the business.

Then the fireworks began. Director Hendricks arose to say that he did not tell President Codding definitely that he was in favor of giving all of the business to one agency. He said that he expected a formal meeting of the committee would be held and that he awaited in vain the calling of it by the chairman.

"It looks too much like trust business, this giving all of the insurance business to one agency," said Mr. Hendricks. "I think that we should divide it up more, and give some of the other fellows in the same line of work a chance."

Dr. Codding explained that he had been ill; had been confined to his bed, and was out of the city part of the time, so that it was not possible to get all members of the committee together at one time. He said that Mr. Le Tourneau, who was not present at last night's meeting, being out of the city, had called at his office and had said, without having been talked with at all, that he was in favor of renewing the board's relation with the Manley-McLennan agency. He said that Mr. Hendricks also came to his office and without having been influenced, so far as he knew, had agreed that the best thing for the board to do was to give the insurance again to the Manley-McLennan people. President Codding intimated that Mr. Hendricks did not know his own mind, and that he might change it again in a very short time, to which Mr. Hendricks replied that if he did, he would have no hesitancy in saying so.

Should Split It Up.

Director Stevens arose to say: "I don't see why all this thing should go to one agency. The report of the committee seems rather a sickly one to me. One member says he was never notified of any meeting. It looks rather questionable."

President Codding said that he had learned the wishes of both the other members of the committee in the matter and had submitted the report as he thought they wanted it. His sickness and absence from the city prevented a formal meeting, he said.

"As far as there being anything underhanded about this, that is out of the question," said Dr. Codding.

Director Moe suggested that it might be well to recognize the Manley-McLennan agency for services rendered in the past, by giving them the largest chunk of the business, but giving some of the other people, representing the big companies, some of the work, as well.

Later it was suggested that the business be given to only three-million dollar companies. Director Moe had suggested five-million dollar companies only.

Director Washburn, who occupied his desk in the board room for the first time last evening in several months, having been in the Southwest for his health, declared that as there were some forty or more insurance agencies in town, it was a mighty hard matter to divide up the business so as to please everyone.

He said that five years ago the board had the buildings insured in many, many companies, and at every board meeting some insurance premium expired. He declared, too, that the buildings were not insured for anything near their worth.

Explained the Situation.

Then he went into an explanation of the situation five years ago, which led up to the awarding of one big insurance contract to the Manley-McLennan agency, a business they have retained absolutely since, much to the discontent of the other insurance men in town.

Mr. Washburn said that unless he was very sure there was good reason for it, he was very loath to put the committee in the hole by declaring for something else than what was recommended, after the situation had been thoroughly canvassed by the committeemen. He said he knew Dr. Codding had looked into the matter thoroughly.

Directors Campbell and Cobb seemed to be in favor of splitting up the insurance if it could be done satisfactorily. And so the talk went on. The insurance men present, none of whom were connected with the Manley-McLennan agency, spoke to the board members in favor of the splitting-up plan.

The matter was finally laid over to the next meeting, a special one to be called by the president.

The Manley-McLennan agency offered to insure all of the school buildings for the old amount, at an annual premium of $13,163.58. The premium last year paid to the same concern was $13,480.58, but this year the Madison school is eliminated, it having been destroyed by fire. In a letter to the board, C. P. Craig & Co., R. B. Knox & Co. and Pulford, How & Co. offered to insure all of the buildings for the old amount at a premium of $12,168.89. By these offers the board is not asked to pay any of the increase in rates that has gone into effect during the past year.

The report of the committee on the maintenance of buildings and grounds recommended the immediate construction of an eight-room, brick building, including an assembly hall and a manual training room, to replace the Madison school on Rice's Point. The estimated cost would be from $35,000 to $40,000.

Director Washburn suggested, however, that it would be unwise to put such a large and expensive building there, as the neighborhood is not likely to increase in population, owing to the encroachment of railroad yards and elevators. So after deliberation, the board instructed the committee to submit plans for a six-room building, one story high, and of brick. It is planned to house the upper grades of the Madison district in other schools.

Nothing was done with the plan suggested some time ago to erect near the Central high school, a building to house a manual training and domestic science departments exclusively.

At the outset of the meeting, Director Washburn stated emphatically that if manual training buildings were built, the western part of the city should have them. He declared himself in favor of having a mechanics' arts high school absorb the Irving high school in West Duluth.

"No more classical high schools should be built," said Mr. Washburn. "We have too many of them now."

A communication from the city council was to the effect that it was the desire of the city fathers that the school board replace the board walk on the Lake avenue side of the high school with a more substantial cement affair. No action in the matter was taken.

It was decided to pay $250 to clerks and inspectors for the school board elections, it having been found difficult in the past to secure people to do the service for the sum of $2. The terms of Directors Washburn, Moe and Hendricks expire this summer.

The Bethel Swedish church was granted permission to use the lavatories in the Jefferson school during the state Swedish Baptist conference sessions, to be held at that church, June 20 to 23.

Those present at the meeting last evening, which was the regular May session of the board, were Directors Washburn, Moe, Stevens, Cobb, Campbell, Hendricks, President Codding and Superintendent Denfeld.

MANY STABLES

Represented in the Second Outdoor Horse Show at Boston.

Boston, May 21.—Nearly all the leading show horse stables were represented today, when the second outdoor horse show of the Country club opened at Clyde park, to continue three days, with more than eighty classes to be judged.

It is expected that the keenest competition will be in the harness classes, and while the Jordan horses will not be in the ring this year, there will be many other prominent contenders for ribbons, including E. H. Harriman, Reginald Vanderbilt, Peter Bradley and the Montreal Hunt club. The Montreal huntsmen sent to Brookline this year, in addition to a fine lot of jumpers, a pack of hounds, to complete in the Middlesex and Norfolk hunts.

FREAK CALF ON IOWA FARM.

Two Heads and Eats With Both Mouths at Same Time.

Dysart, Iowa, May 21.—On the farm of William Harms, in Monroe county, is a live two-headed calf. The freak of nature was born on May 6 and appears to be singularly robust. It has the usual number of legs and but two ears. The division of the heads comes at the forehead, and the calf has four eyes and two distinct mouths. It eats with both mouth at the same time, but has been seen to drink with one and eat with the other. Many two-headed calves have been born heretofore, but the freaks either were dead at birth or lived but a few days.

They can't keep up the continual strain.

The back gives out—it aches and pains;

Urinary troubles set in.

Don't wait longer—take Doan's Kidney Pills.

Duluth people tell you how they act.

Ernest Grotke of 926 Fourth avenue east, Duluth, Minn., mason, says: "I speak from experience when I say Doan's Kidney Pills are a reliable and valuable remedy. I first heard of their merits from a friend who had received gratifying results in his own case, and I was then suffering from severe dull pains in the small of my back and loins and had become so bad that I was almost compelled to give up work. I procured a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. Although other remedies had failed to help me I soon noticed the benefit and kept on using Doan's Kidney Pills until the pain and other symptoms gradually, but surely, disappeared until I was entirely free from the trouble."

ONE OF THE BEST YET SEEN

Program at Bijou Has Many Attractive Features.

There is an entertainment at the Bijou this week which will please the most blase theater-goer.

It is fresh, new, bright and out of the ordinary, and is one of the best bills ever offered at the Bijou. Some of the acts are fully up to those seen on the Orpheum circuits, and those who have not yet acquired the Bijou habit would do well to take in the show this week.

The feature of the bill is the act given by Don Leon and his "ten youngsters." The "ten youngsters" are children ranging from 8 or 9 years of age to about 17. They are not the ordinary infant prodigies, who appear and recite their little stunts in a childish treble, but they tear things loose with their act, and they captured the house by storm last evening. One of the boys, a youngster of about 9 years of age, has a beautiful, clear, boy soprano voice, and his solo was a rare treat. One of the girls has also a sweet soprano voice of wonderful range and power for a child of her years. The others all know how to sing and dance, and the act is carried through with plenty of snap and life.

Louis Morrison and Rosa Roma have a sketch in which the latter's violin-playing is featured. She is a finished musician and a very beautiful young woman, and the act is most entertaining. La Maybelle Meeker also has a singing and acrobatic dancing act that is different from the ordinary and thoroughly enjoyable, and Howley and Leslie do a conventional dancing act, featuring Miss Leslie's clever juvenile impersonations. The moving pictures are among the best yet seen, and Isador Silver sings "San Antonio" in a stirring manner.

MADE MONEY IN LAST QUARTER

Postal Receipts Nearly $2,000,000 in Excess of Expenditures.

Washington, May 21.—For the first time in the history of the postal service the receipts for a quarter have exceeded the expenditures. This is credited to the prosperous financial condition now prevailing.

The total receipts of the department for the last quarter exceeded the expenditures by $4,800,815.35, which is said by officials to be the best showing yet made by the department. The excess of receipts over expenditures for the corresponding period of the previous year was only $309,704.68. Warrants in favor of the treasurer of the United States and the nine assistant treasurers of the United States and designated national banks who receive and handle all funds deposited on account of the service of the postoffice department, have been countersigned by the postmaster general and the amount $22,359,120.39 converted into the treasury.

The largest warrant was in favor of the assistant treasurer at New York, who received $6,933,815.35, the largest amount ever deposited with an assistant treasurer during a quarter for the services of the department.

COREY AND BRIDE

So Seasick That the Honeymoon Was a Gloomy Affair.

Plymouth, Eng., May 21.—Mr. and Mrs. William E. Corey's honeymoon voyage from New York was anything but the pleasure trip they expected. Both bridegroom and bride were seasick during practically the whole trip. The fact became known when the steamship Kaiser Wilhelm, on which they sailed, arrived at this port. Mrs. Corey, formerly Mabelle Gilman, the dancer and actress, suffered especially. Several days she was so seasick she could not leave her bed. Both Mr. Corey and his wife confined themselves to their apartments in the captain's suite for the entire voyage. Stewards set a guard over the rooms and no one was allowed to annoy them.

TURKISH TROOPS KILL BULGARIANS.

Berlin, May 21.—A dispatch to the Frankfurt Zietung from Saloniki, European Turkey, says that a detachment of Turkish troops, May 19, succeeded in capturing the stronghold of the Bulgarian bands in the Yenidje lake region. The Bulgarians lost fifty men, due, it is alleged, to the fact that the Turkish killed their prisoners. The Turkish loss was seven men killed.

The Bulgarians are threatening to destroy all the Greek and Turkish villages in the Yenidje district.

SECRET OF COCOS ISLAND.

London Standard: Admiral H. St. L. B. Palliser died suddenly at his country house in Chichester on Sunday morning. He served in the Baltic and Black Sea during the Crimean war, and in command of a squadron watched British interests throughout the Carlist war in 1871. He was the commander in chief of the Pacific squadron from 1886 to 1890.

It was during his command in the Pacific that Admiral Palliser came into possession of what he thought to be the secret of the buried treasures of the famous Cocos Island and on board her majesty's ship Imprieuse made the first of a long series of ineffectual efforts to unearth the buried millions. The late Admiral received the "secret" from Capt. Hackett when the latter was on his deathbed and was so impressed by it that despite all failures he remained a firm believer in the existence of the treasure.

The story of the Cocos Island treasures is one of the most romantic and thrilling character. One vast hoard of valuables is supposed to have been deposited on the island, which lies 500 miles southwest of Panama, by a British ship which had turned pirate in 1821. The second and more valuable treasure was buried there by the crew of the barkentine Mary Dier about 1835. This hoard was supposed to be the bullion and jewels of the Peruvian town of Callao, which was threatened with revolution and pillage. The national treasure was put on board the British ship for safety, but the crew betrayed their trust and fled with the rich cargo. The value of the two treasures is supposed to be many millions.

At least £6,000 worth of valuables were taken from the island by a man called Keaton. This man died and bequeathed the secret to Hackett. Since the latter confided in Admiral Palliser some half dozen fruitless expeditions have been fitted out and have searched the soil of the island. One of the latest was led by Earl Fitzwilliam, in 1905, but his party met with a disaster in the shape of a landslide during blasting operation, and seven of them were injured. Several companies have been formed to equip expeditions, but needless to say none of them has ever paid a dividend.

SHE LEFT TOO SOON.

New York Globe: Two young women were seated together in a Broadway car, when a well dressed man of middle age entered. One of the women bowed to him.

"Who is that?" her companion asked.

"He's the father of one of my children," the first speaker replied.

Whereupon an elderly spinster of severe countenance, who was seated next, gasped, and nearly fainted.

"Isn't it queer," the young woman went on, "that I should have three pair of twins—all girls, too?"

The spinster changed her seat in a hurry—too quickly to hear any further facts concerning the young woman's public school class.

The monks of old were the original brewers---and the history of brewing was for years the history of the cathedral. Beer was rarely found outside the convents and monasteries. In 1146, A. Seven hundred and thirty-three years later, in 1877, August Fitger graduated at the Weihenstephan Brewers School and came back to America and brewed

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opens Strong, But Nervous on Unfavorable Weather Reports.

Chicago, May 21.—The wheat market today opened strong with the tone nervous. July wheat opened ½@⅝c to ⅝@⅞c over yesterday's close at 98c to $1.00½c and touched 99c. September opened ¾c to 1c up at 99½c to 99¾c and advanced to $1.00½c. July corn opened a shade to 1⅛@1¼c lower at 53⅝c to 53¾c, but turned firm in sympathy with wheat and on small receipts, advancing early 57⅝c. Local receipts were 181 cars with 27 of contract grade.

The oats market was firm and fairly active, July opening ⅛c to ¼c up at 46¾c to 47⅛c and selling at 47⅜c. Receipts were 270 cars.

Provisions were dull but firm in sympathy with higher hogs. July pork opened 10c higher at $16.77½; July lard, 2½c up at $9.25 and July ribs, 2½c advanced at $9.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago, to Paine, Webber & Co.: There were three distinct sources of buying on the advance, the big professionals, who are already long, long enormous lines of wheat, were buying more; many local shorts, who were selling wheat for a break under 98c late yesterday, were covering from $1.00 to $1.02 late today. the country evidently aroused to fresh bull enthusiasm. There was no selling of wheat at any stage, except as profit taking. Leading cash houses had foreign advices saying Southern Russia crops were in bad shape and they were among the leading buyers of the day. New York dispatches reported foreign buying there at the opening. Our advances should bring strong cables tomorow morning. Be conservative and do not buy on the strong swells, but buy on the first break that comes along. This wheat is going higher.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 21.—The cotton market opened easy at a decline of 4 to 7 points and increased the loss to a matter of about 7 to 11 points afterwards under continued liquidation and bear pressure in response to lower Liverpool cables and a favorable interpretation of the weather map. But there was a very good demand at the decline for both accounts and the market rallied 5 or 6 points from the lowest toward the middle of the morning on the bullish acreage report issued by a prominent local firm predicting a decrease of about 3½ per cent, continued gloomy private crop reports and the renewal of the upward movement was due following a reaction of over thirty points from the top.

Cotton, spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 12.65; middling gulf, 12.30; sales 625 bales. Futures closed steady. Closing bids: May, 10.73; June, 10.73; July, 10.77; August, 10.75; September, 10.83; October, 11; November, 11.03; December, 11.08; January, 11.19; February, 11.21; March, 11.27.

TELEPHONE GROWTH.

Forum: Statistics issued at the close of the year 1906 show that there were in use in the United States alone more than 7,000,000 telephones, while an aggregate of a little more than 6,000,000 miles of wire was used for telephone service.

The telephone industry gives employment to 90,000 persons in the United States, an increase of 171 per cent in six years, while during the same period the number of stations has increased 239 per cent and the wire mileage 349 per cent.

There is little doubt that much of this increase is due to the general adoption of the so-called message rate system in place of the flat annual charge formerly in vogue. By making the charges proportional to the number of calls the use of the telephone has been widely extended both because of the greater willingness of people to become subscribers under such conditions and because the system gives an incentive to the local telephone companies to give good service and encourage the use of the telephone.

Another cause for the increase in the number of telephones in use is doubtless the extending number of large business buildings in various cities, since the telephone is an absolute necessity in the modern tall building, making it possible to transact business as well from the twentieth story as from the ground floor. The installation of the telephone in every suite in the modern hotel and large apartment house accounts for a portion of the increase.

THE BUSY BEE.

Philadelphia Record: When you eat a spoonful of honey you have very little notion as to the amount of work and travel necessary to produce it. To make one pound of clover honey bees must deprive 62,000 clover blossoms of their nectar, and to do this requires 2,750,000 visits to the blossoms by the bees.

In other words, one bee to collect enough nectar to make one pound of honey must go from hive to flower and back 2,750,000 times. Then when you think how far these bees sometimes fly in search of these clover fields, oftener than not one or two miles from the hive, you will begin to get a small idea of the number of miles one of the industrious little creatures must travel in order that you may have the pound of honey that gives them so much trouble.

It may also help you to understand why the bee is unamiable enough to sting you if you get in its way. When one has to work so hard to accomplish so little, it is quite irritating to be interfered with.

STOCKS ARE UNSETTLED

And Feverish at the Close After Heavy Selling.

Bears Were Aggressive and Prices Crumbled Away Rapidly.

New York, May 21.—The trading was quite brisk in the opening dealings and prices showed a yielding tendency. Declines were generally small and there was a light sprinkling of gains. Consolidated Gas fell 1¼, Atchison preferred and National Railroad of Mexico preferred a point and Interborough-Metropolitan preferred, American Smelting and Distillers' Securities large fractions. Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha sold at a decline of three points.

Extensive selling orders broke prices badly all through the list after a temporary rally. It looked for a time as if there was no support to the market and the bears took the opportunity to put out heavy lines. The bulk of the selling was in Smelting and Kindred stocks. Toward 11 o'clock there were a number of brisk rallies ranging up to a point or over for the leaders. Virginia Iron sagged 6, Smelting 3¾, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, 3⅜; Duluth, S. S. & Atlantic preferred and Consolidated, 2½, and Northern Pacific, Republic Steel and Railway Steel Spring preferred, 2.

The demand from the bears continued until the previous price losses were restored and gains were established in many of the most active stocks. These gains reached 2 for Denver and Rio Grande, 1½ for Northwestern and 1 for New York Central and American Smelting preferred. The tone was somewhat unsteady and very dull at the recovery, but on recessions buying was encountered which served a sharp setback. There were belated losses in Tennessee Coal of 6¾, Pressed Steel Car preferred, 3½; Consolidated Gas and Wabash preferred, 1⅝. Bonds were easy.

A feature of the market was the appearance of heavy selling orders in United States Steel, which ultimately depressed it a point to 33½. The preferred sold below 98. Reactions were general in other quarters and Pennsylvania, Atchison, Smelting and other stocks sold lower than in the morning. Tennessee Coal extended its decline to 8¼.

Prices crumbled away rapidly under urgent selling, which found and appreciable demand. Stocks were offered down without finding bidders, causing wide declines between sales. Some of the inactive issues slumped violently on light transactions for lack of any market. The heavy liquidation in United States Steel at a decline of 2⅝ and the acute weakness in American Smelting and Union Pacific, the former losing 9⅝ and the latter 5⅞, had a demoralizing effect on sentiment. United States Reduction preferred declined to 9, Consolidated Gas 5, Central Leather 5⅜, Brooklyn Rapid Transit 4⅝, Great Northern preferred 3½, Northern Pacific 3¼, Amalgamated Copper and Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie preferred 3, St. Paul, Northwestern, Southern Pacific, Illinois Central, Reading, Pacific Mail and International Paper preferred 2½ to 3¾ and Texas and Pacific and National Lead 2.

The bears continued aggressive operations well into the final hour and forced prices still lower, uncovering stop loss orders and dislodging large liquidation in all parts of the list. Reading fell an extreme 3⅝, Amalgamated Copper 3¾, Northern Pacific, eCntral of New Jersey 8, Wabash preferred 2¼ and Anaconda 2½. Heavy covering operations by the shorts ensued and caused considerable rallies, that in American Smelting reaching 3¾, and in some others between 1 and 2. But the market closed feverish and unsettled.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market opened a trifle higher and was given fair support the first hour. Then the bears started their campaign. The general decline was a long and gradual one, which grew throughout the session with few or no interruptions. It is only natural that the railroads should drag lower, with the present unfavorable outlook for the wheat crop. Then, too, it should be borne in mind that with the coming year a presidential campaign will be under way, with all its favorable and unfavorable influences. For the time being we see nothing to warrant an advance in this market, and would sell on every sharp bulge for a turn at least.

New York to Paine, Webber & Co.: The so-called Union Pacific followers, who have been so successful are, of course, bearish and are working on that side. There is an utter lack of confidence, and no matter how far stocks decline, the public will not come in, but the already suspicious feeling is aggravated with each sag back. Generally speaking, railroads have been the target for all attacks. It is true, brokers are carrying less stocks than for months, but they are being carried in banks throughout the country as well as in boxes and if liquidation started from this channel where will the buyers be found.

The Western and Southern roads must face a possible material reduction in the corn and cotton yield while the lines in the Middle West will feel the effects of a short wheat crop, and the same is likely to be the experience of the grain carrying roads in the Northwest. Last, but not least, is the hostile attitude on the part of the various states toward corporations and corporative power. On top of this is the fact that a year hence we will enter into what will no doubt be the most remarkable presidential campaign in modern times. I may be losing sight of something, but taking these facts into consideration, I cannot see anything but lower prices. The decline has been heavy since January 1, but the list on the whole if an average were taken, is still high.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Gay & Sturgis: The increase in the activity of the local market was accompanied by a general reactionary movement yesterday, traders being prompted to sell stocks with sympathy. Amalgamated quickly assumed the position as leader in the movement, declining from 94½ to 91 on dealings in 11,303 shares, or 25 per cent of the day's business. Other issues to participate conspicuously in the general decline were Copper Range, North Butte and Old Dominion. As against the marked weakness evidenced by the coppers, the strength of Shannon contrasted sharply, the price of this issue improving, and final closing at 18¾ net. The industrial list was notably inactive, a sagging tendency prevailing. The close was moderately active, a weak tone being in evidence.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: For the past week we have been advising the sale of stocks and this morning we sent out a strong message to sell. Liquidation was strong and real today. The shorts covered all their lines, but stock kept coming and there was very little speculative buying. Money is working firmer and there is no prospect of any relief. Pick out all the strong spots and sell stocks on every rally. We will see lower prices than we had in March, before the Fourth of July.

Boston to Gay & Sturgis: It is a very discouraging outlook today, looks like real liquidation from the time the exchange opened until it closed. Of course, this is very encouraging to the bears and naturally has the other effect on the bulls. If we could see some good buying of these high grade stocks at this level we should be encouraged, but men who generally take advantage to buy on weak days are not in evidence, and although we cannot conscientiously advise selling the market at this level because they are cheap, the market certainly has the appearance of going lower.

THE PRODUCE MARKET.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange and shippers can rely upon them as being correct. The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market conditions up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers:

STREET CARS.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

This company operates a street railway line in the city of Duluth between Third avenue east and the end of Rice's Point, and another street railway line in the city of Superior between Twenty-first street and the end of Connor's Point. These lines are separated by the waters of St. Louis Bay, and are operated as two distinct and separate lines.

The fare for a continuous ride in one direction between any two points on either one of these lines is 5c.

The public is hereby notified that this company does not, by undertaking to carry any passenger, or by accepting fare for such carriage, assume any responsibility beyond that of carrying such passenger safely between points on the above mentioned lines.

This company is not responsible for close connections, nor safe transportation, between the above mentioned lines by any ferryboat or other means of transportation. While the employes of this company have been instructed to keep themselves posted and give upon request all the information they can as to the probability of connections being made with other transportation lines, the company has no better means of foreseeing unexpected interruptions in the service of such lines nor of telling how long such interruptions will continue, than the public has, and therefore cannot be responsible for notice of such interruptions.

EXPENSIVE PEACE GUARDS.

Warsaw correspondence Pall Mall Gazette: Some idea of what it costs to have military protection in Russia can be gathered by the following figures. Prince Naryszkin, whose estates are in Lithuania, near the Courtland frontier, is afraid of strikes and riots. A year ago he asked for some dragoons, who were sent to the manor house and have been there ever since. For this he pays £150 a month to the government.

"They have already cost him £2,280 in cash, to say nothing of huge quantities of meat, wood, straw, hay, oats and clover, which he is obliged to give them free of charge. All told he reckons that his 'protection' costs him about £3,000 a year. At such a rate only rich men can afford to feel secure in Russia. The poor ones must run the risk of being looted.

BIRD NEST IN CLOCK.

Baltimore Sun: Occasionally one sees a small crowd congregated at the corner of Baltimore and Light streets gazing intently up at the old clock frame that still stands there as a relic of the fire. An enterprising bird has built its nest in the part where the top of the column joins the clock face.

It has a secure home and seems to live quite undisturbed by the clatter and bustle of Baltimore's busiest street.
